"The disclosure of these documents by Wikileaks had nothing to do with transparency or whistleblowing, as the site would claim, and everything to do with undermining American foreign policy. As the world's number one target for spying by foreign adversaries and now clearly other hacks, the federal government must do a better job of strengthening America's computer and cybersecurity protocols. If we do not, we risk leaving exposed an Achilles heel that could cause irreparable damage to our global partnerships and international standing."

###

U.S. Representative Peter T. King:

"WikiLeaks presents a clear and present danger to the national security of the United States. I strongly urge you to work within the Administration to use every offensive capability of the U.S. government to prevent further damaging releases by WikiLeaks."

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sunday, November 28, 2010 10:14 PM
Cc: Rodriguez, Miguel E
Subject: can you send me ros-leithan's statement and any other members

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 5, 2010 4:45 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Palau Agreement!

I can't even begin to tell you....

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Sep 05 16:31:03 2010
Subject: Fw: Palau Agreement!

Fyi---thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Jeffrey L Farrow <[redacted]> B6
To: H
Sent: Sat Sep 04 07:55:08 2010
Subject: Palau Agreement!

Signed by Pres. Toribiong a couple of hours ago after three days of negotiations that I conducted for Palau and DAS Frankie Reed led for the US. These were the first real negotiations of the process -- a step (which Jake Sullivan helped get taken) that was as needed as the changes in the US proposal they produced. Thanks for all that you did. It obtained US objectives as well as resulted in substantially greater fairness for a former territory, now freely associated state. Jeff

On Jul 28, 2010, at 8:46 AM, H wrote:

> Thx for the good wishes [redacted]
>
> I hope the Palau Compact can be resolved soon because I doubt we will have the funds to do it next year w the budget and the potential setbacks in the mid-terms. Pls try to work w everyone to finalize.
>
> And, give my warmest "Hola" to my friends in PR.
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Jeffrey L Farrow <[redacted]>
> To: H
> Sent: Sun Jul 25 20:49:54 2010
> Subject: Palau but NOT a request
>
> I think Jack thinks I've fanned flames in Palau but I've actually encouraged concessions they've made and have conveyed their complaints to him and others to make sure their views are understood. The remaining issues are small -- but significant to them. And the FSOs who've been negative since the Bush Admin. are not the best messengers. I've advised dialogue at a political level. But this is just FYI.
>

> Congratulations on Chelsea! Puerto Rico still loves her (and you would probably win even more than 2-1 now). Jeff Farrow

DRAFT 29

Sunday 4 pm

RELEASE IN PART
B5

FOREIGN AFFAIRS MAGAZINE

LEADING THROUGH CIVILIAN POWER

[redacted]

B5

[redacted]

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

DRAFT 29

Sunday 4 pm

RELEASE IN PART
B5

FOREIGN AFFAIRS MAGAZINE

LEADING THROUGH CIVILIAN POWER

[redacted]

B5

[redacted]

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 5, 2010 4:47 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Palau Agreement!

I hear they have great diving...

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Sep 05 16:45:57 2010
Subject: Re: Palau Agreement!

Your medal ceremony is this Thursday....and it comes w a vacation in Palau.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Sep 05 16:44:37 2010
Subject: Re: Palau Agreement!

I can't even begin to tell you....

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Sep 05 16:31:03 2010
Subject: Fw: Palau Agreement!

Fyi---thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Jeffrey L Farrow < > B6
To: H
Sent: Sat Sep 04 07:55:08 2010
Subject: Palau Agreement!

Signed by Pres. Toribiong a couple of hours ago after three days of negotiations that I conducted for Palau and DAS Frankie Reed led for the US. These were the first real negotiations of the process -- a step (which Jake Sullivan helped get taken) that was as needed as the changes in the US proposal they produced. Thanks for all that you did. It obtained US objectives as well as resulted in substantially greater fairness for a former territory, now freely associated state. Jeff

On Jul 28, 2010, at 8:46 AM, H wrote:

> Thx for the good wishes

>

> I hope the Palau Compact can be resolved soon because I doubt we will have the funds to do it next year w the budget and the potential setbacks in the mid-terms. Pls try to work w everyone to finalize.
>
> And, give my warmest "Hola" to my friends in PR.
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Jeffrey L Farrow <[redacted]> B6
> To: H
> Sent: Sun Jul 25 20:49:54 2010
> Subject: Palau but NOT a request
>
> I think Jack thinks I've fanned flames in Palau but I've actually encouraged concessions they've made and have conveyed their complaints to him and others to make sure their views are understood. The remaining issues are small -- but significant to them. And the FSOs who've been negative since the Bush Admin. are not the best messengers. I've advised dialogue at a political level. But this is just FYI.
>
> Congratulations on Chelsea! Puerto Rico still loves her (and you would probably win even more than 2-1 now). Jeff Farrow

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 4, 2010 3:51 AM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: Do you have the yellow folder ?

I will be out of the office on official travel through Tuesday, November 9th. If you need immediate assistance, please call 202-647-9572.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 5, 2010 4:51 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Palau Agreement!

Touche

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Sep 05 16:49:07 2010
Subject: Re: Palau Agreement!

W Uighur instructors and you get to dodge small Chinese subs.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Sep 05 16:47:01 2010
Subject: Re: Palau Agreement!

I hear they have great diving...

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Sep 05 16:45:57 2010
Subject: Re: Palau Agreement!

Your medal ceremony is this Thursday....and it comes w a vacation in Palau.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Sep 05 16:44:37 2010
Subject: Re: Palau Agreement!

I can't even begin to tell you....

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Sep 05 16:31:03 2010
Subject: Fw: Palau Agreement!

Fyi---thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Jeffrey L Farrow <[redacted]> B6
To: H
Sent: Sat Sep 04 07:55:08 2010
Subject: Palau Agreement!

Signed by Pres. Toribiong a couple of hours ago after three days of negotiations that I conducted for Palau and DAS Frankie Reed led for the US. These were the first real negotiations of the process -- a step (which Jake Sullivan helped get taken) that was as needed as the changes in the US proposal they produced. Thanks for all that you did. It obtained US objectives as well as resulted in substantially greater fairness for a former territory, now freely associated state. Jeff

On Jul 28, 2010, at 8:46 AM, H wrote:

> Thx for the good wishes [redacted]
>
> I hope the Palau Compact can be resolved soon because I doubt we will have the funds to do it next year w the budget and the potential setbacks in the mid-terms. Pls try to work w everyone to finalize.
>
> And, give my warmest "Hola" to my friends in PR.
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Jeffrey L Farrow <[redacted]>
> To: H
> Sent: Sun Jul 25 20:49:54 2010
> Subject: Palau but NOT a request
>
> I think Jack thinks I've fanned flames in Palau but I've actually encouraged concessions they've made and have conveyed their complaints to him and others to make sure their views are understood. The remaining issues are small -- but significant to them. And the FSOs who've been negative since the Bush Admin. are not the best messengers. I've advised dialogue at a political level. But this is just FYI.
>
> Congratulations on Chelsea! Puerto Rico still loves her (and you would probably win even more than 2-1 now). Jeff Farrow

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 5, 2010 5:08 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Update on PSA

Yes - will call later tonite or am.

Had b/fast w/ Marty.

So will call re ME

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Sep 05 16:45:14 2010
Subject: Re: Update on PSA

Ok--have them come by and show me the PSA next week.

Any other news to report?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H; kdowd
Cc: Laurenjiloty >; Klevorick, Caitlin B <KlevorickCB@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Sep 05 16:41:04 2010
Subject: Re: Update on PSA

B6

+ caitlin

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D; 'kdowd
Cc: 'Laurenjiloty
Sent: Sun Sep 05 16:40:27 2010
Subject: Re: Update on PSA

Thx for all the work on the PSA. Could I see it this week?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Sep 03 09:56:56 2010
Subject: FW: Update on PSA

FYI

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 4, 2010 4:01 AM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Do you have the yellow folder ?

I do. Its actually my folder of call sheets, (which I'm updating right now), but I can make one for you if you like! I'm working on them now anyway.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Cc: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thu Nov 04 03:46:06 2010
Subject: Do you have the yellow folder ?

I thought I had put it into my purse but can't find it.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, November 4, 2010 4:52 AM
To: Jiloty, Lauren C; H
Subject: RE: Do you have the yellow folder ?

lauren, why dont you bring down when you are done thanks

---

From: Jiloty, Lauren C [JilotyLC@state.gov]
Sent: Thursday, November 04, 2010 4:00 AM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Do you have the yellow folder ?

I do. Its actually my folder of call sheets, (which I'm updating right now), but I can make one for you if you like! I'm working on them now anyway.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Cc: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thu Nov 04 03:46:06 2010
Subject: Do you have the yellow folder ?

I thought I had put it into my purse but can't find it.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 28, 2010 10:54 PM
To: H; cheryl.mills [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: Wikileaks

Agree

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'cheryl.mills [redacted] <cheryl.mills [redacted] Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Nov 28 22:24:04 2010
Subject: Fw: Wikileaks

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Mark J. Penn [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sun Nov 28 22:12:09 2010
Subject: Wikileaks

The administration's response seems quite weak to me.

This is not like the Pentagon Papers or even the videos of the bombings, this is a wholesale capturing of the diplomatic material of the country. No State department can operate if it can't keep its own classified cables and internal orders confidential – I think this is unprecedented in history. And if this is wikileaks can get, what can the Chinese or other able to secure?

The issues surrounding the content are significant and could have legs.

But this security breach is not a targeted breach to make a whistle blower point, it is a wholesale leak that should be treated as putting lives in danger. For what it is worth, I think you need to order a full scale review and upgrading of the cyber security of the state department immediately. To offer a bounty for the capture of those responsible. And as I see you doing, take an aggressive position on Wikileaks. Just being seen as apologizing for the content is weak compared to reacting and acting to shore up the key principles behind security and aggressively dealing with the problem directly.

For what it's worth, that's my view.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Campbell, Kurt M <CampbellKM@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 5, 2010 10:33 PM
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Talks in Beijing

Tom and Larry doing fine in early meetings here in Beijing. Tom has highlighted critical role of S and ED. Larry somewhat discursive and academic on global economic issues. China intent on a good Hu summit in DC likely scheduled for January 2011. Dai agrees to meet with S in third city in Fall -- will work on details. More later Kurt

---

From: Dowd, Katie W
To: McHale, Judith A; McCall, Dawn L
Cc: MacInnes, Duncan H; Bosshardt, Marcia P; Klevorick, Caitlin B; Kenna, Corley; Smith, Dana S; Hensman, Chris D
Sent: Fri Sep 03 09:29:05 2010
Subject: Update on PSA

Wanted to update you all on the PSA and where things stand. The Ad Council placed the PSA on Wednesday.

Overall, based on the MNR report, our estimated online audience for the PSA launch story was 5.4 million, including stories on Yahoo Finance, Forbes, and CNN. For just over 24 hours since the MNR distribution, this is fantastic pickup per the Ad Council.

The Ad Council will continue to push this out domestically and giving us updates on where it is. They are targeting large sporting events like U.S Open, etc. If you would like the full report with specific stories, I can send separately however because the file is so large I do not want to max out everyone's inboxes.

On the International side and specifically S interest in placing with Al Jazeera, the Ad Council did a slightly modified version of the 30 sec PSA, removing the texting information on the final screen and is overnighting the tape to the State Department today. Once we have that (timing for Tuesday), we will work with Dana and PA to have the PSA placed accordingly where makes sense.

Larry has already said that local stations in Pakistan liked the ad and were using it/reporting on it. As he is obviously very busy, hard to know more beyond this point. IIP has been great and the revised ad is going up on America.gov. Will work them to see what other embassy sites, etc we can promote this with.

We will continue to work to place the ad and will have donation reports on Tuesday that hopefully will reflect monetary upticks as well. Let me know if you have any questions. Best, Katie

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 4, 2010 5:05 AM
To: Huma Abedin; H
Subject: Re: Do you have the yellow folder ?

Yep- ill have it in 5 mins for you. Almost done

----- Original Message -----
From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C; H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thu Nov 04 04:52:19 2010
Subject: RE: Do you have the yellow folder ?

lauren, why dont you bring down when you are done thanks

---

From: Jiloty, Lauren C [JilotyLC@state.gov]
Sent: Thursday, November 04, 2010 4:00 AM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Do you have the yellow folder ?

I do. Its actually my folder of call sheets, (which I'm updating right now), but I can make one for you if you like! I'm working on them now anyway.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Cc: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thu Nov 04 03:46:06 2010
Subject: Do you have the yellow folder ?

I thought I had put it into my purse but can't find it.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 5, 2010 11:03 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Update

Fyi

---

From: Holbrooke, Richard
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Sep 05 19:57:44 2010
Subject: Fw: Update

Pls forward this to H. Very interesting take in situation. Thanks, RH

---

From: Rina Amiri <[redacted]> B6
To: Holbrooke, Richard
Sent: Sun Sep 05 19:28:25 2010
Subject: Update

-The damage to Kabul Bank's credibility appears to be irreparable. Thousands of people are lining up at Kabul Bank branches throughout the country to withdraw funds. While the situation is still orderly, there is mounting frustration--particularly in the provinces-- that the bank is unable to give people back their full deposits, forcing them to repeatedly return and stand in long lines to withdraw their money in increments. On Saturday close to 70 million dollars was withdrawn. Hajis (people who have provided funds to go to Haj) are also demanding their money bank. The overall sense is that it is a matter of days before the government will be forced to take over KB.

-There are also reports of security people employed at KB shaking people withdrawing money. The government has responded by replacing KB security with ANSF and NDS guards.

-On a positive note, the adverse situation in KB bank has not affected the other banks. The majority of people withdrawing funds from KB are opening new accounts in Afghan International Bank, Aziz Bank, among others. The heads of these banks have successfully projected corruption at KB as something that is associated with the leadership of KB rather than a more systematic problem affecting other banks. People are also turning to other banks because the security situation leaves them worried about keeping their savings at home.

-In the very short run, the government has come out ahead in this crisis. People are reassured that President Karzai has actively taken control of the situation and is showing leadership. But this is clearly the biggest crisis that President Karzai has faced in the last nine years. A number of the political elite are privately noting that the situation could escalate and people could turn against the government once they feel the effects of this crisis. Corruption, which President Karzai has cast a western concern, is now seen by Afghans as a fundamental problem within the government.

-While the majority of media outlets have been cautious to not criticize the Government, fearing that it could lead to further instability, this is expected to change in the coming days. Abdullah Abdullah has been one of the few voices that has come out and noted that the Government was an active agent in the KB scandal, pointing out in a press conference today that government cronyism was a big factor in this crisis and noting that no steps have been taken to hold accountable those who illegally gambled with people's money. GIRoA is expected to come increasingly under such criticism as further evidence of government negligence and complicity becomes publicly known.

-Perhaps in an effort to deflect attention from this issue, the Government announced yesterday that the the High Peace Council will be established after Eid. Jihadi leaders such as Rabbani, Mujaddidi, Sayyaf are expected to feature prominently in the body. Women are expected to comprise 20% or 30% of the 50-60 council.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Muscatine Lissa
Sent: Sunday, August 29, 2010 5:28 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Latest Draft of Foreign Affairs

I think it is a strong case and very clear now. I just want to read it again in the morning to make sure everything tracks and flows and double check a few facts. Also I realized this afternoon that we weren't overt about the QDDR being the first of many, but I think I took care of that in this draft. All in all, I feel good about it.

Sent from my iPhone. Apologies for any typos.

On Aug 29, 2010, at 4:47 PM, H <HDR22@clintonemail.com> wrote:

> Thx for all you work on this. Do you fell ok about it now?
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Lissa Muscatine
> To: H
> Cc: Jon Davidson; Huma Abedin <abedinh@state.gov>; Jacob J Sullivan
> <sullivanjj@state.gov
> >; Anne Marie Slaughter <SlaughterA@state.gov>
> Sent: Sun Aug 29 16:27:09 2010
> Subject: Latest Draft of Foreign Affairs
>
> Here is the latest draft, which incorporates your changes and > suggestions, and has been through each of us (me, Jake, and AMS) at > least once. There may still be a few facts to be tweaked and we are > looking for one more example from WHA for the Mexico paragraph. I will > also re-read it carefully later tonight and tomorrow morning to catch > any typos, weird grammar, or things that don't flow. I'm too close to > it now and want to read it again when I'm fresh. But hopefully this is > close to final.
>
> Lissa
>

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Lauren Jiloty <[redacted]>
Sent: Monday, September 6, 2010 11:18 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: H: More, memo #3 on campaign, with new poll #s and inside info. Sid

ok

> From: HDR22@clintonemail.com
> To: Laurenjiloty[redacted] B6
> Date: Mon, 6 Sep 2010 15:59:26 -0400
> Subject: Fw: H: More, memo #3 on campaign, with new poll #s and inside info. Sid
>
> Can you print the memo w/out any identifiers?
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: sbwhoeop[redacted]<sbwhoeop[redacted]
> To: H
> Sent: Mon Sep 06 13:33:01 2010
> Subject: H: More, memo #3 on campaign, with new poll #s and inside info. Sid
>
>
>
>
>
>
> CONFIDENTIAL
>
>
>
> September 6, 2010
>
>
>
> For: Hillary
> From: Sid
> Re: GOP unpopularity, Boehner unpopularity, stealth agenda for campaign and beyond
>
>
> 1. The Republican Party, despite everything, remains deeply unpopular. (See the second Ohio poll below.)
> 2. The Republicans have made the election a referendum on Obama and the Democrats, succeeding beyond their wildest dreams. (See the first poll below on Obama-Bush matchup and question 12 in second poll on Ohio voters' recall on who they voted for in 2008, giving McCain a three point margin.)
> 3. The Republicans have managed to hide their own negatives through the negative campaign against Obama.
> 4. The campaign is not being conducted as a contest. The Republicans have succeeded in making it only about approval of Obama.
> 5. The GOP is hiding John Boehner, who is unpopular in his home state of Ohio, where he's best known. To the extent he is known, he is disliked.
> 6. The Republicans are pretending they offer something new and not really the same old Republicans, to the extent they make any sort of offer.
> 7. The Tea Party is deliberately trying to hide its extremism behind a mask of novelty and now religious rhetoric. (The right wing strategy has been spelled out in detail to a friend of mine,[redacted]

> 8. So far, there is no Democratic campaign to focus on the Republicans and, therefore, no contest. Republicans are not being exposed for their increasing dependence on extremists. They are not being pressed for their refusal to denounce extremism. Nor is the Tea Party being revealed as an extremist takeover movement. Nor is the Republicans' motive for smearing Obama being identified as a cynical strategy to put Boehner in power.

> 9. Whatever issue ginned up by Republicans—from illegal immigration to the "ground zero mosque"—is not about the issue itself. Everything, but everything, is about making John Boehner, that old scandal ridden hack Republican, the Speaker. No matter what the Republicans say, the ultimate issue is the Boehner power-grab.
> 10. The Republican Party is the same old party. It's unreformed. It hasn't learned anything. It can't control its extremists.
>
>
> http://publicpolicypolling.blogspot.com/2010/08/previewing-ohio.html
>
> Tuesday, August 31, 2010
>
>
> Previewing Ohio <http://publicpolicypolling.blogspot.com/2010/08/previewing-ohio.html>
>
> We'll start rolling out our Ohio poll results tomorrow but there's one finding on the poll that pretty much sums it up: by a 50-42 margin voters there say they'd rather have George W. Bush in the White House right now than Barack Obama.
>
> Independents hold that view by a 44-37 margin and there are more Democrats who would take Bush back (11%) than there are Republicans who think Obama's preferable (3%.)
>
> A couple months ago I thought the Pennsylvanias and Missouris and Ohios of the world were the biggest battlegrounds for 2010 but when you see numbers like this it makes you think it's probably actually the Californias and the Wisconsins and the Washingtons.
>
> There's not much doubt things are getting worse for Democrats...and they were already pretty bad. Somehow the party base needs to get reinvigorated over the next two months or there's going to be a very, very steep price to pay.
>
>
> http://www.publicpolicypolling.com/pdf/PPP_Release_OH_903.pdf
>
> Public Policy Polling
> 3020 Highwoods Blvd.
> Raleigh, NC 27604
> Phone: 888 621-6988
> Web: www.publicpolicypolling.com
> Email: information@publicpolicypolling.com
> FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE September 3, 2010
> INTERVIEWS: DEAN DEBNAM 888-621-6988 / 919-880-4888 (serious media > inquiries only please, other questions can be directed to Tom Jensen)
> QUESTIONS ABOUT THE POLL: TOM JENSEN 919-744-6312
> GOP Leads OH Generic Ballot, Boehner Not Popular
> Raleigh, N.C. – Despite expanding their lead to 47-41 over Democrats in the generic > Congressional ballot, only 29% of likely Ohio voters approve of the direction of the > Republican Party, with 55% disapproving, suggesting that their preference for the GOP is > simply a vote for change, not a vote of affirmation or a mandate. Also supporting that > notion: a 43% plurality finds the GOP to be too conservative, with only 29% seeing their > views as "about right."
> And in bad news for Minority Leader John Boehner, only 28% of his home-state voters > want him to become Speaker if Republicans take back the U.S. House, with 44% > preferring "someone else." GOP voters do support Boehner for Speaker, but only by a > 54-15 margin. Democrats, who would not vote for a Republican majority anyway, > oppose him, 73-6, and independents, 41-22.
> In June, Republicans were favored for Congress only 44-43 among registered voters, but > the six-point shift in the partisan makeup of the likely electorate corresponds almost > exactly with the shift in the generic ballot. On top of that, Republicans are united around > their party's candidates 94-1, versus Democrats at 89-6. Democrats have actually > improved slightly among independents, though Republicans still lead 36-23. There is > considerable room for Democratic House candidates to make up ground by appealing to > the 41% of unaffiliateds who are undecided and by boosting turnout among their voters.

> While Republicans approve of the direction of their party, 59-20, independents > disapprove, 61-13. 31% of Republicans and 20% of independents find the GOP too > liberal, but 76% of Democrats and 43% of independents find it too conservative.
> There has been no change in the race for Attorney General. Mike DeWine leads > Democrat Richard Cordray 44-40 after leading 44-41 in June.
> PPP surveyed 475 likely Ohio voters from August 27th to 29th. The margin of error for > the survey is +/-4.5%. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, > may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.
> If you would like an interview regarding this release, please contact Dean Debnam at > (888) 621-6988 or 919-880-4888.
> June 26-27, 2010
> Survey of 482 Ohio voters
> 3020 Highwoods Blvd.
> Raleigh, NC 27604
> information@publicpolicypolling.com / 888 621-6988
> Ohio Survey Results
> Q1 The candidates for Attorney General are > Democrat Richard Cordray and Republican > Mike DeWine. If the election was today, who > would you vote for?
> Richard Cordray..... 40%
> Mike DeWine ..... 44%
> Undecided..... 16%
> Q2 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion
> of Mike DeWine?
> Favorable..... .35%
> Unfavorable ..... .33%
> Not sure ..... .32%
> Q3 Will you vote Democratic or Republican for US
> House this fall?
> Democratic..... 41%
> Republican..... 47%
> Undecided..... 12%
> Q4 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion
> of John Boehner?
> Favorable..... 27%
> Unfavorable ..... 31%
> Not sure ..... 42%
> Q5 If Republicans take control of Congress, would > you like John Boehner to be Speaker of the > House, or would you rather it was someone > else?
> John Boehner..... 28%
> Someone else ..... 44%
> Not sure ..... 28%
> Q6 Do you approve or disapprove of the direction > of the Republican Party?
> Approve..... 29%
> Disapprove..... 55%
> Not sure ..... 17%
> Q7 Do you think the Republican Party is too liberal, > too conservative, or about right?
> Too liberal ..... 21%
> Too conservative..... 43%
> About right ..... 29%
> Not sure ..... 7%

> Q8 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion
> of LeBron James?
> Favorable..... 19%
> Unfavorable ..... 34%
> Not sure ..... 47%
> Q9 Do you consider yourself to be a Cleveland
> Cavaliers fan?
> Yes..... 37%
> No ..... 63%
> Q10 Do you think John Boehner spends too much,
> not enough, or about the right amount of time > working on his tan?
> Too much ..... 30%
> Not enough ..... 4%
> About the right amount of time..... 14%
> Not sure ..... 51%
> Q11 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion
> of John Boehner's tan?
> Favorable..... 8%
> Unfavorable ..... 27%
> Not sure ..... 64%
> Q12 Who did you vote for President in 2008?
> John McCain..... 48%
> Barack Obama..... 45%
> Someone else/Don't remember ..... 7%
> June 26-27, 2010
> Survey of 482 Ohio voters
> 3020 Highwoods Blvd.
> Raleigh, NC 27604
> information@publicpolicypolling.com / 888 621-6988
> Q13 Would you describe yourself as a liberal, > moderate, or conservative?
> Liberal ..... 16%
> Moderate..... 44%
> Conservative..... 40%
> Q14 If you are a woman, press 1. If a man, press 2.
> Woman ..... 53%
> Man..... 47%
> Q15 If you are a Democrat, press 1. If a Republican, > press 2. If you are an independent or identify > with another party, press 3.
> Democrat ..... 40%
> Republican..... 40%
> Independent/Other..... 20%
> Q16 If you are white, 1. If African-American, press
> 2. If other, press 3.
> White ..... 87%
> African-American ..... 10%
> Other..... 3%
> Q17 If you are 18 to 29 years old, press 1. If 30 to > 45, press 2. If 46 to 65, press 3. If older than > 65, press 4.
> 18 to 29..... 8%
> 30 to 45..... 21%
> 46 to 65..... 44%
> Older than 65..... 27%
> June 26-27, 2010
> survey of 482 Ohio voters
> 3020 Highwoods Blvd.

> Raleigh, NC 27604
> information@publicpolicypolling.com / 888 621-6988
>
> Email from [redacted] 9/6/10, on interview [redacted] B6
>
> Off the record: I had long conversation yesterday with [redacted] very scary. His prediction: "a wave of Biblical proportions" in November. the House is gone; he sees a new bloc of up to 10 true conservative senators, joining Coburn and DeMint, and creating a virtual third party in Senate holding balance of power. He says their polling suggests Tea Party candidates well ahead in Ky., Colo., senate races (NYT disputes that today) , and Nevada still a tossup..I went to the Glenn Back rally, and [redacted] largely agreed with my assessment that its purpose in part was to inoculate the movement against public concern over extremism and racism leading up to election. (Thus theme of Faith, Hope, Charity.) Americans for Prosperity (Koch group) made sure there were no signs, etc.
>
> No love lost for post-1996 Republican hacks, among whom he numbered Gingrich, DeLay, Hastert -- and Rove who is on the outs with his people.
>
> Oversight committees will take lead in House after GOP victory, with a particular focus on Holder and Justice Dept. and KSM decision. Purpose will be to keep Democrats on defensive for whole 2 years leading up to 2012 election. (Obama, you recall, nixed investigations of Bush administration because he wanted to unite the country.) Would there be an investigation of Obama citizenship?? couldnt say b ecause he is now totally focused on the election, not what comes after.
>
> [redacted] My take: Of course House will vote to repeal health care reform (despite no chance of senate passage) ; funding dozens of EPA initiatives in Appropriations Committee, and there will be stand-alone vote to block EPA from implementing carbon rules (even though EPA is only acting as a result of a Supreme Court decision); and budget legislation that adopts part of the Ryan plan (tho not privatization of SS.)..
>

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Stern, Todd D (S/SECC) <SternTD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 28, 2010 11:11 PM
To: H
Cc: Fuchs, Michael H
Subject: Re: Question

Hi. I'm very sorry, but I just saw this. Don't know how it escaped my attention. I will track it down tomorrow. I don't know off hand. Hope you had a good Thanksgiving. Jen and kids and I were in Chicago. See you tomorrow.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Stern, Todd D (S/SECC)
Cc: Fuchs, Michael H
Sent: Wed Nov 24 12:27:56 2010
Subject: Question

Dear Todd--

A friend forwarded me the email reprinted below. Do you know what it refers to?
Obviously, I'm prepared to help. Just let me know. Thx and Happy Thanksgiving!

---

I just realized, it was Hillary who made the big adaptation promise at Copenhagen. We're trying to get Nelson to join Boxer in pushing Levin to include the adaptation authorization language (no cost) to the Def Auth. It would be a HUGE win for our community and also, it seems, for Hillary. Do you think that is something her crew might weigh in on? It's really a small ask and very easy lift...the problem is it just hasn't been a high priority. But we now have Boxer who says she'll champion if she can get an ally on Armed Services to approach Levin. So if Hillary's folks could engage Nelson (and/or Levin) to get them on board, that would be HUGE. I know there is a lot out there to her, but it seems like with this and ATT, what we're asking is very much in her interest and as much a gift as a request.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 7:18 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Netanyahu wants Israeli troops at Palestinian border

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Tue Sep 21 04:20:37 2010
Subject: (AP) Netanyahu wants Israeli troops at Palestinian border

JERUSALEM (AP) - Prime Minister Netanyahu says Israel wants to keep its troops on the eastern border of a future Palestinian state. Palestinians reject the idea and have proposed an international force along the West Bank's border with Jordan as part of a peace deal. Netanyahu told U.S. Jewish leaders in a conference call on September 20 that "the only force that can be relied on to defend the Jewish people is the Israeli Defense Force." Netanyahu says an international force can't ensure Israel's security. He fears Palestinian militants will attack Israel from within a Palestinian state if Israeli troops are withdrawn from the West Bank-Jordan border. Palestinian President Abbas maintains that an Israeli troop presence would infringe upon Palestinian sovereignty.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 6, 2010 11:35 AM
To: H
Subject: Holbrooke asking to talk to you.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 6:34 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule Monday 11/29/10

---

From: Jiloty, Lauren C
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Sun Nov 28 19:04:14 2010
Subject: Mini Schedule Monday 11/29/10

8:15 am DEPART Private Residence

En route State Department

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING

8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING

9:15 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:15 am MONDAY MEETING w/ASSISTANT SECRETARIES

10:00 am HST 7516 (Principals Conference Room, 7th Floor)

10:05 am PRESS PRE-BRIEF

10:15 am Secretary's Outer Office

10:15 am PRESS STATEMENT ON WIKILEAKS

10:25 am Treaty Room

10:30 am MEETING w/TURKISH FM AHMET DAVUTOGLU

11:30 am Secretary's Conference Room *Photo spray at top in Treaty Room.

11:45 am MEETING w/SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE FOR NORTH KOREA

12:05 pm POLICY AMBASSADOR STEPHEN BOSWORTH Secretary's Office

12:15 pm OFFICE TIME

1:15 pm Secretary's Office

1:25 pm DEPART State Department

En route Andrews Air Force Base

1:50 pm ARRIVE Andrews Air Force Base (AAB)

2:00 pm WHEELS UP Andrews Air Force Base

En route Shannon International Airport

###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Monday, September 6, 2010 1:33 PM
To: H
Subject: H: More, memo #3 on campaign, with new poll #s and inside info. Sid
Attachments: hrc memo #3 midterm strategy 090610.docx; hrc memo #3 midterm strategy 090610.docx

CONFIDENTIAL

September 6, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: GOP unpopularity, Boehner unpopularity, stealth agenda for campaign and beyond

The Republican Party, despite everything, remains deeply unpopular. (See the second Ohio poll below.)
The Republicans have made the election a referendum on Obama and the Democrats, succeeding beyond their wildest dreams. (See the first poll below on Obama-Bush matchup and question 12 in second poll on Ohio voters' recall on who they voted for in 2008, giving McCain a three point margin.)
The Republicans have managed to hide their own negatives through the negative campaign against Obama.
The campaign is not being conducted as a contest. The Republicans have succeeded in making it only about approval of Obama.
The GOP is hiding John Boehner, who is unpopular in his home state of Ohio, where he's best known. To the extent he is known, he is disliked.
The Republicans are pretending they offer something new and not really the same old Republicans, to the extent they make any sort of offer.
The Tea Party is deliberately trying to hide its extremism behind a mask of novelty and now religious rhetoric. (The right wing strategy has been spelled out in detail to a friend of mine,
So far, there is no Democratic campaign to focus on the Republicans and, therefore, no contest. Republicans are not being exposed for their increasing dependence on extremists. They are not being pressed for their refusal to denounce extremism. Nor is the Tea Party being revealed as an extremist takeover movement. Nor is the Republicans' motive for smearing Obama being identified as a cynical strategy to put Boehner in power.
Whatever issue ginned up by Republicans—from illegal immigration to the "ground zero mosque"—is not about the issue itself. Everything, but everything, is about making John Boehner, that old scandal ridden hack Republican, the Speaker. No matter what the Republicans say, the ultimate issue is the Boehner power-grab.

The Republican Party is the same old party. It's unreformed. It hasn't learned anything. It can't control its extremists.

http://publicpolicypolling.blogspot.com/2010/08/previewing-ohio.html

Tuesday, August 31, 2010

Previewing Ohio

We'll start rolling out our Ohio poll results tomorrow but there's one finding on the poll that pretty much sums it up: by a 50-42 margin voters there say they'd rather have George W. Bush in the White House right now than Barack Obama.

Independents hold that view by a 44-37 margin and there are more Democrats who would take Bush back (11%) than there are Republicans who think Obama's preferable (3%.)

A couple months ago I thought the Pennsylvanias and Missouris and Ohios of the world were the biggest battlegrounds for 2010 but when you see numbers like this it makes you think it's probably actually the Californias and the Wisconsins and the Washingtons.

There's not much doubt things are getting worse for Democrats...and they were already pretty bad. Somehow the party base needs to get reinvigorated over the next two months or there's going to be a very, very steep price to pay.

http://www.publicpolicypolling.com/pdf/PPP_Release_OH_903.pdf

Public Policy Polling
3020 Highwoods Blvd.
Raleigh, NC 27604
Phone: 888 621-6988
Web: www.publicpolicypolling.com
Email: information@publicpolicypolling.com

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE September 3, 2010
INTERVIEWS: DEAN DEBNAM 888-621-6988 / 919-880-4888 (serious media inquiries only please, other questions can be directed to Tom Jensen)
QUESTIONS ABOUT THE POLL: TOM JENSEN 919-744-6312

GOP Leads OH Generic Ballot, Boehner Not Popular

Raleigh, N.C. – Despite expanding their lead to 47-41 over Democrats in the generic Congressional ballot, only 29% of likely Ohio voters approve of the direction of the Republican Party, with 55% disapproving, suggesting that their preference for the GOP is simply a vote for change, not a vote of affirmation or a mandate. Also supporting that notion: a 43% plurality finds the GOP to be too conservative, with only 29% seeing their views as "about right."

And in bad news for Minority Leader John Boehner, only 28% of his home-state voters want him to become Speaker if Republicans take back the U.S. House, with 44% preferring "someone else." GOP voters do support Boehner for Speaker, but only by a 54-15 margin. Democrats, who would not vote for a Republican majority anyway, oppose him, 73-6, and independents, 41-22.

In June, Republicans were favored for Congress only 44-43 among registered voters, but the six-point shift in the partisan makeup of the likely electorate corresponds almost exactly with the shift in the generic ballot. On top of that, Republicans are united around their party's candidates 94-1, versus Democrats at 89-6. Democrats have actually improved slightly among independents, though Republicans still lead 36-23. There is considerable room for Democratic House candidates to make up ground by appealing to the 41% of unaffiliateds who are undecided and by boosting turnout among their voters.

While Republicans approve of the direction of their party, 59-20, independents disapprove, 61-13. 31% of Republicans and 20% of independents find the GOP too liberal, but 76% of Democrats and 43% of independents find it too conservative.

There has been no change in the race for Attorney General. Mike DeWine leads Democrat Richard Cordray 44-40 after leading 44-41 in June.

PPP surveyed 475 likely Ohio voters from August 27th to 29th. The margin of error for the survey is +/-4.5%. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.

If you would like an interview regarding this release, please contact Dean Debnam at (888) 621-6988 or 919-880-4888.

June 26-27, 2010

Survey of 482 Ohio voters

3020 Highwoods Blvd.
Raleigh, NC 27604
information@publicpolicypolling.com / 888 621-6988

Ohio Survey Results

Q1 The candidates for Attorney General are Democrat Richard Cordray and Republican Mike DeWine. If the election was today, who would you vote for?

Richard Cordray..... 40%
Mike DeWine ..... 44%
Undecided..... 16%

Q2 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of Mike DeWine?

Favorable..... .35%
Unfavorable ..... .33%
Not sure ..... .32%

Q3 Will you vote Democratic or Republican for US House this fall?

Democratic..... 41%
Republican..... 47%
Undecided..... 12%

Q4 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of John Boehner?

Favorable..... 27%
Unfavorable ..... 31%
Not sure ..... 42%

Q5 If Republicans take control of Congress, would you like John Boehner to be Speaker of the House, or would you rather it was someone else?

John Boehner..... 28%
Someone else ..... 44%

Not sure ..... 28%

Q6 Do you approve or disapprove of the direction of the Republican Party?

Approve..... 29%

Disapprove..... 55%

Not sure ..... 17%

Q7 Do you think the Republican Party is too liberal, too conservative, or about right?

Too liberal ..... 21%

Too conservative..... 43%

About right ..... 29%

Not sure ..... 7%

Q8 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of LeBron James?

Favorable..... 19%

Unfavorable ..... 34%

Not sure ..... 47%

Q9 Do you consider yourself to be a Cleveland Cavaliers fan?

Yes..... 37%

No ..... 63%

Q10 Do you think John Boehner spends too much, not enough, or about the right amount of time working on his tan?

Too much ..... 30%

Not enough ..... 4%

About the right amount of time..... 14%

Not sure ..... 51%

Q11 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of John Boehner's tan?

Favorable..... 8%

Unfavorable ..... 27%

Not sure ..... 64%

Q12 Who did you vote for President in 2008?

John McCain..... 48%

Barack Obama..... 45%

Someone else/Don't remember ..... 7%

June 26-27, 2010

Survey of 482 Ohio voters

3020 Highwoods Blvd.

Raleigh, NC 27604

information@publicpolicypolling.com / 888 621-6988

Q13 Would you describe yourself as a liberal, moderate, or conservative?

Liberal ..... 16%

Moderate..... 44%

Conservative..... 40%

Q14 If you are a woman, press 1. If a man, press 2.

Woman ..... 53%

Man..... 47%

Q15 If you are a Democrat, press 1. If a Republican, press 2. If you are an independent or identify with another party, press 3.

Democrat ..... 40%
Republican..... 40%
Independent/Other..... 20%
Q16 If you are white, 1. If African-American, press 2. If other, press 3.
White ..... 87%
African-American ..... 10%
Other..... 3%
Q17 If you are 18 to 29 years old, press 1. If 30 to 45, press 2. If 46 to 65, press 3. If older than 65, press 4.
18 to 29..... 8%
30 to 45..... 21%
46 to 65..... 44%
Older than 65..... 27%
June 26-27, 2010
survey of 482 Ohio voters
3020 Highwoods Blvd.
Raleigh, NC 27604
information@publicpolicypolling.com / 888 621-6988

Email from [redacted] 9/6/10, on interview [redacted] B6

Off the record: I had long conversation yesterday with [redacted] very scary. His prediction: "a wave of Biblical proportions" in November. the House is gone; he sees a new bloc of up to 10 true conservative senators, joining Coburn and DeMint, and creating a virtual third party in Senate holding balance of power. He says their polling suggests Tea Party candidates well ahead in Ky., Colo., senate races (NYT disputes that today) , and Nevada still a tossup..I went to the Glenn Back rally, and [redacted] largely agreed with my assessment that its purpose in part was to inoculate the movement against public concern over extremism and racism leading up to election. (Thus theme of Faith, Hope, Charity.) Americans for Prosperity (Koch group) made sure there were no signs, etc.

No love lost for post-1996 Republican hacks, among whom he numbered Gingrich, DeLay, Hastert -- and Rove who is on the outs with his people.

Oversight committees will take lead in House after GOP victory, with a particular focus on Holder and Justice Dept. and KSM decision. Purpose will be to keep Democrats on defensive for whole 2 years leading up to 2012 election. (Obama, you recall, nixed investigations of Bush administration because he wanted to unite the country.) Would there be an investigation of Obama citizenship?? couldnt say b ecause he is now totally focused on the election, not what comes after.

[redacted] My take: Of course House will vote to repeal health care reform (despite no chance of senate passage) ; funding dozens of EPA initiatives in Appropriations Committee, and there will be stand-alone vote to block EPA from implementing carbon rules (even though EPA is only acting as a result of a Supreme Court decision); and budget legislation that adopts part of the Ryan plan (tho not privatization of SS.)..

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 5, 2010 10:15 AM
To: H
Subject: follow-up

MS – I asked Huma about the Jackie Newmeyer/October 20th e-mail... she does not know what Jackie is referring to and also says that we have "cleared that day" for you.
Also, I passed forward to Huma and Eric that you would like to know details regarding the November 17 Women's Law Center honoring Melanne.
-Lauren

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 7:07 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Major Headline News 11-29

FYI

---

From: Barnes, Jennifer L [mailto:BarnesJL2@state.gov]
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 7:02 AM
To:
Cc: PA RRU
Subject: Major Headline News 11-29

Major Headline News

Wiki Leaks

✓ "Open secrets"; "A superpower's view of the world"; "Leaks could deal a fatal blow to global trust"; "US red-faced as cablegate sparks global diplomatic crisis"; "Wiki Leaks placed a bomb under US-UN relations"; "Where smiles hide the truth, this will hurt"; "Disclosures of critical assessments of the main figures of the Islamic world by US, UK may cause a violent reaction from the followers of Islam"; "The real target is Obama"; "Leaders of UAE, Egypt and Jordan described Iran as evil, Karzai is power-mad, Putin is Alfa dog and Merkel is not creative": International commentary worries over damage in international relations; individual markets review their own issues

If you do not already subscribe to the Major Headlines News report, this product will be sent to you on a temporary basis for the duration of the WikiLeaks issue. If you would like to subscribe on a permanent basis, please contact me at Barnesjl2@state.gov for a direct subscription.

Jennifer Barnes
Deputy Director
Rapid Response Unit
PA/RRU
Room 2313
Main State
1-202-647-1278

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 4, 2010 3:46 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Syria rejects U.S. criticism over Lebanon

From: Moore, Anna W
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS
Sent: Thu Nov 04 11:14:20 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Syria rejects U.S. criticism over Lebanon

DAMASCUS (Reuters) – Syria rejected U.S. accusations that it was destabilizing Lebanon and said it did not need U.S. advice on how to deal with its smaller neighbor. President Bashar al-Assad Assad told al-Hayat newspaper in an interview published last week that the U.S. "created chaos in every place it entered." Two days later the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations Susan Rice accused Damascus of joining forces with Iran and the Lebanese Shi'ite movement Hezbollah to undermine Lebanon.

U.S. Undersecretary of State for Near Eastern Affairs Jeffrey Feltman also told the Washington Post there would not be significant improvement in ties with Syria "as long as Syria's friends are undermining stability in Lebanon", a reference to Hezbollah.

An official Syrian statement published on Thursday said: "We do not need Feltman's advice because Syria is exercising its role through an independent decision to serve the interests of its people and the stability and security of the region."

CONFIDENTIAL

RELEASE IN PART
B6

September 6, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: GOP unpopularity, Boehner unpopularity, stealth agenda for campaign and beyond

1. The Republican Party, despite everything, remains deeply unpopular. (See the second Ohio poll below.)
2. The Republicans have made the election a referendum on Obama and the Democrats, succeeding beyond their wildest dreams. (See the first poll below on Obama-Bush matchup and question 12 in second poll on Ohio voters' recall on who they voted for in 2008, giving McCain a three point margin.)
3. The Republicans have managed to hide their own negatives through the negative campaign against Obama.
4. The campaign is not being conducted as a contest. The Republicans have succeeded in making it only about approval of Obama.
5. The GOP is hiding John Boehner, who is unpopular in his home state of Ohio, where he's best known. To the extent he is known, he is disliked.
6. The Republicans are pretending they offer something new and not really the same old Republicans, to the extent they make any sort of offer.
7. The Tea Party is deliberately trying to hide its extremism behind a mask of novelty and now religious rhetoric. (The right wing strategy has been spelled out in detail to a friend of mine,

B6

8. So far, there is no Democratic campaign to focus on the Republicans and, therefore, no contest. Republicans are not being exposed for their increasing dependence on extremists. They are not being pressed for their refusal to denounce extremism. Nor is the Tea Party being revealed as an extremist takeover movement. Nor is the Republicans' motive for smearing Obama being identified as a cynical strategy to put Boehner in power.
9. Whatever issue ginned up by Republicans—from illegal immigration to the "ground zero mosque"—is not about the issue itself. Everything, but everything, is about making John Boehner, that old scandal ridden hack Republican, the Speaker. No matter what the Republicans say, the ultimate issue is the Boehner power-grab.

10. The Republican Party is the same old party. It's unreformed. It hasn't learned anything. It can't control its extremists.

http://publicpolicypolling.blogspot.com/2010/08/previewing-ohio.html

Tuesday, August 31, 2010

Previewing Ohio

We'll start rolling out our Ohio poll results tomorrow but there's one finding on the poll that pretty much sums it up: by a 50-42 margin voters there say they'd rather have George W. Bush in the White House right now than Barack Obama.

Independents hold that view by a 44-37 margin and there are more Democrats who would take Bush back (11%) than there are Republicans who think Obama's preferable (3%.)

A couple months ago I thought the Pennsylvanias and Missouris and Ohios of the world were the biggest battlegrounds for 2010 but when you see numbers like this it makes you think it's probably actually the Californias and the Wisconsins and the Washingtons.

There's not much doubt things are getting worse for Democrats...and they were already pretty bad. Somehow the party base needs to get reinvigorated over the next two months or there's going to be a very, very steep price to pay.

http://www.publicpolicypolling.com/pdf/PPP_Release_OH_903.pdf

Public Policy Polling
3020 Highwoods Blvd.
Raleigh, NC 27604
Phone: 888 621-6988
Web: www.publicpolicypolling.com
Email: information@publicpolicypolling.com
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE September 3, 2010
INTERVIEWS: DEAN DEBNAM 888-621-6988 / 919-880-4888 (serious media inquiries only please, other questions can be directed to Tom Jensen)
QUESTIONS ABOUT THE POLL: TOM JENSEN 919-744-6312
GOP Leads OH Generic Ballot, Boehner Not Popular
Raleigh, N.C. – Despite expanding their lead to 47-41 over Democrats in the generic Congressional ballot, only 29% of likely Ohio voters approve of the direction of the Republican Party, with 55% disapproving, suggesting that their preference for the GOP is simply a vote for change, not a vote of affirmation or a mandate. Also supporting that notion: a 43% plurality finds the GOP to be too conservative, with only 29% seeing their views as "about right."
And in bad news for Minority Leader John Boehner, only 28% of his home-state voters

want him to become Speaker if Republicans take back the U.S. House, with 44% preferring "someone else." GOP voters do support Boehner for Speaker, but only by a 54-15 margin. Democrats, who would not vote for a Republican majority anyway, oppose him, 73-6, and independents, 41-22.

In June, Republicans were favored for Congress only 44-43 among registered voters, but the six-point shift in the partisan makeup of the likely electorate corresponds almost exactly with the shift in the generic ballot. On top of that, Republicans are united around their party's candidates 94-1, versus Democrats at 89-6. Democrats have actually improved slightly among independents, though Republicans still lead 36-23. There is considerable room for Democratic House candidates to make up ground by appealing to the 41% of unaffiliateds who are undecided and by boosting turnout among their voters.

While Republicans approve of the direction of their party, 59-20, independents disapprove, 61-13. 31% of Republicans and 20% of independents find the GOP too liberal, but 76% of Democrats and 43% of independents find it too conservative.

There has been no change in the race for Attorney General. Mike DeWine leads Democrat Richard Cordray 44-40 after leading 44-41 in June.

PPP surveyed 475 likely Ohio voters from August 27th to 29th. The margin of error for the survey is +/-4.5%. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.

If you would like an interview regarding this release, please contact Dean Debnam at (888) 621-6988 or 919-880-4888.

June 26-27, 2010

Survey of 482 Ohio voters

3020 Highwoods Blvd.

Raleigh, NC 27604

information@publicpolicypolling.com / 888 621-6988

Ohio Survey Results

Q1 The candidates for Attorney General are Democrat Richard Cordray and Republican Mike DeWine. If the election was today, who would you vote for?

Richard Cordray..... 40%
Mike DeWine ..... 44%
Undecided..... 16%

Q2 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of Mike DeWine?

Favorable..... .35%
Unfavorable ..... .33%
Not sure ..... .32%

Q3 Will you vote Democratic or Republican for US House this fall?

Democratic..... 41%
Republican..... 47%
Undecided..... 12%

Q4 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of John Boehner?

Favorable..... 27%
Unfavorable ..... 31%
Not sure ..... 42%

Q5 If Republicans take control of Congress, would you like John Boehner to be Speaker of the House, or would you rather it was someone else?
John Boehner..... 28%
Someone else ..... 44%
Not sure ..... 28%

Q6 Do you approve or disapprove of the direction of the Republican Party?
Approve..... 29%
Disapprove..... 55%
Not sure ..... 17%

Q7 Do you think the Republican Party is too liberal, too conservative, or about right?
Too liberal ..... 21%
Too conservative..... 43%
About right ..... 29%
Not sure ..... 7%

Q8 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of LeBron James?
Favorable..... 19%
Unfavorable ..... 34%
Not sure ..... 47%

Q9 Do you consider yourself to be a Cleveland Cavaliers fan?
Yes..... 37%
No ..... 63%

Q10 Do you think John Boehner spends too much, not enough, or about the right amount of time working on his tan?
Too much ..... 30%
Not enough ..... 4%
About the right amount of time..... 14%
Not sure ..... 51%

Q11 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of John Boehner's tan?
Favorable..... 8%
Unfavorable ..... 27%
Not sure ..... 64%

Q12 Who did you vote for President in 2008?
John McCain..... 48%
Barack Obama..... 45%
Someone else/Don't remember ..... 7%

June 26-27, 2010
Survey of 482 Ohio voters
3020 Highwoods Blvd.
Raleigh, NC 27604
information@publicpolicypolling.com / 888 621-6988

Q13 Would you describe yourself as a liberal, moderate, or conservative?
Liberal ..... 16%
Moderate ..... 44%
Conservative ..... 40%

Q14 If you are a woman, press 1. If a man, press 2.
Woman ..... 53%
Man ..... 47%

Q15 If you are a Democrat, press 1. If a Republican, press 2. If you are an independent or identify with another party, press 3.
Democrat ..... 40%
Republican ..... 40%
Independent/Other ..... 20%

Q16 If you are white, 1. If African-American, press 2. If other, press 3.
White ..... 87%
African-American ..... 10%
Other ..... 3%

Q17 If you are 18 to 29 years old, press 1. If 30 to 45, press 2. If 46 to 65, press 3. If older than 65, press 4.
18 to 29 ..... 8%
30 to 45 ..... 21%
46 to 65 ..... 44%
Older than 65 ..... 27%

June 26-27, 2010
survey of 482 Ohio voters
3020 Highwoods Blvd.
Raleigh, NC 27604
information@publicpolicypolling.com / 888 621-6988

Email from [redacted] 9/6/10, on interview [redacted] B6

Off the record: I had long conversation yesterday with [redacted] very scary. His prediction: "a wave of Biblical proportions" in November. the House is gone; he sees a new bloc of up to 10 true conservative senators, joining Coburn and DeMint, and creating a virtual third party in Senate holding balance of power. He says their polling suggests Tea Party candidates well ahead in Ky., Colo., senate races (NYT disputes that today) , and Nevada still a tossup..I went to the Glenn Back rally, and [redacted] largely agreed with my assessment that its purpose in part was to inoculate the movement against public concern over extremism and racism leading up to election. (Thus theme of Faith, Hope, Charity.) Americans for Prosperity (Koch group) made sure there were no signs, etc.

No love lost for post-1996 Republican hacks, among whom he numbered Gingrich, DeLay, Hastert -- and Rove who is on the outs with his people.

Oversight committees will take lead in House after GOP victory, with a particular focus on Holder and Justice Dept. and KSM decision. Purpose will be to keep Democrats on defensive for whole 2 years leading up to 2012 election. (Obama, you recall, nixed investigations of Bush administration because he wanted to unite the country.) Would there be an investigation of Obama citizenship?? couldnt say b ecause he is now totally focused on the election, not what comes after.

[redacted] My take: Of course House will vote to repeal health care reform (despite no chance of senate passage) ; funding dozens of EPA initiatives in Appropriations Committee, and there will be stand-alone vote to block EPA from implementing carbon rules (even though EPA is only acting as a result of a Supreme Court decision); and budget legislation that adopts part of the Ryan plan (tho not privatization of SS.).. B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 7:17 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) ROK cancels new artillery drill on tense island

---

From: Casteel, Ezra A
To: NEWS-Korea; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-1; SES-O_OS
Sent: Mon Nov 29 07:05:38 2010
Subject: (AP) ROK cancels new artillery drill on tense island

SEOUL (AP) – The Republic of Korea's military canceled a live-fire artillery exercise planned for November 30 on the front-line island targeted last week by a deadly DPRK bombardment. The military did not give a reason for the cancellation.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 4, 2010 4:46 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Iran blocks former president's website

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS
Sent: Thu Nov 04 16:36:28 2010
Subject: (AP) Iran blocks former president's website

TEHRAN (AP) - The website of former Iranian President Khatami announced authorities have blocked it without explanation.

A statement on Khatami.ir said a government committee had decided to filter the website, which on November 4 could only be reached from inside Iran through proxy servers.

While the site was not known to be controversial, Khatami, president from 1997 to 2005, supported opposition leader Mir Hossein Mousavi in 2009 presidential election that led to re-election of President Ahmadinejad.

Earlier this year authorities banned Khatami from traveling to Japan to attend a conference.

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 7:37 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Israel says Arabs agree on Iran threat

---

From: Jackson, Christine P
To: NEWS-WikiLeaks; NEWS-NEA; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS
Sent: Mon Nov 29 07:30:22 2010
Subject: (AP) Israel says Arabs agree on Iran threat

TEL AVIV (AP) - Israel's prime minister says newly leaked U.S. diplomatic cables provide clear proof that the Arab world agrees with his country's assessment that Iran is the chief danger to the Middle East. Benjamin Netanyahu said on November 29 "that the greatest threat to peace in the region, if not in the world, has been revealed." According to the cables released November 28 by Wikileaks, various Arab countries including Egypt, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and other Gulf states, have used terms like "evil" and "existential threat" to describe Iran. Some urged U.S. airstrikes on Iranian nuclear facilities. Netanyahu said that if Arab leaders would say in public what they say privately "there might be a breakthrough."

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 8:06 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Turkish Media Reaction - Wikileaks, November 29, 2010

---

From: Gordon, Philip H
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Burns, William J
Sent: Mon Nov 29 08:02:57 2010
Subject: FW: Turkish Media Reaction - Wikileaks, November 29, 2010

Here is first cut from Turkish media. [redacted] B5

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

---

From: Guido, Deborah L
Sent: Mon Nov 29 05:35:04 2010
Subject: Turkish Media Reaction - Wikileaks, November 29, 2010

Media Highlights: Revelations by WikiLeaks – Turkey is the Epicenter

US Embassy Ankara – Turkey Media Reaction – November 29, 2010 as prepared by the *Public Affairs Information Office

How the US Is Playing/Related News

Ankara Is WikiLeaks Epicenter (Hurriyet)
Turkish media is awash in Wikileaks revelations, with most focused on the 7,918 cables - the largest number for any one country - emanating from the US Embassy in Ankara. All news channels NTV and CNN Turk reported that PM Erdogan, as he departed for Libya on 11/29, told reporters "let the Wikileaks show what it has and, then, ...we can learn how serious or unserious these reports are because the credibility of Wikileaks is in question. So, currently we are waiting for them to print what they have. Then we can make an evaluation and necessary statement." Pro-government Sabah columnist Mehmet Barlas asks "Are Wikileaks Docs More Striking than Reality?" and opines "It's hard to understand why the State Department has panicked this much. After all, this information is gathered from the facts, media, and different sources. What could remain secret in an information age?" Asli Aydintasbas in Milliyet: Over the past year, the AK Party government had a volatile relationship with the Obama Administration. The documents show that Americans do not see the government in Ankara as a real ally, and that they have concerns. Unlike the style used in bilateral meetings, a much tougher language is used backstage. The fact that the Turkish foreign minister knows his interlocutors characterize him as 'dangerous' at a time he's in Washington will stiffen the distrustfulness between the two capitals." In "Ankara WikiLeaks Epicenter," mainstream Hurriyet's front page headline report mirrors most Turkish media reports in saying that the documents show that the US Embassy in Ankara views Turkey "as a country with divisions in leadership" and that "Turkey cannot be trusted because it was not likely to join the EU and was heading to an Islamist future." Hurriyet spotlights reports that purportedly say Turkish Prime Minister Erdogan had "incompetent" advisors and was pursuing a secret, Islamist agenda and that describe him as "stubborn, workaholic and perfectionist," but "not a tyrant." Hurriyet concludes that reports indicated that that the US views Turkish Foreign Minister Davutoglu as an "exceptionally dangerous" figure and that "America had been alarmed by his aspirations to reassert the influence the Ottoman Empire used to exert on the region." In "9/11 of Diplomacy: WikiLeaks Releases 'Secret State Documents,'" Islamist-oriented Zaman reports that Ankara believes [the high number of cables from the US Embassy in Ankara] proves Turkey's importance and its diplomatic effectiveness." In "The WikiLeaks Bomb," pro-government, Islamist-oriented Yeni Safak reports the WikiLeaks releases contain "shocking details" such as the chief of Mossad, Meir Dagan, telling an American official Islam was on the rise in Turkey, and "asking for how long the military, the defender of the secular identity, would remain silent." Other media cover the story as follows:

In its two-page spread, Zaman chronicles details of a FM Davutoglu –A/S Gordon meeting from November 12, 2009 in which the US side asks Turkey to take a tougher position against Iran if Tehran disregards international pressure, as well as a February 18, 2010 meeting between U/S of State William Burns and Turkish Foreign Ministry U/S Feridun Sinirlioglu on Iraq.

In "Hell Breaks Loose," mainstream Vatan focuses on the detailed US reports about Prime Minister Erdogan and AK Party. The paper notes on its centerfold piece that Ergenekon was closely watched by the US and that US officials were holding talks with Turkish generals. Both the Turkish government and the Turkish army were under close US surveillance, notes Vatan.

Pro-government Sabah in "Turkey Mark in WikiLeaks Documents," says the State Department has been waiting for the Wikileaks release with "curiosity and fear." Iran, Azerbaijan and the EU stand on the forefront in documents related to Turkey, says the paper.

Leftist Taraf in its front page banner headline, "They Monitored Even Erdogan's Son-in-Law," notes "in the documents, business connections of PM Erdogan's son-in-law were closely watched by the US. It's claimed that Erdogan rules Turkey with a group of incapable plotters."

Mainstream Aksam in "9/11 of Diplomacy," mentions American diplomats find Davutoglu very dangerous and add that "Turkey, with its axis shifting to East, is heading to an Islamist state."

Liberal Radikal and most media including the CNN-Turk headline "9/11 of Diplomacy." Radikal highlights "there was a struggle to prevent Wikileaks from releasing the secret documents but that "the documents that could put the relations with the US in trouble have been released anyway."

In "Hell Breaks Loose," mainstream Vatan focuses on the detailed US reports about Prime Minister Erdogan and AK Party. The paper notes on its centerfold piece that Ergenekon was closely watched by the US and that US officials were holding talks with Turkish generals. Both the Turkish government and the Turkish army were under close US surveillance, notes Vatan.

Commentary In Full: "WikiLeaks Crypto will Cause Crisis in Washington" *(Milliyet)
Asli Aydintasbas in Milliyet: "Three elements might cause damage between Ankara and Washington in the WikiLeaks revelations related to Turkey. First comes the claim that Turkey has helped al-Qaeda. A high level official believes this claim will not be convincing, because Ankara has proven itself in fighting against al-Qaeda. We recently see a flurry of news relating Turkey to al-Qaeda. All Turkish officials I have spoken with believe that such reports had been a campaign against Turkey which was launched right after the Mavi Marmara crisis. The second claim is the US is helping the PKK. If the WikiLeaks documents reveal a concrete tie between the US and the PKK, it will rock the two countries, further damaging the image of the US in Turkey. From time to time, the US has allowed Turkey to launch military operations into northern Iraq, but actually never really fought against the PKK. As a high level official put it, the US never supported the PKK but it also did not let the organization be destroyed, and kept it as an element of balance. The sources I have talked to said the leaks could contain information about the contacts of American officers or intelligence members with the PKK on security or other issues. Another possibility is contacts between Americans and the PKK's Iran wing, PJAK, but it's a remote possibility that this issue would be mentioned in diplomatic cables rather than intelligence reports. The third claim is the expressions used in the US State Department cables to define Turkish leaders. Over the past year, the AK Party government had a volatile relationship with the Obama Administration. The documents show that Americans do not see the government in Ankara as a real ally, and that they have concerns. Unlike the style used in bilateral meetings, a much tougher language is used backstage. The fact that the Turkish foreign minister knows his interlocutors characterize him as 'dangerous' at a time he's in Washington will stiffen the distrustfulness between the two capitals."

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

Deborah L. Guido
Spokesperson

U.S. Embassy Ankara
Office: 90-312-457-7312
Cell: [redacted]
Email: guidodl@state.gov
U.S. Embassy Web Page
Visit us on Facebook

B6

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

[redacted] book project.doc
2010.08.10

DRAFT PROPOSAL

RELEASE IN PART
B6

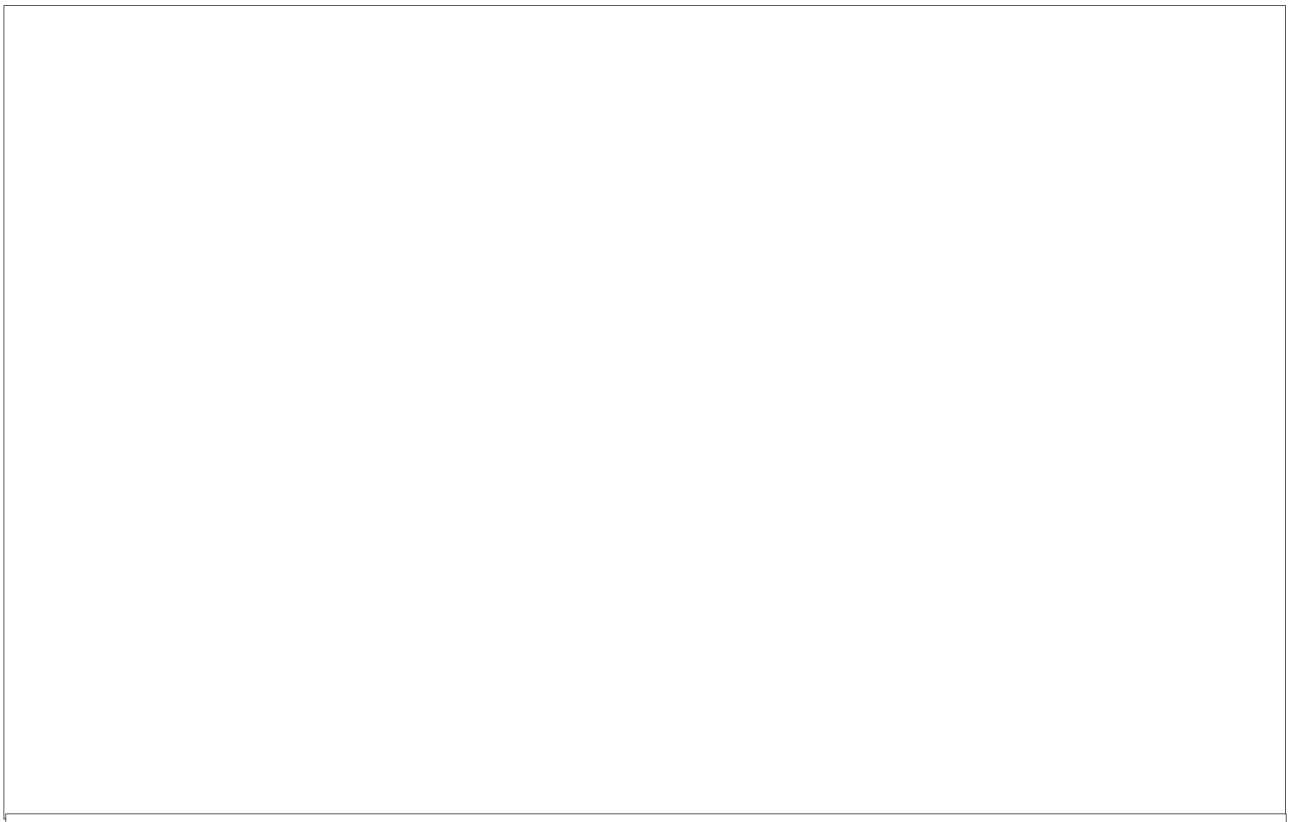
MEMOIR OF [redacted]

Concept and rationale

B6

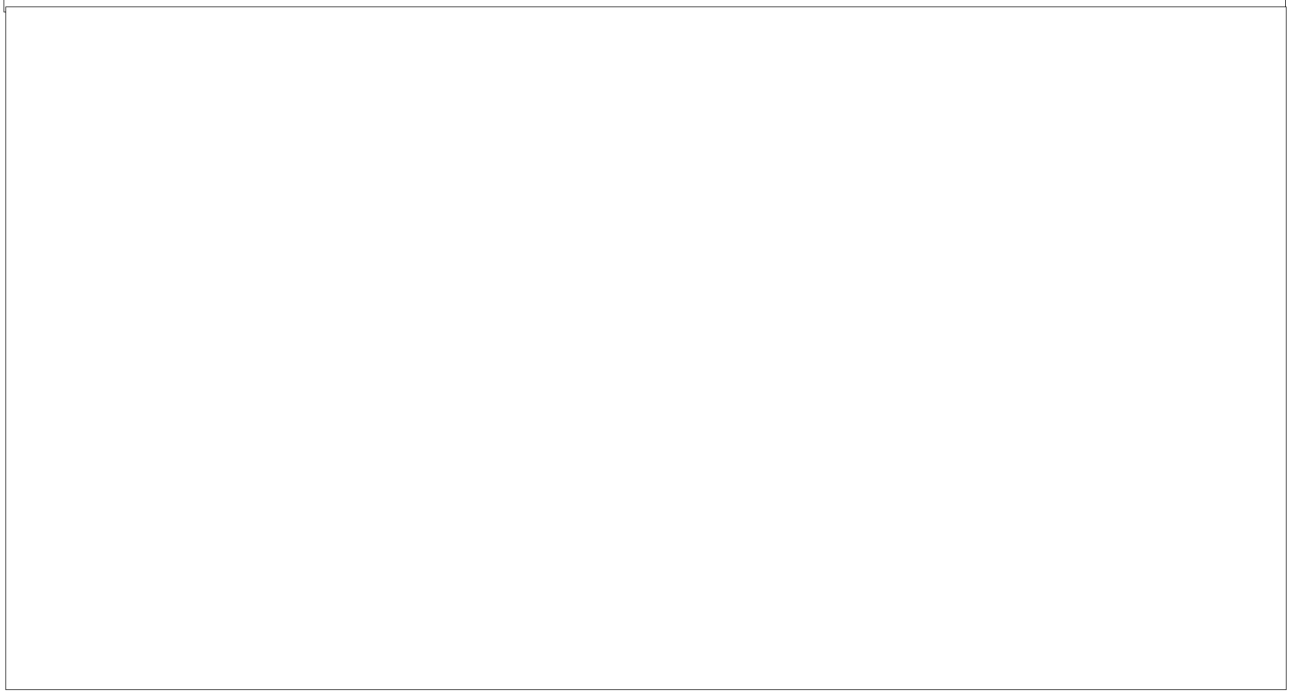
[redacted]

This original English-language "as told to" memoir will bring out her full story with a concreteness and vividness that will inform and move English-speaking readers. Her dramatic, engaging life story, told in her own voice, will reveal much that we never knew about China, its society, culture, politics, history, and the sufferings of its rural people, from the viewpoint of a distinctive, vivid individual. The book will show us Chinese society over a long span of time, and across a range of social classes and experiences. In this age of Chinese "soft power" when we are exposed to many images of a cosmopolitan China that is much like us, this book will allow Western readers to know a women whose personality and experiences are authentically Chinese, and to meet a hero who has a sharp tongue and is a real person. Above all, her life story brings to light the true situation of those with no voices, the rural people, the women and children, the sufferers.



Summary

B6



[redacted]

Page Denied

Page Denied

B6

Personnel, timeline, and budget

[redacted] has agreed to sit for interviews and to be audio and video-recorded for possible deposit in an oral history collection. She is prepared to start as soon as support is acquired. The grant needs to cover her living expenses for about a year to participate in the project, which I estimate at [redacted] However, health insurance is also needed, and whether this can be covered by a grant of that size depends on how the grant is administered. For example, if it comes through the Scholar Rescue Fund then health insurance would be included; but if not, it might be extra. An administering organization might also require overhead. [redacted] will also receive the major portion of the royalties of the book.

[redacted] will interview [redacted] and draft the manuscript. She is prepared to start as soon as the grant is obtained. Her job will take about a year and a half, covering both the interviewing and drafting the book. [redacted] They have a strong relationship of trust which will guarantee successful interviews. [redacted] spoken and written English are fluent. [redacted] living expenses are partly covered by [redacted] whom she is taking care of, but she will need some living expenses as well as a stipend for this job which will displace her academic work. The living stipend should be [redacted] and the stipend [redacted] per year. Over the course of a year and a half this would amount to [redacted] Again there may be overhead if the funds are granted through an institution that requires it. [redacted] will receive a share of the book's royalties to be negotiated with [redacted]

[redacted] will help shape the book to the market standards of English language readers, help polish the writing, and will serve as agent to place the book. She is a professional literary agent in New York who came originally from China. She will receive an agent's fee for the book. She should also receive an honorarium from the grant for her polishing work in the amount of [redacted]

B6

Andrew Nathan will participate throughout to help assure scholarly standards and make sure the book meets the needs of English language readers for context and explanation. [redacted] has asked him to review the manuscript to assure her of its appropriateness and fealty to her intentions. If desired by the publisher, Nathan will provide a foreword or a substantial introduction. Nathan will request an honorarium from the grant to symbolize his serious commitment to the project.

Attachments

Resumes of [redacted] Andrew J. Nathan

RELEASE IN PART
B6

| | |
|---|---|
| From: | Jake Sullivan [redacted] |
| Sent: | Monday, November 29, 2010 8:38 AM |
| To: | H |
| Cc: | sullivanjj@state.gov |
| Subject: | Re: Kissinger |

B6

I emailed Jeff yesterday and have not heard back. Will ping again this am.

On Mon, Nov 29, 2010 at 7:50 AM, H <HDR22@clintonemail.com> wrote:
Did you find out if he's going to China?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 5, 2010 10:38 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Haaretz) Netanyahu urges top ministers to extend settlement freeze

From: Deyo, Justin A
To: NEWS-Mahogany; SES-O_Shift-I
Cc: NEWS-NEA; SES-O_OS
Sent: Tue Oct 05 05:35:51 2010
Subject: (Haaretz) Netanyahu urges top ministers to extend settlement freeze

(Haaretz) Netanyahu urges top ministers to extend settlement freeze

PM to convene inner cabinet on Tuesday for vote on a 60-day moratorium in exchange for U.S. guarantees.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu will convene his forum of top ministers on Tuesday afternoon to debate extending Israel's moratorium on construction in West Bank settlements for 60 days.

The concession would be made in exchange for a series of reported U.S. guarantees in Israel's direct peace negotiations with the Palestinians. Israel halted construction temporarily for 10 months, a freeze that ended on September 26.

The Palestinians have said they would not continue the recently renewed negotiations unless Israel agreed to halt construction again. The Obama administration has urged Israel to reconsider its refusal of that demand.

If Netanyahu succeeds in convincing the Forum of Seven to accept an extension of the construction freeze, he plans to bring the matter to the political-security cabinet for a vote later Tuesday.

Defense Minister Ehud Barak (Labor) and Intelligence and Atomic Energy Minister Dan Meridor (Likud) are expected to support Netanyahu's position, while Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman (Yisrael Beiteinu) is likely to present the greatest opposition.

Netanyahu is pinning his hopes now on Ministers Benny Begin (Likud), Moshe Ya'alon (Likud) and Eli Yishai (Shas). The prime minister has already met with Begin over the last few days in an attempt to convince him to change his previously expressed opposition to extending the freeze.

Justin Deyo
U.S. Department of State
Operations Center (S/ES-O)
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 4, 2010 5:12 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: To read on the trip
Attachments: Project Proposal 29Oct2010.doc

Robert Pape is a top strategic thinker from U of Chicago who is best known for his empirical work showing a strong correlation between suicide terrorism and occupation by foreign troops. In his new work he is proposing a grand strategy of off-shore/on-shore balancing, where we keep nimble deployable military forces over the horizon and use

---

From: rpape36 [redacted] B6
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Cc: [redacted]; Sokolsky, Richard D; McAuliffe, Marisa S
Sent: Fri Oct 29 15:07:58 2010
Subject: Asking to Meet with You

Dear Anne-Marie,

As we discussed during your salon dinner with Steve Clemons at Nora's, I am developing a practical strategy of "off-shore/on-shore balancing" that would involve key USG agencies.

As the attached proposal explains, the new strategy is substantially different from previous historical constructs in the literature on American grand strategy and offers important advantages to improve our position in Afghanistan and other regions in the world in the coming years.

Going forward, I would like make sure I have State's views correct. If you and your staff could meet with me later next week, this would greatly help.

I look forward to further discussion.

Bob

--
Robert A. Pape
Professor, Political Science Department
Director, Chicago Project on Security and Terrorism
University of Chicago

B6

cpost.uchicago.edu

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 5, 2010 12:41 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Iraq government formation

For your situational awareness.

-----Original Message-----
From: Corbin, Michael H
Sent: Tuesday, October 05, 2010 12:37 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Feltman, Jeffrey D
Subject: Iraq government formation

Depending of course on how the meeting goes today, we think it would be very good if the Secretary could attend the VP meeting tomorrow to make sure that the hard questions about where we are on Iraq government formation are addressed.

The Secretary uniquely brings the ability to express her instincts on where this process is going (or not going) and she brings the understanding of the whole region that we must take into account as we push for an Iraqi government. Her understanding of where we are on the Peace Process, our credibility with the full range of Arab leaders, and our relationship with Iran, are subjects she can put on the table and make sure are comprehensively considered before any decisions on a way forward are reached.

Michael

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED

Michael Corbin
Deputy Assistant Secretary of State
Bureau of Near Eastern Affairs
HST Room 6242
Tel.: (202) 647-0554
Email: CorbinMH@state.gov

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 8:50 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Iran accepts date for talks with powers-Ahmadinejad

---

From: Jackson, Christine P
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS
Sent: Mon Nov 29 08:45:06 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Iran accepts date for talks with powers-Ahmadinejad

TEHRAN (Reuters) - Iran has accepted a date for talks with major powers, President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad said. The six powers hope the talks -- for which a date of December 5 was previously mooted -- will focus on its disputed nuclear program, but Tehran has said its uranium enrichment activity will not be up for negotiation. "Two dates have been proposed, they accepted one of them and we do not have any problem with that," Ahmadinejad told a news conference, adding that the venue was still under discussion.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 8:01 AM
To: H
Subject: Thank you!

MS --

B6

I hope the craziness of UNGA is going well -- thank you again!

All the best, Lona

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, August 29, 2010 10:40 PM
To: H
Subject: Kidnapped workers for Afghan female MP found dead

This is so discouraging.

---

From: Tom Malinowski [mailto:
Sent: Sunday, August 29, 2010 5:44 PM
To: Verveer, Melanne S
Subject: Kidnapped workers for Afghan female MP found dead

B6

Kidnapped workers for Afghan female MP found dead

Fauzia Galani is one of the few female candidates standing for election in September

The bodies of five people working for a female candidate in Afghanistan's parliamentary election have been found in western Herat province.

They were among a group of 10 people kidnapped by armed men on Wednesday. Five were later released, say reports.

The Taliban later said they carried out the abductions. No group has said it carried out the killings.

The staff were working for Fauzia Galani, who is seeking re-election to parliament in September's polls.

Police chief Nisar Ahmad Popal said the bodies had been found dumped on a mountainside in Adrskan district.

Reports say their hands had been bound and they had been shot in the head.

Taliban insurgents opposed to the elections in general - and female candidates in particular - have been blamed for the murder of a number of candidates.

On Saturday, candidate Haji Abdul Manan was shot and killed as he was leaving a mosque on the back of a motorcycle.

The Taliban have also been blamed for the kidnap of four women working at a drug treatment centre in northern Faryab province. Officials were reported to be negotiating to secure the women's release.

The US has sent an extra 30,000 troops to Afghanistan since December 2009 in an effort to defeat the Taliban.

But the BBC's Quentin Sommerville say that outside the city centres, the campaign of intimidation appears to be working, with many potential voters saying they are too afraid to go to the polls on 18 September.

More than 2,500 candidates are competing for 249 seats in the lower house.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05771965 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

Project Proposal

USG Agency Roles in Off-Shore/On-Shore Balancing

This project will prepare by December 31, 2010, a proposal defining in practical terms the contributions of U.S. Government agencies to a security strategy of off-shore military and on-shore political-economic balancing.

An Alternative Security Strategy. Off-shore/on-shore balancing seeks to achieve America's core national security objectives through a combination of over-the-horizon ("off-shore") military power and in-region ("on-shore") economic and political power. Off-shore/on-shore balancing is an alternative to advancing U.S. security goals through the deployment of large ground forces overseas, already problematic and likely to become even more so as economic challenges continue and chronic resentment deepens. Off-shore/on-shore balancing relies on naval, air, and rapidly deployable ground forces in combination with on-site economic and political support for local partners to secure America's interests in combating terrorism and achieving other key national security goals, particularly in the Middle East and Asia.

Afghanistan Case Study. To explore the strategy in practice, the project will consider a three-year transition to off-shore/on-shore balancing in Afghanistan. In the first, USG agencies would empower Pashtun groups through political and economic programs to achieve greater autonomy and create local opposition to the Taliban. U.S. and NATO troops on the ground would provide security. In the second year, U.S. and NATO troops would continue to provide security for political and economic programs and deliver lethal effects against terrorist groups, but they would operate with from a shrinking footprint as they redeployed to less sensitive parts of the country. In the third year, U.S. and NATO would remove troops and rely on air, naval, and rapidly deployable ground forces to deliver over-the-horizon effects.

Talking to the Practitioners. The project aims to define the contributions from key agencies, starting with the State Department and then moving on to the intelligence community and the military services.

The project will solicit agencies' views on how current and future programs might contribute to the strategy, identify inter-agency processes that might facilitate the coordination of the strategy, and anticipate issues that would arise in a transition to the strategy.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05771965 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 8:55 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) East Jerusalem housing gets preliminary OK

From: Jackson, Christine P
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS
Sent: Mon Nov 29 08:49:52 2010
Subject: (AP) East Jerusalem housing gets preliminary OK

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israel has given preliminary approval for 130 new apartments in disputed east Jerusalem. The November 29 decision by Jerusalem city authorities comes as peace talks between Israel and the Palestinians are at a standstill over building in the West Bank and east Jerusalem. City Hall spokesman Elie Isaacson says the new housing was approved for Gilo, a Jewish housing development in east Jerusalem. The project still needs final approval from Israel's Interior Ministry to go ahead.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 9:18 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Call: Westerwelle

MS,
Westerwelle has a call into you. He would like to discuss his recent trip to the Balkans. A call sheet is forthcoming – we are due to receive it mid-day today.

Lauren

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 9:30 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Krishna call

The Indian foreign ministry has been pinging us to have a call between you and Krishna on the nuclear liability legislation. Bill believes you should call Krishna today – because he will be in receive mode – [redacted] B5 [redacted]. SCA is drafting that message with Bill's guidance. You could then call Menon tomorrow or Wednesday.

If you agree, we'll get the call sheet out to you soon.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 8:06 AM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: Thank you!

I am currently out of the office [redacted] through mid-December. For specific scheduling issues, please contact Eric Woodard at WoodardEW@state.gov. For additional assistance, please reach out to our Special Assistants, Timmy Davis and Laura Lucas, at 202-647-9572. Thank you!

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 4, 2010 6:03 PM
To: H
Subject: nothing to report

PJ now at 2:30pm on Thurs.

cdm

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 4, 2010 6:10 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: To read on the trip back 2
Attachments: Project Proposal 29Oct2010.doc

Let me try this again.

Robert Pape is a top strategic thinker from U of Chicago who is best known for his empirical work showing a strong correlation between suicide terrorism and occupation by foreign troops. In his new work he is proposing a grand strategy of off-shore/on-shore balancing. Below is the elevator version, or at least an academic's version of the elevator version. What is interesting is how closely it tracks with our emphasis on civilian power and the need for a smaller military due to budget constraints. If you want more the attached one-page proposal outlines a 3-year series of steps to apply this proposal to Afghanistan.

"An Alternative Security Strategy. Off-shore/on-shore balancing seeks to achieve America's core national security objectives through a combination of over-the-horizon ("off-shore") military power and in-region ("on-shore") economic and political power. Off-shore/on-shore balancing is an alternative to advancing U.S. security goals through the deployment of large ground forces overseas, already problematic and likely to become even more so as economic challenges continue and chronic resentment deepens. Off-shore/on-shore balancing relies on naval, air, and rapidly deployable ground forces in combination with on-site economic and political support for local partners to secure America's interests in combating terrorism and achieving other key national security goals, particularly in the Middle East and Asia."

AM

---

From: rpape36 [redacted] B6
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Cc: [redacted]; Sokolsky, Richard D; McAuliffe, Marisa S
Sent: Fri Oct 29 15:07:58 2010
Subject: Asking to Meet with You

Dear Anne-Marie,

As we discussed during your salon dinner with Steve Clemons at Nora's, I am developing a practical strategy of "off-shore/on-shore balancing" that would involve key USG agencies.

As the attached proposal explains, the new strategy is substantially different from previous historical constructs in the literature on American grand strategy and offers important advantages to improve our position in Afghanistan and other regions in the world in the coming years.

Going forward, I would like make sure I have State's views correct. If you and your staff could meet with me later next week, this would greatly help.

I look forward to further discussion.

Bob

--
Robert A. Pape
Professor, Political Science Department
Director, Chicago Project on Security and Terrorism
University of Chicago
[redacted]
cpost.uchicago.edu

B6

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05771993 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

Project Proposal

USG Agency Roles in Off-Shore/On-Shore Balancing

This project will prepare by December 31, 2010, a proposal defining in practical terms the contributions of U.S. Government agencies to a security strategy of off-shore military and on-shore political-economic balancing.

An Alternative Security Strategy. Off-shore/on-shore balancing seeks to achieve America's core national security objectives through a combination of over-the-horizon ("off-shore") military power and in-region ("on-shore") economic and political power. Off-shore/on-shore balancing is an alternative to advancing U.S. security goals through the deployment of large ground forces overseas, already problematic and likely to become even more so as economic challenges continue and chronic resentment deepens. Off-shore/on-shore balancing relies on naval, air, and rapidly deployable ground forces in combination with on-site economic and political support for local partners to secure America's interests in combating terrorism and achieving other key national security goals, particularly in the Middle East and Asia.

Afghanistan Case Study. To explore the strategy in practice, the project will consider a three-year transition to off-shore/on-shore balancing in Afghanistan. In the first, USG agencies would empower Pashtun groups through political and economic programs to achieve greater autonomy and create local opposition to the Taliban. U.S. and NATO troops on the ground would provide security. In the second year, U.S. and NATO troops would continue to provide security for political and economic programs and deliver lethal effects against terrorist groups, but they would operate with from a shrinking footprint as they redeployed to less sensitive parts of the country. In the third year, U.S. and NATO would remove troops and rely on air, naval, and rapidly deployable ground forces to deliver over-the-horizon effects.

Talking to the Practitioners. The project aims to define the contributions from key agencies, starting with the State Department and then moving on to the intelligence community and the military services.

The project will solicit agencies' views on how current and future programs might contribute to the strategy, identify inter-agency processes that might facilitate the coordination of the strategy, and anticipate issues that would arise in a transition to the strategy.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05771993 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 10:37 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Ahmadinejad says capitalism faces defeat

From: Casteel, Ezra A
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Tue Sep 21 10:30:39 2010
Subject: (AP) Ahmadinejad says capitalism faces defeat

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - Iran's President Ahmadinejad said capitalism is facing defeat and called for an overhaul of the "undemocratic and unjust" global decision-making bodies. In a speech on the second day of a U.N. anti-poverty summit, the Iranian leader called on world leaders, thinkers and global reformers "to spare no effort" to make practical plans for a new world order. To spotlight this effort, Ahmadinejad proposed the United Nations name the current decade the Decade for Joint Global Governance.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 4, 2010 6:13 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Obama hopes START treaty will pass Congress soon

---

From: Toiv, Nora F
Sent: Thursday, November 04, 2010 6:11 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Obama hopes START treaty will pass Congress soon

Obama hopes START treaty will pass Congress soon

(AFP) – 7 hours ago

WASHINGTON — US President Barack Obama Thursday said he hoped that a landmark nuclear weapons deal with Russia would win Congress approval before the end of this year.

The new Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START) was negotiated earlier this year to replace a similar treaty which expired at the end of December.

Obama appealed to Republicans to help approve the treaty when Congress returns on November 15, after the party put up stiff opposition to the new deal fearing it could hamper US missile defense plans.

"This is not a traditionally Democratic or Republican issue, but, rather, an issue of American national security," Obama said at a cabinet meeting, two days after Republicans posted strong gains in congressional elections.

"I'm hopeful that we can get that done... and send a strong signal to Russia that we're serious about reducing nuclear arsenals, but also send a signal to the world that we're serious about non-proliferation," Obama said.

The new Congress takes office in January, with Republicans set to take control of the House of Representatives and to add members to the Senate. So the next two months are known as a "lame duck" session, in which outgoing lawmakers often shy away from major legislation.

But START was facing trouble even in the current Congress. Under the US constitution, treaties need the approval of two-thirds of the Senate.

The START treaty -- signed by Russian President Dmitry Medvedev and Obama at an elaborate ceremony in Prague in April -- restricts each nation to a maximum of 1,550 deployed warheads, a cut of about 30 percent from a limit set in 2002.

US Defense Secretary Robert Gates echoed Obama's appeal, urging the Senate to ratify a treaty to ensure the resumption of inspections of Russia's arsenal.

His press secretary, Geoff Morrell, told reporters that Gates "and many other former defense secretaries and national security officials, from both parties, have frequently voiced their strong belief that this treaty is absolutely critical to the effectiveness of our nuclear arsenal, our knowledge of Russian nuclear capabilities, and US national security overall."

In the Senate, the treaty enjoys the support of Richard Lugar, the top Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, along with several former Republican secretaries of state including Henry Kissinger.

But a growing number of Republicans have voiced opposition, saying it would impede the US ability to set up missile defenses against future potential threats such as Iran.

Former Massachusetts governor Mitt Romney, who is expected to seek the Republican nomination to run against Obama in 2012, has led the charge criticizing START.

CONFIDENTIAL

RELEASE IN PART
B6

September 6, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: GOP unpopularity, Boehner unpopularity, stealth agenda for campaign and beyond

1. The Republican Party, despite everything, remains deeply unpopular. (See the second Ohio poll below.)
2. The Republicans have made the election a referendum on Obama and the Democrats, succeeding beyond their wildest dreams. (See the first poll below on Obama-Bush matchup and question 12 in second poll on Ohio voters' recall on who they voted for in 2008, giving McCain a three point margin.)
3. The Republicans have managed to hide their own negatives through the negative campaign against Obama.
4. The campaign is not being conducted as a contest. The Republicans have succeeded in making it only about approval of Obama.
5. The GOP is hiding John Boehner, who is unpopular in his home state of Ohio, where he's best known. To the extent he is known, he is disliked.
6. The Republicans are pretending they offer something new and not really the same old Republicans, to the extent they make any sort of offer.
7. The Tea Party is deliberately trying to hide its extremism behind a mask of novelty and now religious rhetoric. (The right wing strategy has been spelled out in detail to a friend of mine,

B6

8. So far, there is no Democratic campaign to focus on the Republicans and, therefore, no contest. Republicans are not being exposed for their increasing dependence on extremists. They are not being pressed for their refusal to denounce extremism. Nor is the Tea Party being revealed as an extremist takeover movement. Nor is the Republicans' motive for smearing Obama being identified as a cynical strategy to put Boehner in power.
9. Whatever issue ginned up by Republicans—from illegal immigration to the "ground zero mosque"—is not about the issue itself. Everything, but everything, is about making John Boehner, that old scandal ridden hack Republican, the Speaker. No matter what the Republicans say, the ultimate issue is the Boehner power-grab.

10. The Republican Party is the same old party. It's unreformed. It hasn't learned anything. It can't control its extremists.

[illegible]

Tuesday, August 31, 2010

[illegible]

We'll start rolling out our Ohio poll results tomorrow but there's one finding on the poll that pretty much sums it up: by a 50-42 margin voters there say they'd rather have George W. Bush in the White House right now than Barack Obama.

Independents hold that view by a 44-37 margin and there are more Democrats who would take Bush back (11%) than there are Republicans who think Obama's preferable (3%.)

A couple months ago I thought the Pennsylvanias and Missouris and Ohios of the world were the biggest battlegrounds for 2010 but when you see numbers like this it makes you think it's probably actually the Californias and the Wisconsins and the Washingtons.

There's not much doubt things are getting worse for Democrats...and they were already pretty bad. Somehow the party base needs to get reinvigorated over the next two months or there's going to be a very, very steep price to pay.

[illegible]

Public Policy Polling
3020 Highwoods Blvd.
Raleigh, NC 27604
Phone: 888 621-6988
Web: www.publicpolicypolling.com
Email: information@publicpolicypolling.com
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE September 3, 2010
INTERVIEWS: DEAN DEBNAM 888-621-6988 / 919-880-4888 (serious media inquiries only please, other questions can be directed to Tom Jensen)
QUESTIONS ABOUT THE POLL: TOM JENSEN 919-744-6312
GOP Leads OH Generic Ballot, Boehner Not Popular
Raleigh, N.C. – Despite expanding their lead to 47-41 over Democrats in the generic Congressional ballot, only 29% of likely Ohio voters approve of the direction of the Republican Party, with 55% disapproving, suggesting that their preference for the GOP is simply a vote for change, not a vote of affirmation or a mandate. Also supporting that notion: a 43% plurality finds the GOP to be too conservative, with only 29% seeing their views as "about right."
And in bad news for Minority Leader John Boehner, only 28% of his home-state voters

want him to become Speaker if Republicans take back the U.S. House, with 44% preferring "someone else." GOP voters do support Boehner for Speaker, but only by a 54-15 margin. Democrats, who would not vote for a Republican majority anyway, oppose him, 73-6, and independents, 41-22.

In June, Republicans were favored for Congress only 44-43 among registered voters, but the six-point shift in the partisan makeup of the likely electorate corresponds almost exactly with the shift in the generic ballot. On top of that, Republicans are united around their party's candidates 94-1, versus Democrats at 89-6. Democrats have actually improved slightly among independents, though Republicans still lead 36-23. There is considerable room for Democratic House candidates to make up ground by appealing to the 41% of unaffiliateds who are undecided and by boosting turnout among their voters.

While Republicans approve of the direction of their party, 59-20, independents disapprove, 61-13. 31% of Republicans and 20% of independents find the GOP too liberal, but 76% of Democrats and 43% of independents find it too conservative.

There has been no change in the race for Attorney General. Mike DeWine leads Democrat Richard Cordray 44-40 after leading 44-41 in June.

PPP surveyed 475 likely Ohio voters from August 27th to 29th. The margin of error for the survey is +/-4.5%. Other factors, such as refusal to be interviewed and weighting, may introduce additional error that is more difficult to quantify.

If you would like an interview regarding this release, please contact Dean Debnam at (888) 621-6988 or 919-880-4888.

June 26-27, 2010

Survey of 482 Ohio voters

3020 Highwoods Blvd.
Raleigh, NC 27604
information@publicpolicypolling.com / 888 621-6988

Ohio Survey Results

Q1 The candidates for Attorney General are Democrat Richard Cordray and Republican Mike DeWine. If the election was today, who would you vote for?

Richard Cordray..... 40%
Mike DeWine ..... 44%
Undecided..... 16%

Q2 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of Mike DeWine?

Favorable..... .35%
Unfavorable ..... .33%
Not sure ..... .32%

Q3 Will you vote Democratic or Republican for US House this fall?

Democratic..... 41%
Republican..... 47%
Undecided..... 12%

Q4 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of John Boehner?

Favorable..... 27%
Unfavorable ..... 31%
Not sure ..... 42%

Q5 If Republicans take control of Congress, would you like John Boehner to be Speaker of the House, or would you rather it was someone else?
John Boehner..... 28%
Someone else ..... 44%
Not sure ..... 28%

Q6 Do you approve or disapprove of the direction of the Republican Party?
Approve..... 29%
Disapprove..... 55%
Not sure ..... 17%

Q7 Do you think the Republican Party is too liberal, too conservative, or about right?
Too liberal ..... 21%
Too conservative..... 43%
About right ..... 29%
Not sure ..... 7%

Q8 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of LeBron James?
Favorable..... 19%
Unfavorable ..... 34%
Not sure ..... 47%

Q9 Do you consider yourself to be a Cleveland Cavaliers fan?
Yes..... 37%
No ..... 63%

Q10 Do you think John Boehner spends too much, not enough, or about the right amount of time working on his tan?
Too much ..... 30%
Not enough ..... 4%
About the right amount of time..... 14%
Not sure ..... 51%

Q11 Do you have a favorable or unfavorable opinion of John Boehner's tan?
Favorable..... 8%
Unfavorable ..... 27%
Not sure ..... 64%

Q12 Who did you vote for President in 2008?
John McCain..... 48%
Barack Obama..... 45%
Someone else/Don't remember ..... 7%

June 26-27, 2010
Survey of 482 Ohio voters
3020 Highwoods Blvd.
Raleigh, NC 27604
information@publicpolicypolling.com / 888 621-6988
Q13 Would you describe yourself as a liberal, moderate, or conservative?
Liberal ..... 16%
Moderate..... 44%
Conservative..... 40%
Q14 If you are a woman, press 1. If a man, press 2.
Woman ..... 53%
Man..... 47%
Q15 If you are a Democrat, press 1. If a Republican, press 2. If you are an independent or identify with another party, press 3.
Democrat ..... 40%
Republican..... 40%
Independent/Other..... 20%
Q16 If you are white, 1. If African-American, press 2. If other, press 3.
White ..... 87%
African-American ..... 10%
Other..... 3%
Q17 If you are 18 to 29 years old, press 1. If 30 to 45, press 2. If 46 to 65, press 3. If older than 65, press 4.
18 to 29..... 8%
30 to 45..... 21%
46 to 65..... 44%
Older than 65..... 27%
June 26-27, 2010
survey of 482 Ohio voters
3020 Highwoods Blvd.
Raleigh, NC 27604
information@publicpolicypolling.com / 888 621-6988

Email from [redacted] 9/6/10, on interview [redacted] B6

Off the record: I had long conversation yesterday with [redacted] very scary. His prediction: "a wave of Biblical proportions" in November. the House is gone; he sees a new bloc of up to 10 true conservative senators, joining Coburn and DeMint, and creating a virtual third party in Senate holding balance of power. He says their polling suggests Tea Party candidates well ahead in Ky., Colo., senate races (NYT disputes that today) , and Nevada still a tossup..I went to the Glenn Back rally, and [redacted] largely agreed with my assessment that its purpose in part was to inoculate the movement against public concern over extremism and racism leading up to election. (Thus theme of Faith, Hope, Charity.) Americans for Prosperity (Koch group) made sure there were no signs, etc.

No love lost for post-1996 Republican hacks, among whom he numbered Gingrich, DeLay, Hastert -- and Rove who is on the outs with his people.

Oversight committees will take lead in House after GOP victory, with a particular focus on Holder and Justice Dept. and KSM decision. Purpose will be to keep Democrats on defensive for whole 2 years leading up to 2012 election. (Obama, you recall, nixed investigations of Bush administration because he wanted to unite the country.) Would there be an investigation of Obama citizenship?? couldnt say b ecause he is now totally focused on the election, not what comes after.

[redacted] My take: Of course House will vote to repeal health care reform (despite no chance of senate passage) ; funding dozens of EPA initiatives in Appropriations Committee, and there will be stand-alone vote to block EPA from implementing carbon rules (even though EPA is only acting as a result of a Supreme Court decision); and budget legislation that adopts part of the Ryan plan (tho not privatization of SS.)..

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 4, 2010 6:24 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: To read on the trip back 2

We miss you!

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Thu Nov 04 18:20:42 2010
Subject: Re: To read on the trip back 2

Thanks--I look forward to reading it.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Nov 04 18:10:19 2010
Subject: To read on the trip back 2

Let me try this again.

Robert Pape is a top strategic thinker from U of Chicago who is best known for his empirical work showing a strong correlation between suicide terrorism and occupation by foreign troops. In his new work he is proposing a grand strategy of off-shore/on-shore balancing. Below is the elevator version, or at least an academic's version of the elevator version. What is interesting is how closely it tracks with our emphasis on civilian power and the need for a smaller military due to budget constraints. If you want more the attached one-page proposal outlines a 3-year series of steps to apply this proposal to Afghanistan.

"An Alternative Security Strategy. Off-shore/on-shore balancing seeks to achieve America's core national security objectives through a combination of over-the-horizon ("off-shore") military power and in-region ("on-shore") economic and political power. Off-shore/on-shore balancing is an alternative to advancing U.S. security goals through the deployment of large ground forces overseas, already problematic and likely to become even more so as economic challenges continue and chronic resentment deepens. Off-shore/on-shore balancing relies on naval, air, and rapidly deployable ground forces in combination with on-site economic and political support for local partners to secure America's interests in combating terrorism and achieving other key national security goals, particularly in the Middle East and Asia."

AM

---

From: rpape36 [redacted] B6
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Cc: [redacted] Sokolsky, Richard D; McAuliffe, Marisa S
Sent: Fri Oct 29 15:07:58 2010
Subject: Asking to Meet with You

Dear Anne-Marie,

As we discussed during your salon dinner with Steve Clemons at Nora's, I am developing a practical strategy of "off-shore/on-shore balancing" that would involve key USG agencies.

As the attached proposal explains, the new strategy is substantially different from previous historical constructs in the literature on American grand strategy and offers important advantages to improve our position in Afghanistan and other regions in the world in the coming years.

Going forward, I would like make sure I have State's views correct. If you and your staff could meet with me later next week, this would greatly help.

I look forward to further discussion.

Bob

--

Robert A. Pape
Professor, Political Science Department
Director, Chicago Project on Security and Terrorism University of Chicago

[redacted] B6

cpost.uchicago.edu <http://cpost.uchicago.edu/>

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 12/16/2025

RELEASE IN PART B1,1.4(D)

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, December 17, 2010 3:04 PM
To: H
Subject: New Development [redacted] B1 1.4(D)

I have alerted Moriarty and Blake.

Melanne S. Verveer
Ambassador at Large for Global Women's Issues U.S. Department of State
2201 C Street NW, Room 6805
Washington, DC 20520
Tel: (202) 647-7283
Fax: (202) 647-7288
VerveerMS@state.gov

-----Original Message-----
From: [redacted] 1.4(D) B1 B6
Sent: Friday, December 17, 2010 10:43 AM
To: Verveer, Melanne S
Subject: New Development

Dear Melanne

[redacted] B1 1.4(D)

B1
1.4(D)

Sent wirelessly via BlackBerry

RELEASE IN FULL

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 9:42 AM
To: H
Subject: The film - Richard Kaufman from Goodspot - who did last year's film - did it w/ guidance from Cindy and Caitlin: Katie did the logo and website

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 11:31 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: A Foreign Policy 100 top global thinkers plug for the QDDR

For a tiny bit of good news in such a bleak week, you and President Clinton came in at no. 13 in Foreign Policy's second annual list of top global thinkers, with special commendation to you for launching the QDDR (and for cookstoves and women's rights, as well as for your strong position on American leadership). Michele Flournoy and I also tied for no. 74 on the basis of our respective roles in the QDR and other reviews at DoD and the QDDR here at State. Here are the write ups

13. Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton

for proving that you don't need to be president to act presidential.

FORMER PRESIDENT | NEW YORK

SECRETARY OF STATE | WASHINGTON

Speaking to the Council on Foreign Relations in September, Hillary Rodham Clinton sounded a confident note: "After years of war and uncertainty, people are wondering what the future holds, at home and abroad. So let me say it clearly: The United States can, must, and will lead in this new century."

Ironically, two of the people most crucial to the new global century are the Clintons themselves: the ex-president and the ex-would-be-president, the power couple now defined by their position just outside the highest reaches of power. Except that, these days, both Clintons are more influential, and more beloved, than ever. Bill's Clinton Global Initiative is starting to feel like a sexier, more effective competitor not just to Davos but to the United Nations itself, bringing world leaders together to commit their resources to fighting poverty with market-based, technocratic solutions. As of this summer, his foundation had contributed $23 million and countless man-hours to the effort to rebuild Haiti. Polls have shown he's a better advocate for Democratic candidates than the actual president, and he spent most of the fall stumping for woebegone Dems from Orlando to Seattle.

Meanwhile, Hillary showed up in one recent poll as the most popular political figure in the United States, an accolade she has earned through a no-drama approach to an array of thankless tasks: brushing off Vladimir Putin's temper tantrum to reach agreement on nuclear disarmament and Iran sanctions, promoting women's rights over the objections of entrenched traditionalists, and launching an innovative effort to bring clean cookstoves to the world's poorest. But what she has mainly stood for is American competence, with her Quadrennial Diplomacy and Development Review a major, if unglamorous step toward making U.S. statesmanship a more agile beast. If this is what Clinton nostalgia looks like, bring it on.

74. Michèle Flournoy and Anne-Marie Slaughter

for setting the tone of how the United States engages with the world.

POLICY PLANNING CHIEFS, DEFENSE AND STATE DEPARTMENTS | WASHINGTON

Barack Obama campaigned in 2008 on the promise of changing not just the style but the substance of how the United States deals with its allies and enemies abroad, and the job of figuring out how to enact the changes fell largely to two people in particular. At the State Department, Anne-Marie Slaughter, director of policy planning, is spearheading the department's Quadrennial Diplomacy and Development Review. The review aims to rejuvenate marginalized civilian agencies such as the U.S. Agency for International Development, preparing for a world in which America's worst threats are not great-power rivals but the upheavals associated with failed and failing states.

Slaughter's Pentagon counterpart is Undersecretary for Policy Michèle Flournoy, co-founder of the Center for a New American Security think tank, who articulated a vision for a new Democratic realism in foreign policy that both candidates Hillary Clinton and Obama embraced in the 2008 election. In 2010 she oversaw the Pentagon's own quadrennial review, a blueprint that cuts back on big-ticket weapons systems and focuses instead on the immediate needs posed by today's asymmetrical conflicts. Flournoy has also been a vocal advocate for Obama's Afghanistan strategy, albeit a pragmatic one: "I don't want to suggest that achieving success will be simple or easy," she told the Senate in February. "We need to prepare for the possibility that things may get harder before they get better."

Anne-Marie Slaughter
Director of Policy Planning
U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-2972

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, December 17, 2010 3:06 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: for HRC: 9th circuit case Davutoglu referred to in call

From: Macmanus, Joseph E
To: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Dec 17 15:04:48 2010
Subject: for HRC: 9th circuit case Davutoglu referred to in call

Appeals court reverses itself over Armenian suit

By PAUL ELIAS
The Associated Press
Friday, December 10, 2010; 6:12 PM

SAN FRANCISCO -- A federal appeals court on Friday reversed itself and now says the heirs of Armenians killed in the Turkish Ottoman Empire can seek payment from companies that sold their relatives life insurance.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco said a California law labeling the killings as a "genocide" does not conflict with U.S. foreign policy, which the court said is unsettled on the issue.

The ruling was 2-1, the same vote the same judicial panel came to last year when it struck down the California law empowering the heirs to sue companies that sold life insurance policies to Armenians killed in Ottoman-era Turkey during World War I.

Last year, the same panel concluded that the U.S. government has sided with the Turkish government and formally taken the position against labeling the killings as a genocide. Therefore, that panel concluded, California's calling the event a genocide conflicted with U.S. foreign policy, making the state law invalid.

But in a rare and stunning move on Friday, Judge Dorothy Nelson changed her mind and sided with Judge Harry Pregerson, which turned his 2009 dissenting view into law.

"We conclude that there is no express federal policy forbidding states to use the term 'Armenian Genocide,'" Pregerson wrote.

The ruling revived a lawsuit filed by heirs against three German insurers, including Munich Re AG.

"This was totally unexpected," said attorney Brian Kabateck, who represents the Armenian heirs. "It's a great victory for the Armenia people."

Kabateck and other lawyers have filed similar lawsuits against New York Life Insurance Co. and French insurer AXA, which were settled in 2005 for a combined $37.5 million.

Turkey has long denied that the loss of 1.5 million Armenian lives between 1915 and 1919 constituted genocide and instead describes the deaths as resulting from civil unrest that accompanied the collapse of the Ottoman Empire.

Judge David Thompson, who wrote the now-overturned majority opinion last year, said in dissent that former presidents Bill Clinton and George W. Bush defeated congressional legislation that would have recognized an Armenian genocide. Thompson said those presidential efforts show the United States has a clear foreign policy against recognizing the deaths as a genocide.

The majority opinion Friday called those efforts "informal presidential communications" and not official policy. The court said the insurance companies can file a request for a rehearing. The companies could also ask the U.S. Supreme Court to consider the case.

Attorney Neil Michael Soltman, who represented the German insurance companies, said an appeal decision hasn't been made.

Soltman said he was surprised by the decision since no new facts or legal cases were presented to the appellate panel between its first decision in August 2009 and the court's about face Friday.

"It's very rare that a panel changes its mind," Soltman said. "Everything is exactly as it was in August 2009, and all of sudden there's a new opinion. It's hard to explain."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 11:47 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: outcome of the entrepreneurship summit

Here is a quite different picture of the Middle East – and an example of our leading in a different way. NB also the woman entrepreneur from Dubai. AM

---

From: Behrman, Greg M
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 10:02 AM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Subject: FYI

AM, This appeared in Friday's Wash Post. This is the event I told you about. The organizers said it was "100% a child of the entrepreneurship summit" (they were both participants). A great example of USG leading, convening, profiling and catalyzing local leadership to take the baton and lead. gb http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/11/25/AR2010112502227.html?wpisrc=nl_opinions

Dubai, a new locus of entrepreneurial energy

By Christopher M. Schroeder
Friday, November 26, 2010;

The sold-out gathering had the earmarks of a typical Silicon Valley event: more than 2,400 hungry entrepreneurs and investors, most young adults, tethered to their mobile devices - sharing, debating and connecting. There was the requisite hip music. Speakers who had "been there" were mixing with kids new to the game, dashing out ideas on white boards and rallying each other to new ventures.

That's where "typical" ended.

This month's Celebration of Entrepreneurship 2010 was hosted not in San Francisco or New York but in Dubai. The participants weren't familiar U.S. Internet names but a new generation of entrepreneurs representing every Islamic country in the Middle East. The visionaries behind the gathering weren't famous Western tech journalists or futurists but Pakistan-born Arif Naqvi, founder of the Middle East private equity firm Abraaj Capital, and Lebanese Jordanian entrepreneur Fadi Ghandour, who built the region's largest logistics and transportation services company. Absent were debates on politics, religion and historic obstacles. The only question on everyone's mind was "Why not us?"

Why not, indeed. As Vali Nasr wrote in "Forces of Fortune," his recent, must-read book on the economic rise of the Middle East: "The global Muslim population of a billion-plus is about the same size as both India and China's populations. In 2008 the GDP of the economies of five of the largest countries in and around the Middle East - Egypt, Iran, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, and Turkey, with a combined population of 420 million - was $3.3 trillion, the same size as that of India, which has three times the population." Is this troubled region ripe to unleash entrepreneurship and innovation of the sort that has driven growth and job creation around the world?

This nascent narrative about the Mideast has largely been missed by the West, and there are many tempting reasons to dismiss it. The gap between the mega-wealthy and desperate poor remains shocking; education and literacy remain profound challenges. Weighing heavily against the talent, transparency, speed and liquidity that have electrified entrepreneurship in the United States and elsewhere are corruption, high unemployment, heavy reliance on government largess, archaic and often indecipherable rules of law, and cultural resistance to investing beyond fixed assets. One need only spend a few days in Amman or Cairo, going through metal detectors in every restaurant, hotel and tourist destination, to feel the political realities.

But tell that to the young Kuwaiti who created mobile game apps for his own amusement . . . and found that more than 1 million people discovered and downloaded his products. Try to discourage the 19-year-old coffee entrepreneur in Yemen who insists that every aspect of his operations (including packaging, which is often outsourced to China) be done in his community.

The list goes on: Computer graphic animators in Damascus are doing things that could make 3-D look antiquated. An Egyptian entrepreneur has developed technology, using air, to blast less water through showers to dramatically reduce consumption in the arid region without sacrificing a quality bathing experience. Oasis500 is one of several tech incubators in Jordan that are planning to back hundreds of start-ups, from companies focusing on new technologies and forms of distribution to those simply "Arabizing" interactive and mobile services that have proved successful in English.

Perhaps my favorite entrepreneur was an 18-year-old woman, one of dozens of women covered from head to toe in the Dubai audience. She had designed a beautiful, even luxurious, battery-powered holder for mobile devices and other items such as note pads to ensure our devices are comfortable, charged and elegant. She has spoken with four manufacturers in China and is wrestling with whether to raise money to buy machinery to sell her first batch, pre-ordered, of a thousand units.

How many of us would have bet two decades ago that China, India and Brazil would be driving engines of global innovation, technology and growth? Would we have guessed that our technology businesses would be developing and outsourcing technologies from the Baltics to South America?

It is not easy in our political environment to seek traces of hope in this troubled region, nor to contemplate a different, albeit concurrent, narrative in complex countries that are rapidly coming to terms with their futures. But something is happening in the region, much like what happened in what was once called the developing world. It is worth watching and supporting. This shift has its own voice, attuned to cultural and religious values that we in the West may not fully understand. It embraces innovation, problem solving, job creation and prosperity - offering new generations a clear path to their future.

Christopher M. Schroeder, a Washington-based Internet entrepreneur and angel investor, is chief executive of HealthCentral.com.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 1:24 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Governor Richardson plans to proceed

FYI

---

From: Kim, Sung Y
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 11:53 AM
To: Campbell, Kurt M; 'Bosworth, Stephen'; Bader, Jeffrey A.; 'Russel, Daniel R.'; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mace, Casey K
Subject: Governor Richardson plans to proceed

---

From: Hartley, Janis, GOV [mailto:[redacted]
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 11:17 AM
To: Kim, Sung Y
Subject:

B6

Ambassador Kim – Governor Richardson wanted me to send you the following e-mail. My direct line is [redacted] if you need to contact me or the Governor. Thanks – Janis

Dear Ambassador Kim,

Since I haven't heard from you I assume my trip to North Korea is okay with you guys. My plan is to leave Monday, December 13th, stay for 2 days and return to the United States on the weekend.

The North Koreans have assured me that they will not exploit my visit and that they have some positive messages to convey. They know that I am not an envoy of the administration and that is fine with them.

My sense is that they will with draw the invitation if I postpone once again at your request.

Needless to say, the Obama administration wishes will be an important factor to me as I pursue this trip.

All the best – Bill Richardson

Janis L. Hartley
Office of Governor Bill Richardson
Deputy Chief of Staff - Scheduling, Logistics & Planning
State Capitol Building, Suite 400
505-476-2200

Confidentiality Notice: This email, including all attachments is for the sole use of the intended recipient(s) and may contain confidential and privileged information. Any unauthorized review, use, disclosure, or distribution is prohibited, unless specifically provided under the New Mexico Inspection of Public Records Act. If you are not the intended recipient, please contact the sender and destroy all copies of this message.

PLEASE NOTE:
The Governor's schedule is subject to change.
Scheduling decisions are not made until 4 or 5 weeks before an event.
Do not use the Governor's name on invitations without permission.
Check with the Communications Office before issuing a Press Release.

Confidentiality Notice: This e-mail, including all attachments is for the sole use of the intended recipient(s) and may contain confidential and privileged information. Any unauthorized review, use, disclosure or distribution is prohibited unless specifically provided under the New Mexico Inspection of Public Records Act. If you are not the intended recipient, please contact the sender and destroy all copies of this message. -- This email has been scanned by the Sybari - Antigen Email System.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 6, 2010 4:02 PM
To: H
Subject: CFR

We're continuing to make small tweaks to the CFR speech. Wanted to see how you were feeling about it/whether you've had the chance to go through and edit.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Campbell, Kurt M <CampbellKM@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 6, 2010 4:50 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Indonesia call

Thank you Madame Secretary. Best from Beijing. Kurt

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Campbell, Kurt M; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Sep 06 11:40:25 2010
Subject: Indonesia call

Pls review the memcon--a very slight opening because of their commitment to this. Also, said they'd be willing to do in early October.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 5, 2010 5:41 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw:

See b/l [redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Nov 05 05:39:36 2010
Subject: FW:

Well deserved praise re: Miguel from Tom...

-----Original Message-----
From: Nides, Thomas [redacted]
Sent: Thursday, November 04, 2010 5:51 PM
To: Verma, Richard R
Subject:

Just to let you know Miguel has been a total star. Everyone likes him and totally trust him. I feel terrible that he should be at home...

---

NOTICE: Morgan Stanley is not acting as a municipal advisor and the opinions or views contained herein are not intended to be, and do not constitute, advice within the meaning of Section 975 of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act. If you have received this communication in error, please destroy all electronic and paper copies and notify the sender immediately. Mistransmission is not intended to waive confidentiality or privilege. Morgan Stanley reserves the right, to the extent permitted under applicable law, to monitor electronic communications. This message is subject to terms available at the following link: http://www.morganstanley.com/disclaimers. If you cannot access these links, please notify us by reply message and we will send the contents to you. By messaging with Morgan Stanley you consent to the foregoing.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 6, 2010 7:44 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Sen mitchell has asked to speak with you.

###

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 2:04 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Arrest of CJ Murderer

From carlos

---

From: Pascual, Carlos (Mexico City)
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Cc: Valenzuela, Arturo A; Jacobson, Roberta S; Steinberg, James B; Cue, Lourdes C; Kennedy, Patrick F
Sent: Mon Nov 29 13:49:07 2010
Subject: Arrest of CJ Murderer

PLEASE PASS TO THE SECRETARY

As has been reported in the press, the Mexican Federal Police arrested Arturo Gallegos Castrellón (known as Benny), who (according to the Federal Police) confessed to ordering the killing of the three individuals associated with our consulate in Ciudad Juarez. We believe that "Benny" is the person who ordered these murders, as well as many of the other high-profile killings in Juarez over the past year.

The relationships among relevant criminal groups in Juarez is complicated: "Benny" headed a gang that took orders from an armed enforcement group called La Linea that works for the Juarez cartel. I mentioned in a note some weeks ago that the person who pulled the trigger is under a sealed indictment in the United States, and we cannot talk about this publicly.

Two key points:

B5

Again, thank you for all you have done personally to sustain the morale of our personnel in Ciudad Juarez.

Carlos Pascual

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 5:10 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Reines, Philippe I; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: Well done

See below – a completely unsolicited response to your statement today from Allison Stanger – she is the woman you met last year who wrote the book about contracting. Congrats to all who worked on it. AM

---

From: Stanger, Allison [mailto:[redacted] B6
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 4:29 PM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Subject: Well done

Madam Secretary's response to the Wikileaks attack was pitch perfect. Very impressive. I was so worried (unnecessarily, it turns out) about overreaction. A big thumbs up to all of you! A.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 7, 2010 8:09 AM
To: H

B6

Will see u at office.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 7:17 PM
To: H
Subject: H: Wikileaks. Sid
Attachments: hrc memo wikileaks 112910.docx

CONFIDENTIAL

November 29, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Wikileaks

The Wikileaks documents can be cast as reflecting a positive light on the U.S. government and diplomacy. Your statement about how the documents underscored the Iranian nuclear threat is headed in the right direction.

1. The Wikileaks disclosure is the opposite of the Pentagon Papers. The Pentagon Papers provided evidence from an internal study conducted by the Department of Defense that the U.S. administration was not telling the truth about the Vietnam War. On the contrary, the Wikileaks papers prove that the U.S. government today has been telling the truth about the threats we face in the world. Our government is telling the truth.
2. The Wikileaks papers prove that American diplomats are hard at work at the difficult, often frustrating job of protecting and advancing our interests in the world. These documents are testimony to the diligence, intelligence and clear mindedness of our diplomats. Our diplomats are doing their work on the frontlines of national security.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Ebeling, Betsy <[redacted]> B6
Sent: Tuesday, September 7, 2010 2:49 PM
To: H

Mayor Daley just announce that he will not seek re-election. We're in shock.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772035 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

November 29, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Wikileaks

The Wikileaks documents can be cast as reflecting a positive light on the U.S. government and diplomacy. Your statement about how the documents underscored the Iranian nuclear threat is headed in the right direction.

1. The Wikileaks disclosure is the opposite of the Pentagon Papers. The Pentagon Papers provided evidence from an internal study conducted by the Department of Defense that the U.S. administration was not telling the truth about the Vietnam War. On the contrary, the Wikileaks papers prove that the U.S. government today has been telling the truth about the threats we face in the world. Our government is telling the truth.
2. The Wikileaks papers prove that American diplomats are hard at work at the difficult, often frustrating job of protecting and advancing our interests in the world. These documents are testimony to the diligence, intelligence and clear mindedness of our diplomats. Our diplomats are doing their work on the frontlines of national security.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772035 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 5, 2010 6:05 AM
To: H; Lew, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: The Cable: Granger seeking chairmanship of State and foreign ops subcommittee

The Cable: Granger seeking chairmanship of State and foreign ops subcommittee

Granger seeking chairmanship of State and foreign ops subcommittee

Posted: 03 Nov 2010 11:31 AM PDT

Texas Congresswoman Kay Granger will seek the chairmanship of the State and Foreign Operations Appropriations Subcommittee, according to her spokesman, ending rumors that she would forgo the post in favor of some other position.

Although no decisions have been made, until last night Granger was the ranking Republican on the panel and she is the clear frontrunner for the job. She would succeed current chairwoman Nita Lowey (D-NY), who has served as chairwoman since 2006.

"Congresswoman Granger is interested in continuing on as chair of the state and foreign operations appropriations subcommittee," Matt Leffingwell, her press secretary, told The Cable Wednesday.

When power switches in Congress, a complicated game of musical chairs begins as senior members jockey for committee and subcommittee chairs. Just being the highest-ranking minority member on a panel doesn't mean one automatically takes over the chairmanship.

But if Granger does succeed Lowey, she will play a large role in writing the bills that appropriate money for State Department operations, USAID, foreign operations, foreign assistance, humanitarian assistance, and many other things. Those accounts all face unprecedented pressure next year as the GOP led Congress will be looking for spending cuts that don't have strong domestic constituencies.

Last month, we identified Granger as one of 10 Republicans who stand to be influential in the next Congress if the GOP won control of the House. Since then, we've received several e-mails from sources who had heard that Granger would forgo the subcommittee chairmanship to pursue leadership of another panel.

We've heard that Ander Crenshaw (R-FL), the third-ranking Republican on the panel, was eyeing the chairmanship with the expectation that Granger would step aside.

(Mark Kirk (R-IL), the second-ranking Republican on the subcommittee, was elected Tuesday night to become the junior senator from Illinois, the seat once held by Barack Obama.)

So how would subcommittee chairwoman Granger handle the responsibility of writing the State and foreign ops appropriations bill? Here's what we reported in October:

> Although [Granger] supported the bill put forth this year by current chairwoman Nita Lowey (D-N.Y.), she criticized the increases for the foreign-ops budget, saying, "We also face the continued concern in our own country about our economy and the devastating effects of skyrocketing deficits and debt." She's a strong supporter of a balanced budget amendment, which doesn't bode well for foreign-aid funding in this dismal fiscal environment.
>
> Granger also serves on the defense subcommittee, placing her at the intersection of the debate over how to balance the national security budget and shift resources from defense to diplomacy and development. Here she seems to favor the Pentagon, saying in June, "I want to be sure that we aren't increasing foreign aid at the expense of our troops." Her lack of support of international organizations was criticized by the group Citizens for Global Solutions, which gave her an "F" in its 2007 to 2009 rating. Granger is also on board with efforts to eliminate aid to countries that are not performing on internal reform, as she explained when expressing opposition to funding of the Senegalese government through the State Department's Millennium Challenge Corporation. "We can't just give out money and say we will put up with whatever you are doing," she said.

The committee leadership assignments won't be doled out for at least two to three weeks, our Hill sources report. But if Granger's bid is successful, she'll be instantly influential. The fiscal 2011 State and Foreign Ops bill still has not been completed by Congress, despite that the fiscal year began Oct. 1.

The stop gap funding measure that has been funding these programs since then, known as a "continuing resolution," expires in December. The lame duck Democratic led Congress is unlikely to be able to pass full appropriations bills on its way out the door, so they will likely pass another short term continuing resolution. That would leave the final work on the actual bill to the incoming class led by the GOP next year.

---

You are subscribed to email updates from The Cable
To stop receiving these emails, you may unsubscribe now.

Email delivery powered by Google

Google Inc., 20 West Kinzie, Chicago IL USA 60610

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 2:16 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: 9/21 Meetings

From: Mull, Stephen D
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Tue Sep 21 13:10:41 2010
Subject: 9/21 Meetings

0845 (Jim/Jack chaired)

Afghanistan Nine U.S. soldiers killed in helicopter crash in Zabul province in south. Taliban claimed responsibility; investigation is proceeding. On Louis Berger case, Jack insisted we make clear in press that we're not going to keep pouring money into any operations that are corrupt.

Iran Jim received rapturous ovation at AIPAC yesterday on Administration's Iran policy.

AIP Funding Jack and Pat commented on Secretary's concern that we ensure we maximize available reserves as FY'10 draws to a close, to help easy tough budget choices. Pat reports he's maximized commitments to operational funds to the maximum extent possible, and will continue to work this.

PA Funding Jim and Jack noted lagging Saudi response; Jack said he would work with Rich to find way around ESF cap to explore an additional $50-100M in next few weeks.

Congress DoJ throwing up last-minute objections to UK/Australia Defense Trade Treaties scheduled to be voted out of SFRC 2:30 p.m. Andrew Shapiro working to fix with DoJ; Jim is standing by to intervene if necessary. We have hearings scheduled for all but two nominees (Susan Johnson Cook for Religious Freedom and George Krol for Uzbekistan). House may decide to adjourn this week. Saudi arms sale briefings going well; AIPAC will likely not oppose if administration boosts funding for Joint Strike Fighter. Menendez still planning to hold hearing on Megrahi 9/28; Bill Burns now reviewing State decouments we can release. NDAA cloture vote in Senate today; seems unlikely to succeed because of continuing controversy on DADT. DeMint appears ready to lift hold on US accession to Child Support Treaty if we issue statement that we don't intend to support Declaration on Rights of Child.

0915 (Jim chaired)

USUN Jim was invited by UN to participate in Thursday's Ban ki-Moon meeting on Somalia aimed at boosting support for AMISOM; is considering whether to go.

NEA Barzani/Allawi meeting finally happened; Embassy Baghdad scrambling for readout. Ban ki-Moon on behalf of P5 may this Thursday call on Iraq to finish government formation efforts soonest.

IO IAEA meeting in Vienna proceeding; may vote on Israel nuclear capabilities resolution this Friday; our delegation is optimistic on outcome. Human Rights Commission is in session in Geneva; follow-on Goldstone report issued with non-controversial recommendations. Will also take up extending Sudan rapporteur and Somalia.

SCA President will meet with Kyrgtz President Otunbayeva on Thursday in New York; Manas fuel likely on the agenda. US Embassy office in Osh opens today with three staffers from S/CRS. Otunbayeva has overcome previous opposition to UN involvement in accountability commission for ethnic cleansing. Karimov pushing for OSCE mission. Meanwhile, despite Rao's commitment to Bill Burns last week, Indian officials did not meet with US nuclear industry officials in Vienna to address concerns on liability legislation.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Ebeling, Betsy [redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, November 5, 2010 11:18 AM
To: H

Republican challenger Bill Brady is expected to concede defeat to Democratic Gov. Pat Quinn this afternoon, sources said today.

Brady has been calling leading Illinois Republicans to inform them of his decision to end the race as he trails Quinn by more than 19,000 votes.

The candidate has scheduled a 1:30 p.m. news conference at a Bloomington hotel.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, December 17, 2010 10:27 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Personal Note

Nice

---

From: Hanrahan, Karen J
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Dec 17 18:26:43 2010
Subject: Personal Note

Cheryl,

One sappy statement before I fly. Your involvement in the QDDR process has always been extremely helpful. Most of the best QDDR chairs meetings were those in which you participated, due in large part to the rigor and critical thought you brought to every issue. From the beginning of the process, your critical analysis and thoughtfulness in these meetings made all of us think more deeply. I have been grateful for that approach many times throughout the QDDR.

We've come a long way since that first meeting in which I described this as a "capabilities review" and organizational change exercise – all met with some frustration or blank stares. I think we've ended this phase on a great note. The amount of positive feedback we've received and the eagerness to start implementation are great signs heading into implementation.

You are clearly one of the hardest working people in this building and have done so much to define and implement the Secretary's vision on so many things. So thanks for everything you've done on the QDDR and for everything else you do.

As discussed today, I'm not far away if you need anything.
Karen

Karen J. Hanrahan
QDDR Chief Operating Officer
Office of Deputy Secretary Jacob J. Lew
US Department of State
2201 C Street NW
Washington, DC 20520
HanrahanKJ@State.gov
Office (202) 647-9746
Cell [redacted]

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Lauren Jiloty [redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 3:47 PM
To: H
Subject: RE:

yes. I will let you know.

From: HDR22@clintonemail.com
To: Laurenjiloty[redacted]
Date: Tue, 21 Sep 2010 06:49:13 -0400
Subject: Fw: Fwd:

Pls check on status of this issue. I had you print for me and then asked that someone follow up. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Brian Greenspun [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Thu Sep 09 03:00:17 2010
Subject: Fwd:

Hi Hillary,
Once again I am imposing on our friendship to get to you a matter that is important to [redacted] Bruce Ramer and, therefore , important to me. I am enclosing his note to me just so you can read how he really talks! I know his relationship with his friend [redacted] and can attest to the personal nature of his appeal. Thank you for whatever attention you give to this which, by my understanding, seems to be a simple matter of justice. Alas, nothing is simple. All the best, Brian

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Bruce M. Ramer" [redacted] B6
To: "Brian Greenspun"

Brian, I so appreciate your willingness to get my letter (attached, with attachments) into Hilary's hands.

This is purely an act of love for my friend [redacted] As I say in the letter to her, I am N OT acting as an attorney (or for any organization--see end of my letter), but only for a friend who is getting screwed (not the terminology of the letter).

You are more than welcome to read all of the enclosures. Naturally.
The attachments to this email should be: Ramer letter to Secretary Clinton, with an attachment of the letter from [redacted] tax lawyer (and three official attachments thereto--a letter from the IRS to the Argentine Embassy, a revenue ruling and a certification issued this year by the State Department.

My letter contains a brief summary of the situation and argument.

This is, as I said, very meaningful to me. Thank you for helping in an indispensible way.

Love to the Greenspun clan. Bruce

--Forwarded Message Attachment--

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 9:21 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Egyptians riot, burn cars, claiming vote fraud

---

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_SWO-Only
Sent: Mon Nov 29 16:09:26 2010
Subject: (AP) Egyptians riot, burn cars, claiming vote fraud

ALEXANDRIA (AP) - Protesters set fire to cars, tires and two polling stations, clashing with police firing tear gas in riots that erupted around Egypt on November 29 over allegations the ruling party carried out widespread fraud to sweep parliamentary elections.

The country's most powerful opposition movement, the Islamic fundamentalist Muslim Brotherhood, acknowledged that its lawmakers may be all but completely swept out of parliament by what it and other called rampant rigging.

That's a significant blow to the group, which held 88 seats, a fifth, of the outgoing parliament, and it is widely believed that it was the government goal to drive out its only real rival's lawmakers. The election showed the Brotherhood's limited options after repeated crackdowns in past years, including the arrest of some 1,400 of its activists in the weeks ahead of the vote.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 7, 2010 11:11 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: CARE Policy Recommendations to Meet the MDGs

FYI

---

From: Gayle, Helene [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Tuesday, September 07, 2010 3:04 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: CARE Policy Recommendations to Meet the MDGs

Dear Ms. Mills:

CARE is pleased that the international community will come together at the Millennium Development Goals (MDG) Summit from Sept. 20-22, 2010, in New York, to recommit to and accelerate progress toward the achievement of the MDGs by 2015. We also welcome the United States' Strategy for Meeting the Millennium Development Goals, "Celebrate, Innovate and Sustain: Toward 2015 and Beyond." While we have made progress on some goals, we still have much to do if we are going to meet these global commitments by 2015.

Attached or linked below are CARE's recommendations for meeting the Millennium Development Goals and for strengthening the US' MDG strategy. Our recommendations include approaches and strategies proven to deliver results specifically on MDGs 1, 3, 5 and 7. CARE's reflections on the MDGs are drawn from more than 60 years of experience working with the poorest communities in more than 70 countries around the world. Women are at the heart of CARE's efforts because experience shows that a woman's achievements yield dramatic benefits for her entire family and the larger community. Promoting gender equality and women's empowerment is central to poverty reduction and the achievement of all MDGs.

The MDG Summit provides a critical opportunity to take bold and decisive action. CARE believes that the following guiding principles must be reflected in the outcome of the MDG Summit, in the US' MDG strategy, as well as in the US' and the international community's implementation efforts:

- An emphasis on meeting the needs of people in extreme poverty and the most vulnerable populations;
- Promotion of gender equality, gender responsiveness, and the empowerment of women;
- Adherence to broad-based country ownership, including broad stakeholder engagement with local communities, women's groups, and other vulnerable populations, in a whole-of-society approach to development;
- Recognition of the linkages among the eight MDGs; and
- A commitment to transparency, mutual accountability, and mechanisms to track results.

Any recommitment to the MDGs must be coupled with commitments to mobilize the necessary resources that will reach the people who need them most. In the context of the US' development strategy, CARE also believes that USAID must be empowered as the premier US development agency to lead these efforts, and we call on the Administration and Congress to work together to reform and modernize US foreign assistance policies, efforts and strategies.

CARE urges bold efforts to recommit to the MDGs and ensure progress toward their achievement. The MDG Summit can be the turning point in collective efforts to achieve the MDGs by 2015. It is critical that the global community unite around a shared action-oriented strategy for meeting – and exceeding – these goals and begin to lay the groundwork for post-2015.

CARE stands ready to support your efforts and looks forward to continuing valuable collaboration with the US government and other leaders to tackle poverty worldwide. Please do not hesitate to call on us.

Sincerely,

Helene D. Gayle

Helene D. Gayle, MD, MPH
President & CEO, CARE USA

Email [redacted] B6
Phone: (404) 979-9100
Fax: (404) 589-2604

RELEASE
IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 11:35 AM
To: H
Subject: Dream Act

Cloture vote failed. 55 to 41. On to don't ask don't tell.

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Lissa Muscatine < > B6
Sent: Tuesday, September 7, 2010 11:43 PM
To: H
Subject: suggested edit to CFR

I have suggested to Dan the following edit to the grafs on page 2 (not sure why the fonts are showing up different here, but you'll get the idea....I can improve the language but wanted to give you a sense of what I think is still missing in his latest draft).

B5

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 30, 2010 6:11 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) WikiLeaks: Israel's Netanyahu supports land swaps

---

From: Casteel, Ezra A
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-I; SES-O_OS
Sent: Tue Nov 30 05:01:17 2010
Subject: (AP) WikiLeaks: Israel's Netanyahu supports land swaps

JERUSALEM (AP) - A confidential diplomatic cable released by WikiLeaks shows Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu supporting the notion of land swaps with the Palestinians. The Feb. 26, 2009 cable, dated two weeks after Netanyahu was elected, is the first indication of the Israeli leader's position on that concept. The cable says, "Netanyahu expressed support for the concept of land swaps, and emphasized that he did not want to govern the West Bank and Gaza but rather to stop attacks from being launched from there."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: postmaster@state.gov
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 5:55 AM
To: H
Subject: Undeliverable: Speech
Attachments: details.txt; Speech (1.11 KB); details.txt; Speech (1.11 KB)

Delivery has failed to these recipients or distribution lists:

schwerind@state.gov
The recipient's e-mail address was not found in the recipient's e-mail system. Microsoft Exchange will not try to redeliver this message for you. Please check the e-mail address and try resending this message, or provide the following diagnostic text to your system administrator.

Diagnostic information for administrators:

Generating server: MSWASHDCIB01.washdc.state.sbu

schwerind@state.gov
#< #5.1.1> #SMTP#

Original message headers:

```
Received: from vance2.state.gov ([10.4.16.249]) by
 MSWASHDCIB01.washdc.state.sbu with Microsoft SMTPSVC(6.0.3790.3959);         Wed, 8
 Sep 2010 05:55:05 -0400
Received: from mail.clintonemail.com (ool-18bbeabb.static.optonline.net [24.187.234.187])
        by vance2.state.gov  with ESMTP id o889ZOQ1024421
        (version=TLSv1/SSLv3 cipher=AES128-SHA bits=128 verify=CAFAIL);
        Wed, 8 Sep 2010 05:35:25 -0400
Received: from CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993]) by CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993%10]) with mapi; Wed, 8
 Sep 2010 05:55:05 -0400
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: "'schwerind@state.gov'" <schwerind@state.gov>, "'sullivanjj@state.gov'"
        <sullivanjj@state.gov>
CC: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>, "'muscatinel@state.gov'"
        <muscatinel@state.gov>
Date: Wed, 8 Sep 2010 05:55:03 -0400
Subject: Speech
Thread-Topic: Speech
Thread-Index: ActPO+jydLSP0wd0Ru6hwQ3yxGl+eQ==
Message-ID: <786762D781A7FF4FAC9060892B404488038F291B8D@CLNTINET08.clinton.local>
Accept-Language: en-US
Content-Language: en-US
X-MS-Has-Attach:
X-MS-TNEF-Correlator:
acceptlanguage: en-US
Content-Type: text/plain; charset="utf-8"
```

Content-Transfer-Encoding: base64
MIME-Version: 1.0
Return-Path: HDR22@clintonemail.com
X-OriginalArrivalTime: 08 Sep 2010 09:55:05.0942 (UTC) FILETIME=[EA19DF60:01CB4F3B]
X-TM-AS-Product-Ver: SMEX-8.0.0.4160-6.500.1024-17612.006
X-TM-AS-Result: No-0.652200-5.000000-31
X-TM-AS-User-Approved-Sender: No
X-TM-AS-User-Blocked-Sender: No

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 5, 2010 12:09 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: 11/5 0845 Meeting Readout

---

From: Mull, Stephen D
Sent: Friday, November 05, 2010 9:58 AM
To: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Macmanus, Joseph E; Moy, Kin W
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: 11/5 0845 Meeting Readout

Congress

Secretary's public comments in NZ and all Congressional calls have contributed to excellent momentum on New START that Rich will continue to promote.

India

Indians have expressed reluctance to announce C17 purchase; Roemer still working it. Menon said he's optimistic civ-nuke issues will be agreed tomorrow. Mixed press coverage of President's upcoming trip, including controversy over cost.

Haiti

Heavy rains hitting western region, but bulk of Hurricane Tomas appears to be just missing landfall. Humanitarian relief operations are primed and on standby.

Indonesia

Harshest eruption yet from Mt. Merapi killed 58. 80,000 now displaced.

Philippines

Police arrested suspected terrorists with 1200 lbs of ammonium nitrate, in midst of reports of an imminent terrorist attack.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Ebeling, Betsy
Sent: Tuesday, November 30, 2010 9:17 AM
To: H
Subject: RE:

And in the midst of all this drama, I love that you invoke Diane. It brings a smile to my face and sweet thoughts to mind. WJC is in town today. I am going to go say hi.
Don't let the turkeys get you down. B

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Monday, November 29, 2010 9:22 PM
To: Ebeling, Betsy
Subject: Re:

B6

And, despite the craziness of our wacky wiki (leaking)world--blessings to you (albeit belated) dear One (as Diane Blair used to say).

----- Original Message -----
From: Ebeling, Betsy
To: H
Sent: Wed Nov 24 16:42:20 2010
Subject:

Happy turkey day, Dear, Dear Gert. Love you and your sweet clan, Nancy

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 5, 2010 1:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: 11/5 0845 Meeting Readout

---

From: Mull, Stephen D
To: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Macmanus, Joseph E; Moy, Kin W
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Nov 05 09:58:13 2010
Subject: 11/5 0845 Meeting Readout

Congress

Secretary's public comments in NZ and all Congressional calls have contributed to excellent momentum on New START that Rich will continue to promote.

India

Indians have expressed reluctance to announce C17 purchase; Roemer still working it. Menon said he's optimistic civ-nuke issues will be agreed tomorrow. Mixed press coverage of President's upcoming trip, including controversy over cost.

Haiti

Heavy rains hitting western region, but bulk of Hurricane Tomas appears to be just missing landfall. Humanitarian relief operations are primed and on standby.

Indonesia

Harshest eruption yet from Mt. Merapi killed 58. 80,000 now displaced.

Philippines

Police arrested suspected terrorists with 1200 lbs of ammonium nitrate, in midst of reports of an imminent terrorist attack.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 6:20 AM
To: H; cheryl.mills[redacted] B6
Subject: Re: Did you call Bob Barnett?

Traded w/ him - will get this am

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D; 'cheryl.mills[redacted] <cheryl.mills[redacted]
Sent: Tue Sep 07 21:11:26 2010
Subject: Did you call Bob Barnett?

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 4:55 PM
To: H
Subject: Blair note

NOTE
12 September 2010

PLAN A: Renew moratorium + game-changer for Israel

[redacted] B5

PLAN B: Less than full renewal + major CBMs for Palestinians

[redacted] B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 11:56 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Dream Act

They got cloture on DADT. 63 to 33.

At the close of the 30 hours (or when they yield back) we are back on START. We were able to convince Reid this morning not to file cloture on the treaty, which would have played in to Kyl's hands. So we are likely to have one full more day of debate and some votes on amendments, then file cloture setting up a cloture vote early next week. Mccain and Graham are still in a grumpy place - Graham is worse than McCain and we may have lost him. But McCain is still very much in the game.

----- Original Message -----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 11:41 AM
To: Verma, Richard R
Subject: Re: Dream Act

Do they have the votes for DADT?

And what's next for START?

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Dec 18 11:35:13 2010
Subject: Dream Act

Cloture vote failed. 55 to 41. On to don't ask don't tell.

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: PIR <preines[redacted]> B6
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 6:27 AM
To: H
Cc: Jake Sullivan
Subject: A

Without the benefit of seeing the clips yet, I think last night worked well. Pitch perfect, positive in that you wrapped yourself in the wonderful event.

I actually think there was more interest in whether the Imam was there - as evidence of how much voltage the Mosque issue still carries. Geoff Earle of the NY Post was there for that reason alone. It's early but my read of the NY Post seems that their cover is dedicated to KSM losing 40 lbs.

[redacted] B5

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: Jake Sullivan
To: PIR
Subject: Q+A
Sent: Sep 8, 2010 6:00 AM

How do you think my remarks went last night? What's your suggestion for my response to any and all questions about all issues this am?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 30, 2010 10:42 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: The Right to Secrecy

FYI

---

From: Toiv, Nora F
Sent: Tuesday, November 30, 2010 10:40 AM
To: Reines, Philippe I; Klevorick, Caitlin B; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: The Right to Secrecy

The New Yorker

INTERESTING TIMES

Semi-regular thoughts on foreign affairs, politics, and books, from George Packer.

November 29, 2010

The Right to Secrecy

Posted by George Packer

What do we learn from the latest WikiLeaks dump, at least according to the Times's privileged and heavily edited account? That the Gulf Arabs are just as nervous about Iran's nuclear program as Israel is, and they want the U.S. to stop it. That Saudi King Abdullah doesn't think much of Iraqi Prime Minister Maliki. That Yemeni President Saleh is happy to claim American airstrikes against Al Qaeda targets as his country's own, and that he doesn't mind whiskey being smuggled into Yemen as long as it's the good stuff. That the Chinese government probably hacked into Google. That Qaddafi never goes anywhere without his Ukrainian "senior nurse."

On the whole, the trove makes American diplomacy look pretty good. Obama's Iran strategy of engagement-leading-to-isolation is shown to have succeeded. Bush—contrary to the impression left on every page of his new memoir—had enough self-awareness about the disaster in Iraq to put the brakes on military action against Iran. And American diplomats are capable of writing blunt, vivid, even amusing assessments of world leaders. Berlusconi is feckless, Sarkozy thin-skinned, Mugabe a megalomaniac: the accounts seem spot-on. The faceless corps of tight-lipped American embassy officials turn out to be an alert and discerning bunch.

Future diplomatic correspondence is going to be a lot more circumspect. The WikiLeaks dump contains (so far) a number of minor embarrassments, a few surprises, a lot of confirmations of what we already pretty much knew, and no scandals. It will make the work of American diplomacy harder for a long time to come. Classification abuse will increase—more cables will be labelled "Top Secret" that should have been labelled "Secret" or "Confidential." Exchanges between American officials and their foreign counterparts will grow less candid and more opaque. The same with cable traffic between U.S. embassies and Washington. There is an undeniable public interest in knowing, for example, that U.S. intelligence believes the Iranians are buying advanced missiles from North Korea, and that Gulf Arab rulers have been privately urging American military action against Iran. The question is, does that interest outweigh the right of U.S. officials to carry out their work with a degree of confidentiality?

Yes—the right. Lawyers, judges, doctors, shrinks, accountants, investigators, and—not least—journalists could not do the most basic tasks without a veil of secrecy. Why shouldn't the same be true of those professionals who happen to be government officials? If WikiLeaks and its super-secretive, thin-skinned, megalomaniacal leader, Julian Assange (is he also accompanied everywhere by a Ukrainian senior nurse?), were uncovering crimes, or scandals, or systemic abuses, there would be no question about the overwhelming public interest in these latest revelations. But the WikiLeaks dump contains no My Lais, no black sites, no Abu Ghraibs. The documents simply show State Department officials going about their work over a period of several years. Will we get another update in six months? Will it be worth the damage? Should no government secret remain secret? Is diplomacy possible when official views have all the privacy of social networking? Assange's stated ambition is to embarrass the U.S. This means that his goals and those of most journalists are not the same. WikiLeaks doesn't trouble itself with these questions. The rest of us, journalists included, should.

Read more http://www.newyorker.com/online/blogs/georgepacker/2010/11/the-right-to-secrecy.html#ixzz16mSX2xpb

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 12:04 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Dream Act

Yes. Today if u can. And actually I just got a note from McCain's senior person asking you to call McCain now, as he as at risk of walking too. Will forward that email to you now.

----- Original Message -----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 12:01 PM
To: Verma, Richard R
Subject: Re: Dream Act

Should I call Graham this weekend?

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Dec 18 11:55:53 2010
Subject: Re: Dream Act

They got cloture on DADT. 63 to 33.

At the close of the 30 hours (or when they yield back) we are back on START. We were able to convince Reid this morning not to file cloture on the treaty, which would have played in to Kyl's hands. So we are likely to have one full more day of debate and some votes on amendments, then file cloture setting up a cloture vote early next week. Mccain and Graham are still in a grumpy place - Graham is worse than McCain and we may have lost him. But McCain is still very much in the game.

----- Original Message -----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 11:41 AM
To: Verma, Richard R
Subject: Re: Dream Act

Do they have the votes for DADT?

And what's next for START?

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Dec 18 11:35:13 2010
Subject: Dream Act

Cloture vote failed. 55 to 41. On to don't ask don't tell.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 30, 2010 10:43 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: HRC and WJC in FP

From: Klevorick, Caitlin B
Sent: Tuesday, November 30, 2010 10:31 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; 'doug[redacted]' 'Justin Cooper' B6
Cc: Toiv, Nora F; Laszczych, Joanne
Subject: HRC and WJC in FP

The FP Top 100 Global Thinkers

Foreign Policy presents a unique portrait of 2010's global marketplace of ideas and the thinkers who make them.

DECEMBER 2010

13. Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton

for proving that you don't need to be president to act presidential.

FORMER PRESIDENT | NEW YORK

SECRETARY OF STATE | WASHINGTON

Speaking to the Council on Foreign Relations in September, Hillary Rodham Clinton sounded a confident note: "After years of war and uncertainty, people are wondering what the future holds, at home and abroad. So let me say it clearly: The United States can, must, and will lead in this new century."

Ironically, two of the people most crucial to the new global century are the Clintons themselves: the ex-president and the ex-would-be-president, the power couple now defined by their position just outside the highest reaches of power. Except that, these days, both Clintons are more influential, and more beloved, than ever. Bill's Clinton Global Initiative is starting to feel like a sexier, more effective competitor not just to Davos but to the United Nations itself, bringing world leaders together to commit their resources to fighting poverty with market-based, technocratic solutions. As of this summer, his foundation had contributed $23 million and countless man-hours to the effort to rebuild Haiti. Polls have shown he's a better advocate for Democratic candidates than the actual president, and he spent most of the fall stumping for woebegone Dems from Orlando to Seattle.

Meanwhile, Hillary showed up in one recent poll as the most popular political figure in the United States, an accolade she has earned through a no-drama approach to an array of thankless tasks: brushing off Vladimir Putin's temper tantrum to reach agreement on nuclear disarmament and Iran sanctions, promoting women's rights over the objections of entrenched traditionalists, and launching an innovative effort to bring clean cookstoves to the world's poorest. But what she has mainly stood for is American competence, with her Quadrennial Diplomacy and Development Review a major, if unglamorous step toward making U.S. statesmanship a more agile beast. If this is what Clinton nostalgia looks like, bring it on.

MARIO TAMA/Getty Images

Caitlin Klevorick
Office of the Counselor
Department of State
KlevorickCB@state.gov
202.647.6115
[redacted] (blackberry)

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Campbell, Kurt M <CampbellKM@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 5, 2010 3:31 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: CSIS Southeast Asia > Magic in Kuala Lumpur: Hillary Transforms a Relationship into a Partnership

From: Ernie Bower [redacted] B6
To: Campbell, Kurt M
Sent: Fri Nov 05 12:19:02 2010
Subject: CSIS Southeast Asia > Magic in Kuala Lumpur: Hillary Transforms a Relationship into a Partnership

To ensure receipt of our email, please add us to your address book.

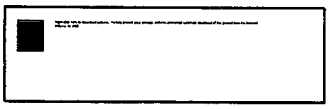
Magic in Kuala Lumpur: Hillary Transforms a Relationship into a Partnership

CSIS Southeast Asia Program | November 5, 2010 at 11:17 AM | Categories: Uncategorized | URL: http://wp.me/p10Q6P-cM

Secretary of State Hillary Clinton is greeted upon arrival by Malaysian Foreign Minister Dato' Sri Anifah bin Haji Ahmad. U.S. Government photo in the public domain.

By Derek Pham, Research Intern, CSIS Southeast Asia Program*

In 1998, President Bill Clinton declined to attend the APEC meeting hosted by Malaysia and had Vice President Al Gore take his place. It was hoped the meeting would provide a welcome opportunity for the administration to elevate ties with Malaysia, but the outcome resulted in embarrassment. Vice President Gore famously gutted the relationship in a dinner speech so awkward that he walked straight out of the room immediately after delivering it.



Twelve years later, America's leading diplomat returned to Malaysia determined to not make the same mistake. The sense of magic that accompanied Hillary Clinton's trip to Malaysia combined with Prime Minister Najib's national vision provided for ideal diplomatic synergy. This helped Clinton achieve a feat which had eluded her husband: transforming US Malaysia ties from a relationship to a partnership. Read more of this post

---

CSIS Southeast Asia is the developing premier high-level forum for US policy in Southeast Asia. Join the discussion by signing up with us at on our website, Facebook, Twitter, and our latest addition, cogitASIA, the quintessential Asia policy blog.

---

To unsubscribe from all CSIS emails, please click here.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 5, 2010 4:58 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: State Debt Problems Mount

Fyi

---

From: Hormats, Robert D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Nov 05 11:48:25 2010
Subject: State Debt Problems Mount

Hi Jake,
This does not have a direct foreign policy bearing, but I think S would be interested – because it is an enormous and growing problem. These stats come from a NYT Op-Ed piece:

- Over 20% of California's debt issuance during 2009 and over 30% of its debt issuance in 2010 to date has been subsidized by the federal government in a program known as Build America Bonds. Under the program, the U.S. Treasury covers 35% of the interest paid by the bonds. Arguably, without this program the interest cost of bonds for some states would have reached prohibitive levels.
- "California is not alone: Over 30% of Illinois's debt and over 40% of Nevada's debt issued since 2009 has also been subsidized with these bonds. These states might have already reached some type of tipping point had the federal program not been in place."
- "Today, more than 28% of state funding comes from federal government transfers, the highest contribution on record. These transfers have made states dependent on federal assistance. New York, for example, spent in excess of 250% of its tax receipts over the last decade. The largest 15 states by GDP spent on average over 220% of their tax receipts. Clearly, states have been spending at unsustainable levels without facing immediate consequences due to federal transfer payments and other temporary factors."

Bob

RELEASE
IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 12:54 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Venezuelans reject Palmer

---

From: Rodriguez, Miguel E
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Sat Dec 18 12:46:44 2010
Subject: Venezuelans reject Palmer

FYI.

---

From: DeLaurentis, Jeffrey A
To: Verma, Richard R; Rodriguez, Miguel E; Bulgrin, Julie K
Cc: Valenzuela, Arturo A; Jacobson, Roberta S; Whitaker, Kevin M
Sent: Sat Dec 18 12:44:59 2010
Subject: Venezuelans reject Palmer --Fw: para su informacion comunicado emitido por caracas sobre nombramiento de palmer

Wanted to make sure you were aware that the VZ Foreign Ministry has issued communique today rejecting Larry Palmer (despite informal messages through intermediaries up until this week that they were considering otherwise) and PJ's comments on a decree law earlier this week. The communique below says that we will be informed officially soonest.

We are meeting with A/S Valenzuela in about 45 minutes at the Dept to discuss next steps.

Jeff DeLaurentis
WHA/DAS

From: Bernardo Alvarez [mailto: [redacted] B6
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 09:45 AM
To: DeLaurentis, Jeffrey A
Subject: para su informacion comunicado emitido por caracas sobre nombramiento de palmer

Ministerio del Poder Popular para Relaciones Exteriores
Comunicado

El gobierno de la República Bolivariana de Venezuela rechaza las más recientes declaraciones de voceros del Departamento de Estado de los Estados Unidos sobre Venezuela, constatando que ratifican la línea histórica de intervencionismo y agresión contra el pueblo venezolano, sus instituciones y su democracia.

En coherencia con esta política de agresión, el gobierno venezolano ha tenido conocimiento de informaciones de prensa que refieren que el Senado de los Estados Unidos se encuentra a un paso de confirmar la nominación de Larry Palmer como Embajador designado de ese país en Caracas, a pesar de que las inaceptables actuaciones de Palmer hayan provocado la revocatoria del beneplácito de estilo que el gobierno bolivariano le había otorgado de buena fe.

Es bien conocido cómo Palmer quebrantó las reglas básicas de respeto al país que lo iba a recibir, agrediendo groseramente a las instituciones fundamentales de la Venezuela bolivariana y haciéndose indigno de las funciones que se destinaba a desempeñar.

En repetidas oportunidades, el gobierno venezolano ha hecho del conocimiento del gobierno de los Estados Unidos que, ante la gravedad de las actuaciones de Palmer, nos encontramos en la imposibilidad de recibirlo en el territorio nacional. No obstante, esta decisión irrevocable será ratificada formalmente por la vía diplomática en el más breve lapso.

El gobierno de la República Bolivariana de Venezuela considera que la insistencia de las autoridades estadounidenses en impulsar el proceso de ratificación de Palmer como Embajador designado en Caracas, y su negativa a buscar una verdadera solución a este problema generado en Washington, constituyen una nueva provocación y una manifestación de la hipocresía de la élite que gobierna ese país, en particular en su relación con los pueblos latinoamericanos y caribeños.

Caracas, 18 de diciembre de 2010

From: "DeLaurentis, Jeffrey A" <DelaurentisJA@state.gov>
To: embajador@venezuela-us.org
Cc: arivero@ B6
Sent: Wed, December 15, 2010 5:05:36 PM
Subject: Statement

Link to Twitter: http://twitter.com/whaasstsecty

Link to Facebook: http://www.facebook.com/profile.php?id=100001292641014#!/State.WesternHemisphereAffairs

TWITTER

As noted on my Facebook page today, we are pleased that the #SFRC reported out Larry Palmer as Ambassador to #Venezuela

FACEBOOK

We are pleased that Ambassador-designate to the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela Larry Palmer's nomination was reported out favorably by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee at its business committee meeting yesterday.

If confirmed, Amb. Palmer will dedicate himself to establishing strong and mutually respectful relations with Venezuela and advance our interests in a frank, constructive dialogue between sovereign nations. As the President recently said to the DipCorps, he is committed to "diplomacy — to building partnerships of mutual interest and mutual respect – (as a) fundamental cornerstone of our foreign policy."al interest and mutual respect —(as a) fundamental cornerstone of our foreign policy."

This email is UNCLASSIFIED

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 5, 2010 5:21 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: G-20 Communiqué Preview for S

Fyi

From: Hormats, Robert D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Nov 05 16:03:29 2010
Subject: G-20 Communiqué Preview for S

Jake –

Here is an update for the Secretary on the status of the non-finance components of the G-20 Seoul Summit declaration. Sherpa, Finance Deputy, and Working Group discussions are ongoing on the financial issues (and the text is very close hold) – so we don't have much on that. The following represents what is likely to be close to the final outcome on the other issues.

- Fossil Fuel Subsidies: The text will reaffirm the Pittsburgh Summit commitment to phase out over the medium term inefficient fossil fuel subsidies. It will also take up the issue of fuel price volatility; this portion will focus on improving the quality of fuel data (inventories, storage capacity, refining, etc.) and greater dialogue between fuel producers and consumers.

- Climate Change: The G-20 will rededicate their efforts to discuss climate change issues under the UNFCCC process with the aim of reaching a global and comprehensive framework post 2012. The text will also focus on the upcoming COP16 conference in Mexico.

- Trade: The G-20 will continue to collectively push for the conclusion of the Doha Round, calling for intensified engagement in 2011.

- Development: The Communiqué will contain a multi-year development action plan that focuses on nine pillars: infrastructure, human resource development, trade, private investment and job creation, food security, financial inclusion, fiscal integrity and domestic resource mobilization, and "growth with resilience."

- Anti-Corruption: The G-20 will endorse an Anti-Corruption Action Plan to spur action under the UN Convention Against Corruption; address transnational bribery; deny corrupt persons access to the global financial system; and further engage the private sector.

I will be happy to provide more details on any one of these items if the Secretary would like – and will report on the discussions and final outcome.

I am headed to China tomorrow to discuss several issues including rare earth metals, intellectual property protection, internet freedom and indigenous innovation. Then to the APEC foreign ministers meeting with Jim – followed by the G-20 Summit and the APEC Summit.

Regards,
Bob

RELEASE
IN PART B6

B6

From: PVerveer@[redacted]
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 1:22 PM
To: H
Subject: child marriage defeat

The defeat of the Child Marriage bill, I fear, is a harbinger of what's to come. After passing the Senate unanimously, there was every expectation that it would fly through the House on suspension. How this too became an abortion issue is truly distressing. We have our work more than cut out for us.

On another note, I ran into Ray and Shaista the other night. They were recently in Pakistan and stayed with Zardari the whole time. It might make sense for someone to brief Ray. Zardari considers him his informal ambassador to the US.

How Ileana Ros-Lehtinen killed the bill to prevent forced child marriages

Posted: 17 Dec 2010 03:08 PM PST

Incoming House Foreign Affairs chairwoman Ileana Ros-Lehtinen (R-FL) defeated a bill Thursday evening that would have committed the United States to combating forced child marriages abroad, by invoking concerns about the legislation's cost and that funds could be uses to finance abortions. The episode highlights the tough road that the Obama administration will face in advancing its women's rights and foreign aid agenda during the next Congressional session.

Non-governmental organizations, women's rights advocates, and lawmakers from both parties spent years developing and lobbying for the "International Protecting Girls by Preventing Child Marriage Act of 2010," which the House failed to pass in a vote Thursday. The bill failed even though 241 Congressmen voted for it and only 166 voted against, because House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) brought it up under "suspension of the rules." This procedure has the advantage of not allowing any amendments or changes to the bill, but carries the disadvantage of requiring two-thirds of the votes for passage.

Even still, supporters in both parties fully expected the bill to garner the 290 votes needed -- right up until the bill failed. After all, it passed the Senate unanimously Dec. 1 with the co-sponsorship of several Republicans, including Appropriations Committee ranking Republican Thad Cochran (R-MS), Foreign Relations Committee member Roger Wicker (R-MS), and human rights advocate Sam Brownback (R-KS).

If passed, the bill would have authorized the president to provide assistance "to prevent the incidence of child marriage in developing countries through the promotion of educational, health, economic, social, and legal empowerment of girls and women." It would have also mandated that the administration develop a multi-year strategy on the issue and that the State Department include the incidence of forced child marriage during its annual evaluation of countries' human rights practices.

So what happened? Ros-Lehtinen first argued that the bill was simply unaffordable. In a Dec. 16 "[illegible]" [illegible], she objected to the cost of the bill, which would be $108 million over five years, and criticized it for not providing an accounting of how much the U.S. was already spending on this effort. The [illegible] said the bill would authorize $108 million, but would only require $67 million in outlays from fiscal years 2011 to 2015.

Ros-Lehtinen introduced her own version of the bill, which she said would only cost $1 million. But in a fact sheet (PDF), organizations supporting the original legislation said that Ros-Lehtinen's bill removed the implementation procedures that gave the legislation teeth. "Without such activities, the bill becomes merely a strategy with no actual implementation. And without implementation of a strategy, the bill will have an extraordinarily limited impact," they wrote.

Regardless, the supporters still thought the bill would pass because House Republican leadership had not come out against it. But about one hour before the vote, every Republican House office received a message on the bill from GOP leadership, known as a Whip Alert, saying that leadership would vote "no" on the bill and encouraging all Republicans do the same. The last line on the alert particularly shocked the bill's supporters.

"There are also concerns that funding will be directed to NGOs that promote and perform abortion and efforts to combat child marriage could be usurped as a way to overturn pro-life laws," the alert read.

The bill doesn't contain any funding for abortion activities and federal funding for abortion activities is already prohibited by what's known as the "[illegible] Amendment," which has been boiler plate language in appropriations bills since 1973.

Invoking the abortion issue sent the bill's supporters reeling. They believed that it was little more than a stunt, considering that Republican pro-life senators had carefully reviewed the legislation and concluded it would not have an impact on the abortion issue.

Rep. Stephen LaTourrette (R-OH) [illegible] the Republican leadership for invoking the abortion issue to defeat the forced child marriage act in a floor speech Friday morning.

"Yesterday I was on the floor and I was a co-sponsor with [on] a piece of legislation with [Rep. Betty McCollum (D-MN)] that would have moved money, no new money, would have moved money so that societies that are coercing young girls into marriage... we could make sure that they stay in school so they're not forced into marriage at the age of 12 and 13," LaTourette said. "All of a sudden there was a fiscal argument. When that didn't work people had to add an abortion element to it. This is a partisan place. I'm a Republican. I'm glad we beat their butt in the election, but there comes a time when enough is enough."

But it was too late for LaTourette and other Republicans who had fought hard for the bill, including Aaron Schock (R-IL). The bill is even less likely to pass next year, when the GOP will control the House and Ros-Lehtinen will control the Foreign Affairs committee.

The main author of the bill was Senate Majority Whip Dick Durbin (D-IL), who was incensed when the bill failed in the House.

"The action on the House floor stopping the Child Marriage bill tonight will endanger the lives of millions of women and girls around the world," Durbin said in a Thursday statement. "These young girls, enslaved in marriage, will be brutalized and many will die when their young bodies are torn apart while giving birth. Those who voted to continue this barbaric practice brought shame to Capitol Hill."

For the NGO and women's advocacy community, the implications of this defeat extend much further than just this bill. They also saw Republicans invoke the abortion issue when objecting to the International Violence Against Women Act and expect the new Congress to push for reinstatement of the "Mexico City Policy," which would prevent federal funding for any organizations that even discuss abortion.

"Any time a health bill that has to do with women and girls comes to the House floor, we're going to see a debate like the one we just saw," said one advocacy leader who supported the bill. "It's hard to imagine how any development bills are going to pass in this environment."

The protection of women and girls is a major focus of Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, who promised to elevate the issue Thursday when rolling out the State Department's Quadrennial Diplomacy and Development Review. She has said that forced child marriage is "a clear and unacceptable violation of human rights", and that "the Department of State categorically denounces all cases of child marriage as child abuse".

State's Ambassador at Large for Global Women's Issues Melanne Verveer has worked hard on the issue behind the scenes. But at the eleventh hour, when the going got tough, the bill's supporters said that the administration was nowhere to be found. In October, the White House decided to waive all penalties under the Child Soldiers Prevention Act, another Durbin led bill that the NGO community supports.

United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) estimates that 60 million girls in developing countries now between the ages of 20 and 24 were married before they reached 18. The Population Council, a group focused on reproductive and child health, estimates that the number will increase by 100 million over the next decade if current trends continue.

Pakistan's military says it will not launch North Waziristan offensive -- envoy to follow

Posted: 17 Dec 2010 09:57 AM PST

One of the two biggest problems identified in the Afghanistan-Pakistan Strategy Review released Thursday (PM) is the Pakistani military's failure to crack down on some of the terrorist groups using Pakistan's tribal areas as a safe haven from which to launch attacks across the border into Afghanistan.

Pakistan has fought a major offensive, involving approximately 30,000 troops, against extremists in South Waziristan in October 2009, and its military has also undertaken efforts to stamp out militants in other border areas. However, the military has yet to launch offensive military operations in North Waziristan, where insurgent groups wreaking havoc in Afghanistan reside.

Pakistan's envoy in Washington, Ambassador Husain Haqqani, reacted to the report by saying that Pakistan will engage Islamist groups in North Waziristan, including the Haqqani network (no relation), but only when there is sufficient support in all areas of Pakistan's government for the effort, and not until they are confident that the mission can be completed effectively.

"Pakistan has made it very clear that we are fighting terrorists because they are a threat to our own existence as a modern democratic nation. We will fight all groups in all parts of our country," Haqqani said in an exclusive interview with The Cable. "But we will follow timelines that suit our own capabilities and can lead to success."

Haqqani said that the Pakistani army, which has taken the fight to six out of the seven regions inside Pakistan in which domestic militant groups operate and suffered thousands of casualties in the process, is simply not in a position to expand its war on the extremists now.

"Right now, it's only a question of operational capability and readiness. Our armed forces have been engaged in dealing with flood relief work," he said. "We have to see what resources we will allocate in which part of the country, and those rather than any political factors are responsible for any waiting period."

He also noted that "there is a fragile consensus in Pakistan in favor of military action against regional elements," and that Pakistan's government has no choice but to make the decision to attack North Waziristan groups on a timeline that prioritized Pakistani considerations over American ones.

"Sometimes it's easy for our allies to tell us what to do and for us to tell our allies what to do. But everyone makes decisions based on their own perceptions and analysis of on ground realities," Haqqani said.

In several discussions with other Pakistani officials, an even more complicated picture of the Pakistani position on attacking groups in North Waziristan emerges. The Pakistanis largely believe that the U.S. government is being unrealistic in terms of the timelines it wants for cracking down on terrorist safe havens along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border, which have existed for decades.

"There will always be a gap between our two countries because the Americans want things done quickly and done their way," another Pakistani government official said.

A third senior Pakistani official said that many Pakistanis feel that the Obama administration is placing too much of the blame on Pakistan for the lack of progress in the U.S.-led war in Afghanistan.

"The U.S. keeps telling Pakistan to do more, but Pakistan keeps telling the U.S. to do more on certain questions such as speeding up building up of Afghan army, establishing a real process toward reconciliation, and providing Pakistan the means for large scale operations," the official said.

The United States has provided Pakistan with several billions of dollars in military and economic aid to support its war against domestic insurgents. But many in the Pakistani government have criticized what they say characterize as the slow arrival of these funds, which they say are in any case too small to address Pakistan's severe problems.

"It's very simplistic to measure success in amount of assistance provided to Pakistan," one Pakistani official said.

In remarks delivered during the rollout of the strategy review Thursday, President Obama was diplomatic when discussing his administration's ongoing drive to push Pakistan to do more in North Waziristan.

"Increasingly, the Pakistani government recognizes that terrorist networks in its border regions are a threat to all our countries, especially Pakistan. We've welcomed major Pakistani offensives in the tribal regions. We will continue to help strengthen Pakistanis' capacity to root out terrorists," said Obama. "Nevertheless, progress has not come fast enough. So we will continue to insist to Pakistani leaders that terrorist safe havens within their borders must be dealt with."

Undersecretary of Defense for Policy Michèle Flournoy acknowledged in an interview the same day that there was more work to be done on the relationship before the Pakistanis were willing to fully support the U.S. and NATO-led mission in Afghanistan.

"Given the ups and downs of our historical relationship with Pakistan, they fear our abandonment," she said. "Their calculus is very much affected by the long-term commitment they feel from us and in working in a strategic partnership."

The White House recognizes that its efforts have fallen short so far. "The bottom line is that Pakistan is a country where we have little influence, little access and little credibility," one of Obama's aides told The New York Times.

The administration's official line, therefore, is to agree with the Pakistani government and express sensitivity to its claim that they simply can't expand their war against extremists at this time.

"We would like them to move tomorrow, we would like them to take out these people tomorrow," said the new U.S. Ambassador to Pakistan Cameron Munter. "But we understand they're telling us honestly about the capacity of their military, and when they are able, we are convinced they will move in."

But for many in Washington, the open-ended delay in Pakistan's promise to expand military operations into North Waziristan represents a strategic choice, and is not just a result of the military's operational limitations. But whatever Pakistan's reasons, the delay doesn't inspire confidence that the Obama administration can meet its timelines for making progress in Afghanistan.

"Pakistan, meanwhile, is hedging its bets, supporting proxy actors like the Quetta Shura Taliban and Haqqani Network that might counter Indian interests in Kabul after the United States and its allies eventually withdraw," says Andrew Exum of the Center for a New American Security. "The insurgent sanctuaries in Pakistan are one of the two Achilles heels in the NATO strategy."

Congress to honor Holbrooke

Posted: 17 Dec 2010 04:42 AM PST

In a rare instance of bipartisanship, the House of Representatives moved to pass a resolution Friday honoring the life and work of the recently departed Ambassador Richard Holbrooke.

The resolution (H. Con. Res. 335) was sponsored by outgoing House Appropriations State and Foreign Ops Subcommittee chairwoman Nita Lowey (D-NY), and cosponsored by incoming House Foreign Affairs chairwoman

Ileana Ros-Lehtinen (R-FL), Howard Berman (D-CA), and Mike Turner (R-OH). The bill is "a concurrent resolution honoring the exceptional achievements of Ambassador Richard Holbrooke and recognizing the significant contributions he has made to United States national security, humanitarian causes and peaceful resolutions of international conflict."

"The passing of Ambassador Holbrooke on Monday, December 13th, is a great loss for the American people," Lowey said in a statement. "One of our nation's most talented diplomats, Richard Holbrooke possessed a fierce determination and unsurpassed brilliance in advocating for American security, diplomatic, and development interests around the world - in Southeast Asia and post-Cold War Europe, at the United Nations, and most recently in Afghanistan and Pakistan. His exceptional accomplishments as a peace-maker, diplomat, writer, scholar, manager and mentor will define his legacy as one of the true great foreign policy giants of our time."

Ros-Lehtinen praised Holbrooke as "one of the most consequential world diplomats of the last half-century," and said that "his tireless work in pursuit of United States national interests and international peace have put us all in his debt."

After praising his career -- which included two stints as assistant secretary of state, peace negotiator in the Balkans, U.S. ambassador to the U.N., and service as U.S. special representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan -- Ros-Lehtinen called for reform of the United Nations and protection of Israel within its bodies.

"In New York at the UN, [Holbrooke] did much of the heavy lifting on Congressionally-led efforts to rein in UN spending, to make more equitable the dues paid by the United States, and to improve the standing of Israel in that multinational body," she said. "Sadly, those concerns have returned with a renewed urgency -- with the need for fundamental reform of UN budget and the virulently anti-Israel UN Human Rights Council -- and the Congress can only hope to have such a tenacious, principled partner in the future."

You are subscribed to email updates from The Cable
To stop receiving these emails, you may unsubscribe now.

Email delivery powered by Google

Inc. 20 West Kinzie, Chicago IL USA 60610

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 30, 2010 7:44 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Helpful Wikileaks Editorial

Helpful editorial in wp. We'll try and get pickup in international media.

Jm

----- Original Message -----
From: DiMartino, Kitty
To: 'preines <preines McHale, Judith A; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J B6
Sent: Tue Nov 30 19:39:34 2010
Subject: Helpful Wikileaks Editorial

Philippe,

B5

The right response to Wikileaks

Tuesday, November 30, 2010

MANY OF the State Department documents released so far by WikiLeaks are embarrassing to their authors or subjects, but otherwise harmless. Some might even be helpful: Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad was among those fuming Monday at the news that most of the Arab states surrounding Iran might welcome a U.S. attack on his country. Still, there is little doubt that the release of the cables will damage the State Department and its diplomacy. Sensitive relations with countries such as Yemen, Pakistan and Saudi Arabia might be impaired; foreign leaders everywhere may consider carefully, at least for a while, before speaking frankly to U.S. diplomats.

Some in Washington are calling on the Obama administration to respond to the leak with drastic measures, such as a cyberattack on the WikiLeaks Internet site or the prosecution of its Australian-born leader, Julian Assange. That would be an overreaction. There is apparently no top-secret material in the WikiLeaks documents; the U.S. cyberwar capacity should not be deployed for less-than-critical interests. Mr. Assange's arrest and prosecution would turn a man now widely perceived as a self-promoting sex crimes suspect into an international martyr.

There is a much more immediate and sensible task for Congress and the administration - starting with the Defense Department. That is to thoroughly plumb how a 22-year-old Army private at a remote Iraqi base could have gotten access to 250,000 State Department cables, as well as tens of thousands more military reports from Iraq and Afghanistan, and how he could have downloaded them onto CDs without being detected. The chief suspect in the deliveries to WikiLeaks, Bradley Manning, was a disconsolate man who had been reprimanded for assaulting an officer and believed he might be discharged for his misconduct. Why was he allowed to retain access to classified information? How could he have stolen such a large amount of material without triggering any alarms?

The Pentagon announced several procedural changes on Sunday in reaction to Pfc. Manning's alleged actions, including the disabling of the capacity to copy classified material onto portable devices and limits on the transfer of material from classified to unclassified computer systems. Still, these changes come too late - it's notable that at the State Department itself, the downloading Mr. Manning allegedly carried out would not have been possible. What's needed is a thorough review of why the Defense Department failed to adopt simple security procedures, how it managed Pfc. Manning, and whether the announced reforms are adequate.

Also needed is a broader government review of whether the distribution of classified information has gone too far. Of course there must not be firewalls that prevent senior intelligence analysts and their bosses from seeing and sharing sensitive information. That does not mean a troubled 22-year-old in Baghdad should have access to secret State Department cables from all over the world. Surely there is a way to create a system that can do the former while preventing the latter.

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: PVerveer[redacted] B6
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 1:29 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: child marriage defeat

I will do so. I just heard from Kristof. He said that sometimes Republican are just plain nuts. I have to really figure out a strategy on this, GHI, etc
Also, Kristof said he was so pleased to see your influence on these issues in the QDDR.

In a message dated 12/18/2010 1:24:49 P.M. Eastern Standard Time, HDR22@clintonemail.com writes:

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: PVerveer[redacted]<PVerveer@[redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Sat Dec 18 13:21:45 2010
Subject: child marriage defeat

The defeat of the Child Marriage bill, I fear, is a harbinger of what's to come. After passing the Senate unanimously, there was every expectation that it would fly through the House on suspension. How this too became an abortion issue is truly distressing. We have our work more than cut out for us.

On another note, I ran into Ray and Shaista the other night. They were recently in Pakistan and stayed with Zardari the whole time. It might make sense for someone to brief Ray. Zardari considers him his informal ambassador to the US.

How Ileana Ros-Lehtinen killed the bill to prevent forced child marriages
<http://feedproxy.google.com/~r/foreignpolicy/thecable/~3/gdXINP4NvP4/how_ileana_ros_lehtinen_killed_the_bill_to_prevent_forced_child_marriages?utm_source=feedburner&utm_medium=email>

Posted: 17 Dec 2010 03:08 PM PST

Incoming House Foreign Affairs chairwoman Ileana Ros-Lehtinen (R-FL) defeated a bill Thursday evening that would have committed the United States to combating forced child marriages abroad, by invoking concerns about the legislation's cost and that funds could be uses to finance abortions. The episode highlights the tough road that the Obama administration will face in advancing its women's rights and foreign aid agenda during the next Congressional session.

Non-governmental organizations, women's rights advocates, and lawmakers from both parties spent years developing and lobbying for the "International Protecting Girls by Preventing Child Marriage Act of 2010," which the House failed to pass in a vote Thursday. The bill failed even though 241 Congressmen voted for it and only 166 voted against, because House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) brought it up under "suspension of the rules." This procedure has the advantage of not allowing any amendments or changes to the bill, but carries the disadvantage of requiring two-thirds of the votes for passage.

Even still, supporters in both parties fully expected the bill to garner the 290 votes needed -- right up until the bill failed. After all, it passed the Senate unanimously Dec. 1 with the co-sponsorship of several Republicans, including Appropriations Committee ranking Republican Thad Cochran (R-MS), Foreign Relations Committee member Roger Wicker (R-MS), and human rights advocate Sam Brownback (R-KS).

If passed, the bill would have authorized the president to provide assistance "to prevent the incidence of child marriage in developing countries through the promotion of educational, health, economic, social, and legal empowerment of girls and women." It would have also mandated that the administration develop a multi-year strategy on the issue and that the State Department include the incidence of forced child marriage during its annual evaluation of countries' human rights practices.

So what happened? Ros-Lehtinen first argued that the bill was simply unaffordable. In a Dec. 16 "Dear Colleague" letter <http://www.foreignpolicy.com/files/fp_uploaded_documents/101217_Ileana%20Dear%20Colleague.pdf> , she objected to the cost of the bill, which would be $108 million over five years, and criticized it for not providing an accounting of how much the U.S. was already spending on this effort. The actual CBO estimate (PDF) <http://www.foreignpolicy.com/files/fp_uploaded_documents/101217_CBO%20Estimate%20Child%20Marraige.PDF> said the bill would authorize $108 million, but would only require $67 million in outlays from fiscal years 2011 to 2015.

Ros-Lehtinen introduced her own version of the bill, which she said would only cost $1 million. But in a fact sheet (PDF <http://www.foreignpolicy.com/files/fp_uploaded_documents/101217_Concerns%20about%20the%20Rep.pdf> ), organizations supporting the original legislation said that Ros-Lehtinen's bill removed the implementation procedures that gave the legislation teeth. "Without such activities, the bill becomes merely a strategy with no actual implementation. And without implementation of a strategy, the bill will have an extraordinarily limited impact," they wrote.

Regardless, the supporters still thought the bill would pass because House Republican leadership had not come out against it. But about one hour before the vote, every Republican House office received a message on the bill from GOP leadership, known as a Whip Alert, saying that leadership would vote "no" on the bill and encouraging all Republicans do the same. The last line on the alert particularly shocked the bill's supporters.

"There are also concerns that funding will be directed to NGOs that promote and perform abortion and efforts to combat child marriage could be usurped as a way to overturn pro-life laws," the alert read.

The bill doesn't contain any funding for abortion activities and federal funding for abortion activities is already prohibited by what's known as the "Helms Amendment," <http://www.ipas.org/Publications/asset_upload_file418_4329.pdf> which has been boiler plate language in appropriations bills since 1973.

Invoking the abortion issue sent the bill's supporters reeling. They believed that it was little more than a stunt, considering that Republican pro-life senators had carefully reviewed the legislation and concluded it would not have an impact on the abortion issue.

Rep. Stephen LaTourrette (R-OH) called out <http://www.c-spanvideo.org/program/HouseSession3981> the Republican leadership for invoking the abortion issue to defeat the forced child marriage act in a floor speech Friday morning.

"Yesterday I was on the floor and I was a co-sponsor with [on] a piece of legislation with [Rep. Betty McCollum (D-MN)] that would have moved money, no new money, would have moved money so that societies that are coercing young girls into marriage... we could make sure that they stay in school so they're not forced into marriage at the age of 12 and 13," LaTourette said. "All of a sudden there was a fiscal argument. When that didn't work people had to add an abortion element to it. This is a partisan place. I'm a Republican. I'm glad we beat their butt in the election, but there comes a time when enough is enough."

But it was too late for LaTourette and other Republicans who had fought hard for the bill, including Aaron Schock (R-IL). The bill is even less likely to pass next year, when the GOP will control the House and Ros-Lehtinen will control the Foreign Affairs committee.

The main author of the bill was Senate Majority Whip Dick Durbin (D-IL), who was incensed when the bill failed in the House.

"The action on the House floor stopping the Child Marriage bill tonight will endanger the lives of millions of women and girls around the world," Durbin said in a Thursday statement. "These young girls, enslaved in marriage, will be brutalized and many will die when their young bodies are torn apart while giving birth. Those who voted to continue this barbaric practice brought shame to Capitol Hill."

For the NGO and women's advocacy community, the implications of this defeat extend much further than just this bill. They also saw Republicans invoke the abortion issue when objecting to the International Violence Against Women Act and expect the new Congress to push for reinstatement of the "Mexico City Policy," which would prevent federal funding for any organizations that even discuss abortion.

"Any time a health bill that has to do with women and girls comes to the House floor, we're going to see a debate like the one we just saw," said one advocacy leader who supported the bill. "It's hard to imagine how any development bills are going to pass in this environment."

The protection of women and girls is a major focus of Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, who promised to elevate the issue Thursday when rolling out the State Department's Quadrennial Diplomacy and Development Review. She has said that forced child marriage is "a clear and unacceptable violation of human rights", and that "the Department of State categorically denounces all cases of child marriage as child abuse".

State's Ambassador at Large for Global Women's Issues Melanne Verveer has worked hard on the issue behind the scenes. But at the eleventh hour, when the going got tough, the bill's supporters said that the administration was nowhere to be found. In October, the White House decided to waive all penalties under the Child Soldiers Prevention Act, another Durbin led bill that the NGO community supports.

United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) estimates that 60 million girls in developing countries now between the ages of 20 and 24 were married before they reached 18. The Population Council, a group focused on <http://www.popcouncil.org/> reproductive and child health, estimates that the number will increase by 100 million over the next decade if current trends continue.

<http://feeds.feedburner.com/~r/foreignpolicy/thecable/~4/gdXINP4NvP4?utm_source=feedburner&utm_medium=email>

Pakistani ambassador: We'll attack North Waziristan when we are able -- and not before <http://feedproxy.google.com/~r/foreignpolicy/thecable/~3/nRXbbP6nXW8/pakistani_ambassador_we_ll_attack_north_waziristan_when_we_are_able_and_not_before?utm_source=feedburner&utm_medium=email>

Posted: 17 Dec 2010 09:57 AM PST

One of the two biggest problems identified in the Afghanistan-Pakistan Strategy Review released Thursday (PDF <http://www.foreignpolicy.com/files/fp_uploaded_documents/101217_AfPak_overview.pdf> ) is the Pakistani military's failure to crack down on some of the terrorist groups using Pakistan's tribal areas as a safe haven from which to launch attacks across the border into Afghanistan.

Pakistan launched <http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2009/10/17/AR2009101700673.html> a major offensive, involving approximately 30,000 troops, against extremists in South Waziristan in October 2009, and its military has also undertaken efforts to stamp out militants in other border areas. However, the military has yet to launch offensive military operations in North Waziristan, where insurgent groups wreaking havoc in Afghanistan reside.

Pakistan's envoy in Washington, Ambassador Husain Haqqani, reacted to the report by saying that Pakistan will engage Islamist groups in North Waziristan, including the Haqqani network (no relation), but only when there is sufficient support in all areas of Pakistan's government for the effort, and not until they are confident that the mission can be completed effectively.

"Pakistan has made it very clear that we are fighting terrorists because they are a threat to our own existence as a modern democratic nation. We will fight all groups in all parts of our country," Haqqani said in an exclusive interview with The Cable. "But we will follow timelines that suit our own capabilities and can lead to success."

Haqqani said that the Pakistani army, which has taken the fight to six out of the seven regions inside Pakistan in which domestic militant groups operate and suffered thousands of casualties in the process, is simply not in a position to expand its war on the extremists now.

"Right now, it's only a question of operational capability and readiness. Our armed forces have been engaged in dealing with flood relief work," he said. "We have to see what resources we will allocate in which part of the country, and those rather than any political factors are responsible for any waiting period."

He also noted that "there is a fragile consensus in Pakistan in favor of military action against regional elements," and that Pakistan's government has no choice but to make the decision to attack North Waziristan groups on a timeline that prioritized Pakistani considerations over American ones.

"Sometimes it's easy for our allies to tell us what to do and for us to tell our allies what to do. But everyone makes decisions based on their own perceptions and analysis of on ground realities," Haqqani said.

In several discussions with other Pakistani officials, an even more complicated picture of the Pakistani position on attacking groups in North Waziristan emerges. The Pakistanis largely believe that the U.S. government is being unrealistic in terms of the timelines it wants for cracking down on terrorist safe havens along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border, which have existed for decades.

"There will always be a gap between our two countries because the Americans want things done quickly and done their way," another Pakistani government official said.

A third senior Pakistani official said that many Pakistanis feel that the Obama administration is placing too much of the blame on Pakistan for the lack of progress in the U.S.-led war in Afghanistan.

"The U.S. keeps telling Pakistan to do more, but Pakistan keeps telling the U.S. to do more on certain questions such as speeding up building up of Afghan army, establishing a real process toward reconciliation, and providing Pakistan the means for large scale operations," the official said.

The United States has provided Pakistan with several billions of dollars in military and economic aid to support its war against domestic insurgents. But many in the Pakistani government have criticized what they say characterize as the slow arrival of these funds, which they say are in any case too small to address Pakistan's severe problems.

"It's very simplistic to measure success in amount of assistance provided to Pakistan," one Pakistani official said.

In remarks delivered during the rollout of the strategy review Thursday, President Obama was diplomatic when discussing his administration's ongoing drive to push Pakistan to do more in North Waziristan.

"Increasingly, the Pakistani government recognizes that terrorist networks in its border regions are a threat to all our countries, especially Pakistan. We've welcomed major Pakistani offensives in the tribal regions. We will continue to help strengthen Pakistanis' capacity to root out terrorists," said Obama. "Nevertheless, progress has not come fast enough. So we will continue to insist to Pakistani leaders that terrorist safe havens within their borders must be dealt with."

Undersecretary of Defense for Policy Michèle Flournoy acknowledged in an interview <http://www.jcs.mil/newsarticle.aspx?id=479> the same day that there was more work to be done on the relationship before the Pakistanis were willing to fully support the U.S. and NATO-led mission in Afghanistan.

"Given the ups and downs of our historical relationship with Pakistan, they fear our abandonment," she said. "Their calculus is very much affected by the long-term commitment they feel from us and in working in a strategic partnership."

The White House recognizes that its efforts have fallen short so far. "The bottom line is that Pakistan is a country where we have little influence, little access and little credibility," one of Obama's aides told <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/12/17/world/asia/17sanger.html?scp=2&sq=pakistan&st=cse> The New York Times.

The administration's official line, therefore, is to agree with the Pakistani government and express sensitivity to its claim that they simply can't expand their war against extremists at this time.

"We would like them to move tomorrow, we would like them to take out these people tomorrow," said <http://www.reuters.com/article/idUSTRE6BG1JN20101217> the new U.S. Ambassador to Pakistan Cameron Munter. "But we understand they're telling us honestly about the capacity of their military, and when they are able, we are convinced they will move in."

But for many in Washington, the open-ended delay in Pakistan's promise to expand military operations into North Waziristan represents a strategic choice, and is not just a result of the military's operational limitations. But whatever Pakistan's reasons, the delay doesn't inspire confidence that the Obama administration can meet its timelines for making progress in Afghanistan.

"Pakistan, meanwhile, is hedging its bets, supporting proxy actors like the Quetta Shura Taliban and Haqqani Network that might counter Indian interests in Kabul after the United States and its allies eventually withdraw," wrote <http://www.cnas.org/node/5452> Andrew Exum of the Center for a New American Security. "The insurgent sanctuaries in Pakistan are one of the two Achilles heels in the NATO strategy."

<http://feeds.feedburner.com/~r/foreignpolicy/thecable/~4/nRXbbP6nXW8?utm_source=feedburner&utm_medium=email>

Congress to honor Holbrooke
<http://feedproxy.google.com/~r/foreignpolicy/thecable/~3/0P90sfZEoDY/congress_to_honor_holbrooke?utm_source=feedburner&utm_medium=email>

Posted: 17 Dec 2010 04:42 AM PST

In a rare instance of bipartisanship, the House of Representatives moved to pass a resolution Friday honoring the life and work of the recently departed Ambassador Richard Holbrooke.

The resolution (H.Con.Res 335 <http://thomas.loc.gov/cgi-bin/query/z?c111:H.+Con.+Res.+335:> ) was sponsored by outgoing House Appropriations State and Foreign Ops Subcommittee chairwoman Nita Lowey (D-NY), and cosponsored by incoming House Foreign Affairs chairwoman Ileana Ros-Lehtinen (R-FL), Howard Berman (D-CA), and Mike Turner (R-OH). The bill is "a concurrent resolution honoring the exceptional achievements of Ambassador Richard Holbrooke and recognizing the significant contributions he has made to United States national security, humanitarian causes and peaceful resolutions of international conflict."

"The passing of Ambassador Holbrooke on Monday, December 13th, is a great loss for the American people," Lowey said in a statement. "One of our nation's most talented diplomats, Richard Holbrooke possessed a fierce determination and unsurpassed brilliance in advocating for American security, diplomatic, and development interests around the world - in Southeast Asia and post-Cold War Europe, at the United Nations, and most recently in Afghanistan and Pakistan. His exceptional accomplishments as a peace-maker, diplomat, writer, scholar, manager and mentor will define his legacy as one of the true great foreign policy giants of our time."

Ros-Lehtinen praised Holbrooke as "one of the most consequential world diplomats of the last half-century," and said that "his tireless work in pursuit of United States national interests and international peace have put us all in his debt."

After praising his career -- which included two stints as assistant secretary of state, peace negotiator in the Balkans, U.S. ambassador to the U.N., and service as U.S. special representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan -- Ros-Lehtinen called for reform of the United Nations and protection of Israel within its bodies.

"In New York at the UN, [Holbrooke] did much of the heavy lifting on Congressionally-led efforts to rein in UN spending, to make more equitable the dues paid by the United States, and to improve the standing of Israel in that multinational body," she said. "Sadly, those concerns have returned with a renewed urgency -- with the need for fundamental reform of UN budget and the virulently anti-Israel UN Human Rights Council -- and the Congress can only hope to have such a tenacious, principled partner in the future."

<http://feeds.feedburner.com/~r/foreignpolicy/thecable/~4/0P90sfZEoDY?utm_source=feedburner&utm_medium=email>

You are subscribed to email updates from The Cable <http://thecable.foreignpolicy.com/>
To stop receiving these emails, you may unsubscribe now <http://feedburner.google.com/fb/a/mailunsubscribe?k=v8er5UJruA_wMzd824baI7dgVe8> . Email delivery powered by Google
Inc., 20 West Kinzie, Chicago IL USA 60610

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 30, 2010 9:00 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: good news - Russia 123

Fyi - small good news

---

From: Verma, Richard R
To: Steinberg, James B; Burns, William J; Tauscher, Ellen O; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Tue Nov 30 16:16:05 2010
Subject: FW: good news - Russia 123

Looks like we can get across the finish line next week.

---

From: Sixkiller, Mariah [mailto:Mariah.Sixkiller@mail.house.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, November 30, 2010 3:44 PM
To: Verma, Richard R; Adams, David S
Subject: good news

Speaker's office suggesting she will be here and able to gavel in on Monday, so that shld give you weekend days. Then we can probably do a few pro-forma days next week. So between that and whatever other time we spend on end-game legislation, I'm pretty sure you'll get your 8.

MS

Mariah S. Sixkiller
Senior Policy Advisor
Office of the Majority Leader
U.S. House of Representatives (202) 225-3130
majorityleader.gov

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Lissa Muscatine < > B6
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 8:13 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: suggested edit to CFR

He had included a phrase or two as of a few hours ago, but maybe he has since added the whole riff.

B5

On Sep 8, 2010, at 7:47 AM, H wrote:

> I just got the final draft and it looks like your suggestions were > included.
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Lissa Muscatine < > B6
> To: H
> Sent: Tue Sep 07 23:43:23 2010
> Subject: suggested edit to CFR
>
>
> I have suggested to Dan the following edit to the grafs on page 2 (not > sure why the fonts are showing up different here, but you'll get the > idea....I can improve the language but wanted to give you a sense of > what I think is still missing in his latest draft).
>
>
>
>
>

B5

>
>
>
>

B5

[redacted]

>
>
>
>
>

[redacted]

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 5, 2010 6:10 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: The Cable: Granger seeking chairmanship of State and foreign ops subcommittee

I think calling now would be appropriate.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Fri Nov 05 18:05:48 2010
Subject: Re: The Cable: Granger seeking chairmanship of State and foreign ops subcommittee

Should I call her? Or wait?

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
To: H; Lew, Jacob J <LewJJ@state.gov>; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Nov 05 06:04:47 2010
Subject: FW: The Cable: Granger seeking chairmanship of State and foreign ops subcommittee

The Cable: Granger seeking chairmanship of State and foreign ops subcommittee <http://thecable.foreignpolicy.com/>
<http://fusion.google.com/add?source=atgs&feedurl=http://feeds.feedburner.com/foreignpolicy/thecable>

Link to The Cable <http://thecable.foreignpolicy.com/>

---

Granger seeking chairmanship of State and foreign ops subcommittee
<http://feedproxy.google.com/~r/foreignpolicy/thecable/~3/XTZuQVhq_K4/granger_seeking_chairmanship_of_state_and_foreign_ops_subcommittee?utm_source=feedburner&utm_medium=email>

Posted: 03 Nov 2010 11:31 AM PDT

Texas Congresswoman Kay Granger will seek the chairmanship of the State and Foreign Operations Appropriations Subcommittee, according to her spokesman, ending rumors that she would forgo the post in favor of some other position.

Although no decisions have been made, until last night Granger was the ranking Republican on the panel and she is the clear frontrunner for the job. She would succeed current chairwoman Nita Lowey (D-NY), who has served as chairwoman since 2006.

"Congresswoman Granger is interested in continuing on as chair of the state and foreign operations appropriations subcommittee," Matt Leffingwell, her press secretary, told The Cable Wednesday.

When power switches in Congress, a complicated game of musical chairs begins as senior members jockey for committee and subcommittee chairs. Just being the highest-ranking minority member on a panel doesn't mean one automatically takes over the chairmanship.

But if Granger does succeed Lowey, she will play a large role in writing the bills that appropriate money for State Department operations, USAID, foreign operations, foreign assistance, humanitarian assistance, and many other things. Those accounts all face unprecedented pressure next year as the GOP led Congress will be looking for spending cuts that don't have strong domestic constituencies.

Last month, we identified Granger <http://www.foreignpolicy.com/articles/2010/10/25/who_will_stand_between_obama_and_the_world?page=0,7> as one of 10 Republicans who stand to be influential in the next Congress if the GOP won control of the House. Since then, we've received several e-mails from sources who had heard that Granger would forgo the subcommittee chairmanship to pursue leadership of another panel.

We've heard that Ander Crenshaw (R-FL), the third-ranking Republican on the panel, was eyeing the chairmanship with the expectation that Granger would step aside.

(Mark Kirk (R-IL), the second-ranking Republican on the subcommittee, was elected Tuesday night to become the junior senator from Illinois, the seat once held by Barack Obama.)

So how would subcommittee chairwoman Granger handle the responsibility of writing the State and foreign ops appropriations bill? Here's what we reported in October:

Although [Granger] supported the bill put forth this year by current chairwoman Nita Lowey (D-N.Y.), she criticized <http://kaygranger.house.gov/index.cfm?sectionid=12&itemid=915> the increases for the foreign-ops budget, saying, "We also face the continued concern in our own country about our economy and the devastating effects of skyrocketing deficits and debt." She's a strong supporter of a balanced budget amendment <http://kaygranger.house.gov/index.cfm?sectionid=57&sectiontree=5,57> , which doesn't bode well for foreign-aid funding in this dismal fiscal environment.

Granger also serves on the defense subcommittee, placing her at the intersection of the debate over how to balance the national security budget and shift resources from defense to diplomacy and development. Here she seems to favor the Pentagon, saying in June, "I want to be sure that we aren't increasing foreign aid at the expense of our troops." Her lack of support of international organizations was criticized by the group Citizens for Global Solutions, which gave her an "F" in its 2007 to 2009 rating <http://www.votesmart.org/issue_rating_detail.php?r_id=4851> . Granger is also on board with efforts to eliminate aid to countries that are not performing on internal reform, as she explained when expressing opposition <http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2010/aug/22/countries-on-us-lists-for-corruption-aid/> to funding of the Senegalese government through the State Department's Millennium Challenge Corporation. "We can't just give out money and say we will put up with whatever you are doing," she said.

The committee leadership assignments won't be doled out for at least two to three weeks, our Hill sources report. But if Granger's bid is successful, she'll be instantly influential. The fiscal 2011 State and Foreign Ops bill still has not been completed by Congress, despite that the fiscal year began Oct. 1.

The stop gap funding measure that has been funding these programs since then, known as a "continuing resolution," expires in December. The lame duck Democratic led Congress is unlikely to be able to pass full appropriations bills on its way out the door, so they will likely pass another short term continuing resolution. That would leave the final work on the actual bill to the incoming class led by the GOP next year.

<http://feeds.feedburner.com/~r/foreignpolicy/thecable/~4/XTZuQVhq_K4?utm_source=feedburner&utm_medium=email>

You are subscribed to email updates from The Cable <http://thecable.foreignpolicy.com/>
To stop receiving these emails, you may unsubscribe now
<http://feedburner.google.com/fb/a/mailunsubscribe?k=3kZ2XoJ1Ti-AA-UsHrXxV9-W9iI> .

Email delivery powered by Google

Google Inc., 20 West Kinzie, Chicago IL USA 60610

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Lauren Jiloty <[redacted]>
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 8:44 AM
To: H
Subject: RE: Dan Schwerin

I'm sorry I am just now seeing this because my [redacted] does not register on my blackberry. Only my State e-mail does. Dan is SchwerinDB@state.gov

> From: HDR22@clintonemail.com
> To: Laurenjiloty[redacted]
> Date: Wed, 8 Sep 2010 05:56:34 -0400
> Subject: Dan Schwerin
>
> Do you have his email address?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, November 5, 2010 6:44 PM

http://blogs.abcnews.com/politicalpunch/2010/11/murdoch-mayor-bloomberg-called-president-obama-the-most-arrogant-man-he-ever-met.html

Murdoch: Mayor Bloomberg Called President Obama the Most "Arrogant" Man He Ever Met

November 05, 2010 4:26 PM

PrintRSS
SHARE:
Email
More

You may recall that during President Obama's vacation at Martha's Vineyard, on August 27 he took in a round of golf at the Vineyard Golf Club in Edgartown, playing golf with New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg; Democratic lawyer, business man and éminence grise Vernon Jordan; and White House trip director (and former golf pro) Marvin Nicholson.
The pool report at the time said that "We are told Bloomberg and Obama talked in the clubhouse for about 15 mins about the economy. They then went to the driving range."

Apparently – at least from a second-hand report – the Obama-Bloomberg convo could have gone better.

In an interview with The Australian Financial Review, conservative media magnate Rupert Murdoch says "Bloomberg said it was a pleasant day. In conversation he put a few ideas ... He said it was like verbal ping pong."
Bloomberg, according to Murdoch, "came back and said 'I never met in my life such an arrogant man'."

A spokesman for Bloomberg did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

Murdoch – the Australian-born founder, chairman, and chief executive officer of News Corporation, which owns conservative media outlets ranging from Fox News Channel to the New York Post – is described by The Age as saying in the interview that President Obama "might make great speeches but doesn't get things done and doesn't listen to anybody."
Earlier this year, News Corporation gave $1 million to the Republican Governors Association as well as $1 million to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which largely worked to elect Republicans in the 2010 midterm elections.

The interview was first picked up in the U.S. by The Politico's Ben Smith.
--Jake Tapper

UPDATE: It's worth pointing out that Bloomberg and Murdoch have been friends and allies for years.

In an August 2001 story about Bloomberg's mayoral ambitions in the Melbourne Australia Herald Sun, New York Post columnist Steve Dunleavy says that Bloomberg is "probably better known in Bondi" -- a suburb of Sydney, Australia -- "than in Brooklyn" because Bloomberg News runs on Australian pay TV.

"He's probably right," Bloomberg said in the profile. "That's thanks to Rupert (Murdoch). He put it on Foxtel well before it took off in other parts of the world."

Bloomberg also chatted with his longtime friend before he made public his plans to change New York City's term-limits laws and run for a third term; he'd need the New York Post, which Murdoch owns, on board.

Joyce Purnick, author of "Mike Bloomberg: Money, Power, Politics," was given unprecedented access to the mayor, and describes Bloomberg in Sun Valley, Idaho, making plans with Murdoch, and the two dining at Primavera in Manhattan. Bloomberg was planning to announce his intention to seek a third term but had not made up his mind yet. Murdoch was clearly on board.

Writes Purnick:

"Murdoch, who considered the Democrats lining up to succeed the mayor 'too horrible, too dangerous' to contemplate, wanted to run an editorial in the Post immediately. Wait just a little while, Bloomberg advises. 'He said, "Don't come out for me yet, I don't want to leave you out on a limb,"' Murdoch recalled. The mayor had to take care of more business first...An obviously orchestrated rollout began on September 29...The next day, a Post editorial trumpeted RUN, MIKE, RUN...

In September of this year the two joined forces to testify in favor of immigration reform.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 9:45 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: FW: Updated response to Howard Dean

FYI – interesting.

Not sure if you have the background on this but happy to give.

cdm

---

From: deanhowardb[redacted] B6
Sent: Wednesday, September 08, 2010 9:44 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: Updated response to Howard Dean

Cheryl, many many thanks. We have high hopes now that you and the Secretary are directly involved. Warmly, Howard

Sent from my Verizon Wireless BlackBerry

---

From: "Mills, Cheryl D" <MillsCD@state.gov>
Date: Wed, 8 Sep 2010 09:41:08 -0400
To: <deanhowardb[redacted]>
Cc: Toiv, Nora F<ToivNF@state.gov>
Subject: FW: Updated response to Howard Dean

Howard-

Thank you again for your inquiry. Here is a background from our Consular Affairs Office on where this currently stands.

The Office of Children's Issues here at State began working with Mr. Bower in August 2009 when his sons were abducted by their mother to Egypt notwithstanding a court order from a family court in Massachusetts that had given the father sole custody of the children. Since then, as you know, Mr. Bower has not been able to see his children.

On August 31, 2010, Embassy Cairo conducted a welfare visit (the first) with the Bower boys at the Ministry of Justice. The Government of Egypt played a constructive role in arranging this consular visit. As you may know, Senator Kerry has been following this case closely and issued a statement after the visit:

> "I applaud the Egyptian government's facilitation of American consular access today in Cairo for Noor and Ramsey. I hope that this is a first step that can lead to a positive outcome. It is past time for the children to be returned to Massachusetts where they belong. The facts are clear: the two boys were taken illegally to Egypt by their mother more than a year ago in blatant contravention of a U.S. court ruling that granted their father, Colin Bower, sole custody. I have conveyed my concerns over this matter to the State Department and hope that the involvement of the U.S. government will help bring this tragedy to its rightful conclusion by reunited these boys with their father."

The Department and US Embassy's Executive Office have raised this case with high level Egyptian officials many times.

They are actively pushing the Egyptian Government to help resolve this. Unfortunately, Egypt is not a member of the Hague Convention on abductions, so left behind parents must depend on the local courts to do the right thing. In 2000, Egypt has formed a "Good Intentions Subcommittee" to help mediate between parents. There have been some good results, although it all depends on the willingness of parents to work together. We also have an MOU with the Egyptian Government that allows for consular access. Embassy Cairo relied on the MOU when they approached the Egyptian Good Intentions Sub-Committee for help in scheduling a welfare visit with the Bower children. Without the intervention of that sub-committee, it's likely the Embassy would not have been able to conduct the August 31 welfare visit with the children.

Our folks will continue working closely with Mr. Bower, our Embassy in Cairo, and with the Government of Egypt to help find a solution that reunites Mr. Bower with his children.

Best.

cdm

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From:
Sent: Friday, November 5, 2010 7:10 PM
To: H

I hope your travels are excellent. We expect Dayton to prevail in the recount. Looking forward to finalizing details and getting underway with you. Warm regards,

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 2:32 PM
To: H
Subject: H: One more bit of evidence... Sid

More evidence on why focusing on Boehner is important:

NBC/WSJ:
Do you think if Republicans win control of Congress in November they will return to the economic policies of George W. Bush or do you think they will have different ideas for how to deal with the economy?

| | |
|---|---|
| Policies of George W. Bush | 35 |
| Different ideas | 58 |
| Not sure | 7 |

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop B6
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 2:35 PM
To: H
Subject: H: First review of your speech. Goad you used Acheson. Sid

Hillary's Homerun of a Speech
by Tunku Varadarajan
September 8, 2010 | 12:16pm

Hillary Clinton speaks at the Council on Foreign Relations September 8, 2010 in Washington, DC. (Mark Wilson / Getty Images) The secretary of State delivered the best speech of the Obama administration this morning. Tunku Varadarajan on her "new American moment"—and why she's better than her boss.

Behold the Hillary Doctrine. And heap abundant gratitude—and rose petals if you have them on hand—on the firm, unfussy, deeply reassuring woman who has just offered it up to the world.

In the 20 months since this administration began administering (a verb I use only in the loosest sense), the speech Wednesday morning by Hillary Clinton, delivered at the Council on Foreign Relations, was the first time we have been given an unreserved lift of the heart by any of its members. It was, by far, the best speech of this administration. Whereas her president has frequently wrung his elegant hands, doing the rounds of the world to reassure foreign leaders that America is a cuddly bunny at heart, the secretary of State declared Wednesday that we are all living "a new American moment—a moment when our global leadership is essential." There was no bowing from her to potentates in robes; there was, instead, a promise that "we will do everything we can to exercise the traditions of American leadership at home and abroad."

What is so piquant here is not the fact that Hillary understands that Obama is president. It is the growing sense that Hillary would have made a much, much better president than Obama.

Try this for size: "The United States can, must and will lead in the new century." In order to do that, Clinton promised "a new global architecture," "built to last and withstand stress." And in a muscular departure from the way in which this administration—for fear of seeming Bush-like—has been shrinking from the unembarrassed propagation of American values, she uttered these plainspoken, unadorned words: "Democracy needs defending."

Human rights, too, came in for a robust airing: China was scolded, and exhorted to follow "the rules of the road" in its aspiration to be a great power; as was Russia, for its invasion of Georgia. The message: We may live in a multipolar world, but we have higher standards by far than those who would style themselves as our equals.

Clinton used phrases like "American might," words that we are more accustomed to hearing from Republicans—words that we've come to believe that many Democrats can't bear to voice. How refreshing, therefore, that she should reach into a vocabulary of pride that most American citizens would applaud.

Hillary Clinton invoked the name of Dean Acheson in her reference to the need for "good, old-fashioned diplomacy," and there certainly was an air of the Achesonian, of the statesman, about her speech. Good, old-fashioned diplomacy, it should be noted, is in contrast to Obama's apparent preference for seeing America as a nation like any other, only a bit bigger, richer, and better-armed. Clinton's "old-fashioned" diplomacy is based, by contrast, on the unquestionable premise that America is the world's leader. Not primus inter pares; just primus.

In her speech, Clinton referred to the sources of "American might." The first, of course, is "economic power." But it is her hailing of the second—America's "moral authority"—that was so invigorating.

It was Acheson who said: "The most important aspect of the relationship between the president and the secretary of state is that they both understand who is president." What is so piquant here, in this administration, is not the fact, plain to behold, that Hillary understands that Obama is president. It is the growing sense that Hillary would have made a much, much better president than Obama.

Tunku Varadarajan is a national affairs correspondent and writer at large for The Daily Beast. He is also the Virginia Hobbs Carpenter Fellow in Journalism at Stanford's Hoover Institution and a professor at NYU's Stern Business School. He is a former assistant managing editor at The Wall Street Journal. (Follow him on Twitter here.)

Get a head start with the Morning Scoop email. It's your Cheat Sheet with must reads from across the Web. Get it.
For inquiries, please contact The Daily Beast at editorial@thedailybeast.com.

URL: http://www.thedailybeast.com/blogs-and-stories/2010-09-08/hillary-clinton-foreign-policy-speech-better-than-obama/p/

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 2:45 PM
To: H
Subject: Bravo

You were great this morning, truly. And your instincts on the speech were just right. I was very proud to be in the front row. I am also enormously pleased that in the last 2 months we have gotten a major speech and a Foreign Affairs article done with a lot of people working very well as a team -- exactly as it ought to be. That is a tribute to top-level management and our ability to learn from experience and make improvements. It's a team I will be all the more sorry to leave. But now for the QDDR -- I'll be home for the rest of the week writing hard [redacted] We're going to get there -- cheryl taking hold has, as usual, been a huge help. B6

AM

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Neera Tanden [redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, November 5, 2010 11:03 PM
To: H

I don't know where he got that you would have pulled the plug on health care, but other parts...

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/11/05/AR2010110505214.html

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 3:48 PM
To: H
Subject: H: fyi. Sid

Jim Mann, who wrote The Rise of the Vulcans, is writing a history of Democrats and foreign policy since Vietnam. He's also a China expert, having covered China for the LA Times. He's favorably disposed to you, a serious person and concerned about the policies. I know him well. I think you ought to consider talking to him on the record for his book. I've enclosed his bio from Johns Hopkins SAIS , where he's on the faculty, and his email.

James Mann, B.A.
Foreign Policy Institute Author-in-Residence
Expertise
Geographic Areas
East Asia | China | Taiwan
Issues
American foreign policy | diplomacy | domestic influences on foreign policy | human rights | media and foreign policy | strategic and security issues | U.S. Congress and foreign policy
Background and Education
Was senior writer-in-residence at the Center for Strategic and International Studies; served as staff writer for the Los Angeles Times, including positions as Beijing bureau chief, national security correspondent and foreign affairs columnist; was staff writer for the New Haven Journal-Courier, The Washington Post, Philadelphia Inquirer and The Baltimore Sun; received the National Press Club Edwin M. Hood Award for diplomatic correspondence in 1993 and 1999, the Edward Weintal Prize for diplomatic reporting in 1999, the New York Public Library Helen Bernstein Award for best book of the year by a journalist in 2000 and the Asia-Pacific Award for best book about Asia in 2000; was finalist for the Lionel Gelber Prize for books on international relations in 2000 and the Arthur Ross Book Prize in 2005; is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations; formerly a guest scholar at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and fellow of the American Academy in Berlin; serves as guest commentator for television and radio networks; B.A., sociology, Harvard University
Publications
The Rebellion of Ronald Reagan: A History of the End of the Cold War (2009); The China Fantasy: How Our Leaders Explain Away Chinese Repression (2007); Rise of the Vulcans: The History of Bush's War Cabinet (2004); About Face: A History of America's Curious Relationship With China, From Nixon to Clinton (1999); Beijing Jeep (1989); "Congress and Taiwan" in Making China Policy (2001); numerous articles in T*he Atlantic Monthly, The New Republic* and The Washington Post

-----Original Message-----
From: Jim Mann
To: sbwhoeop
Sent: Wed, Sep 8, 2010 3:30 pm
Subject: (no subject)

Sid,

My requests for a book interview with the secretary of state are still going nowhere. I have no idea whether the reason is sheer bureaucracy (lots of requests) or personal (someone didn't like something I wrote?). I would think that the subject matter -- foreign policy after the Vulcans -- is a natural one for her.

While it's not absolutely necessary, it would certainly add insight. I don't know if you can do anything to help, but if so, I'd certainly appreciate it.

Best,

Jim

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 3:48 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: on the matter we discussed

fyi

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Wednesday, September 08, 2010 3:48 PM
To: Reines, Philippe I; McHale, Judith A; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: on the matter we discussed

Done.

Blog post tonight to follow.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 7:44 PM
To: H
Subject: Holbrooke asking to talk.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: PIR <preines >
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 9:48 PM
To: H
Cc: Jake Sullivan
Subject: Re: H: fyi. Sid

No real harm, other than taking up your time. But no real upside either. Over the last decade you've only spoken to one or two people on the record for books, but have regretted dozens, many from people close to you. It's just been easier saying no to all. Doesn't make it a wise policy, but it's been SOP.

If you'd like I can a) check in with the author, see if he has others of stature talking to him; and b) tend to Sid

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Wed, 8 Sep 2010 21:31:01
To: 'preines <preines ; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'<sullivanjj@state.gov> B6
Subject: Fw: H: fyi. Sid

Pls review and advise me about this. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Wed Sep 08 15:47:38 2010
Subject: H: fyi. Sid

Jim Mann, who wrote The Rise of the Vulcans, is writing a history of Democrats and foreign policy since Vietnam. He's also a China expert, having covered China for the LA Times. He's favorably disposed to you, a serious person and concerned about the policies. I know him well. I think you ought to consider talking to him on the record for his book. I've enclosed his bio from Johns Hopkins SAIS , where he's on the faculty, and his email.

James Mann, B.A.photo, Mann <http://www.sais-jhu.edu/bin/d/w/mann.png>
Foreign Policy Institute Author-in-Residence Expertise Geographic Areas East Asia | China | Taiwan Issues American foreign policy | diplomacy | domestic influences on foreign policy | human rights | media and foreign policy | strategic and security issues | U.S. Congress and foreign policy Background and Education Was senior writer-in-residence at the Center for Strategic and International Studies; served as staff writer for the Los Angeles Times, including positions as Beijing bureau chief, national security correspondent and foreign affairs columnist; was staff writer for the New Haven Journal-Courier, The Washington Post, Philadelphia Inquirer and The Baltimore Sun; received the National Press Club Edwin M. Hood Award for diplomatic correspondence in 1993 and 1999, the Edward Weintal Prize for diplomatic reporting in 1999, the New York Public Library Helen Bernstein Award for best book of the year by a journalist in 2000 and the Asia-Pacific Award for best book about Asia in 2000; was finalist for the Lionel Gelber Prize for books on international relations in 2000 and the Arthur Ross Book Prize in 2005; is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations; formerly a guest scholar at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and fellow of the American Academy in Berlin; serves as guest commentator for television and radio networks; B.A., sociology, Harvard University Publications The Rebellion of Ronald Reagan: A History of the End of the Cold War (2009); The China Fantasy: How Our Leaders Explain Away Chinese Repression (2007); Rise of the Vulcans: The History of Bush's War Cabinet (2004); About Face: A History of America's Curious Relationship With China, From Nixon to Clinton (1999); Beijing Jeep (1989); "Congress and Taiwan" in Making China Policy (2001); numerous articles in The Atlantic Monthly, The New Republic and The Washington Post

-----Original Message-----
From: Jim Mann
To: sbwhoeop
Sent: Wed, Sep 8, 2010 3:30 pm
Subject: (no subject)

B6

Sid,

My requests for a book interview with the secretary of state are still going nowhere. I have no idea whether the reason is sheer bureaucracy (lots of requests)

or personal (someone didn't like something I wrote?).

I would think that the subject matter -- foreign policy

after the Vulcans -- is a natural one for her.

While it's not absolutely necessary,

it would certainly add insight. I don't know

if you can do anything to help, but if so,

I'd certainly appreciate it.

Best,

Jim

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,B5,1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 3:45 PM
To: H
Subject: Two items

1. Churkin called Susan back. [redacted]

2. Feltman just called. [redacted]

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

B5

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 12/17/2025

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 10:00 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: CARE Policy Recommendations to Meet the MDGs

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Wed Sep 08 21:46:43 2010
Subject: Fw: CARE Policy Recommendations to Meet the MDGs

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Sep 07 23:11:18 2010
Subject: FW: CARE Policy Recommendations to Meet the MDGs

FYI

From: Gayle, Helene [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Tuesday, September 07, 2010 3:04 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: CARE Policy Recommendations to Meet the MDGs

Dear Ms. Mills:

CARE is pleased that the international community will come together at the Millennium Development Goals (MDG) Summit from Sept. 20-22, 2010, in New York, to recommit to and accelerate progress toward the achievement of the MDGs by 2015. We also welcome the United States' Strategy for Meeting the Millennium Development Goals, "Celebrate, Innovate and Sustain: Toward 2015 and Beyond." While we have made progress on some goals, we still have much to do if we are going to meet these global commitments by 2015.

Attached or linked below are CARE's recommendations for meeting the Millennium Development Goals and for strengthening the US' MDG strategy. Our recommendations include approaches and strategies proven to deliver results specifically on MDGs 1, 3, 5 and 7. CARE's reflections on the MDGs are drawn from more than 60 years of experience working with the poorest communities in more than 70 countries around the world. Women are at the heart of CARE's efforts because experience shows that a woman's achievements yield dramatic benefits for her entire family and the larger community. Promoting gender equality and women's empowerment is central to poverty reduction and the achievement of all MDGs.

The MDG Summit provides a critical opportunity to take bold and decisive action. CARE believes that the following guiding principles must be reflected in the outcome of the MDG Summit, in the US' MDG strategy, as well as in the US' and the international community's implementation efforts:

* An emphasis on meeting the needs of people in extreme poverty and the most vulnerable populations;
* Promotion of gender equality, gender responsiveness, and the empowerment of women;
* Adherence to broad-based country ownership, including broad stakeholder engagement with local communities, women's groups, and other vulnerable populations, in a whole-of-society approach to development;
* Recognition of the linkages among the eight MDGs; and
* A commitment to transparency, mutual accountability, and mechanisms to track results.

Any recommitment to the MDGs must be coupled with commitments to mobilize the necessary resources that will reach the people who need them most. In the context of the US' development strategy, CARE also believes that USAID must be empowered as the premier US development agency to lead these efforts, and we call on the Administration and Congress to work together to reform and modernize US foreign assistance policies, efforts and strategies.

CARE urges bold efforts to recommit to the MDGs and ensure progress toward their achievement. The MDG Summit can be the turning point in collective efforts to achieve the MDGs by 2015. It is critical that the global community unite around a shared action-oriented strategy for meeting – and exceeding – these goals and begin to lay the groundwork for post-2015.

CARE stands ready to support your efforts and looks forward to continuing valuable collaboration with the US government and other leaders to tackle poverty worldwide. Please do not hesitate to call on us.

Sincerely,

Helene D. Gayle, MD, MPH

President & CEO, CARE USA

Email [redacted] B6

Phone: (404) 979-9100

Fax: (404) 589-2604

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 10:07 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: First review of your speech. Goad you used Acheson. Sid

Don't know the writer personally, but he is a regular columnist for The Daily Beast, a young Indian-American, who used to work for WSJ, a conservative in fact.

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop
Sent: Wed, Sep 8, 2010 9:33 pm
Subject: Re: H: First review of your speech. Goad you used Acheson. Sid

Do you know who the writer is?

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop B6

To: H

Sent: Wed Sep 08 14:34:36 2010

Subject: H: First review of your speech. Goad you used Acheson. Sid

<http://www.tdbimg.com//image/print_blogs_header.gif?v=7.73.13>

Hillary's Homerun of a Speech

by Tunku Varadarajan

September 8, 2010 | 12:16pm

BS Top - Varadarajan Hillary Clinton <http://www.tdbimg.com/files/2010/09/08/img-bs-top---varadarajan-hillary-clinton_121414586291.jpg>

Hillary Clinton speaks at the Council on Foreign Relations September 8, 2010 in Washington, DC. (Mark Wilson / Getty Images) The secretary of State delivered the best speech of the Obama administration this morning. Tunku Varadarajan on her "new American moment"—and why she's better than her boss.

Behold the Hillary Doctrine. And heap abundant gratitude—and rose petals if you have them on hand—on the firm, unfussy, deeply reassuring woman who has just offered it up to the world.

In the 20 months since this administration began administering (a verb I use only in the loosest sense), the speech <http://www.cspan.org/Watch/Media/2010/09/08/HP/R/37857/Sec+Clinton+discusses+Advancing+American+Interests+on+a+Global+Scale.aspx> Wednesday morning by Hillary Clinton, delivered at the Council on Foreign Relations <http://www.cfr.org/> , was the first time we have been given an unreserved lift of the heart by any of its members. It was, by far, the best speech of this administration. Whereas her president has frequently wrung his elegant hands, doing the rounds of the world to reassure foreign leaders that America is a cuddly bunny at heart, the secretary of State declared Wednesday that we are all living "a new American moment—a moment when our global leadership is essential." There was no bowing from her to potentates in robes; there was, instead, a promise that "we will do everything we can to exercise the traditions of American leadership at home and abroad."

What is so piquant here is not the fact that Hillary understands that Obama is president. It is the growing sense that Hillary would have made a much, much better president than Obama.

Try this for size: "The United States can, must and will lead in the new century." In order to do that, Clinton promised "a new global architecture," "built to last and withstand stress." And in a muscular departure from the way in which this administration—for fear of seeming Bush-like—has been shrinking from the unembarrassed propagation of American values, she uttered these plainspoken, unadorned words: "Democracy needs defending."

Human rights, too, came in for a robust airing: China was scolded, and exhorted to follow "the rules of the road" in its aspiration to be a great power; as was Russia, for its invasion of Georgia. The message: We may live in a multipolar world, but we have higher standards by far than those who would style themselves as our equals.

Clinton used phrases like "American might," words that we are more accustomed to hearing from Republicans—words that we've come to believe that many Democrats can't bear to voice. How refreshing, therefore, that she should reach into a vocabulary of pride that most American citizens would applaud.

Hillary Clinton invoked the name of Dean Acheson <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dean_Acheson> in her reference to the need for "good, old-fashioned diplomacy," and there certainly was an air of the Achesonian, of the statesman, about her speech.

Good, old-fashioned diplomacy, it should be noted, is in contrast to Obama's apparent preference for seeing America as a nation like any other, only a bit bigger, richer, and better-armed. Clinton's "old-fashioned" diplomacy is based, by contrast, on the unquestionable premise that America is the world's leader. Not primus inter pares; just primus.

In her speech, Clinton referred to the sources of "American might." The first, of course, is "economic power." But it is her hailing of the second—America's "moral authority"—that was so invigorating.

It was Acheson who said: "The most important aspect of the relationship between the president and the secretary of state is that they both understand who is president." What is so piquant here, in this administration, is not the fact, plain to behold, that Hillary understands that Obama is president. It is the growing sense that Hillary would have made a much, much better president than Obama.

Tunku Varadarajan is a national affairs correspondent and writer at large for The Daily Beast. He is also the Virginia Hobbs Carpenter Fellow in Journalism at Stanford's Hoover Institution and a professor at NYU's Stern Business School. He is a former assistant managing editor at The Wall Street Journal. (Follow him on Twitter here <http://twitter.com/tunkuv> .)

Get a head start with the Morning Scoop email <http://www.thedailybeast.com/email-signup/>

. It's your Cheat Sheet with must reads from across the Web. Get it

<http://www.thedailybeast.com/email-signup/> .

For inquiries, please contact The Daily Beast at editorial@thedailybeast.com.

<http://www.tdbimg.com//image/print_footer.gif?v=7.73.13>

URL: http://www.thedailybeast.com/blogs-and-stories/2010-09-08/hillary-clinton-foreign-policy-speech-better-than-obama/p/

<http://b.scorecardresearch.com/b?c1=2&c2=6433482&c3=&c4=&c5=&c6=&c15=&cv=1.3&cj=1>

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 10:16 PM
To: H
Subject: Isabelle confirmed for 730

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 10:16 PM
To: H
Subject: Holbrooke called again.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: jake.sullivan
Sent: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 10:44 PM
To: preines H
Subject: Re: H: fyi. Sid

B6

I agree with Philippe that he should do some checking on this book, but I'm inclined to support you talking to him.

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

-----Original Message-----
From: "PIR" <preines>
Date: Thu, 9 Sep 2010 01:47:47
To: Evergreen<HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Reply-To: preines
Cc: Jake Sullivan<>
Subject: Re: H: fyi. Sid

No real harm, other than taking up your time. But no real upside either. Over the last decade you've only spoken to one or two people on the record for books, but have regretted dozens, many from people close to you. It's just been easier saying no to all. Doesn't make it a wise policy, but it's been SOP.

If you'd like I can a) check in with the author, see if he has others of stature talking to him; and b) tend to Sid

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Wed, 8 Sep 2010 21:31:01
To: 'preines>; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'<sullivanjj@state.gov>
Subject: Fw: H: fyi. Sid

Pls review and advise me about this. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Wed Sep 08 15:47:38 2010
Subject: H: fyi. Sid

B6

Jim Mann, who wrote The Rise of the Vulcans, is writing a history of Democrats and foreign policy since Vietnam. He's also a China expert, having covered China for the LA Times. He's favorably disposed to you, a serious person and concerned about the policies. I know him well. I think you ought to consider talking to him on the record for his book. I've enclosed his bio from Johns Hopkins SAIS , where he's on the faculty, and his email.

James Mann, B.A.photo, Mann <http://www.sais-jhu.edu/bin/d/w/mann.png>
Foreign Policy Institute Author-in-Residence Expertise Geographic Areas East Asia | China | Taiwan Issues American foreign policy | diplomacy | domestic influences on foreign policy | human rights | media and foreign policy | strategic and security issues | U.S. Congress and foreign policy Background and Education Was senior writer-in-residence at the Center for Strategic and International Studies; served as staff writer for the Los Angeles Times, including positions as Beijing bureau chief, national security correspondent and foreign affairs columnist; was staff writer for the New Haven Journal-Courier, The Washington Post, Philadelphia Inquirer and The Baltimore Sun; received the National Press Club Edwin M. Hood Award for diplomatic correspondence in 1993 and 1999, the Edward Weintal Prize for diplomatic reporting in 1999, the New York Public Library Helen Bernstein Award for best book of the year by a journalist in 2000 and the Asia-Pacific Award for best book about Asia in 2000; was finalist for the Lionel Gelber Prize for books on international relations in 2000 and the Arthur Ross Book Prize in 2005; is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations; formerly a guest scholar at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and fellow of the American Academy in Berlin; serves as guest commentator for television and radio networks; B.A., sociology, Harvard University Publications The Rebellion of Ronald Reagan: A History of the End of the Cold War (2009); The China Fantasy: How Our Leaders Explain Away Chinese Repression (2007); Rise of the Vulcans: The History of Bush's War Cabinet (2004); About Face: A History of America's Curious Relationship With China, From Nixon to Clinton (1999); Beijing Jeep (1989); "Congress and Taiwan" in Making China Policy (2001); numerous articles in The Atlantic Monthly, The New Republic and The Washington Post

-----Original Message-----
From: Jim Mann <[redacted]>
To: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Wed, Sep 8, 2010 3:30 pm
Subject: (no subject)

B6

Sid,

My requests for a book interview with the secretary of state are still going nowhere. I have no idea whether the reason is sheer bureaucracy (lots of requests)

or personal (someone didn't like something I wrote?).

I would think that the subject matter -- foreign policy

after the Vulcans -- is a natural one for her.

While it's not absolutely necessary,

it would certainly add insight. I don't know

if you can do anything to help, but if so,

I'd certainly appreciate it.

Best,

Jim

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, November 6, 2010 8:31 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Gender- Melanne's Comments on QDDR

HRC:

[Huma can you print for HRC]

Melanne is stepping through the QDDR and giving specific edits on each section to ensure the integration of gender.

In addition to that help, she shared her thoughts/concerns on the reorganization as it affects s/GWI. We already determined from your earlier feedback that S/GWI would maintain a direct report to S (I actually always thought that even with the reorganization of homes for many of the S offices, we still were maintaining a direct S/reporting so we are revisiting this issue writ-large for the next draft to you. For example, we now know statutorily that S/CT legislatively is a required S report).

That said, here is her narrative for your review for when we speak. I have embedded comments in caps in text after each graph where relevant.

---

TO: Anne-Marie Slaughter
FROM: Melanne Verveer
DATE: November 4, 2010
RE: Gender Integration in the QDDR

The Secretary has declared time and time again that the empowerment of women is "at the heart of the foreign policy of the United States." Our collective task is to realize this principle by integrating gender into the policies and programs of the State Department and USAID in an enduring way.

We are concerned that the current draft of the QDDR falls short of this call. In the existing draft, the Office of Global Women's Issues falls under a new Under Secretary for Civilian Security, Democracy and Human Rights while retaining the Ambassador-at-Large for Global Women's Issues who reports directly to the Secretary. This new structure misses the simple but important reality that women are half of the world's population and that the major security, economic and social challenges of this century cannot be solved without them. These issues cut across the work of the department and touch virtually all regions, though we place special emphasis on regions in which women and girls are most vulnerable, such as in countries experiencing conflict and transition. Locating the office within one bureau makes it impossible for the Office to implement its very charge — to integrate gender effectively into the work of the entire State Department.

Therefore, gender must be integrated throughout all of the regional and functional bureaus rather than located within one bureau. Women should be integral to all of our diplomatic efforts—from traditional bilateral and multilateral relationships, strategic dialogues, and public diplomacy, to our relations with civil society, community leaders and other non-state actors. Women are also important to consider in all of our policy initiatives, including global health, food security, climate change, economic issues, human rights, and peace and security. We must institute rigorous institutional mechanisms to ensure that all bureaus, both regional and functional, consider gender in diplomacy and development.

In order to integrate gender effectively throughout the work of the Department, we recommend the following approach to planning, budgeting, structure and evaluation:

Maintain visibility and focus on gender. Retain the Ambassador-at-Large for Global Women's Issues who reports to the Secretary. This position embodies our commitment to and advocacy for gender equality as an essential part of diplomacy and development and signals our understanding that this is important to the national security of the United States. In addition, the office advances a coherent and coordinated strategy on gender throughout the State Department and USAID. [DONE]

Ensure that gender is effectively addressed throughout all bureaus and missions. We recommend the following structural changes at State. First, make the Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary (PDAS) in all regional and functional bureaus responsible and accountable for their bureaus' work on gender. The Office of Global Women's Issues would serve as a resource to the PDAS on these issues. Second, assign specialized gender liaisons to regional bureaus for purposes of integration, where needed. Third, include training and capacity development for employees on gender issues (in both Foreign and Civil Service as well as for political appointees). Fourth, evaluate the PDAS in each bureau on gender integration in policies and programs (including, for example, as a component in the Performance Evaluation System). Similarly, require each Chief of Mission to be responsible and accountable for the mission's work on gender, to assign personnel with expertise to manage the work on gender, to require personnel to receive training on gender issues, and to be evaluated on this work. A parallel structure should be put in place at USAID, and our diplomacy and development work on gender should be coordinated and complimentary.

[THIS IS RECOMMENDATION, WITH SOME VARIATION, MADE FOR MANY AREAS – PUBLIC DIPLOMACY, MULTILATERAL AFFAIRS, AND OTHERS – CHALLENGE WILL BE TO IDENTIFY HOW TO ADDRESS EFFECTIVELY AND CREAT A PDAS JOB THAT IS MEANINGFUL GIVEN THE NEW RESPONSIBILITIES SOUGHT TO BE IMPOSED THROUGH THAT POSITION]

Include gender in strategic planning and budget allocation. We recommend continuing the requirement initiated last year that all bureaus include a plan for gender integration in their annual Strategic Plan and Budget proposal. Each bureau is required to describe how their policies and programs will improve gender equality and how that will strengthen their work more generally. They are also required, to the extent possible, to outline what portion of their policies and programs target or affect women and girls. [THIS ALREADY IS IN PLACE AND WOULD BE RETAINED]

Measure Impact. Develop indicators and long-term evaluation systems to measure the impact of programs on women and girls. There are efforts underway currently within F and at USAID to consider how to improve our measurement of impact on women and girls and to develop different and additional indicators where appropriate. [SAME AS IMMEDIATELY ABOVE – THIS IS ALREADY IN PROCESS]

---

Happy to discuss.

cdm

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 5:25 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: News Ticker: (Reuters) Israeli air strike kills five Gaza militants

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sat Dec 18 17:09:02 2010
Subject: News Ticker: (Reuters) Israeli air strike kills five Gaza militants

GAZA (Reuters) - An Israeli air strike killed five Palestinian militants in the Gaza Strip December 18, Israeli and Palestinian officials said. The Israeli military said in a statement that its aircraft "targeted and identified hitting a squad of terror operatives who were preparing to launch rockets towards Israeli territory". Palestinian hospital officials said the five were militants. Militant groups identified the five dead as members of the Islamic Jihad and Popular Resistance Committees.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: PIR <preines >
Sent: Thursday, September 9, 2010 8:33 AM
To: H; Jake Sullivan
Subject: Re: Correction

Yes, I'll go back and watch and listen and have fixed as necessary

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
To: Jake Sullivan
Subject: Correction
Sent: Sep 9, 2010 7:45 AM

Not that it matters, but several of the articles quote me as saying that the Koran burning is "distrustful". I'm not sure that's a word, and I thought I said "distressful". Can we fix?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 6:31 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: McCain's START amendment defeated 59-37 (U)

---

From: Davis, Timmy T
To: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; S_SpecialAssistants
Sent: Sat Dec 18 18:22:26 2010
Subject: Fw: McCain's START amendment defeated 59-37 (U)

FYI

---

From: Moore, Anna W
To: S_SpecialAssistants; SES_DutyDeputies; D(S)_Officers; D(L); P; EUR-Staff-Assistants-DL; NEA-Staff-Assistants-DL; H_SpecialAssistants; T_StaffAssistants; AVC-Staff-Assistants-DL; PA FO Group; R_Staff Assistants; USUN/W users-DL
Cc: SES-O
Sent: Sat Dec 18 18:16:21 2010
Subject: McCain's START amendment defeated 59-37 (U)

(U) Media report members of the Senate voted December 18 to defeat an amendment proposed by Senator McCain (R-AZ). The amendment called for language that recognizes a relationship between offensive and defensive weapons to be taken out of the START treaty's preamble. If passed, the amendment would have sent the treaty back to U.S. and Russian negotiators.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Ebeling, Betsy [redacted]
Sent: Thursday, September 9, 2010 9:58 AM
To: H
Subject: and so it begins.....

Post-Daley circus gets started early

Easier to count those who aren't running than those who are

By Rick Pearson, Hal Dardick, Tribune reporters

11:17 PM CDT, September 8, 2010

The post-Daley era in Chicago politics began Wednesday with all of the promise of baseball's Opening Day — no winners, no losers and everyone proclaiming they have a shot at the crown.

With Mayor Richard Daley saying he would not endorse a successor for the Feb. 22 city election, various political factions engaged in private meetings and a flurry of phone calls aimed at separating the contenders from the pretenders.

"There will be a lot of candidates," Daley said after his first City Council meeting since announcing he would not seek a seventh term. "Look at the City Council. All 50 are candidates right now. They all want to be candidates for mayor and why not? This the best job in America, right here."

In the anteroom behind the City Council chambers, the scene was controlled chaos as more than a dozen aldermen — white, black and Latino — happily stepped out of the meeting to give interviews to anyone who wanted to listen about how they could be the city's next mayor.

But the prospective candidates — following the old political adage that it's "better to be looked over than overlooked" — weren't limited to City Hall.

In Washington, White House chief of staff Rahm Emanuel was touted by another Chicagoan, President Barack Obama's political guru David Axelrod, as having the skills and personality to be a big-city mayor.

Amid all the early jockeying, bluffing and bullying, veteran Ald. Richard Mell, 33rd, outlined the nuts and bolts reality of mounting a mayoral campaign with only weeks before the Nov. 22 deadline for submitting petitions.

"Someone's got to have some serious money. This isn't something you just decide," Mell said. "It takes a full-scale ward-by-ward operation to identify your votes and get them out to vote."

Mell also talked about the qualities to look for in a winning candidate — someone who will be a "unifier" and "can't be looked at as looking at one segment of the city."

Still, many politicians were beginning their assessment by gauging the mood of their political base.

"I don't know if it's as important that it's an African-American candidate as it is about a candidate that is going to be fair to the African-American community," said Ald. Walter Burnett, 27th, head of the council's black caucus, which met in private at the Hotel Allegro across from City Hall.

"For anyone to run for mayor of the city of Chicago there has to be a groundswell of people in the city to support them ... Everyone has an opportunity."

At City Hall, amid the swarm of politicians and reporters, U.S. Rep. Bobby Rush, a South Side Democrat, said it was "critical" to try to find an African-American contender who would work for the black community's interests. But the council's black caucus agreed only to try to come up with a list of topics, such as improving education, that prospective candidates should address.

Latino council members met for lunch and agreed to meet again within the next few weeks, giving potential candidates time to develop a presentation to make to them.

"If there's a Hispanic that runs, he or she will probably get the majority of the Hispanic vote," said Ald. Danny Solis, 25th.

"I think more than likely it probably, if you look at the numbers, it won't be a Hispanic in the runoff," Solis said. "But then I think we can play a very important role" in backing one of the remaining candidates.

But such sentiments didn't deter one of the city's most prominent Latino politicians from declaring that he plans to run. City Clerk Miguel del Valle told the Tribune he planned to make a formal announcement "down the road."

Mell and many others expect the field for the February city election will be too fragmented for any candidate to reach the winning margin of 50 percent plus one vote. If there is no outright winner, the top two vote-getters proceed to an April 5 runoff election.

One prominent Northwest Side committeeman, who asked not to be identified because of the early stage of the campaigns, said the measure of those candidates who are real and those who are seeking an ego boost can be measured in two numbers: 25,000 and $7 million.

Though 12,500 signatures are needed for the February primary, politicians routinely get double the number to ensure they make the ballot. As for $7 million, the committeeman said, about $4 million would be needed to ensure a first or second place finish on Feb. 22, followed by a campaign of about $3 million for the April runoff.

"I'm getting a lot of calls about having lunch," said the committeeman. "I've told them to call me back when they get the signatures and then we can talk about fundraising."

Ald. Patrick Levar, 45th, who is not running for mayor, said this power vacuum reminds him of when Mayor Harold Washington died and Eugene Sawyer was picked to replace him.

"There's a lot of people who are going to be jockeying for position, but I've learned over the years to sit and listen and see who can put the different coalitions together," said Levar, who is also the Northwest Side ward's Democratic committeeman. "Whoever can raise the amount of money and put the coalition together is the person who is going to win."

While many politicians were starting those discussions, some key Democratic committeemen said they hadn't heard from Emanuel, one of the most prominent potential candidates.

Emanuel, a former top political aide to Daley and Northwest Side congressman, has previously said he'd like to be mayor but has avoided the spotlight since Daley's announcement.

Robert Gibbs, the White House press secretary, told reporters aboard Air Force One that he expected Emanuel to "take some time to think about what he wants to do with his future."

But Axelrod, who previously served as Daley's political adviser, told ABC News that if Emanuel decided to leave the White House for a mayoral bid, "the president will support that decision."

Saying mayors are "larger than life personalities," Axelrod said Emanuel "has that combination of skills and that personality and mindset to be a success if he chooses to go that route."

RELEASE
IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, December 18, 2010 8:02 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Ninth Circuit Armenian Genocide case

Importance: High

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Koh, Harold Hongju
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Macmanus, Joseph E
Cc: Gordon, Philip H
Sent: Sat Dec 18 18:02:52 2010
Subject: FW: Ninth Circuit Armenian Genocide case

Jake, Joe:

Can you let S know about the attached? This will be coming to her in the form of an info memo, but since FM Davutoglu mentioned it in his call to her on Friday, we wanted to get this to her asap.

Thanks
Harold

B5

Page Denied

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 9, 2010 10:07 AM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: FW: (AFP) Pastor says may halt Koran burning if White House asks

As we just discussed, below is the quote I referred to from pastor in Florida. [redacted] B5

[redacted]

Let me know if you need me to do anything else.

jm

---

From: Hensman, Chris D
Sent: Thursday, September 09, 2010 10:02 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: (AFP) Pastor says may halt Koran burning if White House asks

Pastor says may halt Koran burning if White House asks

(AFP) – 26 minutes ago

WASHINGTON — A Florida pastor at the center of a global storm over plans to burn hundreds of Korans said Thursday he would likely call off the event if asked to by the Obama administration.

Terry Jones, head of the Dove World Outreach Center, told USA Today he had not been contacted by the White House, Pentagon or State Department about Saturday's planned ceremony on the anniversary of the September 11 attacks.

If he were "that would cause us definitely to think it over. That's what we're doing now. I don't think a call from them is something we would ignore," Jones told the daily.

US President Barack Obama on Thursday warned the burning ceremony would be a "recruitment bonanza" for Al-Qaeda, which carried out the 2001 attacks on the United States in which almost 3,00 people died.

"You know, you could have serious violence in places like Pakistan or Afghanistan," Obama told ABC television in an interview.

"This could increase the recruitment of individuals who'd be willing to blow themselves up in American cities, or European cities," he said.

US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton has also condemned the plans as "disgraceful," while military leaders have warned it could endanger troops serving in Afghanistan and Pakistan, both Muslim countries.

The gun-toting pastor said the aim of Saturday's three-hour evening event in Gainesville, Florida, was to send a message to radical Islamists that "it is possibly time for us in a new way to actually stand up and confront terrorism."

But his tiny church of about 50 members has triggered fears that a violent wave of Islamic anger could ripple around the globe, similar to past controversies centered around Islam.

Danish cartoonist Kurt Westergaard, who sparked Muslim outrage in 2006 with a drawing of the Prophet Mohammed, told German media that satire like his was "provocation. Provocation should lead to reflection, to enlightenment, to knowledge. In this case, this is really not the case."

Copyright © 2010 AFP.

Chris Hensman
Special Assistant
Office of the Under Secretary of State for Public Diplomacy and Public Affairs (R)
U.S. Department of State
2201 C St, NW Rm 5932
W: 202.647.9130| M: [redacted] | ✉: hensmancd@state.gov B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 5:12 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) All 9 killed in Afghan crash are American-US official

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Afghanistan; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Tue Sep 21 17:09:20 2010
Subject: (Reuters) All 9 killed in Afghan crash are American-US official

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - All nine of the NATO troops killed in a helicopter crash September 21 in southern Afghanistan were Americans, a U.S. defense official told Reuters. The NATO-led force had not previously disclosed the nationalities of the victims, but said there were no reports of enemy fire before the crash.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 9, 2010 10:08 AM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: FW: Original Story from USA TODAY

More, original story.

From: Hensman, Chris D
Sent: Thursday, September 09, 2010 10:06 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: Original Story from USA TODAY

http://www.usatoday.com/news/religion/2010-09-08-quran-burning-florida_N.htm

Obama weighs in as plan to burn Qurans sparks debate

Updated 2h 8m ago

By Larry Copeland and Rick Hampson, USA TODAY

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — The Constitution won't let you yell "fire" in a crowded theater if there isn't one. It won't let you utter "fighting words" with impunity. But scholars agree it will let a pistol-packing minister of a tiny fundamentalist church outrage countless Muslims by burning the Quran, a book he says he hasn't read.
Florida preacher Terry Jones prepared for a bonfire of the Qurans on Saturday — the ninth anniversary of the 9/11 terror attacks— despite protests from the White House, the Vatican, the U.S. commander in Afghanistan, fellow Christian evangelicals and veterans' groups.

"As of right now," Jones said Wednesday, "we are not convinced that backing down is the right thing."

In an interview with USA TODAY he said he had not been contacted by the White House, State Department or Pentagon. If he were, he said, "that would cause us to definitely think it over. That's what we're doing now. I don't think a call from them is something we would ignore."

Jones' plans for "International Burn a Koran Day" at his Dove World Outreach Center provoked a warning this week from Gen. David Petraeus that U.S. troops in the field could be endangered.

President Obama became the latest to comment in an interview aired Thursday on ABC's Good Morning America. The president called the plan a "stunt" that could "greatly endanger our young men and women in uniform who are in Iraq, who are in Afghanistan."

"This is a recruitment bonanza for Al Qaeda," he added.

"We're concerned with troops and missionaries ourselves," Jones said. "Our question is when do we stop backing down. ... In certain areas of our country, we have lost our backbone. We have backed down too much."

Wayne Sapp, an associate pastor, said the church is "still in prayer over the whole thing" and could cancel. "God is leading us right up to the moment. It's no different than Abraham and his son. God didn't tell him, 'Go right up to the point where you might sacrifice him.' He wanted him to be fully committed. We're prepared to do what we're called to do."

The church's plan presents an excruciating dilemma for Americans, many of whom regard freedom of expression as a sort of secular religion. But a nation that allows the symbolic burning of its own flag cannot stop the burning of a book, says Stephen Gillers, a New York University law professor.

"From a legal point of view, Gen. Petraeus' prediction (of violence) is too ambiguous to support suppressing the conduct," he said. "Were the government to try to stop it, it would lose."

Still, he said, the facts of the case are troubling: "It's hard to find a direct analogy to this in U.S. constitutional history."

Although many Americans, including Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton, expressed frustration that a small fringe group could command such attention, ignoring Jones was not an option.

Not after Petraeus warned that "images of the burning of a Quran would undoubtedly be used by extremists ... to inflame public opinion and incite violence." Not after the Vatican accused Jones of "an outrageous and grave gesture." Not after Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour, chairman of the Republican Governors Association, said, "I don't think there's any excuse for it."

Alan Wolfe, director of Boston College's Center for Religion and American Public Life, said Washington shouldn't ignore Jones: "This requires public diplomacy by the administration to point out how repugnant this is to most Americans."

The inconvenient Constitution

The incident was a reminder of how inconvenient the Constitution can be.

"The First Amendment, as it's been interpreted, would probably not win if it were put up to a vote," said Gillers, whose media law class discussed the case. "It is very hard to explain to people why this sort of conduct should be permitted."

If Americans schooled in civics have trouble understanding, how much harder is it for people in Ramallah or Khartoum or Jakarta? Wolfe was sanguine: "Enough people in the Muslim world understand that this is a fringe group."

Scott Appleby, a Notre Dame religious historian, acknowledges puzzlement, in a nation where artists and performers routinely ridicule organized religion, over Islam's exquisite sensitivity to disrespect for Allah, his word or his prophet, Mohammed.

The incident recalls a controversy in 2005, when 12 editorial cartoons, most depicting the prophet, were published in a Danish newspaper. After they were reprinted in other countries, protests spread across the Muslim world. Some demonstrators were killed and several Danish embassies were set on fire or vandalized.

Appleby explained that while not all Christians read the Bible literally, virtually all Muslims believe every word in the Quran came directly from Allah, as revealed to Mohammed by the angel Gabriel.

Coming amid discord over an Islamic center and mosque proposed near the site of the 9/11 attacks in New York, the Quran controversy gives many Americans something to agree on — and rally against, Wolfe said. "Even conservative Christians who might not like Muslims understand the importance of freedom of speech and religion."

Appleby calls the controversy "a mirror" for Americans who "revere their Bible, even if they've never opened it." Followers of all religions, he said, "can see what another religion's sacred text means to them, because you know what yours means to you."

Some wonder whether Jones is motivated less by fundamentalism than opportunism. "For people like this, this is a gold mine," Wolfe said of the furor. "What an opportunity to rise up from obscurity!"

Sapp, the associate pastor, asked, "When have you seen a congregation of 40 to 50 people with something they're doing get worldwide attention like this?"

As Sapp spoke with a reporter outside the church, a man walked up and handed him $20 for Jones' effort. "I'm a Roman Catholic," Tommy Heenan said. "I don't know if I've ever seen a Roman Catholic cut anybody's head off, slice somebody's throat or abuse women. ... I don't know if Rev. Jones is correct, but we know where he stands."

Jones denied he was in it for profit or publicity: "I would not put my life on the line just for publicity. When we decided this, we had no idea this much attention, this much publicity would happen." As for profits, he said, "It's probably caused some members to leave."

Eddie Houk, who lives 300 yards from the church, said news coverage has created a monster. "If it wasn't for the media, it wouldn't go anywhere. Why would 40 to 50 people, if that, be able to make such a big impression on the whole wide world over one little thing?"

His frustration was shared by Clinton, who told the Council on Foreign Relations it was "regrettable that a pastor ... can make this outrageous and distrustful, disgraceful plan and get the world's attention. But that's the world we live in right now."

Jones, meanwhile, was besieged with calls from all quarters to cancel his protest.

Jones met with Imam Muhammad Musri, president of the Islamic Society of Central Florida, whom Jones called "very nice, very friendly, very respectful. In a lot of areas, not the religious area, we were in agreement on many subjects."

"We came to have a peaceful conversation with the pastor, to hear his grievance, to ask him to follow his own Scripture about his enemies," Musri told reporters. "His Scripture teaches him to love his enemies."

The office of evangelist Franklin Graham, who was traveling in Alaska, said he tried unsuccessfully to reach Jones by phone to ask him to cancel the burning. Graham, son of the Rev. Billy Graham, has said that although he loves Muslims, Islam is "evil" and cannot lead to salvation.

Joe Davis, spokesman for the Veterans of Foreign Wars and a Gulf War veteran, called Jones selfish for exposing Americans overseas to danger: "If this guy really wants to make a statement, why doesn't he go to Afghanistan in the middle of a market square and then douse the Quran on fire? Then he would have a true vested interest in his actions."

Todd Bowers, a former Marine officer and now spokesman for Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of America, said it's costly just to be accused of offending religious sensibilities in some Muslim nations. Bowers said his unit was in Afghanistan last year when the Taliban spread rumors that U.S. forces had desecrated a Quran and thrown a dead dog into a mosque, even though "no one was even patrolling in that village at that time."

The rumors sparked protests involving hundreds of demonstrators. Shots were fired, killing an Afghan police officer and a Marine, Bowers said. Afterward, "we would do patrols and realized no one was talking to us," he said. "It set us back months."

Jones' relatively few defenders included Chuck Morse, a Massachusetts-based conservative writer and talk-show host. He said opposition to the Quran burning showed how successful "Islamic fundamentalists have been ... in their international campaign of threats and terror. ... The world is now cowering in fear."

He said protesters who burned a Bible or a Quran in the West "need not worry that they will be beheaded. They know that American or Christian leaders would not sentence them to death, nor would Western leaders use the protest to incite violence in the populace at large. And this is the basic point of Pastor Jones' protest."

'It's just wrong'

The Dove World Outreach Center sits on 20 acres in a residential area 7 miles northwest of downtown Gainesville, a city of 125,000 that is home to the University of Florida.

Jones, who has been with the church since it was founded about 25 years ago, says he's received more than 100 death threats, some extremely graphic. He's started wearing a .40-caliber pistol strapped to his hip.

His second-floor office is sparsely decorated, with a painting of Presidents Washington, Lincoln and George W. Bush on one wall, and a poster for the Mel Gibson 1995 movie, Braveheart, on another. (Jones has a YouTube video series called The Braveheart Show.)

Scores of Qurans, some ordered by his supporters from Amazon and shipped directly to the church, were piled on a table in another room.

Outside, three signs on the road in front of Dove World read: "Islam ... is of the ... Devil."

Some neighbors are not happy with the church's plans for Saturday. "Totally immoral," said Shirley Turner, a retired teacher. "It's bigoted. It's just wrong to burn the holy book of any faith. ... They've had the devil sign up for over a year."

On Wednesday morning police went door-to-door with fliers to alert residents of a driver's license checkpoint to be set up at an intersection near the church. The flier warns: "In the event of a significant incident occurring in the area ... the sole entrance to your neighborhood will be shut down, and there will be no way in or out for an undetermined amount of time."

Shirley Turner said she had planned to leave for the day Saturday, but now will hunker down. "I'm not going to be scared into leaving my home. I hope he (Jones) gets a message from God that says, 'Don't do this!' "

Chris Hensman
Special Assistant
Office of the Under Secretary of State for Public Diplomacy and Public Affairs (R)
U.S. Department of State
2201 C St, NW Rm 5932
W: 202.647.9130| M: [redacted] | ✉: hensmancd@state.gov B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 5:21 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Mideast peacemakers cancel conference amid rancor

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA; NEWS-EUR; NEWS-IO
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III; SES-O_Shift-I; Bitter, Rena
Sent: Tue Sep 21 16:40:42 2010
Subject: (AP) Mideast peacemakers cancel conference amid rancor

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - The Quartet of Mideast peacemakers shepherding newly started direct Israeli-Palestinian negotiations abruptly canceled a planned a news conference at the United Nations, after failing to reach agreement on who would appear on behalf of the group.

Senior diplomats from the Quartet (United States, the European Union, the United Nations and Russia) met on the sidelines of the United Nations anti-poverty meeting to discuss a way forward in the negotiations, which have made little visible progress since they resumed earlier this month and are at risk of collapsing.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, October 16, 2010 3:50 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: (AP) Family spokesman says American businessman jailed in Iran for two years has been released

Reza teghavi
Businessman from Los angeles jailed in same prison as hikers since 2008. Was accused of giving money to anti govt group.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Oct 16 14:23:02 2010
Subject: Re: (AP) Family spokesman says American businessman jailed in Iran for two years has been released

Who is it?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Oct 16 14:21:45 2010
Subject: Fw: (AP) Family spokesman says American businessman jailed in Iran for two years has been released

---

From: Vu, Anny T
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sat Oct 16 14:03:08 2010
Subject: (AP) Family spokesman says American businessman jailed in Iran for two years has been released (Headline only).

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 9, 2010 10:28 AM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: FW: Indian Home Minister Appeals to Media to Help Maintain Communal Harmony in View of U.S. Pastor Threatening to Burn Quran

FYI, as Bob reported this morning. Note last sentence about action by "US Authorities", [redacted]

[redacted] B5

Press Information Bureau
Government of India
Ministry of Home Affairs
09-September-2010 11:44 IST

Home Minister Appeals to Media to Help Maintain Communal Harmony in View of U.S. Pastor Threatening to Burn Quran

The Union Home Minister Shri P.Chidambaram has appealed to media to help maintain communal peace and harmony in the wake of reports of a pastor in the United States threatening to burn the holy Quran. In a statement issued here today, the Union Home Minister said that the act is calculated to increase strife between different religious groups. Following is the text of his statement :

"There are reports of a pastor in the United States threatening to burn the Quran on September 11, 2010.

The US authorities have strongly condemned the statement of the pastor. Religious leaders all over the world have also condemned his proposed action.

We condemn the action of the pastor. It is totally unbecoming of anyone who claims to be a man of religion. It is obviously calculated to increase bitterness and strife between different religious groups. No one who is interested in maintaining harmony and peace among different sections of the people can condone such action.

We hope that the US authorities will take strong action to prevent such an outrage being committed. While we await the action of the US authorities, we would appeal to the media in India – both print and visual media – to refrain from telecasting visuals or publishing photographs of the deplorable act. We would also appeal to the media to exercise great restraint over the next couple of days and help in maintaining communal peace and harmony."

*****

OK/KS

India Condemns U.S. Pastor's Plan to Burn the Quran, Urges Media Restraint

By Bibhudatta Pradhan - Sep 9, 2010

India "condemns" a plan by a Florida pastor to burn copies of the Koran and the government hopes the U.S. will take strong action against him, Home Minister Palaniappan Chidambaram said in New Delhi.

Terry Jones, pastor of the Dove World Outreach Center in Gainesville has been criticized by U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and the Vatican for his plan to burn the Muslim holy book on Sept. 11. General David Petraeus, commander of international coalition forces in Afghanistan, said the act would endanger U.S. troops.

Chidambaram urged Indian newspapers not to publish photographs of what he said would be a "deplorable act" and asked television channels to refrain from broadcasting images. The media must show restraint over the "next couple of days and help in maintaining communal peace and harmony," the minister said, reading a government statement.

The proposed burning "is totally unbecoming of anyone who claims to be a man of religion," Chidambaram said. About 13 percent of India's 1.2 billion people are Muslim.

Facing mounting criticism around the world and at home, Jones said yesterday that supporters have sent him copies of the Koran to burn and he was not convinced "that backing down is the right thing to do," Associated Press reported.

To contact the reporter on this story: Bibhudatta Pradhan in New Delhi at bpradhan@bloomberg.net

Chris Hensman
Special Assistant
Office of the Under Secretary of State for Public Diplomacy and Public Affairs (R)
U.S. Department of State
2201 C St, NW Rm 5932
W: 202.647.9130| M: [redacted] ✉: hensmancd@state.gov

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: PIR <preines [redacted] B6
Sent: Thursday, September 9, 2010 10:55 AM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Correction

You're right, it was AP that got it wrong which is why you saw it repeated in several stories. Having it corrected.

Speaking of AP, today is [redacted]'s birthday, would be a nice touch to SIyDial him a birthday greeting. I'll give the # to Huma and Lauren (he's not coming on trip so you won't see him) B6

-----Original Message-----
From: "PIR" <preines [redacted]
Date: Thu, 9 Sep 2010 12:33:09
To: Evergreen<HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Jake Sullivan< [redacted]
Reply-To: preines [redacted]
Subject: Re: Correction

Yes, I'll go back and watch and listen and have fixed as necessary

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
To: Jake Sullivan
Subject: Correction
Sent: Sep 9, 2010 7:45 AM

Not that it matters, but several of the articles quote me as saying that the Koran burning is "distrustful". I'm not sure that's a word, and I thought I said "distressful". Can we fix?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, December 19, 2010 6:25 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Personal Note

My best time is [redacted] so 6pm on; [redacted] at 8 so am free also from then on and can come over if you want to do in person B6

Cdm

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sat Dec 18 11:42:42 2010
Subject: Re: Personal Note

And well-deserved! When can you talk tomorrow?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Dec 17 22:26:50 2010
Subject: Fw: Personal Note

Nice

---

From: Hanrahan, Karen J
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Dec 17 18:26:43 2010
Subject: Personal Note

Cheryl,

One sappy statement before I fly. Your involvement in the QDDR process has always been extremely helpful. Most of the best QDDR chairs meetings were those in which you participated, due in large part to the rigor and critical thought you brought to every issue. From the beginning of the process, your critical analysis and thoughtfulness in these meetings made all of us think more deeply. I have been grateful for that approach many times throughout the QDDR.

We've come a long way since that first meeting in which I described this as a "capabilities review" and organizational change exercise – all met with some frustration or blank stares. I think we've ended this phase on a great note. The amount of positive feedback we've received and the eagerness to start implementation are great signs heading into implementation.

You are clearly one of the hardest working people in this building and have done so much to define and implement the Secretary's vision on so many things. So thanks for everything you've done on the QDDR and for everything else you do.

As discussed today, I'm not far away if you need anything.

Karen

Karen J. Hanrahan

QDDR Chief Operating Officer

Office of Deputy Secretary Jacob J. Lew

US Department of State

2201 C Street NW

Washington, DC 20520

HanrahanKJ@State.gov

Office (202) 647-9746

Cell [redacted] B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Otero, Maria <OteroM2@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 5:52 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Chris Smith/Washington Post

Hillary:
Per our conversation yesterday, please see Tim Wirth's response to Chris Smith's op-ed last Saturday in the WPost. Others from the Global Leaders Council on Reproductive Health chaired by Mary Robinson (I am an ex officio member)are also responding to the article.

Onward!
Maria

---

From: Elisa Travisono Lynch [redacted] B6
To: Otero, Maria
Sent: Tue Sep 21 16:57:34 2010
Subject: Chris Smith/Washington Post

Maria: Per our discussion today, I sent the attached to the Washington Post on Monday. Now we just have to hope that they print it!

Good to see you and hope to see you again soon. T

In his Sunday op-ed, Chris Smith politicized the broadly-accepted Millennium Development Goals (MDGs).

Contrary to Smith's assertions, access to legal abortion will not be on the agenda of the MDG Summit this week in New York. The key UN document on this issue makes clear that nations have the right to set their own abortion laws. Instead, world leaders will focus on how to rid the world of extreme poverty and hunger and to make dramatic improvement to the health of women and children around the globe.

Ensuring access to health services, including modern family planning, can play a critically important role in saving the lives of women. In fact, it can reduce 40% of maternal deaths worldwide. More than two hundred million women in the developing world want access to family planning, but can't get it. This has a dramatic impact, increasing deaths during childbirth, leaving millions of newborns behind.

Listening to the voices of women in the developing world, not injecting American domestic politics into the MDG Summit, is the surest way to promote the goals on which we can all agree.

Timothy E. Wirth, Washington
The writer is president of the United Nations Foundation.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, December 19, 2010 8:46 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: News Ticker: (AP) Sacked Iran FM unaware he was to be fired

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Sun Dec 19 05:03:34 2010
Subject: News Ticker: (AP) Sacked Iran FM unaware he was to be fired

TEHRAN (AP) - Iran's recently fired foreign minister told a local news agency that he had not been aware of plans to remove him from his post when he left on a mission to west Africa. Manouchehr Mottaki told Mehr news agency, in a report issued December 19, that he was "never informed" about the dismissal while on his trip. Mottaki called the dismissal during the mission "un-diplomatic and offensive."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 9, 2010 12:50 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Daily beast story on home run speech yesterday

Is one of the top five stories on Real Clear World, a site that collects most important things to read, under headline "Hillary on Top of U.S. Foreign Policy." And the full speech is also a link on Real Clear World.

I freely admit that I'm procrastinating from QDDR writing by surfing the web .... AM

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 6:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Invite for Kaia Lenhart GMMB

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Huang, Cindy Y
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Smith, Jeannemarie E; Haslach, Patricia M
Sent: Tue Sep 21 16:56:55 2010
Subject: FW: Invite for Kaia Lenhart GMMB

Okay, I promise not to send you all the comments on the event, but this one is particularly relevant -- S's commitment has the power to spark a movement (see below).

-----Original Message-----
From: Kaia Lenhart [mailto: [redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 4:50 PM
To: Huang, Cindy Y
Cc: Alyson McColl; Katrine Pritchard; DuBord, Damon A
Subject: RE: Invite for Kaia Lenhart GMMB

Cindy and Damon...Will write more later, though wanted to congratulate you both on a grand slam day today. Really impressive all-around...the video, the site, and most importantly, Secretary Clinton's remarks and commitment to nutrition. Just what the movement needs! Hooray...Kaia

Kaia Lenhart Senior Vice President

[redacted] B6

+gmmb cause the effect

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Crowley, Philip J <CrowleyPJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 9, 2010 2:18 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Mills, Cheryl D; Verma, Richard R; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: Those who have denounced

Importance: High

Madame Secretary, here is what we have found thus far in terms of Republican voices encouraging the pastor to reconsider.

PJ

Denounced the Koran Burning:

Sen. McCain on Twitter:
"Pastor Jones' threats to burn the Koran will put American service men/women in danger - for their sake please don't do it!"
(http://twitter.com/SenJohnMcCain)

Sarah Palin on Twitter and Facebook: "Koran Burning Is Insensitive, Unnecessary; Pastor Jones, Please Stand Down"
(http://twitter.com/SarahPalinUSA)
See Facebook statement: http://www.facebook.com/note.php?note_id=427813493434

Rep. Boehner on ABC News: "just because you have a right to do something in America does not mean it is the right thing to do....We're a nation of religious freedom. We're also a nation of tolerance. And I think in the name of tolerance, people ought to really think about the kind of actions they're taking...I just think that it's not wise to do this in the face of what our country really represents," said Boehner.
http://news.smh.com.au/breaking-news-world/mccain-pleads-against-koran-burning-20100910-153g0.html

Gov. Barbour via ABC News: ""I do not think well of the idea of burning anybody's Koran, or Bible, Book of Mormon or anything else. ... I don't think there's any excuse for it,"
(http://blogs.abcnews.com/thenote/2010/09/gov-barbour-no-excuse-for-koran-burning-stirring-up-anti-muslim-sentiments-a-distraction-for-gop.html)

Gov. Pawlenty via Minnesota Public Radio Report: "Gov. Tim Pawlenty says he doesn't think burning the Quran is a good idea, but he's not specifically calling on a Florida pastor to cancel a planned weekend protest. The Republican governor, who is viewed as a likely presidential candidate in 2012, commented on the Quran controversy today at an airport news conference before leaving on an Asian trade mission. Pawlenty said that people have a legal right to burn books, but that doesn't mean it's wise. He stopped short of saying the burning shouldn't go forward."
(http://minnesota.publicradio.org/collections/special/columns/polinaut/archive/2010/09/pawlenty_says_q.shtml)

Former Gov. Romney via Politico: "Burning the Quran is wrong on every level," the former Massachusetts governor said in a statement to POLITICO. "It puts troops in danger and it violates a founding principle of our Republic."

(http://www.politico.com/blogs/bensmith/0910/Romney_against_Quran_burning.html)

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, October 16, 2010 4:00 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: Kerry

Looks like he will go to Juba and Khartoum next week.

I recommend that you call him so we can read it out.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Feltman, Jeffrey D <FeltmanJD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 9, 2010 7:19 PM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: Qatar

I am out of the office on travel from COB 9/9 until sometime on 9/17. Then I will be on travel again from 9/18 until sometime either 9/29 or 9/30. I will check messages on this system periodically.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 9, 2010 7:46 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Tomorrow am

The plan now is to do the reconciliation mtg at 1015 and then the EJK mtg at 11.

Are you okay doing the first and then having someone else stand in on the second? Problem is that Jim, Bill, and Jack are out tomorrow. So not clear who it would be - perhaps Rich?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, September 9, 2010 7:48 PM
To: H; 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: RE: [redacted] B6

did she show up?
she might have been late with her last client _____
From: H
Sent: Thursday, September 09, 2010 7:14 PM
To: Huma Abedin; 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: [redacted]

She's not here yet. Can you pls check to see she's still coming. Thx.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, November 6, 2010 7:19 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) UN rejects south Sudan calls for peacekeepers

From: Moore, Anna W
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sat Nov 06 19:12:26 2010
Subject: FW: (Reuters) UN rejects south Sudan calls for peacekeepers

ADDIS ABABA (Reuters) – The United Nations rejected calls by south Sudan to send peacekeepers and set up a buffer zone along the country's tense north-south border ahead of a southern vote on independence next year. "There will not be UN peacekeepers on the buffer zone, it's unrealistic," Alain le Roy, UN Undersecretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, told journalists shortly after concluding a meeting with representatives from the African Union and several other countries in the Ethiopian capital. "The common borderline is too wide and (it) is not realistic to deploy troops," he added.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 21, 2010 10:19 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) BRICs to propose UN resolution favorable to Iran

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-WHA; NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-China; NEWS-Russia; NEWS-SCA; NEWS-IO
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Tue Sep 21 22:14:05 2010
Subject: (Reuters) BRICs to propose UN resolution favorable to Iran

NEW YORK (Reuters) - The BRIC nations want the United Nations to rebuke countries that resort to unilateral sanctions not approved by the U.N. Security Council, Brazilian Foreign Minister Amorim said September 21.

A resolution on that theme, if approved by the U.N. General Assembly, could contribute to erode the legitimacy of additional sanctions imposed by the United States and other Western powers against Iran's nuclear program.

Amorim said the BRIC group, which includes Brazil, Russia, India and China, discussed the proposed resolution during a meeting of foreign ministers on September 21 in New York.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, October 16, 2010 5:50 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Why Taghavi was released

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Dibble, Philo L
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Catalano, Elisa
Sent: Sat Oct 16 17:46:49 2010
Subject: Why Taghavi was released

I understand S is asking. We won't know for sure until he is out and [redacted] B6

[redacted]

This should remain non-public info, obviously.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 9, 2010 9:42 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Haaretz) Peres to Abbas: Netanyahu is a trustworthy partner

From: Moore, Anna W
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Thu Sep 09 18:41:57 2010
Subject: (Haaretz) Peres to Abbas: Netanyahu is a trustworthy partner

Palestinian president calls Israeli counterpart to offer Rosh Hashanah greetings; Peres urges Abbas not to abandon peace talks.

Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas called President Shimon Peres to offer greetings for the Jewish holiday of Rosh Hashanah. During the telephone conversation, Peres pleaded with Abbas to "trust [Prime Minister Benjamin] Netanyahu."

Against the backdrop of recently relaunched direct peace negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians, Peres urged the Palestinian president "not to abandon the talks before peace is achieved. There is no one more suited than you to achieve peace for your people, and for the entire region."

Abbas and other senior Palestinian negotiators have threatened to quit the U.S.-backed negotiations if Israel should resume construction in West Bank settlements. Last November, Netanyahu declared a 10-month moratorium on construction in settlements, but the freeze is set to expire at the end of this month, and it is not yet clear whether it will be renewed.

"Even if things don't appear perfect," Peres told Abbas, "the path toward peace and an independent Palestinian state is certainly preferable to an ongoing conflict and bloodshed. Even if there will be crises and disagreements, and the road will seem imperfect, I'm sure that new and creative solutions can be achieved."

Abbas replied that "we're serious and our goal is to achieve a peace agreement as soon as possible." To this Peres responded saying "I'm sure Netanyahu is a trustworthy partner."

Earlier, Abbas spoke with Netanyahu by phone. The two leaders offered mutual greetings for the holidays, the Muslim Eid el Fitr and Jewish Rosh Hashanah.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 10:03 AM
To: H
Subject: Ralph thomson

I solved the mystery on ralph thomson, the ceo of international business catalysts, who sent you letter and mentioned his export conference this fall. You met him at the business roundtable lunch lorraine hariton organized on july 16th for you and bob hormats. Ralph was invited because they include all past ACE winners on the invitation list (he won in 2007) and he runs a small/medium size business which is a group they target for these roundtables. Lorraines office is in touch with him on who would be appropriate to attend his conference.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, October 16, 2010 6:56 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) New date sought for Paris peace summit

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O
Sent: Sat Oct 16 18:13:18 2010
Subject: (Reuters) New date sought for Paris peace summit

JERUSALEM (Reuters) - A planned Israeli-Palestinian summit due to be held in Paris by the end of the month has been rescheduled, the Israeli prime minister's office said on October 16, a sign of increased strain over stalled peace talks. French President Sarkozy invited Prime Minister Netanyahu, Palestinian President Abbas and Egyptian President Mubarak to meet before the end of October, although an exact date for the summit had not been set. "Following joint consultations it has been agreed to set a new date for the preparatory meeting," a statement from Netanyahu's office said, adding there was no chance of holding it on Oct 21, which was previously thought to be possible. "We are looking for a new date that works for everybody, although there is nothing firm scheduled yet," an Israeli government official told Reuters.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 11:05 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) U.S. VP Biden visits Iraq as troops withdraw

---

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Iraq; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Mon Aug 30 11:04:13 2010
Subject: (Reuters) U.S. VP Biden visits Iraq as troops withdraw

BAGHDAD (Reuters) - Vice President Biden arrived in Iraq on August 30 as U.S. troops prepared to end combat operations on August 31.

Biden was expected to hold talks with Iraqi leaders during a period of political deadlock, almost six months after an inconclusive election in March, over forming the country's next government.

His visit comes at a time when Iraq is on high alert for attacks by insurgents after a series of bombings that killed dozens of people and underscored the fragility of Iraq's recent security gains.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 11:14 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Egypt urges EU to bolster US-led Mideast peace bid

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-NEA; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Mon Aug 30 11:13:01 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Egypt urges EU to bolster US-led Mideast peace bid

PARIS (Reuters) - Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak urged Europe on August 30 to throw its weight behind U.S.-led efforts to secure a peace agreement between Palestinians and Israelis.

Mubarak discussed the matter with French President Nicolas Sarkozy before heading to Washington this week for the first direct negotiations in 20 months. "The American administration needs strong backing from the European Union for the peace process to continue," he said.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, October 16, 2010 7:57 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Fw: Memo to HRC
Attachments: Memo to HRC.doc; ATT00001..txt; Memo to HRC.doc; ATT00001..txt

See below

----- Original Message -----
From: Martin Indyk [redacted] B6
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Oct 16 18:21:38 2010
Subject: Memo to HRC

Dear Jake,

As you may know, before the Secretary left for her trip to Europe, she asked to see me and discussed a number of sensitive issues. She asked for some additional ideas which I have detailed in the attached memo. I'd be very grateful if you could give it to her.

Many thanks,

Martin.

RELEASE IN PART
B4,B3 INA,B6

From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 22, 2009 7:09 AM
To: H
Cc: cheryl.mills[redacted] Sullivan, Jacob J B6
Subject: Re: NYSE followup

Will do. Spoke to some of the participants and the NYSE folks and they were very happy about the meeting (they want to make it an annual event).

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M
Cc: 'cheryl.mills[redacted] Sullivan, Jacob J B6
Sent: Tue Sep 22 06:58:14 2009
Subject: NYSE followup

Kris-- can you follow up on these issues and let me know so we can report back? Thx.

Steve Schwarzman at Blackstone wanted help on a visa for [redacted] and said Mickey Kantor was talking to Cheryl about it. What's status? B3 INA

David Cote of Honeywell wanted help w [redacted] He also complained about export control regs that interfere w sales. He said the State Dept is the holdup and gave example of nuts and bolts for an engine being labelled as "dual use and therefore couldn't be exported. Andrew may know about this. B4

RELEASE IN PART
B4, B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 12:08 PM
To: H
Subject: Krishna points - will print but so u have

Purpose of Call: B5

Points to Raise:

Background: The Indian government tabled the nuclear liability legislation August 25, after which it was amended, The bill, which has garnered front-page, daily news coverage, passed the upper house of parliament with broad support on August 30. B4 Ambassador Roemer and Under Secretary Burns discussed our concerns again with National Security Adviser Menon on August 27; we have requested that NSA Jones also call Menon. Embassy staff provided specific recommendations for fixing the legislation to Mukherjee's staff, Prime Minister's Office and Ministry of External Affairs on August 24.

RELEASE IN PART
B4, B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 12:50 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Krishna points - will print but so u have

Nope, we r waiting for them to confirm.
Jon is bringing printout

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Mon Aug 30 12:37:10 2010
Subject: Re: Krishna points - will print but so u have

Is the call time set?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Aug 30 12:08:14 2010
Subject: Krishna points - will print but so u have

Purpose of Call:

B5

Points to Raise:

B5

Background: The Indian government tabled the nuclear liability legislation August 25, after which it was amended,

The bill, which has garnered front-page, daily news coverage, passed the upper house of parliament with broad support on August 30.

B4

Ambassador Roemer and Under Secretary Burns discussed our concerns again with National Security Adviser Menon on August 27; we have requested that NSA Jones also call Menon. Embassy staff provided specific recommendations for fixing the legislation to Mukherjee's staff, Prime Minister's Office and Ministry of External Affairs on August 24.

RELEASE IN PART
B4, B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 12:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Krishna points - will print but so u have

He cannot do today
Maybe tomorrow morning

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Mon Aug 30 12:37:10 2010
Subject: Re: Krishna points - will print but so u have

Is the call time set?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Aug 30 12:08:14 2010
Subject: Krishna points - will print but so u have

Purpose of Call:

B5

Points to Raise:

B5

Background: The Indian government tabled the nuclear liability legislation August 25, after which it was amended,

The bill, which has garnered front-page, daily news coverage, passed the upper house of parliament with broad support on August 30.

B4

Ambassador Roemer and Under Secretary Burns discussed our concerns again with National Security Adviser Menon on August 27; we have requested that NSA Jones also call Menon. Embassy staff provided specific recommendations for fixing the legislation to Mukherjee's staff, Prime Minister's Office and Ministry of External Affairs on August 24.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 8:04 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Another MEP idea

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 3:21 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: FA Article

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 3:21 PM
To: Muscatine, Lissa; Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Tolv, Nora F
Subject: FA Article

I have not had occasion to read this draft, nor has Jake, but assuming if we have tweaks we can provide them and they will be accommodated, it should go.

Best.

cdm

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 8:31 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Abbas Confirmed

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Hale, David M
To: 'george
Cc: Reed, Julia G; Sachar, Alon (NEA/IPA); Sullivan, Jacob J; 'Daniel_B._Shapiro
<Daniel_B._Shapiro
Sent: Wed Sep 22 08:24:30 2010
Subject: Abbas Confirmed

12:30 UN Plaza hotel, 35th floor.

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B5, B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 3:31 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: From [redacted] B6

Fyi

---

From: Crowley, Philip J
To: Holbrooke, Richard; Patterson, Anne W; McHale, Judith A; Feldman, Daniel F; Nasr, S Vali R
Cc: Schwartz, Larry; Reines, Philippe I; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Aug 30 14:39:51 2010
Subject: FW: From [redacted]

This is a pretty serious accusation. [redacted] B5

PJ

---

From: [redacted]
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 2:34 PM
To: Crowley, Philip J
Subject: From [redacted] B6

Dear Mr. Crowley,

I left you a message and look forward to talking, but here's the short version.

One of our Pakistani stringers, [redacted] has been the object of harrassment by the ISI, to the point where we have flown him out of the country for his own safety. Both [redacted] have heard from Pakistani contacts that the ISI was "looking for" [redacted] Both [redacted] wife and [redacted] a colleague in our Islamabad Bureau, have had calls from the ISI.

I understand that the State Department's influence with ISI is limited at best, but I wanted to get this situation on the department's radar, and urge you to take any steps you can think of to discourage this menacing treatment of an honorable and talented journalist, so that he can return to Pakistan and his work without fear.

Thanks.

Regards,

[redacted]

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 9:15 AM
To: H
Subject: Iran statement

P proposing you put out the below based on bombing in Iran today. Thoughts?

For Immediate Release September 22, 2010

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY CLINTON

Explosion in Mahabad, Iran

I condemn the bombing targeting Iranians attending a parade in Mahabad today. The United States deplores this senseless loss of life and extends its sympathy to the families and loved ones of those injured and killed. We also call for the perpetrators of this horrific attack to be held accountable for their actions.

The United States condemns terrorism and all forms violence against innocent people, wherever it occurs, and stands with the victims of these appalling acts. This attack underscores the global community's need to work together to combat terrorist organizations that threaten the lives of innocent civilians all around the world.

###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 9:53 AM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Cc: Hanley, Monica R
Subject: Re: Schedule

That was original plan but I changed it last night cause we have so much time to kill. And they were having access issues there. But we can try to change back.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Huma Abedin < >; Abedin, Huma B6
Cc: Hanley, Monica R
Sent: Wed Sep 22 09:59:07 2010
Subject: Schedule

Can we do So Af bilat at UN or US-UN so we don't have to run back and forth to the Waldorf?

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772279 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE
IN FULL

United States Senate

WASHINGTON, DC 20510

December 16, 2010

The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue NW
Washington, DC 20502

Dear Mr. President,

We are writing to express our support for ratification of the New START Treaty and full funding for the modernization of our nuclear weapons arsenal, as outlined by your updated report that was mandated by Section 1251 of the Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010.

We also ask that, in your future budget requests to Congress, you include the funding identified in that report on nuclear weapons modernization. Should you choose to limit non-defense discretionary spending in any future budget requests to Congress, funding for nuclear modernization in the National Nuclear Security Agency's proposed budgets should be considered defense spending, as it is critical to national security and, therefore, not subject to such limitations. Further, we ask that an updated 1251 report be submitted with your budget request to Congress each year.

We look forward to working with you on the ratification of the New START Treaty and modernization of the National Nuclear Security Agency's nuclear weapons facilities. This represents a long-term commitment by each of us, as modernization of our nuclear arsenal will require a sustained effort.

Sincerely,

Daniel Inouye
United States Senator

Thad Cochran
United States Senator

Dianne Feinstein
United States Senator

Lamar Alexander
United States Senator

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772279 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772283 Date: 08/31/2015

August 30, 2010

RELEASE IN FULL

LEADING THROUGH CIVILIAN POWER

HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON

Today's world is a crucible of challenges testing American leadership. A glance at the headlines – and the trend lines – explains why.

In the 21 months since President Obama took office, we have seen the effects of the H1N1 health pandemic, an earthquake on a small Caribbean island, and floods in southern Punjab ripple across oceans and continents. And a financial crisis in Greece, a torpedoed ship in the Yellow Sea, and a spike in world food prices cause jitters on Wall Street and worries about our future well-being.

Global problems – from violent extremism to worldwide recession to climate change to poverty – demand collective solutions, even as power in the world becomes more diffuse. They require effective international cooperation, even as it becomes harder to achieve. And they call for American leadership, even as the world changes around us.

I began my tenure as Secretary of State by stressing the need to elevate diplomacy and development alongside defense – a "smart power" approach to solving global problems. To make that approach succeed, however, our civilian power must be strengthened and amplified. It must, as Defense Secretary Robert Gates has argued in these pages, be brought into better balance with our military power.

This effort is well underway. Congress already has appropriated funds for 1,108 new Foreign and Civil service officers to strengthen the State Department's capacity to pursue America's interests and advance our values. At USAID, we are doubling development officers, hiring 1,200 new foreign service officers with the specific skills and experience required for evolving development challenges, and making more effective use of the local hires at our overseas missions who have deep knowledge of their countries. We have begun rebuilding USAID into the world's premier development organization, one that seeds long-term growth, includes its own research arm, shapes policy and innovation, and uses metrics to ensure that our investments are cost-effective and sound.

But we need to do more. We need not only to rebuild – but also to rethink, reform, and recalibrate. During my years on the Senate Armed Services Committee, I saw how the Department of Defense used its Quadrennial Defense Review (QDR) to align its resources, policies, and strategies for the present – and the future. No similar mechanism existed for modernizing the State Department or USAID. One of my first acts as Secretary of State was to appoint a new Deputy Secretary in charge of managing our systems and resources. And in July 2009, I launched the first Quadrennial Diplomacy and Development Review (QDDR), a wholesale review of State and USAID to recommend how we can better equip, fund, and organize ourselves to meet our current diplomatic and development priorities and how we can begin building the people, structures, processes, and resources today to address the world's challenges in the years ahead.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772283 Date: 08/31/2015

The QDDR is not simply a review. It defines how to make diplomacy and development coordinated, complementary, and mutually reinforcing. It assesses what has worked in the past and what hasn't. And it forecasts future strategic choices and resource needs.

While the State Department and USAID have distinct roles and missions, we know that diplomacy and development often overlap – and must often work in tandem. Increasingly, global challenges call for a mix of both, requiring us to pursue a more holistic approach to civilian power.

Diplomatic objectives are often more effectively secured by development gains. The resumption of direct talks between the Israelis and the Palestinians over the summer was the handiwork of talented and persistent diplomats. But progress at the negotiating table is directly linked to progress building strong and stable institutions of a Palestinian state and providing Israel with needed security. And development objectives are often more effectively secured by diplomatic engagement. The impact of our Feed the Future program and Global Health Initiative will turn in part on the promotion of policy reforms in partner countries, and our Millennium Challenge Compacts are in part the product of sustained political engagement to create positive conditions for development. In many places, including Iraq and Afghanistan, the need for mutually reinforcing diplomatic and development strategies stems from the combined causes and effects of violent conflict, instability, and weak states.

The two "D"s in the QDDR reflect the world as we see it today – and as we envision it in the future. The review process relied on the wisdom and talent of exceptional people in both spheres – State and USAID – who worked tirelessly to produce a blueprint for reforms that will be implemented over the next four years but whose impact will stretch far beyond. This year's inaugural QDDR, to be repeated every four years, identifies new approaches and skill sets for diplomats and development experts, sets budget priorities, establishes planning procedures, revises promotion incentives, and reorganizes bureaucratic structures. It focuses on three main areas: modernizing and coordinating our diplomacy across U.S. government agencies; ensuring that our development work creates lasting and sustainable impact; and creating a stronger nexus of diplomacy and development – as well as better coordination with our defense partners – in conflict zones and fragile states.

A GLOBAL CIVILIAN SERVICE

Diplomacy has long been the backbone of U.S. foreign policy. And it remains so today. The vast majority of my work at the State Department consists of deploying diplomats and engaging in diplomacy to address major global and regional challenges, from confronting Iran's nuclear ambitions, to facilitating negotiations between Israelis and Palestinians, to enhancing stability on the Korean Peninsula, to working with other governments to bring emergency relief to Haiti. And President Obama and I certainly relied on old-fashioned diplomatic elbow grease to hammer out a last-minute accord at the Copenhagen conference on climate change last December.

In annual strategic dialogues with a range of key partners – including Russia, India, China, South Africa, Nigeria, Indonesia, and Pakistan – we aim to move beyond the tyranny of the inbox to deepen and broaden our relationships and to establish a stronger foundation for addressing shared problems, advancing shared interests, and managing differences. We are investing in strengthening global structures like the G-20 and regional institutions from the Organization of American States to the Association of Southeast Asian Nations. This is part of our commitment to building a new global architecture of cooperation that includes not only East and West, but also North and South.

While traditional diplomacy will always be critical to advancing our agenda, it is not enough. We have to expand our engagement to reach and influence wider and more diverse groups using new skills, strategies, and tools. To that end, we are broadening the way we conceive of diplomacy as well as the roles and responsibilities of its practitioners.

The original Foreign Service, as its name implies, consisted of people trained to manage our relations with foreign states, principally through consultations with their counterparts in government. This has been the main function of our Ambassadors and our embassies, as well as the staff at the State Department. But increasing global interconnectedness now necessitates reaching beyond government to citizens, and broadening our foreign policy portfolio to include issues once confined to the domestic sphere, such as economic and environmental regulation, drugs and disease, organized crime, and worldwide hunger. As those issues spill across borders, the domestic agencies addressing them must now do more of their work overseas – operating out of our embassies and consulates. A U.S. Ambassador in 2010 is thus responsible not only for managing civilians from State and USAID, but also for operating as CEO of a multi-agency. And he or she must also be adept at connecting with audiences outside of government, such as the business community and civil society.

Consider our embassy in Islamabad. The mission includes 800 staff members; about 450 are diplomats and civil servants from State and 100 are from USAID. A large portion of our work there consists of traditional diplomacy – foreign-service officers helping Americans traveling or doing business in the region, issuing visas, and engaging with their Pakistani civilian and military counterparts. But our Ambassador also leads civilians from 11 other federal agencies, including disaster relief and reconstruction experts helping to rebuild after last summer's historic floods; specialists in health, energy, communications, finance, agriculture, and justice; and military personnel working with the Pakistani military to bolster Pakistani capacities and partner in the fight against violent extremists.

Back in Washington, my responsibility as Secretary is to ensure that the Foreign and Civil Service personnel within the State Department and USAID are working together -- and with their colleagues across the federal government. Our strategic dialogue with Pakistan involves ten separate working groups and thus brings together cabinet secretaries and experts from a range of agencies in both governments. Our dialogue with India engaged 22 different agencies; and when Secretary Geithner and I traveled to Beijing in May for the second round of the Strategic and Economic Dialogue, our delegation included civilians from over 30 agencies.

Our Foreign Service officers, Civil Service personnel, and local engaged staff at the State Department and USAID form the backbone of our global engagement. But we need the expertise and skill of all of our civilians across government to meet today's and tomorrow's challenges. By drawing on the pool of talent that already exists in our federal agencies and at overseas posts, we can build a global civilian service of the same caliber and flexibility as our military. From the State Department, USAID, and Millennium Challenge Corporation to the Overseas Private Investment Corporation, the Export-Import Bank, the Departments of Justice, Treasury, and Agriculture, the Centers for Disease Control, the Peace Corps, and many others, we must reward teamwork, collaboration and inter-agency rotations. Developing the structures and habits of cooperation and collaboration will enable us to take full advantage of our civilian assets.

Engagement must go far beyond government-to-government interactions. In this information age, public opinion takes on added importance even in authoritarian states and as non-state actors are more able to influence current events. Today, a U.S. ambassador creates ties not only with the host nation's government, but also its people The QDDR endorses a new public diplomacy strategy that makes public engagement every diplomat's duty, through town halls and media interviews, organized outreach, events in provincial towns and smaller communities, student exchange programs, and virtual connections that bring together citizens and civic organizations. Indeed, in the 21st century, a diplomat is as likely to meet with a tribal elder in a rural village as a counterpart in a foreign ministry – as likely to wear cargo pants as pin stripe suits.

Public diplomacy must start at the top. In Indonesia and Turkey, I conducted bilateral meetings with government officials, but I also met with civil society leaders and appeared as a guest on popular television talk shows. I have held town halls with diverse groups of citizens on every continent I've visited. Public events like these are as much a part of my job as Secretary of State as my meetings in the Foreign Ministry because the durability of our partnerships will depend on the attitudes of the people as well as the policies of their governments.

In Washington, too, we are re-shaping the way we conceive of and conduct public diplomacy. We are shifting away from traditional platforms and building connections to foreign publics in regions once considered beyond our reach. It makes no sense to allocate our greatest resources to parts of the world where our ties are already strong and secure, and to minimize our efforts in places where engaging the public is critical to our success. This also forces us to streamline and modernize our public diplomacy efforts across the board. When the public diplomacy staff was decreased at our embassy in Berlin to make resources available for outreach in Central and Eastern Europe, the staff used the opportunity to develop a leaner, more agile, and more effective operation.

We can also leverage civilian power by connecting businesses, philanthropists and citizens' groups with partner governments to perform tasks that governments cannot. Technology in particular gives us new tools of engagement. One great success this year was a partnership forged almost overnight with U.S. and Haitian mobile phone companies, the Red Cross, social entrepreneurs, the Coast Guard and eventually the U.S. Marines. Together, we created a platform that directed text messages locating earthquake victims so workers could rescue them. We launched a program called Text to Haiti that drew contributions from 31 million Americans who donated $10 each. At the State Department, we continue to develop new ways to use the world's 4.6 billion mobile phones to improve the lives of people living in remote and arduous circumstances.

Visits by American technology delegations have also produced promising avenues for innovative partnerships in fields from agriculture to health. One such visit to Russia, for example, helped pave the way for a public-private partnership called text4baby that will provide a mobile application for pregnant women and new mothers to get health tips through their cell phones and monitor their own pregnancies to determine when they should seek professional medical attention.

As we look down the road to the forces that will shape global politics, we see more acutely how the material conditions of people's lives can affect our national security objectives. While our USAID colleagues lead our development work overseas, State Department employees today from Ambassadors to civil service experts must be better versed, and more engaged, in development issues. For this reason, I called for a broad review of our aid programs in Afghanistan and Pakistan to ensure that they were aligned with our strategic objectives, and sent two of our most experienced ambassadors to serve as overall foreign assistance coordinators in Islamabad and Kabul.

This comprehensive approach is essential to our engagement in many regions. In Mexico, for example, we continue to support law enforcement efforts to arrest and prosecute members of drug cartels but have also begun the next phase of our Merida Initiative working with our Mexican partners – in government, business, and civil society – to strengthen justice systems and promote a "culture of legality" in communities. This includes supporting community watch initiatives, expanding educational opportunities for young people so they have alternatives to the drug trade, and strengthening citizen participation councils in every state in Mexico to ensure that they can safely engage in real dialogue to hold authorities accountable.

When the diverse elements of our civilian power work cohesively – as in many of our embassies around the world, and on our best days in Washington – we can see the potential impact of a global civilian service. There is no guarantee that this comprehensive approach will achieve every goal, especially in places where the challenges are as entrenched and complex as they are in places like Mexico and Yemen and Pakistan. But it is the best alternative we have, and one we must pursue.

ACHIEVING HIGH IMPACT DEVELOPMENT

I am sometimes asked why development matters to our foreign policy and why we should spend money on people overseas when we have economic challenges at home. As counterintuitive as it may seem, the answer is that development, when done effectively, is one of the best tools we have to enhance our own stability and prosperity. It can help strengthen fragile or failing states; support the rise of capable partners who can help us solve regional and global problems; and advance democracy and human rights. And it is a direct expression of our values and compassion as a people.

At the same time, we must acknowledge that, while the world's problems are vast, our resources are not. As stewards of American taxpayer dollars, we must be strategic in pursuing the most critical needs and making decisions based on hard evidence to ensure that our investments deliver results. And we must also stay focused on the long-term – not simply addressing the urgent needs of people today but building the foundation for a more prosperous future. With this in mind, the Presidential Policy Directive on Development issued by President Obama in September – the first by an American President -- emphasizes the importance of targeting countries with responsible governments and favorable conditions, and coordinating assistance with trade, finance, investment credits and other economic policies to help seed emerging markets and foster widespread and sustainable economic growth. Economic growth is the most lasting route out of poverty, and expanding and strengthening middle classes around the world will be key to creating the just and sustainable international order that lies at the heart of our National Security Strategy.

The QDDR embraces development as a process of assisted self-help in furtherance of American interests and values. A developing country must be in charge and set its own goals for meeting the needs of its people. Americans come to the table as partners, not patrons, lending our resources and expertise and, eventually, putting ourselves out of business when a host country is self-sustaining.

Today, we are putting that partnership model into practice in two signature initiatives the Obama Administration announced over the past year: the Global Health Initiative and Feed The Future, part of the Obama Administration's broader global food security initiative.

The Global Health Initiative recognizes that the landscape for health in many developing countries has improved over the years, due in part to President George W. Bush's Presidential Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR), his malaria initiative, and the contributions of many other countries and organizations. But this more crowded landscape does not necessarily improve health outcomes efficiently or for the long-term.

Consider the life of a woman in a remote African village. Within walking distance is a clinic supported by PEPFAR, where she finds out that she has HIV and then receives antiretroviral drugs that keep her healthy. She can make a longer journey by bicycle or bus to another clinic offering prenatal care and immunizations. Sometimes health services come to her door, in the form of health volunteers bringing bed nets to protect her family from malaria. Yet if she has trouble giving birth, the nearest facility equipped to perform emergency surgery is hundreds of miles away. And while her home has been sprayed for mosquitoes, she has no access to clean water, so her children may escape malaria only to die from diarrheal disease.

The delivery of health services is marred by a lack of coordination among countries and organizations, including our own government. And when governments cannot afford or don't have the expertise to ensure that health care gets to local populations, donor countries and outside NGOs have stepped in. That is the right response to an emergency, but in too many places, it has become the de facto solution. As a result, the African woman's access to care is piecemeal, and her future care is uncertain. She is vulnerable to the vicissitudes of funding cycles and development trends in places far from where she lives. The fundamental purpose of the Global Health Initiative is to address these problems by tying individual health programs -- PEPFAR, the President's Malaria Initiative, maternal and child health, family planning, neglected tropical diseases, and other critical health areas -- together in an integrated, coordinated, sustainable system of care, with the countries themselves in the lead.

Our Feed The Future initiative is based on the same principles. To give one example from a partner country, Bangladesh is developing its own food security investment plan based in part on consultations in a public forum with more than 500 representatives. The strategy has been reviewed for technical quality by independent experts and is being further refined by national leaders and technical experts. We are now developing our own U.S. government investment plan in support of Bangladesh's strategy, in full collaboration with other governments and international donors.

This is what partnership looks like in practice. Partner governments will almost certainly choose to do things differently than we might, or outline different priorities. Vetting and investing in the government's plan may take longer than delivering services ourselves. But the result promises a sustainable strategy that will continue even after our assistance has ended. This approach reflects the consensus of the international community on principles for effective foreign assistance. The QDDR embraces these principles and recommends a detailed set of mechanisms for implementing them in the field.

The QDDR also focuses on the diplomatic side of effective development policy, building much stronger and more systematic links between State and USAID both in Washington and in the field.

Diplomacy can support development policy in different ways. Our most important diplomatic effort with China in recent years -- the Strategic and Economic Dialogue – includes high-level discussions about development, and what it means to our countries' respective and collective efforts in Africa and elsewhere. Before the 2009 meeting of the G-8 in L'Acquila, Italy, high-level engagement with partner governments enabled us to secure a $20 billion international commitment to food security, building a coalition of countries willing to contribute. And at the 2009 Summit of the Americas, President Obama launched the Energy and Climate Partnership of the Americas, bringing together all the democratically-elected governments of our hemisphere to work toward a shared goal of clean, renewable and inexpensive energy sources. As part of that effort, the United States and Brazil are helping seven energy-poor Central American and Caribbean countries develop their own biofuels. This promotes sustainable economic development and regional integration, and also helps reduce dependence on imported Venezuelan oil.

But diplomacy and development can only be mutually reinforcing if we also get our own house in order. The first step is to move beyond agency stove-piping and to use all the talent and expertise within the federal government. The Global Health Initiative, for example, is jointly led by the USAID Administrator, the U.S. Global AIDS Coordinator, and the Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Their agencies, along with the Departments of Health and Human Services, the National Institutes of Health, and the Peace Corps, work together under the overall guidance and direction of the Deputy Secretary of State. This unique leadership structure solidifies our commitment to coordination at every level, from the White House down.

The QDDR also reinforces and reflects specific internal reforms within USAID. Administrator Rajiv Shah has laid out an aggressive set of operational priorities called "USAID Forward" that are designed to make the Agency more effective, accountable and transparent. Guided by the QDDR and in coordination with the State Department, USAID Forward concentrates on procurement, people, and policy.

Procurement reform may sound like an arcane subject removed from the realities of helping people on the ground. Done poorly, procurement can become a bureaucratic burden. But it can also be an opportunity for progress when it's done well. Our goal is to build local capacities in the countries where we work by drawing on the talent and expertise of small businesses and NGOs. Senegal, for instance, has more than 1,400 health huts, where trained by USAID provide basic – and often lifesaving – treatments, lowering costs and moving us closer to the day when our aid will no longer be necessary.

To reform personnel, our goal is to attract and retain development professionals who represent the diversity of America and are skilled, energetic, and know how to solve problems. Administrator Shah and I have observed firsthand how our best USAID staff members work as development entrepreneurs—identifying opportunities and finding solutions that meet people's needs. To capitalize on this kind of talent, the QDDR is focusing on how to recruit and retain locally hired staff, the backbone of our USAID missions worldwide.

To reform policy, USAID has already created a new Bureau of Policy, Planning and Learning. Evidence-based development must be more than a notion—it must become our reality. We will measure our investments not by the number of programs run, but the number of children nourished or vaccinated, and the volume of people benefiting from clean water, electricity, teachers, medicine or jobs. We will also make sure our taxpayer dollars are well spent – by gathering baseline data, surveying development indicators before we launch projects, and then measuring those same indicators over the life of the project. Where our approaches are successful, we will replicate them and scale them up. Where they are not, we will admit it, learn from our failures, and come up with a better idea.

We will also rely on the innovations of science and technology to help us work better, cheaper, and faster in the pursuit of high impact development. Mobile phones have already transformed the lives of countless people in sub-Saharan Africa. Imagine what the world would look like if off-grid renewable energy provided illumination to billions of people now living in the dark, or if more kinds of drought-resistant seeds existed for farmers in the developing world. The QDDR endorses USAID's creation of the Development Innovation Ventures Fund where creative solutions will be funded, piloted and brought to scale.

In July, USAID brought together scientists and technology experts to develop "Grand Challenges for Development." These government-sponsored competitions will challenge scientists and engineers to develop game-changing solutions to specific development problems. Just recently, USAID funded the trial of a vaginal microbicide that reduces the transmission of HIV/AIDS by 30 percent, a major breakthrough in HIV transmission that will give women more control over their reproductive health. USAID and the Gates Foundation recently have joined forces to create mobile banking in Haiti, building on effective programs in Asia, Latin America, and Africa. We are also inviting top scientists and entrepreneurs to help us find cost-effective, simple ways to provide clean water, vaccines, inexpensive but durable computers, micro-generators, medical kits, and applications for cell phones.

As we undertake these efforts, we will broaden our partnerships. Twenty years ago, the "development community" didn't exist far beyond the walls of USAID. Today, it includes corporate leaders, philanthropists, foundations and advocates, all of whom add new skills and perspectives. Equally important are the grassroots leaders in our communities: the religious groups, students, and other activists who lend their passion and energy to humanitarian efforts. These advocates and entrepreneurs are willing to challenge old orthodoxies and bring a new mindset to their work. We will partner with them to get results.

BUILDING PEACE AND STRENGTHENING FRAGILE STATES

American civilians have long operated in conflict zones and fragile states. But today, our diplomats and development experts are being asked to undertake missions of a scale and scope never seen before. Our task in Iraq is to lead a broad U.S. peace-building mission. At the same time, we are responsible in Afghanistan for helping to reduce the strength of the insurgency, improve governance, and promote stability that will last after our troops return home. In Pakistan, we are assisting a government and society buffeted by the global economic recession, natural disasters, and regional instability, while supporting a counter-terrorism and counter-insurgency campaign. Today, twenty percent of our diplomatic corps is now stationed in these three countries -- where democracy is young, institutions are struggling to serve local populations, society is ethnically or religiously divided, and security is an ongoing challenge. Beyond those countries, we are working to stabilize fragile states from Somalia and Sudan to Haiti and Kyrgyzstan.

Given this unprecedented situation, we have to ask unprecedented questions: As we plan for the transition in Iraq, how will we protect our embassy in Baghdad or our consulate in Basra? How will we ensure the security of reconstruction experts who must work alongside Iraqi colleagues in villages and towns across the country? How will we generate the sustained manpower to fulfill our many ongoing and diverse commitments in Iraq?

In Iraq, we had 170,000 troops during the surge: Today our troops stand at 50,000 assigned to supporting Iraqi government forces. On the ground are about 1,600 civilians – diplomats, stabilization and reconstruction experts and development professionals in charge of helping Iraq transition to a stable and prosperous democracy. Similarly in Afghanistan, the American contribution to reconstruction and redevelopment is now led by about 1,100 diplomats and civilian experts who will remain there after our troops are gone. These numbers say something important about civilian power and leadership. Properly trained and equipped, civilians are force-multipliers. One effective diplomat or development expert can leverage as many as ten local partners, and we have learned that when local partners build their own capacities and networks, communities become stronger and more resilient.

Civilian leadership in addressing conflict and instability also depends on marshaling and leveraging the varied assets of our government as a whole. Under the leadership of strong Ambassadors and agency representatives, collaboration among American civilians from across the government has reached a new level in Pakistan, Iraq, Afghanistan, Haiti and elsewhere. We are pooling the expertise of civilians at State and USAID, as well as DoJ, Commerce, Treasury, DHS, HHS, CDC, and other agencies. The United States cannot succeed in these fragile states if these agencies aren't working together. That means organizing ourselves internally with a focus on integration, cohesion, and solving problems. For example, the creation of the office of the Special Representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan – with 16 agencies represented – was an innovation to overcome agency compartmentalization and to achieve a comprehensive strategy.

The QDDR also draws on the talents of the Civilian Response Corps, which has identified hundreds of civilian experts across the government who can be quickly deployed to conflict zones or fragile states. The Secretary sent the CRC's expeditionary conflict and security experts to Southern Sudan, deploying them quickly enough to support our Sudanese partners as they prepare for potential independence after decades of conflict.

The QDDR recommends building rapid response diplomatic teams and specially trained experts who can operate effectively over the longer term amidst conflict and instability. The State Department will focus on complex political crises, and USAID on disaster response, building on its abilities to get relief and recovery workers into the field within 24 hours after a disaster strikes. We will also create a joint operating framework and response plan that will allow State and USAID to work more effectively together and with other agencies.

Although Afghanistan and Iraq have occupied much of the world's attention for the past eight years, they are not the only places where diplomats and development experts are responsible for helping to shore up fragile and failing states, deal with the consequences of political, economic, and social instability, or join in common cause to prevent conflicts in the first place. Indeed, since the end of the Cold War, the State Department and USAID have steadily taken on more missions in difficult and dangerous places, from Lebanon to Bosnia to East Timor.

In Sudan we are mounting a civilian surge around the southern capital of Juba to prepare for the January 2011 referendum that will determine whether South Sudan secedes from the North.

In Yemen, our embassy is working to address economic conditions and the ravages of poverty in a country that has recently faced a secessionist movement in the south, a rebellion in the north, and a persistent threat from al Qaeda on the Arabian Peninsula. Through the diplomatic Friends of Yemen and concentrated efforts to stabilize fragile local communities and create opportunities for economic growth, we are trying to help the Yemeni government provide better services for its citizens and to prevent conflict. The QDDR anticipates more situations requiring rapidly deployable civilian teams of diplomats, stabilization and reconstruction experts, and development professionals that can meet our needs in circumstances like Sudan or Yemen while also mounting larger efforts in other countries at the same time.

Training a new generation of diplomats, development professionals, and peace-building experts will help us strengthen weak, fragile or violent states and offer opportunities and hope to their citizens. Poverty and repression do not automatically engender terrorism but countries that are impoverished, corrupt, lawless or mired in a recurring cycle of conflict are more prone to becoming havens for terrorists and other criminals. Al Qaeda first operated out of Sudan and bombed U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania before migrating to Afghanistan, then a country notable for its poverty, high infant mortality and repressive Taliban government. It is no coincidence that al Qaeda is most active today in underdeveloped nations such as Pakistan, Somalia, Yemen, Mali, Mauritania and Niger.

Beyond terrorism and violent extremism, the world already has witnessed too many tragic examples of what happens when good governance is absent. We have seen drug cartels exploit the absence of strong governing institutions and push countries on several continents to the brink of becoming narco-states. Elsewhere, countries rich in minerals and diamonds have become epicenters of violence – including gender-based sexual violence -- because the central government is unwilling or unable to combat corruption, regulate legitimate business, or invest natural resources wealth in the country's infrastructure and people. And too often, conflicts in fragile and weak states spill over borders, creating humanitarian crises and spawning grounds for terrorists and global criminal networks elsewhere.

On the positive side, however, we have also seen the effectiveness of civilian power working with our military to impede conflict and contribute to stability. In Liberia, as fighting between rebel groups and government forces under the leadership of Charles Taylor intensified and the humanitarian situation deteriorated, the United States undertook intense diplomatic efforts, including public calls for Taylor's resignation, as well as military deployments to the region to help shore up peacekeeping efforts of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS). Taylor's resignation paved the way for a comprehensive peace agreement that led to the end of Liberia's conflict and set the stage for Liberia's stabilization and reconstruction efforts. Both the United Nations and the United States continue to partner with Liberia as it rebuilds social and economic infrastructure destroyed by years of conflict. Our future depends on the success of all these types of missions – from Iraq and Afghanistan to West Africa -- and our ability to mount more of them.

The American people must understand that spending taxpayer dollars on diplomacy and development is in their interests, especially when those investments support missions in conflict zones, fragile states, and states that can play a responsible role in their regions and in the world. And Congress, which has a long tradition of bipartisan support for traditional diplomacy and development, must appreciate the scale and scope of the reconstruction and stabilization missions that our civilians are being asked to undertake. Congress must provide the necessary funding now.

The House and Senate have appropriated hundreds of billions of dollars for the military missions in Iraq and Afghanistan. The diplomatic and development activities represent a fraction of that cost, yet the funding often gets bogged down in the old debates over foreign aid. We have to move beyond the past and treat diplomacy and development as national security priorities and smart investments in our future stability and security. We can succeed, but only with the necessary Congressional leadership and support.

Perhaps no one understands the urgency of this as much as Secretary Gates. As he said last August: "Congress is part of the problem. When I sent my budget to the Hill for roughly $550 billion, the Senate voted me $550 billion as the budget allocation. . . . . Hillary Clinton sent up a budget of about $50 billion, and they whacked four or five billion dollars out of it. So there has to be a change in attitude in the recognition of the critical role that agencies like State and AID play . . . . for them to play the leading role that I think they need to play in most of these situations."

* * * * *

Our emphasis on civilian power is in keeping with America's history and traditions. The Marshall Plan was a civilian development initiative undertaken in partnership with European governments. President Kennedy founded the Peace Corps to show the world a different face of America decades before the term "soft power" was coined. American diplomats helped negotiate the reunification of Europe in 1991 without a shot fired. Meanwhile, American civilians have enjoyed the world's admiration because of their spirit of innovation, abundant goodwill, and the audacious belief that technological, social and political advances can and must be used to improve the lives of human beings around the world.

The men and women who volunteer for our armed forces exemplify this spirit. So do the growing number of civilians who find ways to engage in public service. With the right balance of civilian and military power, we can advance America's interests and values, lead and support other nations in solving global problems, and forge strong diplomatic and development partnerships with traditional allies and newly emerging powers. And we can rise to the challenges of the world in the 21st century and meet the tests of America's global leadership.

###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PIR <preines
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 5:37 PM
To: H
Cc: Jake Sullivan; Huma Abedin; Lona Valmoro
Subject: MEPP Media

To follow up on a conversation Jake had with you about regional media at the end of this week's MEPP, we're recommending that at the end of Thursday or Friday morning before you leave DC that you do two TV interviews: one Israeli (likely Channel 2), and one with Al Jazeera. If you're open to it, we could try something creative and have both interview you at same time. They'll likely balk but worth a try just for the symbolism

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: PIR <preines
Sent: Monday, August 30, 2010 5:42 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: MEPP Media

They recommend

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
Subject: Re: MEPP Media
Sent: Aug 30, 2010 5:38 PM

B6

Ok--worth trying. But check w Mitchell team first.

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR <preines
To: H
Cc: Jake Sullivan Huma Abedin; Lona Valmoro
Sent: Mon Aug 30 17:36:52 2010
Subject: MEPP Media

To follow up on a conversation Jake had with you about regional media at the end of this week's MEPP, we're recommending that at the end of Thursday or Friday morning before you leave DC that you do two TV interviews: one Israeli (likely Channel 2), and one with Al Jazeera. If you're open to it, we could try something creative and have both interview you at same time. They'll likely balk but worth a try just for the symbolism

RELEASE IN PART
B1,1.4(B),1.4(D),B6

From: jake.sullivan[redacted] B6
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 1:57 PM
To: H
Subject: Mitchell

[redacted] 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 09/22/2025

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 17, 2010 3:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Israeli PM says negotiations on prisoner swap for captured Israeli soldier have resumed

From: Goldberg, Joshua W
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O
Sent: Sun Oct 17 06:06:46 2010
Subject: (AP) Israeli PM says negotiations on prisoner swap for captured Israeli soldier have resumed

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israel's prime minister confirmed negotiations with the Palestinians about a much-anticipated swap for a captured Israeli soldier resumed.
Benjamin Netanyahu said the German mediator brokering the release of Sgt. Gilad Schalit in exchange for hundreds of Palestinian prisoners returned to the region.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Shapiro, Andrew J <ShapiroA@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 10, 2010 9:11 AM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: [redacted] B6

I will be out of the office until Friday September 3 with limited access to e-mail. If you need immediate assistance, please contact Nadia Brown at 202-647-9022.

Andrew J. Shapiro
Assistant Secretary for Political-Military Affairs Department of State
2201 C Street, NW
Washington, DC 20520

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 17, 2010 3:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Ahmadinejad endorses new nuclear talks with West

From: Goldberg, Joshua W
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O
Sent: Sun Oct 17 06:07:08 2010
Subject: (AP) Ahmadinejad endorses new nuclear talks with West

TEHRAN (AP) - The Iranian president said Tehran is ready to resume talks about its nuclear program with the international community. Mahmoud Ahmadinejad's endorsement follows Iran's new push to get the talks started again. Ahmadinejad told a crowd of supporters the West made the first step. He gave no time frame for the talks. Ahmadinejad added, "They have come and say, 'We will negotiate.' We say, "All right, we will negotiate with you.'"

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 2:08 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: 1000 days Press

fyi

---

From: Huang, Cindy Y
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 11:55 AM
To: SGHFSI; Mills, Cheryl D; Smith, Jeannemarie E
Subject: Fw: 1000 days Press

1000 days made the Today Show! See below.

---

From: Coates, Lindsay <[redacted] B6
To: Huang, Cindy Y
Cc: Dowd, Katie W
Sent: Wed Sep 22 11:36:43 2010
Subject: FW: 1000 days Press

I assume you all are aware of these and others and this not even complete—have you all had any conversation with Cristen about posting any of this content?

Very impressive!

---

From: Gresham, Katie
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 10:17 AM
To: Delaney, Katherine; Coates, Lindsay
Subject: 1000 days Press

Here's few press/blog links I found about the 1000 days launch by searching 1000 days + Clinton on Google. Danielle also said there was a brief blurb about it on the Today Show. Some of these sites are cross posted elsewhere. Most just recap the event or pull some of the transcripts in.

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/09/21/AR2010092102551.html (WasPo) http://www.hunger-undernutrition.org/blog/2010/09/thousand-days-call-to-action.html (blog-all praise) http://www.developmenthorizons.com/2010/05/first-1000-days-hilary-clinton-on.html (blog-some critique) http://www.voanews.com/english/news/health/Hillary-Clinton-Ban-Ki-Moon-Promote-Fight-Against-Childhood-Malnutrition-103486019.html (VOA)
http://english.peopledaily.com.cn/90001/90777/90852/7147873.html (People Daily China)
http://www.channelnewsasia.com/stories/afp_world/view/1082654/1/.html (Channel News Asia)
http://www.kansascity.com/2010/09/21/2239788/clinton-unveils-malnutrition-pollution.html (AP article in Kansas City paper)
http://www.diabeteshealth.com/read/2010/09/21/6855/hillary-clinton-ban-ki-moon-launch-global-nutrition-initiatives/ (Save Press Release on Diabetes website)
http://www.oxfam.org/en/pressroom/reactions/oxfam-reaction-1000-days-improve-child-nutrition-mdg-summit (Oxfam)

http://topnews.co.uk/213447-clinton-hosts-event-and-urges-all-fight-child-malnutrition (Top news, UK)
http://www.cbsnews.com/stories/2010/09/21/ap/national/main6887577.shtml (AP article on CBS news)
http://allafrica.com/stories/201009220001.html?page=3 (All Africa)
http://www.billclintonvideos.com/1000-days-change-a-life-change-a-future (event recap from Save on Bill Clinton's blog)
http://www.prnewswire.com/news-releases/care-hails-administrations-1000-day-hunger-plan-as-a-turning-point-103454369.html (CARE)
http://notes.bread.org/2010/05/the-first-1000-days-remember-this-please.html (Bread) http://blogs.state.gov/index.php/site/entry/1000_days (DOS blog)
http://www.america.gov/st/develop-english/2010/September/20100914162252berehellek0.3766291.html (America.gov)
http://www.un.org/apps/news/infocus/sgspeeches/statments_full.asp?statID=946 (UN-Ban Ki-Moon's transcript) http://www.state.gov/secretary/rm/2010/09/147512.htm (DOS-Clinton's transcript/video) http://blog.usaid.gov/2010/09/1000-days-partnering-to-reduce-child-undernutrition/ (USAID blog)
http://www.wtop.com/?nid=104&sid=2058497 (AP article on wtop.com)
http://topics.npr.org/article/0gKHfFK3xeeKW (NPR linked to All Africa article)

I stopped trying to list them all (too many and mostly the same), but its been picked up in local papers throughout the country and some international papers in China, India, UK, Africa.

Lindsay, when will the recorded launch event be posted on the website? I believe it may already be on YouTube.

Best,

Katie

InterAction
A UNITED VOICE FOR GLOBAL CHANGE

Katie Gresham | Special Assistant to the President & CEO
InterAction | A United Voice for Global Change
1400 Sixteenth Street, NW, Suite 210 • Washington, DC 20036
Direct: [redacted] B6 • Main: 202-667-8227 • www.InterAction.org

Follow us on Facebook and Twitter!

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 10, 2010 12:49 PM
To: H
Subject: meant to tell you

I'm meeting with Judith on Monday before I leave (that's my last day/morning) to talk about sports diplomacy. Will keep you posted.

Lissa Muscatine
Senior Advisor and Director of Speechwriting
Department of State
(w) 202-647-9841
(bb) [redacted]

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 10, 2010 1:27 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Bravo

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Fri Sep 10 12:22:18 2010
Subject: Fw: Bravo

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Susan Kennedy [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Fri Sep 10 10:37:23 2010
Subject: Bravo

The way you are coming across couldn't be better.
Hillary Clinton sends strong message to world

SF Chronicle Editorial Friday, September 10, 2010

Hillary Clinton's blend of diligence, caution and toughness didn't always serve her well as a presidential candidate. But these attributes make her a powerful secretary of state, the unsung hero for a White House team trying to mend global fences without looking weak.

In a speech this week, Clinton laid down the law for an audience wondering where Obama is headed on foreign policy. Would she favor hand-holding with rivals such as China and Russia, a sign that Washington was ducking trouble in the name of consensus building?

Not at all, suggested Clinton in a lengthy speech to the Council of Foreign Relations. In her diplomatic travels, she found a hunger for U.S. leadership, and she wants everyone to know it. "The U.S. can, must and will lead in this century," she said. The "complexities of this world" mean there's an opening for "a new American moment, a moment when our global leadership is essential."

Her message of strength and obligation may make Obama truehearts swoon. Clinton's thoughts also come at the start of an election season when President Obama will be knocked for failures overseas along with the economy.

But it's also vintage Clinton. From her days on the Senate's Armed Services Committee, she was always a proponent of military muscle and a tough regard for American foes. She and Defense Secretary Robert Gates, another hawkish voice, are running the Obama foreign policy store.

Diplomatic speeches, even one as striking as Clinton's, are a dime a dozen. Clinton's challenge will be delivering on any of the disputes facing her. There's a long line: a truculent North Korea, new Mideast talks, a rising China, a defiant Iran, and a half dozen lesser conflicts ranging from African civil wars to drug gangs in Mexico.

There is newness and complication in her outlook, she indicated. Her job is essentially a permanent road trip, meaning success will hinge on "shoe-leather diplomacy," the steady attention that the wonky, workaholic Clinton believes is needed for any breakthrough. The Israeli-Palestinian talks, which begin again next week with her at the center, are a chance for her patience and force to pay off. On Iran, she believes that ever-tightening sanctions accepted by a larger group of nations will eventually pay off.

Her remarks come with other conditions. A soaring national debt and recession worries preoccupy the White House. The nation's global reach is bounded by financial limits. Her robust views about American might could easily fade next to more pressing domestic worries. Also, no matter how thoughtful or acute her remarks, there will always be detractors who think she's angling for the top job in the White House.

Clinton's doctrine adds urgency in settling affairs on a crowded world stage. Washington has a special duty to lead, a role that much of the world appreciates. It's time to accept that role, not shy away from it because of political risk or recent history.

--
Susan P Kennedy

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772309 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

August 31, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Some paragraphs on the Tea Party

First, of course your instinct is right to attempt to save the situation. I think, however, it is fraught. Being right easily might be worse than being wrong. (Doing absolutely nothing, meanwhile, would bear no cost, just to note the benefits of irresponsibility.) So, how any advice can be proposed without potential pitfalls is a mystery to me. It may be that Bill delivers the message in public, on the stump. This message, on extremism and the GOP, ought to be given soon, on Labor Day or immediately thereafter. Urgently, the momentum of the far right needs to be blunted; it must be redefined; the political discussion must be shaped and shifted; and the GOP must be put on the defensive and begin to pay the price.

I will send you another memo soon, with other messages, themes and strategies.

Here, for better or worse, is some language on extremism and the Republican Party:

The Republican Party today is a captive party. It is captive to the swamp fevers of the extreme right. It is captive to its out-of-power desperation for political power—willing to do and say anything to grab it—willing to use extremists to help climb back to power—willing to give the extremists power. No one is speaking up for responsible conservatism within the Republican Party. Who will play the role of William F. Buckley, Jr.? Or Richard Nixon? Or Ronald Reagan? Or Barry Goldwater? They all drew lines to separate the party from the extremists. Now who has the courage to condemn the outrageous bigotry and slander against the President? Have they at long last no sense of decency?

If the Republicans don't have the nerve to speak up for their own best heritage, then someone has to do it. The Republican Party is in a state of political disorder. Into the midst of its chaos a Trojan Horse has been thrust in the form of a self-proclaimed Tea Party as though the extremists behind it have something to do with the American Revolution and are not a stealth takeover operation of a confused political party funded by the same people who paid for the extremist movements against President Eisenhower and President Kennedy.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772309 Date: 08/31/2015

There is a straight line between extremists then and extremists now. One of those lines is a money line. Follow the money. Another continuity is the far right John Birch Society that is praised today by Glenn Beck. Listen closely. Yet another of those lines are the same accusations of disloyalty. Ike was a Communist. John F. Kennedy was a Communist. They said President Nixon was a tool of international Communism. And when the Cold War was ending they said Ronald Reagan was "a useful idiot of the Kremlin." Now they are saying that President Obama is a socialist and at the same time a fascist. They say he's a racist and a secret Muslim. They claim the President of the United States is not an American. It's so crazy it sounds like a science fiction novel, but we've heard it all before. The extremists have not changed. From Ike to JFK, from Nixon to Reagan, and now Obama, it's the same old horsestuff.

For anyone with common sense it might seem like one big joke, a big put-on, or maybe just a big con job. But it's dangerous. It's toxic. Why? In the name of the founding fathers, the Constitution and the flag, in the name of taking back our country and restoring it, they would transform our democracy into something we wouldn't recognize. The extremists of the far right want to replace the greatest experiment in constitutional democracy with their own far-out ideology—trashing everything from religious liberty to protections from a dog-eat-dog boom and bust economy. Public education, a safe environment, national highways, safe transportation, Social Security, Medicare, health care for all, even the Federal Reserve created to curb economic chaos—they want to get rid of all of it. If you think that if they had their way they wouldn't kick the country into an economic abyss, produce another Great Depression, then I've got a reality show in Alaska for you. And that's not all that's in their sweeping blueprint for power.

The Republican Party is being purged of moderates, responsible conservatives, anyone who has a thought they don't like. It's divide and conquer. Divide the Republican Party. Divide the nation. Region against region, South against North, West against East, rural America against cities, state governments against the federal government, religion against religion, and soon, before you know it, it won't look or feel like America. Out of loud declarations of love of country, they will break this country apart.

How far do the extremists want to go? The demonizing of enemies and even religions is a means to an end. That end is political power. Political power for themselves, for their political leaders—characters who are hardly outsiders but dusty denizens roaming the corridors of power for decades. They want political power—political power for favors, exemptions and loopholes for the Daddy Warbucks and Scrooge McDucks funding them. Political power for special interests. Political power against the national interest. Political power against the common good. Political power against the good society.

President Obama is their target because the people have put him in his office and he stands in the way of the extremists. They are against him precisely because he's making progress. And progress is not what they want. They want power for themselves. So they will say anything to tear down the President. But they are at war with more than President Obama. They are at war with President Andrew Jackson. That's how far back they want to go. They want to go back the 1830s. They want to go back to before the Civil War, "lips dripping with the words of interposition and nullification," to quote Martin Luther King, Jr. in his famous "I have a dream" speech. They want to interpose their rule and their power above that of majority rule and democratic government—and nullify the law of the land in the name of their strange doctrines. So when I say that this is dangerous and toxic, we've been there before. Fanatics have divided America in the past. We know, as another president said, "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

And when you see them demonizing the President, Ike, JFK, Obama, take your pick—when you see them accusing members of the Republican Party of treason—when you hear them compare the American experiment in democracy to Hitler's Nazi state or Stalin's Communist totalitarianism—when you hear them talk of "liberty" and they mean taking away Social Security from people who worked their whole lives to earn it—when you hear them talk of "freedom" when they want to bring back good old fashioned discrimination—when you hear them talk of "the Constitution" when they want to get rid of the letter and spirit of the government designed by the framers of the Constitution—when you hear them talk of "democracy" when they want to get rid of direct election of senators—when you hear them talk about "restoration" when they want to gut public education and Medicare and basic economic and environmental protections—trashing the work and progress of generations—then you know that behind the patriotic words lies a truly radical agenda.

It was Dwight Eisenhower who warned: "Should any political party attempt to abolish Social Security, unemployment insurance, and eliminate labor laws and farm programs, you would not hear of that party again in our political history. There is a tiny splinter group, of course, that believes you can do these things. Among them are H. L. Hunt (you possibly know his background), a few other Texas oil millionaires, and an occasional politician or business man from other areas. Their number is negligible and they are stupid."

It was John F. Kennedy who said: "In the most critical periods of our nation's history, there have always been those fringes of our society who have sought to escape their own responsibility by finding a simple solution, an appealing slogan, or a convenient scapegoat. Financial crises could be explained by the presence of too many immigrants or too few greenbacks... So let us not heed these counsels of fear and suspicion... Let our patriotism be reflected in the creation of confidence rather than crusades of suspicion. Let us prove we think our country great by striving to make it greater."

Outspoken conservatives like William F. Buckley drew the line and stood up for principle against the extremists, calling them "idiotic" and "paranoid." Barry Goldwater, at the end of his life, said, "Do not associate my name with anything you do. You are extremists, and you've hurt the Republican Party much more than the Democrats have."

Then, this sort of thing, instilling a tone of confidence: Come together, right now...for a new era of progress...rebuilding America...the work of a new generation...building on the progress of generations...facing any challenge...resolving that we can and will overcome any obstacle...keeping the faith, not succumbing to temptations of fear and suspicion...not retreating but advancing...not dividing the American people for short-term politics but bringing the American people together for long-term progress...combining our will, our work, our intelligence, creativity, enterprise, and energy to make a new world of freedom for ourselves and our children...

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772310 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

August 31, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Some paragraphs on the Tea Party

First, of course your instinct is right to attempt to save the situation. I think, however, it is fraught. Being right easily might be worse than being wrong. (Doing absolutely nothing, meanwhile, would bear no cost, just to note the benefits of irresponsibility.) So, how any advice can be proposed without potential pitfalls is a mystery to me. It may be that Bill delivers the message in public, on the stump. This message, on extremism and the GOP, ought to be given soon, on Labor Day or immediately thereafter. Urgently, the momentum of the far right needs to be blunted; it must be redefined; the political discussion must be shaped and shifted; and the GOP must be put on the defensive and begin to pay the price.

I will send you another memo soon, with other messages, themes and strategies.

Here, for better or worse, is some language on extremism and the Republican Party:

The Republican Party today is a captive party. It is captive to the swamp fevers of the extreme right. It is captive to its out-of-power desperation for political power—willing to do and say anything to grab it—willing to use extremists to help climb back to power—willing to give the extremists power. No one is speaking up for responsible conservatism within the Republican Party. Who will play the role of William F. Buckley, Jr.? Or Richard Nixon? Or Ronald Reagan? Or Barry Goldwater? They all drew lines to separate the party from the extremists. Now who has the courage to condemn the outrageous bigotry and slander against the President? Have they at long last no sense of decency?

If the Republicans don't have the nerve to speak up for their own best heritage, then someone has to do it. The Republican Party is in a state of political disorder. Into the midst of its chaos a Trojan Horse has been thrust in the form of a self-proclaimed Tea Party as though the extremists behind it have something to do with the American Revolution and are not a stealth takeover operation of a confused political party funded by the same people who paid for the extremist movements against President Eisenhower and President Kennedy.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772310 Date: 08/31/2015

There is a straight line between extremists then and extremists now. One of those lines is a money line. Follow the money. Another continuity is the far right John Birch Society that is praised today by Glenn Beck. Listen closely. Yet another of those lines are the same accusations of disloyalty. Ike was a Communist. John F. Kennedy was a Communist. They said President Nixon was a tool of international Communism. And when the Cold War was ending they said Ronald Reagan was "a useful idiot of the Kremlin." Now they are saying that President Obama is a socialist and at the same time a fascist. They say he's a racist and a secret Muslim. They claim the President of the United States is not an American. It's so crazy it sounds like a science fiction novel, but we've heard it all before. The extremists have not changed. From Ike to JFK, from Nixon to Reagan, and now Obama, it's the same old horsestuff.

For anyone with common sense it might seem like one big joke, a big put-on, or maybe just a big con job. But it's dangerous. It's toxic. Why? In the name of the founding fathers, the Constitution and the flag, in the name of taking back our country and restoring it, they would transform our democracy into something we wouldn't recognize. The extremists of the far right want to replace the greatest experiment in constitutional democracy with their own far-out ideology—trashing everything from religious liberty to protections from a dog-eat-dog boom and bust economy. Public education, a safe environment, national highways, safe transportation, Social Security, Medicare, health care for all, even the Federal Reserve created to curb economic chaos—they want to get rid of all of it. If you think that if they had their way they wouldn't kick the country into an economic abyss, produce another Great Depression, then I've got a reality show in Alaska for you. And that's not all that's in their sweeping blueprint for power.

The Republican Party is being purged of moderates, responsible conservatives, anyone who has a thought they don't like. It's divide and conquer. Divide the Republican Party. Divide the nation. Region against region, South against North, West against East, rural America against cities, state governments against the federal government, religion against religion, and soon, before you know it, it won't look or feel like America. Out of loud declarations of love of country, they will break this country apart.

How far do the extremists want to go? The demonizing of enemies and even religions is a means to an end. That end is political power. Political power for themselves, for their political leaders—characters who are hardly outsiders but dusty denizens roaming the corridors of power for decades. They want political power—political power for favors, exemptions and loopholes for the Daddy Warbucks and Scrooge McDucks funding them. Political power for special interests. Political power against the national interest. Political power against the common good. Political power against the good society.

President Obama is their target because the people have put him in his office and he stands in the way of the extremists. They are against him precisely because he's making progress. And progress is not what they want. They want power for themselves. So they will say anything to tear down the President. But they are at war with more than President Obama. They are at war with President Andrew Jackson. That's how far back they want to go. They want to go back the 1830s. They want to go back to before the Civil War; "lips dripping with the words of interposition and nullification," to quote Martin Luther King, Jr. in his famous "I have a dream" speech. They want to interpose their rule and their power above that of majority rule and democratic government—and nullify the law of the land in the name of their strange doctrines. So when I say that this is dangerous and toxic, we've been there before. Fanatics have divided America in the past. We know, as another president said, "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

And when you see them demonizing the President, Ike, JFK, Obama, take your pick—when you see them accusing members of the Republican Party of treason—when you hear them compare the American experiment in democracy to Hitler's Nazi state or Stalin's Communist totalitarianism—when you hear them talk of "liberty" and they mean taking away Social Security from people who worked their whole lives to earn it—when you hear them talk of "freedom" when they want to bring back good old fashioned discrimination—when you hear them talk of "the Constitution" when they want to get rid of the letter and spirit of the government designed by the framers of the Constitution—when you hear them talk of "democracy" when they want to get rid of direct election of senators—when you hear them talk about "restoration" when they want to gut public education and Medicare and basic economic and environmental protections—trashing the work and progress of generations—then you know that behind the patriotic words lies a truly radical agenda.

It was Dwight Eisenhower who warned: "Should any political party attempt to abolish Social Security, unemployment insurance, and eliminate labor laws and farm programs, you would not hear of that party again in our political history. There is a tiny splinter group, of course, that believes you can do these things. Among them are H. L. Hunt (you possibly know his background), a few other Texas oil millionaires, and an occasional politician or business man from other areas. Their number is negligible and they are stupid."

It was John F. Kennedy who said: "In the most critical periods of our nation's history, there have always been those fringes of our society who have sought to escape their own responsibility by finding a simple solution, an appealing slogan, or a convenient scapegoat. Financial crises could be explained by the presence of too many immigrants or too few greenbacks... So let us not heed these counsels of fear and suspicion... Let our patriotism be reflected in the creation of confidence rather than crusades of suspicion. Let us prove we think our country great by striving to make it greater."

Outspoken conservatives like William F. Buckley drew the line and stood up for principle against the extremists, calling them "idiotic" and "paranoid." Barry Goldwater, at the end of his life, said, "Do not associate my name with anything you do. You are extremists, and you've hurt the Republican Party much more than the Democrats have."

Then, this sort of thing, instilling a tone of confidence: Come together, right now...for a new era of progress...rebuilding America...the work of a new generation...building on the progress of generations...facing any challenge...resolving that we can and will overcome any obstacle...keeping the faith, not succumbing to temptations of fear and suspicion...not retreating but advancing...not dividing the American people for short-term politics but bringing the American people together for long-term progress...combining our will, our work, our intelligence, creativity, enterprise, and energy to make a new world of freedom for ourselves and our children...

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 10, 2010 5:51 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) UAE gives Palestinian Authority $42 million

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Fri Sep 10 17:42:28 2010
Subject: (Reuters) UAE gives Palestinian Authority $42 million

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - The United Arab Emirates donated $42 million to the Palestinian Authority, boosting support for President Mahmoud Abbas' cash-strapped government as it embarks on direct peace talks with Israel, Arab officials said on September 10. An Arab source in Washington said the donation, which was confirmed by a Palestinian government spokesman, was made after repeated calls by senior U.S. officials for more Arab support to help build Palestinian government capacity. "It is a timely gesture of support both for the talks and the institution-building project of the PA, as well as a response to the public urging from President Obama and Secretary Clinton," the source said. Palestinian government spokesman Ghassan al-Khatib confirmed the UAE donation but declined to give further details.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 10, 2010 5:56 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Corker

Points for corker call.

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Sep 10 17:54:37 2010
Subject: Re: Corker

He allegedly has 2 remaining concerns:

1 - getting an updated 1251 report (10 year plan) (she can tell him we will do some kind of update...may just be a letter but we will agree to udpate);

2 - and he still has concerns about verification. For the last 30 days, we have tried to connect him with rose g and ted warner from DoD. Looks like that will finally happen next week. They can and will alleviate his concerns (we hope).

That's what I know. I am sure he will be pleased to hear that we had a constructive meeting with Senator Kyl and are moving to meet many of his funding concerns.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma
To: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Fri Sep 10 17:49:43 2010
Subject: Corker

She will do tonite on her drive home tonite or tomorrow morning.
But she did ask if there were any specific points u wanted her to make to him? Or if you knew what he might be telling her? We are on 6pm shuttle

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: pverveer[redacted] B6
Sent: Saturday, September 11, 2010 5:05 AM
To: H

As you probably heard from Bill Burns there are elements in Ukraine who keep trying to revert to the bad old days. The SBU (who went after[redacted] have now gone after soros foundation there and there are new media freedom challenges. I hope you'll be able to meet with Yanukovych during UNGA because it's going to take steady engagement from keeping the worst backsliding from happening. I met w Ukr amb and Lou Debaca yesterday to establish ways we can work with them on trafficking. Some officials have reached out to us which is good. Others are going backwards so we want to keep the good progress they've made over the last few years going forward. The amb was grateful so we shall see.
I'm en route to India for the Vital Voices Asia summit and for a round of mtgs on the dialogue. Will see SEWA on cookstoves. Good luck on the Middle East.
By the way, it looks like Bacheiet will lead UNWomen. I hope that's the case. SG to announce his choice before UNGA. Will let you know as soon as we hear definitively.

Sent via BlackBerry from T-Mobile

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: pverveer
Sent: Saturday, September 11, 2010 2:11 PM
To: H

As you probably heard from Bill Burns there are elements in Ukraine who keep trying to revert to the bad old days. The SBU (who went after ) have now gone after soros foundation there and there are new media freedom challenges. I hope you'll be able to meet with Yanukovych during UNGA because it's going to take steady engagement from keeping the worst backsliding from happening. I met w Ukr amb and Lou Debaca yesterday to establish ways we can work with them on trafficking. Some officials have reached out to us which is good. Others are going backwards so we want to keep the good progress they've made over the last few years going forward. The amb was grateful so we shall see.
I'm en route to India for the Vital Voices Asia summit and for a round of mtgs on the dialogue. Will see SEWA on cookstoves. Good luck on the Middle East.
By the way, it looks like Bachelet will lead UNWomen. I hope that's the case. SG to announce his choice before UNGA. Will let you know as soon as we hear definitively.

Sent via BlackBerry from T-Mobile

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, August 31, 2010 4:47 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Fwd: State Dept Pakistan Relief Fund

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Caitlin Klevorick
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Mon Aug 30 14:05:39 2010
Subject: Fwd: State Dept Pakistan Relief Fund

CDM:
Thought S might be interested in this from the head of Coke in Pakistan who is also the Chairman of the American Business Forum.

B6

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Rizwan Khan
Date: Fri, Aug 27, 2010 at 10:51 PM
Subject: Re: State Dept Pakistan Relief Fund
To: cklevorick Afzaal Malik
Cc: Caitlin Klevorick <KlevorickCB@state.gov>

Caitlin

I must congratulate state department on setting up the fund for Pakistan. In my opinion this is a great initiative and will message to all American Business Forum members regarding the information on the fund.

Once again thank for all your support to Pakistan and look forward to working with you. Please do let me know if I or the Forum could be any help to you in Pakistan.

Best regards

CONFIDENTIALITY NOTICE
This message (including any attachments) contains information that may be confidential. Unless you are the intended recipient (or authorized to receive for the intended recipient), you may not read, print, retain, use, copy, distribute or disclose to anyone the message or any information contained in the message. If you have received the message in error, please advise the sender by reply e-mail, and destroy all copies of the original message (including any attachments).

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Saturday, September 11, 2010 2:20 PM
To: H
Subject: H: On NYT website within last hour, in tomorrow's paper. Paid TV ads, please. Sid

September 11, 2010

G.O.P. Leader Is Tightly Bound to Lobbyists

By ERIC LIPTON

WASHINGTON — House Democrats were preparing late last year for the first floor vote on the financial regulatory overhaul when Representative John A. Boehner of Ohio and other Republican leaders summoned more than 100 industry lobbyists to Capitol Hill for a private strategy session.

The bill's passage in the House already seemed inevitable. But Mr. Boehner and his deputies told the Wall Street lobbyists and trade association leaders that by teaming up, they could still perhaps block its final passage or at least water it down.

"We need you to get out there and speak up against this," Mr. Boehner said that December afternoon, according to three people familiar with his remarks, while also warning against cutting side deals with Democrats.

That sort of alliance — they won a few skirmishes, though they lost the war on the regulatory bill — is business as usual for Mr. Boehner, the House minority leader and would-be speaker if Republicans win the House in November. He maintains especially tight ties with a circle of lobbyists and former aides representing some of the nation's biggest businesses, including Goldman Sachs, Google, Citigroup, R. J. Reynolds, MillerCoors and UPS.

They have contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars to his campaigns over the years, provided him rides on their corporate jets, socialized with him at luxury golf resorts and waterfront bashes and are now leading fund-raising efforts for his Boehner for Speaker campaign, which is soliciting checks of up to $37,800 each, the maximum allowed.

Some of the lobbyists readily acknowledge routinely seeking his office's help — calling the congressman and his aides as often as several times a week — to advance their agenda in Washington. And in many cases, Mr. Boehner has helped them out.

As Democrats increasingly try to cast the Ohio congressman as the face of the Republican Party — President Obama mentioned his name eight times in a speech last week — and as Mr. Boehner becomes more visible, his ties to lobbyists, cultivated since he arrived here in 1991, are coming under attack.

The woman he hopes to replace, Speaker Nancy Pelosi, derided him on Friday as having met "countless times with special-interest lobbyists in an effort to stop tough legislation" that would regulate corporations and protect consumers. And the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, through a spokeswoman, charged that he "epitomizes the smoked-filled, backroom, special-interest deal making that turns off voters about Washington."

Mr. Boehner, who declined to be interviewed for this article, and his lobbyist allies ridicule such criticism as politically motivated by desperate Democrats. His actions, they say, simply reflect the pro-business, antiregulatory philosophy that he has espoused for more than three decades, dating back to when Mr. Boehner, the son of a tavern owner, ran a small plastics company in Ohio. And fielding requests from lobbyists is nothing unusual, he says.

"I get lobbied every day by somebody," he said last month after a speech in Cleveland. "It could be by my wife. It could be the bellman. It goes on all day, everyday, everyplace."

Mr. Boehner — a 60-year-old, perpetually tanned, sharply tailored, chain-smoking golfer — is not as fiery as Newt Gingrich or as unrelenting an arm-twister as Tom DeLay, two of his Republican predecessors in top House posts. It is his reputation as a "Chamber of Commerce" Republican and his fund-raising skills — he has raised $36 million for Republican causes during this election cycle, more than almost anyone else in his party — that explain, in part, his rise.

If elected as his party's leader in the House, Mr. Boehner will certainly lean on his industry allies for help as he builds coalitions necessary to push legislation through Congress, his office acknowledges. His friends say there is nothing wrong with that.

"Does he have a lot of relationships in this city? Yes, absolutely," said Mark Isakowitz, a friend whose Republican firm represents more than three dozen financial, telecommunications, energy and consumer products companies as diverse as Coca-Cola and Zurich Financial Services. "But I think all the good lawmakers do."

Mr. Boehner won some of his first national headlines back in 1996 after he was caught handing out checks from tobacco lobbyists to fellow Republicans on the House floor. Then the fourth-ranking House Republican, Mr. Boehner said he had broken no rules and was simply assisting his lobbyist friends, who were contributing to other Republicans' campaigns.

His business-friendly reputation was enhanced through the weekly powwows he organized on Capitol Hill nicknamed the Thursday Group, a gathering of conservative leaders and business lobbyists whom he relied on to help push the party's legislative agenda. The Thursday gathering was disbanded after a Republican power struggle that cost him his leadership position.

But he continued to routinely meet with business leaders, particularly in his role as chairman of the Education and the Workforce Committee, and returned to power as House G.O.P. leader in 2006. Several of the onetime Thursday regulars, along with some newcomers, are among the close-knit group that routinely call on Mr. Boehner's office for client matters, write checks to his campaign and socialize with him.

That tight circle includes Mr. Isakowitz; Bruce Gates, a lobbyist for the cigarette maker Altria; Nicholas E. Calio, a Citigroup lobbyist; and two former aides, Marc Lampkin and Sam Geduldig, both now financial services lobbyists.

The tobacco industry is particularly well represented, with both Mr. Gates and John Fish, a lobbyist for R. J. Reynolds, maker of Camel cigarettes, in the group. People affiliated with those companies have contributed at least $340,000 to Mr. Boehner's political campaigns, with Mr. Gates being the top individual donor among the thousands during Mr. Boehner's political career, according to a tally by the Center for Public Integrity.

While many lawmakers in each party have networks of donors, lobbyists and former aides who now represent corporate interests, Mr. Boehner's ties seem especially deep. His clique even has a nickname on Capitol Hill, Boehner Land. The members of this inner circle said their association with Mr. Boehner translates into open access to him and his staff.

"He likes to bring similarly minded people together to try to advance legislation or oppose it," said Drew Maloney, a lobbyist at Ogilvy Government Relations. "That is how you get things done."

One lobbyist in the club — after lauding each staff member in Mr. Boehner's office that he routinely calls to ask for help — ticked off the list of recent issues for which he had won the lawmaker's backing: combating fee increases for the oil industry, fighting a proposed cap on debit card fees, protecting tax breaks for hedge fund executives and opposing a cap on greenhouse gas emissions.

Still, with Mr. Boehner and his party in the minority, they often lost the fights.

But despite the recent string of defeats on the House floor, Mr. Boehner has benefited from his alliance with lobbyists. From 2000 to 2007, Mr. Boehner flew at least 45 times, often with his wife, Debbie, on corporate jets provided by companies including R. J. Reynolds. (As required, Mr. Boehner reimbursed part of the costs.)

In addition, over the last decade, he has taken 41 other trips paid for by corporate sponsors or industry groups, often to popular golf spots. Those trips make him one of the top House beneficiaries of such travel, which has recently been curbed as a result of changes in ethics rules in Washington.

Mr. Boehner continues to travel to popular golf destinations on a corporate-subsidized tab, although now it is paid for through his political action committee, the Freedom Project. In the last 18 months, it has spent at least $67,000 at the Ritz Carlton Naples in Florida, at least $20,000 at the Robert Trent Jones Golf Club in Gainesville, Va., and at least $29,000 at the Muirfield Village Golf Club in Dublin, Ohio, federal records show, for fund-raising events.

In June, with the prospects for a Republican takeover of the House rising, Mr. Boehner moved to accelerate his fund-raising effort, starting what he called the Boehner for Speaker campaign. The idea was to use his high profile to draw large donations that would be mostly allocated to help elect other House Republicans.

He turned again to the same group of lobbyists, former aides and friends during a July meeting at the headquarters of the Republican National Committee.

"The wave is there, there is a rebellion in the country, and we have good candidates," Mr. Boehner told his supporters, one of the lobbyists present at the meeting recalled. "But I don't want to miss this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity because we have not raised enough money. They might be able to stop us with a wall of money."

Mr. Calio of Citigroup was among the first to write a large check. So far, a party spokesman said, the campaign has raised nearly $2 million. Mr. Boehner has helped raise millions more in the last six weeks for Republican House candidates across the country and the party, appearing at more than 40 fund-raisers.

The Boehner for Speaker campaign offers donors who give the maximum amount special perks, like "meetings with Leader Boehner and much much more."

But his lobbyist friends and former aides said these incentives did not mean too much, because they already had plenty of access to Mr. Boehner. They just now want to see him as the speaker of the House.

"He knows this is going to be a tough election," said Samuel J. Baptista, a friend, golf partner and lobbyist whose clients include Goldman Sachs and Discover Financial. "But people who underestimate him really do so at their own peril."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 17, 2010 3:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Israeli air strike kills militant in Gaza Strip

From: Goldberg, Joshua W
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O
Sent: Sun Oct 17 06:07:31 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Israeli air strike kills militant in Gaza Strip

GAZA (Reuters) - An Israeli air strike killed a Palestinian militant in the northern Gaza Strip when he and others attempted to launch a rocket or mortar shell towards Israel, the Israeli army and Palestinian medics said. Palestinian medical officials at a Gaza hospital said the dead man had been identified as a member of the Islamic Jihad militant group. It was the first killing in an Israeli attack on militants in the Gaza Strip since September 27.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772340 Date: 08/31/2015

FOR OFFICIAL U.S. GOVERNMENT USE ONLY

RELEASE IN PART
B5

Opinion Analysis

Office of Research

September 9, 2010

Turkish Views of U.S. Improve in July

B5

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772340 Date: 08/31/2015

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

Page Denied

RELEASE IN PART
B5, B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, August 31, 2010 12:12 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Bout Extradition Update

FYI

From: Johnson, Clifton M
To: Koh, Harold Hongju
Cc: Harris, Robert K; Wilson, Kathleen A
Sent: Tue Aug 31 08:56:37 2010
Subject: Bout Extradition Update

SBU – close hold

Harold,

[redacted] B5

[redacted] Best, Cliff

PS – I'll be on TDY in China for 10 days with Peter G., starting tomorrow morning, working on concluding two updates to our aviation counterterrorism agreements.

Clifton M. Johnson
Assistant Legal Adviser
Law Enforcement and Intelligence

[redacted]
(202) 647-7324 (Office) B6
[redacted]
(202) 647-4802 (Fax)

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 12, 2010 10:53 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: (The Daily Mail) How Blair rescued Palestine deal worth $200m to his £2m-a-year paymasters

FYI

From: Sidereas, Evyenia M
To: S_SpecialAssistants
Cc: SES_DutyDeputies; SES-O_SWO
Sent: Sun Sep 12 03:46:23 2010
Subject: FW: (The Daily Mail) How Blair rescued Palestine deal worth $200m to his £2m-a-year paymasters

Colleagues,

FYI, in light of pending phone call with Blair later today.

Regards,
Evyenia

MailOnline

Special investigation: How Blair rescued Palestine deal worth $200m to his £2m-a-year paymasters

By David Rose
Last updated at 12:42 AM on 12th September 2010

Tony Blair mounted an intense political lobbying campaign to rescue a struggling mobile-phone business owned by a client of the bank that pays him a £2 million annual salary.

The firm, Wataniya, had already built a brand-new network in the Israeli-occupied Palestinian West Bank. But it almost collapsed before launching its service, jeopardising a £450 million investment, because Israel's government was refusing to let it use the frequencies it needed to operate. Acting in his capacity as the international Middle East peace envoy, Mr Blair helped to save the company by spending months putting pressure on Israel's prime minister and his colleagues in a bid to change their minds.

An investigation by The Mail on Sunday has revealed:

- Mr Blair spoke of the need to get Wataniya up and running in order to boost the Palestinian economy. However JP Morgan, the American investment bank that employs him as a consultant, has a financial stake in Wataniya through Wataniya's owner, the Qatari firm Qtel, which is an important client of JP Morgan.

- Financial documents show that back in 2007, JP Morgan had been one of four 'mandated lead arrangers' of a $2 billion loan with which Qtel bought Wataniya from its original Kuwaiti owners. Last year, the bank joined a syndicate that lent Qtel a further $500 million, and became a 'lead arranger' for a Qtel bond issue which raised yet another $1.5 billion.

In these deals, JP Morgan would have been paid many millions of pounds in fees, and if the loans had gone bad, could have been exposed to substantial losses. 'Its original exposure was probably around $200 million,' one Wall Street expert said yesterday.

Last night a bank spokesman refused to comment, or to disclose any further details. He did not deny that Qtel was a significant JP Morgan client. A spokesman for Mr Blair said he had no knowledge of any connection between JP Morgan and Qtel.

Mr Blair's lobbying campaign also helped to enrich the family of the Palestinian Authority president, Mahmoud Abbas – a central figure in the search for Middle East peace. A firm run by his son Tarek has secured a lucrative contract to provide advertising for Wataniya. Mr Blair's envoy role – for which, as he has often boasted, he is not paid a salary – has now been enhanced.

Earlier this month, Mr Abbas, Mr Blair and the most important man he lobbied, Israeli Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu, sat down together in Washington with President Obama to begin new direct peace talks.

Last night Mr Blair faced calls to publish full details of the myriad business interests that have netted him a personal fortune estimated to be at least £15 million since he left office.

He is paid not only by JP Morgan but also by the insurance giant Zurich, and his own private consulting firm, Tony Blair Associates, counts among its clients the royal families of Abu Dhabi and Kuwait.

A frequent visitor to Libya, he has used his personal friendship with the dictator Colonel Gaddafi to explore business opportunities there on behalf of JP Morgan.

David Davis, the senior backbench Tory MP, said: 'There are now clear questions about how he has used his powers as a peace envoy and whether that has benefited his commercial sponsors.

'He must now put all his financial affairs into the public domain. Only then can we be sure he has behaved in an appropriate manner.'

Mr Blair was appointed an envoy on leaving Downing Street in June 2007. He represents the 'Quartet' – the United Nations, the US, the EU and Russia.
His special area of responsibility is the Palestinian economy.

With ten rooms permanently booked at Jerusalem's most expensive hotel, the American Colony, at an annual cost of £1.1 million, he spends a few days there each month.

As The Mail on Sunday reported last year, many Palestinian businessmen say his achievements have been limited. Projects he has loudly supported – such as an international business park near the holy city of Hebron – have come to nothing.

'But Wataniya is the great exception,' one leading West Bank entrepeneur said yesterday. 'Indeed, until he finally managed to sort it out at the end of last year, it was difficult to get him to engage with anything else.'

When Mr Blair arrived in the Middle East in 2007, there was only one mobile firm, Jawwal, operating in the Palestinian Occupied Territories, Gaza and the West Bank. But Wataniya had already purchased licences for £313 million from Mr Abbas's Palestinian Authority to provide a competing service.

In July 2008, Mr Blair brokered what Wataniya thought was a cast-iron deal with Israel to make the frequencies it needed available. In order to provide a modern 3G service to include mobile internet, Wataniya had been seeking a bandwidth of 4.8 megahertz.

On the strength of this agreement, it continued to build mobile-phone masts, switching centres and other installations it needed to operate, spending a further £100 million.

It was set to launch in June last year. Meanwhile, amid fierce local controversy, Wataniya managed to secure special additional loans from a US government programme that had been set up to help Palestinian farmers and small businesses – despite the backing it had from Qtel and, indirectly, banks such as JP Morgan.

Launching this programme in 2007, the State Department said it was aimed at 'an olive grower who wants to expand operations, a young person with a small information technology company, or someone who wants to hire neighbours to produce and export Palestinian embroidery' – not a £450 million mobile network.

The US loans to Wataniya, though worth a relatively modest £11 million, deprived other enterprises of them.

Critics pointed to the fact that involved with Wataniya were leading members of the Palestinian elite around Mr Abbas. Its Palestine chairman is Mohammad Mustafa – his financial adviser and closest associate, who accompanies him on virtually every foreign trip.

'In the meetings he had with the Prime Minister, he brought it up time and time again, and kept pushing, pushing.'

In the late spring of 2009, Mr Blair's frequency deal unravelled. Claiming that the Palestinian Authority had failed to fulfil unspecified commitments, Israel refused to release the necessary bandwidth. Wataniya teetered on the brink of collapse as first the June and then a second October launch date, came and went, with the network still inoperative.

Alan Richardson, a Scottish engineer who had already set up a mobile network in Iraq, was Wataniya's Palestine chief executive until June this year.

'We invested according to a business plan that was based on false promises,' he told me last October. 'We cannot meet our subscriber targets with the frequencies they are offering.'

However, Mr Blair was furiously trying to rescue the company. 'From day one of this problem, he's been very proactive through his role as Quartet representative,' Mr Richardson said.

A senior Israeli official said last week: 'In the meetings he had with the Prime Minister, he brought it up time and time again, and kept pushing, pushing.'

One reason the Israelis advanced for not releasing the bandwidth was security – claiming it needed the frequencies for military communications. Another Israeli source confirmed that Mr Blair repeatedly raised the matter in meetings with Israel's defence minister, Ehud Barak.

Mr Blair made several public statements about the Wataniya frequency dispute, and did not mention JP Morgan at all.

'If we cannot get the proper frequency and it cannot go forward then we don't have proper competition on mobile telephony and we don't get the investment and jobs,' he said after the first launch was cancelled in June 2009.

'It may seem a small thing in one sense but it's very important for the Palestinian economy.'

Finally, after Qtel threatened legal action, Mr Blair got his way. Although Israel agreed to release only 3.8 megahertz at first, local sources say it has promised to expand this to 4.8 megahertz once Wataniya has 350,000 customers.

Wataniya launched on November 10, with Mr Blair at the opening ceremony. He said it proved that 'Palestine is open for business'.

Earlier this year, Mr Blair singled out the affair in a report he wrote on his envoy work to the Commons' Foreign Affairs Committee.

'Wataniya's launch is overdue, but extremely welcome,' he wrote, '[it] means the completion of a key milestone in the economic reform and state building agenda...Wataniya is an example of a flagship project, which has a significant impact on people's perceptions and hopes for what a lasting peace might bring.'

Yesterday The Mail on Sunday asked Mr Blair's spokesman Matthew Doyle whether he had declared the bank's interest in his meetings with the Israelis.

He replied in an email, saying only: 'Tony Blair raised Wataniya at the request of the Palestinian Authority in his role as Quartet Representative. He has no knowledge of any connection between QTel and JP Morgan and has never discussed the issue with JP Morgan nor have they ever raised it with him. Any suggestion that he raised it for any reason other than the one stated to help the Palestinians or that in some way he has benefited from Wataniya is untrue and defamatory.'

Critics of the Wataniya mobile- phone project backed so strongly by Tony Blair claim it is marred by a longstanding feature of the Palestinian scene – cronyism, in which close associates of the ruling Fatah party leadership somehow manage to derive lucrative benefits.

In the case of Wataniya, the link could hardly be closer – for one big beneficiary of the firm's investments is none other than Tarek Abbas, the son of the Palestinian Authority president, Mahmoud Abbas.

American-educated Tarek runs Sky, the West Bank's biggest advertising agency. Last year, it was awarded a contract to be Wataniya's lead advertising agent, with both a monthly retainer and further payments for individual campaigns.

Palestinian business sources say that its work for Wataniya has been worth approximately £700,000 in the past 12 months – almost certainly, the biggest advertising 'spend' in Palestine.

Meanwhile, businessman Firas Nasruddin, a friend of both Tarek and his father, owns Hemaya, a security company staffed by men in sunglasses and black uniforms, some of whom are former fighters against Israel in groups such as the Al-Aqsa Martyrs' Brigades. Others are former Palestinian Authority police.

Hemaya has a contract to provide security for Wataniya personnel and installations.

It also serves several other firms that are supported by the Palestine Investment Fund, a large pot of money that is meant to be used to benefit the Palestinian people.

The fund has a 43 per cent stake in Wataniya. President Abbas's chief adviser Mohammad Mustafa is chairman and CEO of the fund, and chairman of Wataniya.

Wataniya's spokesman, Mohammad Nassar said last night he could not answer any questions about how the Sky and Hemaya contracts were awarded until next week, while Tarek Abbas's lawyer – who usually speaks on his behalf – could not be reached.

In an interview last year, Wataniya's former Palestine chief, Scot Alan Richardson, said there had been 'a straightforward contract process that went through all the normal procedures', adding that Sky and Hemaya had been given their deals because they represented 'best price, best quality'.

Wataniya, he said, operated in a 'fair and transparent manner'.

Nevertheless, the outcome means that as Tony Blair takes part in the renewed search for a peace deal, both sides will know that his support for Wataniya has produced sizeable benefits for President Abbas's family and friends.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, September 12, 2010 9:34 AM
To: H
Subject: Fwd: POLITICO Playbook, presented by Washington's NewsChannel 8: To deprive Dems of an issue, Boehner would compromise on tax-cut extension -- NYT softens Boehner wording after aide complains -- Maureen Dowd's sister, Peggy, may switch from Obama to RO...

BREAKING – DNC goes up on national cable Tuesday with an ad on "The Boehner plan." A DNC official says it'll be up a little less than a week: ""This ad is one product we'll use to define Mr. Boehner, his ethics and priorities for the American people - and there will be others." YouTube http://bit.ly/dB6Yb1

ROBERT GIBBS (@PressSec) tweets on the NYT front-pager on House Republican Leader John Boehner: "Headline says it all...A G.O.P. Leader Tightly Bound to Lobbyists http://nyti.ms/bxbF4D ... Don't forget this handy clip & save graphic of 'K Street Cabinet' (black & white photo doesn't do that tan justice!) http://nyti.ms/9n1wVp"

BOEHNER taped "Face the Nation" yesterday from West Chester, Ohio:

Bob Schieffer: "I want to make sure I heard what you said correctly: you're saying that you are willing to vote for those middle class tax cuts, even though the bill will not include … extending the tax cuts for the upper bracket American."

Rep. Boehner: "Bob, we don't know what the bill's going to say, alright? If the only option I have is to vote for those at 250 and below, of course I'm going to do that. But I'm going to do everything I can to fight to make sure that we extend the current tax rates for all Americans."

A Boehner aide reads between the lines: "Despite what Obama says, Republicans are not holding middle-class tax cuts hostage and we're not going to let him get away with those types of false claims. Our focus remains on getting bipartisan support for a freeze on all current rates, because that is what is best for the economy and small business job creation. Boehner's words were calculated to deprive Obama of the ability to continue making those false claims, and as a result we are in a better position rhetorically to pressure more Democrats to support a full freeze."

AN INSTANT CLASSIC:

Schieffer: "Mr. Boehner, I'm going to ask you this question because I'm not objective about this - I'm a cancer survivor, I used to be a heavy smoker. Do you still smoke?"

Boehner: "I do."

Schieffer: "You have taken $340,000 from the tobacco industry. They've been the largest contributor to your political campaigns over the year. How do you square that with the fact that cigarette smoking is the leading cause of preventable deaths in this country, 435,000 people, their deaths are linked to cancer, that's 1 in 5. How do you justify that in your own mind?"

Boehner: "Bob, tobacco is a legal product in America. The American people have a right to decide for themselves whether they want to partake or not. There are lots of things that we deal with and come in contact with every day, from alcohol to food to cigarettes, a lot of the things that aren't good for our health. But the American people ought to have the right to make those decisions on their own." …

Schieffer: "If you should become Speaker, you could set a good example for the country by saying, 'I'm going to stop smoking.' Maybe you could get the President, I understand he smokes too, maybe the two of you could find a way to try to stop smoking. That'd be kind of a good thing, wouldn't it?"

Boehner: "Bob, I appreciate your suggestion."

-----Original Message-----
From: Mike Allen [redacted] B6
To: Undisclosed recipients:;
Sent: Sun, Sep 12, 2010 8:43 am
Subject: POLITICO Playbook, presented by Washington's NewsChannel 8: To deprive Dems of an issue, Boehner would compromise on tax-cut extension -- NYT softens Boehner wording after aide complains -- Maureen Dowd's sister, Peggy, may switch from Obama to ROMNEY

BREAKING – DNC goes up on national cable Tuesday with an ad on "The Boehner plan." A DNC official says it'll be up a little less than a week: ""This ad is one product we'll use to define Mr. Boehner, his ethics and priorities for the American people - and there will be others." YouTube http://bit.ly/dB6Yb1

ROBERT GIBBS (@PressSec) tweets on the NYT front-pager on House Republican Leader John Boehner: "Headline says it all...A G.O.P. Leader Tightly Bound to Lobbyists http://nyti.ms/bxbF4D ... Don't forget this handy clip & save graphic of 'K Street Cabinet' (black & white photo doesn't do that tan justice!) http://nyti.ms/9n1wVp"

BOEHNER taped "Face the Nation" yesterday from West Chester, Ohio:

Bob Schieffer: "I want to make sure I heard what you said correctly: you're saying that you are willing to vote for those middle class tax cuts, even though the bill will not include … extending the tax cuts for the upper bracket American."

Rep. Boehner: "Bob, we don't know what the bill's going to say, alright? If the only option I have is to vote for those at 250 and below, of course I'm going to do that. But I'm going to do everything I can to fight to make sure that we extend the current tax rates for all Americans."

A Boehner aide reads between the lines: "Despite what Obama says, Republicans are not holding middle-class tax cuts hostage and we're not going to let him get away with those types of false claims. Our focus remains on getting bipartisan support for a freeze on all current rates, because that is what is best for the economy and small business job creation. Boehner's words were calculated to deprive Obama of the ability to continue making those false claims, and as a result we are in a better position rhetorically to pressure more Democrats to support a full freeze."

AN INSTANT CLASSIC:

Schieffer: "Mr. Boehner, I'm going to ask you this question because I'm not objective about this - I'm a cancer survivor, I used to be a heavy smoker. Do you still smoke?"

Boehner: "I do."

Schieffer: "You have taken $340,000 from the tobacco industry. They've been the largest contributor to your political campaigns over the year. How do you square that with the fact that cigarette smoking is the leading cause of preventable deaths in this country, 435,000 people, their deaths are linked to cancer, that's 1 in 5. How do you justify that in your own mind?"

Boehner: "Bob, tobacco is a legal product in America. The American people have a right to decide for themselves whether they want to partake or not. There are lots of things that we deal with and come in contact with every day, from alcohol to food to cigarettes, a lot of the things that aren't good for our health. But the American people ought to have the right to make those decisions on their own." …

Schieffer: "If you should become Speaker, you could set a good example for the country by saying, 'I'm going to stop smoking.' Maybe you could get the President, I understand he smokes too, maybe the two of you could find a way to try to stop smoking. That'd be kind of a good thing, wouldn't it?"

Boehner: "Bob, I appreciate your suggestion."

* A message from Washington's NewsChannel 8: Comcast has hired a vast army of lobbyists to rush through the largest media merger in American history. The Comcast/NBC monopoly would present serious problems for local news in communities across our country. Washington's decision makers must resist the pressure from Comcast and take the necessary time to carefully review this controversial merger to protect the public interest. **

SPOTTED -- Saturday joggers: Sunlen Miller spotted at 18th and Columbia. Lizzie O'Leary at Connecticut and T.

BIRTHDAYS – CBS News' irreplaceable Capitol Hill Producer Jill Jackson (hat tips Kurt Bardella, Joe Brettell) … Henry Waxman ... Sam Brownback ... Politics Daily's Matt Lewis ... (h/ts Patrick Gavin).

TOMORROW: Jim Angle

SLIDE SHOW: The First Lady and Laura Bush embrace yesterday in Shanksville, Pa. Philly Inquirer: "Michelle Obama and Laura Bush led the ceremony on a windswept mountaintop Saturday commemorating the ninth anniversary of the 9/11 attacks, which also marked a turning point in the evolution of the Flight 93 crash site from a scarred landscape to national memorial park." http://yhoo.it/b29QPM

TECH BLOGS: Apple may rush out new iPad version for holidays. http://bit.ly/aBj31P

GAME CHANGE: 2012 OFF TO SLOW START – GOP heavyweights hold back, freezing field compared to past cycles -- Jonathan Martin and Ben Smith: "[T]he primary is on track to start later, and more cautiously, than it has in the recent past. In the fall of 2006, Mitt Romney and John McCain were openly battling over endorsements from Republican operatives, donors and even county sheriffs in the early primary states. The two men beat a well-worn path to New Hampshire, South Carolina, and especially Iowa, where they had to watch their step to avoid tripping over Democratic hopefuls like John Edwards and Evan Bayh. But at the same point four years later, as the 2010 election enters the home stretch, top-tier Republican presidential contenders are hesitant to set foot in the states that kick off the presidential campaign process, let alone issue press releases touting their latest gets there.

--"[The] GOP nominating contest is shaping up … as a game of chicken … Romney, Sarah Palin, Haley Barbour, Mitch Daniels and a few other ambitious figures are largely eyeing each other while publicly holding back, leaving Tim Pawlenty as the only mainstream Republican trudging down the traditional, early path … Together, they're all making a mockery of the conventional wisdom about the longer and longer arcs that modern White House campaigns demand. … There are three main reasons for the delay: The intense focus on the 2010 midterms; the risks of starting too early; and, especially for the best-prepared candidate, Romney, a paralyzing fear of failure in Iowa. In a sense, the incentives this year are reversed: candidates have better reasons to publicly hold off on declaring their candidacy than to try to gain an early foothold." http://bit.ly/an4YW0

STORY DU JOUR – N.Y. Times A1, 1 col. at the fold, "G.O.P. Leader Tightly Bound to Lobbyists," by Eric Lipton: "Mr. Boehner … maintains especially tight ties with a circle of lobbyists and former aides representing some of the nation's biggest businesses … They have contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars to his campaigns, provided him with rides on their corporate jets, socialized with him at luxury golf resorts and waterfront bashes and are now leading fund-raising efforts for his Boehner for Speaker campaign, which is soliciting checks of up to $37,800 each, the maximum allowed. Some of the lobbyists readily acknowledge routinely seeking his office's help — calling the congressman and his aides as often as several times a week." http://nyti.ms/asBs02

--BOEHNER OFFICE REBUTTAL: "Setting the Record Straight: The New York Times' Misleading Attack on Boehner": "There is no surer sign that the liberal establishment is threatened by Leader Boehner than the story that will appear in … [The] New York Times." http://bit.ly/94Tq4D

--A BOEHNER AIDE: "Boehner's positions on the issues he cited are longstanding, and are obviously not the result of one lobbyist's influence. The fact that any reporter would believe or write that Boehner's opposition to a 'cap and trade' national energy tax, for example, is 1) recent, or 2) the result of one lobbyist's influence is ridiculous."

--BEHIND THE CURTAIN: Byron York documents changes the NYT made AFTER the story posted: "Boehner spokesman Michael Steel says he received a fact-checking email from Times reporter Eric Lipton Friday evening asking if Boehner did in fact oppose the cap on greenhouse gases, the tax change for hedge fund executives, the debit card fee cap, and increased fees on oil and gas companies. 'Yes, that is correct,' Steel responded to Lipton, adding 'I can tell you why, if you care.' Steel says he received no further notes from Lipton. Steel says Boehner has long held those positions and does not hold them as a result of lobbying. Hours after the email exchange, the Times story was published online, with the statement from the lobbyist that he had

'won' Boehner's backing on those matters. After Boehner's aides complained, ... [t]he statement that a lobbyist 'won' Boehner's backing was changed to one in which a lobbyist 'sought' Boehner's backing. That's a rather critical change. The Times also added Boehner's defense that these were long-held positions." http://bit.ly/dewsnU

--RATES JUST WENT UP -- GRAPHIC WITH LIPTON STORY – "Boehner's K Street Cabinet: Some of the lobbyists and public affairs consultants with tight links to Representative John A. Boehner: http://nyti.ms/cHYFOy

"FORMER AIDES: John Fish, Reynolds American (Tobacco); Teresa Fish, Electronic Industries Alliance (Electronics); Sam Geduldig, Clark Lytle & Geduldig (Financial services, telecommunications); Terry Holt, HDMK (Health care, energy); Marc Lampkin, Quinn Gillespie & Associates (Financial services, energy, telecommunications); Kevin Madden*, Jim Dyke & Associates (Public affairs, political consulting); Greg Maurer, UPS.

"LONGTIME ASSOCIATES AND FRIENDS: Gary Andres, Dutko Worldwide (Manufacturing, health care, shipping); Sue Andres, Union Pacific; Samuel J. Baptista, The Baptista Group (Financial services); Michael Boland*, Dome Advisors (Financial services); James Boland, Sundquist Anthony LLC (Waste management, financial services); Nicholas E. Calio Citigroup (Financial services); Donald Danner, National Federation of Independent Business; Bruce Gates Altria (Tobacco); Mark Isakowitz, Fierce, Isakowitz and Blalock (Telecommunications, health care, energy); Drew Maloney, Ogilvy Government Relations (energy, pharmaceuticals, finance); Bill Paxon, Akin Gump (Manufacturing, gambling); Dirk Van Dongen, National Association of Wholesaler- Distributors.

"*Not registered as a lobbyist, but works in the political consulting business." http://nyti.ms/cHYFOy

TOP TWEETS:

--Washingtonian editor Garrett M. Graff (@vermontgmg): "At Opening Night for the Opera. Down my row are Justices Ginsburg and Kagan. Ginsburg has a large piece of anti-Fenty lit in her handbag."

--@LarrySabato: "USA has pop of 300m+. At least 1 million are nuts. All have been encouraged to seek fame via outrageous actions, thx to FL feeding frenzy."

TOP STORY – NYT col. 1, "Afghan Security Growing Worse, Aid Groups Say," by Rod Nordland, in Kabul: "Large parts of the country that were once completely safe, like most of the northern provinces, now have a substantial Taliban presence ... The worsening security comes as the Obama administration is under increasing pressure to show results to maintain public support for the war, and raises serious concerns about whether the country can hold legitimate nationwide elections for Parliament next Saturday. Unarmed government employees can no longer travel safely in 30 percent of the country's 368 districts, according to published United Nations estimates ... The number of insurgent attacks has increased significantly ... American military officials say the increased level of violence is related to the rise in the number of its forces here. The last 2,000 of 30,000 new American troops are expected to arrive in the next week or two, military officials say. The result is more military operations, they say, and more opportunities for the insurgents to attack coalition forces." http://nyti.ms/bImb8E

--DOYLE McMANUS, in L.A. Times "Opinion" section, "High-level doubts on Afghanistan: Former officials who once supported the war are now questioning it's worth the cost": "The doubters include Richard N. Haass, president of the Council on Foreign Relations, the closest thing the United States has to an official 'foreign policy establishment'; Leslie H. Gelb, his predecessor; and Robert D. Blackwill, a former aide to President George W. Bush. 'The current strategy isn't working, and it's costing roughly $100 billion a year,' Haass, a former aide to then-Secretary of State Colin L. Powell, told me last week. 'It's time for a major recalibration: not an immediate withdrawal but a significant scaling down of our ambitions.' And last week, a group of 46 foreign policy experts issued a joint report arguing that the goal of building a unified, stable Afghanistan is beyond the ability of the United States, and unnecessary to boot. The panel, the Afghanistan Study Group, included both longtime critics of the war and some who supported U.S. policy until recently. ... They cite three main reasons for their escalating pessimism. The first: setbacks (including a major offensive in Kandahar that was scheduled to be in full swing by now but is only getting underway). Next: Afghan President Hamid Karzai's failure to support a U.S.-sponsored anti-corruption campaign. And finally, there's that $100-billion annual price tag. ... [A]s Obama approaches a December review of his strategy in Afghanistan, the debate is noticeably opening up, driven in part by the weight of that $100-billion cost." http://lat.ms/9XfkyC

9 YEARS AGO THIS MORNING, the WP lede, by Michael Grunwald: "Terrorists unleashed an astonishing air assault on America's military and financial power centers yesterday morning, hijacking four commercial jets and then crashing them into the World Trade Center in New York, the Pentagon and the Pennsylvania countryside."

TOM BROKAW, 9/11/01, as he watched the second tower fall, live on NBC's air: "Manhattan has been changed. Terrorists have declared war … This is war."

WHERE WERE YOU ON 9/11?

--Robert Gibbs (@PressSec) tweets: "Just drove by the Pentagon...remember the smoke coming from it nine yrs ago...thinking of all those we lost that day here and in NY and PA."

--Howard Wolfson: "Was on the 7am train from NYC to DC. We were the last train into Union Station before it was evacuated. Got off the train and was instructed to run out of the building. Discovered hundreds of staffers streaming out of the Senate office buildings towards us. All of the cabs lined up waiting for fares had their radios on and their windows open. I heard the buildings collapse that way. I connected with my wife who was in NYC and prayed for the people I had worked with many years before on the 103rd floor of the WTC."

--Karen Finney: "Saw the first plane from 6th Ave and 11th in NYC - got on what was the last #2 train to stop at Wall Street headed to the NYC Board of Education (where I worked at the time). Will never forget the black smoke that flooded the train car as people ran in; then spent the and night working with the schools Chancellor trying to assess situation in seven schools around ground zero and how to get 1.1 million kids home safely, knowing that in some cases their parent might not be coming home. Quite a shocker to step out of the subway in Brooklyn. Like 5 minutes later, the towers come down."

TOP TALKERS:

MAUREEN DOWD, "When Peggy Left Barry: Plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose": "One of the independent voters Obama will be trying to charm over the next two years is my sister, Peggy, a formerly ardent Obamican (a Republican who changed spots to vote for Obama). … Despite being a Washington native, Peggy believed that the dazzling young newcomer could change Washington. But she has lost a lot of faith now, saying she might vote for Mitt Romney over Obama if Romney is the Republican nominee in 2012. (Sarah Palin shouldn't count on her vote though. In Peggy's words, 'Are you nuts?') Peggy thinks the president has done fine managing W.'s messes in Iraq and Afghanistan. And she lights up at the mention of his vice president, Joe Biden. But she thinks Obama has to get 'a backbone' if he wants to lure her back to the fold. … While Obama's out in the country trying to save Congressional Democrats, he should also think about how he's going to save himself. http://nyti.ms/92Dudr

FRANK RICH, "Time for This Big Dog to Bite Back: The Democrats' obituaries may yet prove premature.": "On Labor Day, the fighting Obama abruptly re-emerged, a far cry from the man whose Oval Office address on Iraq days earlier was about as persuasive as a hostage video. … For a guy facing a tidal wave, the president was so ebullient, you had to wonder if he knew something we didn't. Maybe he simply read the unabridged poll numbers … Those numbers are hardly as monochromatic as advertised. Obama's approval rating, for months a consistent (not imploding) 45-ish percent, still makes him arguably America's most popular national politician. The polls also continue to show that, while both political parties are despised, Democrats are slightly less despised than Republicans. … In a second forceful speech last week, delivered outside Cleveland, Obama titillated the political press by calling out Boehner by name eight times. But though Boehner is a nice soft target … he's merely a front-man. Obama must also call out the powerful interests who are pulling the G.O.P.'s strings (and filling its coffers), whether on Wall Street or in Big Oil or any other sector where special interests are aligned against reform in the public interest. If Obama can speak lucidly about a subject as thorny as race, he can surely do a far more specific job of telling the story of how we got to this economic impasse." http://nyti.ms/bgjS89

WEEK AHEAD – "Pope to warn of dangers of secular society" -- The (London) Sunday Telegraph: "THE POPE will this week urge the Government to protect religious freedoms to allow Christians to follow their beliefs [during a British tour and state visit, Thursday to Saturday]. In a speech to political and religious leaders in Westminster Hall, the Pontiff will deliver a thinly veiled attack on the perceived liberal direction of the country. … Senior Roman Catholic sources said his message would be seen as a criticism of the introduction of equality laws that have impinged on the freedom of religious groups, although he will not directly refer to government policy. A number of Christians have lost their jobs or faced disciplinary action for practising their faith at work by wearing a crucifix or sharing their views on biblical teaching."

MEDIAWATCH – "Bret Baier is the new face of Election Night coverage at Fox News: 40-year-old reporter part of a new generation of political news anchors," by Baltimore Sun's David Zurawik: "Baier steps up this fall as lead political news anchor on Election Night replacing Brit Hume, who moved after the 2008 elections to the role of senior political analyst. Given the way Fox News has come to lead in ratings for coverage of political events since CNN's glory days during the presidential campaign of 2008, Baier's ascension makes for a significant changing of the guard in broadcast journalism. The seat he now occupies in Fox's Washington studios is one of the most influential in American political life — a fact not lost on the boyish-looking anchorman who turned 40 on Aug. 4, which also is President Barack Obama's birthday. … He has been invited for the first time in his career to moderate a televised debate — a role more often reserved for the likes of Jim Lehrer or Bob Schieffer of public and network TV. This one will be held Oct. 4 in Hartford, Conn., in a hotly contested race between Democrat Richard Blumenthal and Republican Linda McMahon for a U.S. Senate seat. …

"As for his hour of news from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. weeknights ['Special Report], Baier almost doubles the combined audience of his competitors on CNN and MSNBC. So far this year, 'Special Report' has an average nightly audience of 2,107,000 in viewers — compared with 604,000 for 'The Ed Show' on MSNBC and 545,000 for Wolf Blitzer's 'Situation Room' on CNN. … Michael Clemente, senior vice president at Fox News, says the foundation laid down by Hume has played a crucial role in Baier's success. 'Brit Hume had the legacy with the audience — a legacy that went back to his days with ABC News,' Clemente says. 'So why has it worked with Bret? First of all, the transition was handled well; Bret filled in quite a bit as Brit was winding down. But people make a judgment pretty quickly, and I think they judged Bret as being an honest, fair and smart reporter. And it wasn't like pulling some guy out of thin air who had just been a news reader on some local station.' … [Baier:] 'You know the Fox Atlanta bureau that I joined in 1998 — that started in my apartment in Atlanta with a fax machine and a cell phone. That was the bureau. And I still have that sense of us being that startup that is still trying to make it all come together." http://bit.ly/apgxA2

SPORTS BLINK – COLLEGE FOOTBALL – AP: "Ohio State and Oklahoma won their BCS championship game rematches and showed that a couple of former powerhouses from the Sunshine State are not quite ready to return to elite status. Behind the running of Terrelle Pryor and a ball-hawking defense, the second-ranked Buckeyes beat No. 12 Miami 36-24 on Saturday at the Horseshoe in Columbus. … In Norman, Okla., Landry Jones bounced back from a sluggish opener and led the 10th-ranked Sooners to an easy 47-17 victory over No. 17 Florida State."

--"USC hangs on for a 17-14 victory over Virginia," by L.A. Times' Gary Klein: "USC's defense is not as bad as it looked in the opener, the offense not nearly as good. Those were the immediate impressions Trojans fans came away with Saturday night at the Coliseum after the 16th-ranked Trojans' 17-14 victory over Virginia. The undisciplined style that resulted in multiple costly penalties? That remained consistent as the Trojans improved to 2-0 under first-year Coach Lane Kiffin. Quarterback Matt Barkley passed for two touchdowns late in the first half and, though the defense gave up a last-minute touchdown, the Trojans earned a harder-than-expected victory over the Cavaliers, a near three-touchdown underdog playing their first game in California. 'I'm extremely disappointed with our performance,' Kiffin said. 'That's the most miserable 2-0 locker room I've ever been in, which is good. I think our players understand.'" http://lat.ms/99w6au

--ESPN TODAY – From release – "ESPN's NFL studio shows return in earnest … for Kickoff Weekend … Chris Berman, recipient of the Pro Football Hall of Fame's 2010 Pete Rozelle Radio-Television Award, returns for his 25th season as host of the Emmy Award-winning Sunday NFL Countdown presented by IBM (11 a.m.), where he will be joined by analysts Cris Carter, Mike Ditka, Tom Jackson, Keyshawn Johnson and Chris Mortensen, and Insider Adam Schefter for the two-hour weekly NFL preview show. After the games, Berman and Jackson will be joined by John Saunders and Trent Dilfer throughout the season during the 7 p.m.

SportsCenter to review all the day's action. Berman and Jackson will team up again at 11 p.m. for 'The Blitz' on SportsCenter."

 A message from Washington's NewsChannel 8: If the Comcast and NBC merger is rushed through the process, our country risks losing a powerful part of our democracy -- locally-owned, independent voices in markets where Comcast/NBC will control both access to the home and multiple channels of news. Dropping the independent news voice won't serve the consumer. It will only serve the interests of Comcast which would also own the other news channels. Please make sure that any merger approval serves the public interest and protects the local news consumers you represent. Don't let Comcast ram this monopoly merger through the review process. **

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, August 31, 2010 1:21 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Update on PSA

fyi

---

From: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Tuesday, August 31, 2010 10:30 AM
To: Dowd, Katie W; McCall, Dawn L; Kenna, Corley; Hensman, Chris D; MacInnes, Duncan H; Bosshardt, Marcia P; Harper, Benjamin W; Jarvis, Catherine J; Sreebny, Daniel
Cc: Klevorick, Caitlin B; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: Update on PSA

Thx katie. As soon as we have clearances let's send out a cable to all pao's asking them to try and get placement on local media outlets.

Jm

---

From: Dowd, Katie W
To: McHale, Judith A; McCall, Dawn L; Kenna, Corley; Hensman, Chris D; MacInnes, Duncan H; Bosshardt, Marcia P; Harper, Benjamin W; Jarvis, Catherine J; Sreebny, Daniel
Cc: Klevorick, Caitlin B
Sent: Tue Aug 31 10:26:39 2010
Subject: Update on PSA

Morning all, wanted to update you on where we are with the PSA for Pakistan that we produced in conjunction with Ad Council. You can view the PSAs here: http://multivu.prnewswire.com/mnr/adcouncil/45926/ - please note this is NOT public yet.

The Ad Council is releasing the PSA @ 1pm today and we will be sending (once approved) a press release out as well linked to state.gov where the PSA's will live. There are TV, Radio and Web versions of the PSA cut into 30 and 60 second spots.

We still are working through some music and image questions with the Ad Council to secure international distribution. We are waiting to hear from them on this. Once we hear, the Ad Council will make some minor edits to the PSA e.g. removing the Text Donation information as it applies only to Americans and re-send the files with the revised transcript. Once we have that, then we can move forward translating into local languages. The Ad Council said they will need an additional 2 to 3 days to make edits but again I am waiting to confirm.

Hope this update is helpful. Please let me know if you have questions. Best, Katie

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Reines, Philippe I <reinesp@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 2:53 PM
To: H
Cc: Adler, Caroline E
Subject: Camera

Monica said you asked about the camera

He is shooting broll for the interview you will do with Julia Roberts later in October - focusing mainly on women's issues. By the time you read this they will be all done.

And FYI, the cameraman (Allan Palmer) and produce(Coby Atlas) might look familiar to you - they are from Tavis Smiley's team, they did his special on you.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, August 31, 2010 1:27 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Ten Lessons re Middle East negotiations boiled down from Sandy and Steve Hadley's set of working papers
Attachments: Ten Lessons for 2010_final.doc; Ten Lessons for 2010_final.pdf; Ten Lessons for 2010 _final.doc; Ten Lessons for 2010_final.pdf

We asked Dan Kurtzer and Scott Lasensky to boil down 10 key lessons from the big book of working papers that Sandy and Steve's USIP task force has produced. They are attached. I think the most useful lessons are #3 re the process is not an end in itself but an opportunity to put forward substantive proposals; #4 re avoiding incrementalism and developing a regional strategy, and #7 on making sure we have a backroom operation to work through all the strategic dimensions of possible bridging proposals.
AM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 6, 2010 8:48 AM
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: NHL scores big PD win in St. Pete!

At the end of the day, it's all about sports.....

---

From: Mellott, Joseph
Sent: Wednesday, October 06, 2010 8:43 AM
To: McHale, Judith A; DiMartino, Kitty
Subject: NHL scores big PD win in St. Pete!

First-Ever NHL-CHL Exhibition Game Helps Break International Ice in St. Petersburg: Thanks to U/S Judith McHale who brought National Hockey League VP Ken Yaffe to Moscow under the auspices of the U.S.-Russia Bilateral Presidential Commission for an icebreaker with Continental Hockey League representatives, St. Petersburg's beloved SKA hockey team hosted the Carolina Hurricanes for an exhilarating exhibition game at the Ice Palace. From the opening ceremony featuring both the U.S. and Russian national anthems, the capacity crowd of 4,500 – including St. Petersburg Governor Valentina Matviyenko, SKA owner and Gazprom Chairman Alexey Miller, Hurricanes owner and Compuware Corporation CEO Peter Karmanos, Jr., and U.S. Consul General Sheila Gwaltney – cheered the two teams on. The heart-pounding, high-scoring game included dazzling play by the 'Canes Eric Staal and Jeff Skinner (Carolina's game MVP) plus SKA favorites Alexei Yashin (SKA's game MVP) and Maksim Sushinski. With Rossiya TV announcing that "we've waited 20 years for this," SKA broke the second period tie and led their team to a 5-3 victory over the 'Canes in the last period. SKA's enthusiastic organ player rocked the crowd with themes from "Ghostbusters" and "The Addams Family" – plus Tina Turner's "Simply the Best" – and helped the Russian crowd give their home team their traditional electrifying support. Continuing the "sports diplomacy" after the game, dozens of avid Russian hockey fans waited patiently by the team buses and were elated when 'Canes Goalie Cam Ward signed autographs and posed for photographs with them. The Russian crowd's enthusiasm for this match as well as their admiration for the American team were ice-crystal clear from the capacity crowd (the stadium only sells out for championship matches or games against their arch rival Moscow team), their cheers for the Hurricanes, plus the extensive media presence, including live nation-wide coverage on Rossiya TV.

Joe Mellott
Special Assistant
Office of the Under Secretary for Public Diplomacy
U.S. Department of State
HST Rm. 5931
202-647-9901

mellottj@state.gov

Help save paper - do you need to print this email?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 3:04 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Celebration of Steven Rattner's "Overhaul"

ok

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 3:13 PM
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Subject: Fw: Celebration of Steven Rattner's "Overhaul"

Pls print and give copy to Eric and one to me.

----- Original Message -----
From: Hajera Dehqanzada <
To: Hajera Dehqanzada <
Sent: Wed Sep 22 13:04:20 2010
Subject: Celebration of Steven Rattner's "Overhaul"

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 17, 2010 4:09 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) American visits Iran blast site under freedom deal

From: Vu, Anny T
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-Iran
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sun Oct 17 16:07:39 2010
Subject: (AP) American visits Iran blast site under freedom deal

TEHRAN (AP) – An Iranian-American businessman freed after more than two years in Tehran's main prison visited survivors of a deadly 2008 mosque bombing as a condition of his release in a scripted event that could carry propaganda value at home. Iranian authorities did not immediately explain their demand for 71-year-old Reza Taghavi to pay homage in the southern city of Shiraz and personally acknowledge an attack in which he denies having any connection. But it would fit neatly into possible Iranian attempts to squeeze multiple messages from Taghavi's October 16 release after 29 months in custody. Taghavi, accompanied by his wife and lawyer, fulfilled his pledge to visit the site of the mosque bombing. They later met with survivors, including people who lost relatives in the attack.

The U.S. and allies fear Iran could use its nuclear fuel labs to eventually produce weapons-grade material. Iran says it only seeks peaceful energy-producing reactors. Taghavi's attorney, former U.S. diplomat Pierre Prosper, said he purposely left American officials out of the negotiations to avoid having his client become a bargaining chip. "Our strategy was to make sure that our dialogue with the [Iranian] government was between us and them," said Prosper, who held five rounds of direct talks with Iranian envoys since Taghavi was jailed.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 6, 2010 9:40 AM
To: McHale, Judith A; H
Subject: RE: NHL scores big PD win in St. Pete!

This is awesome.

---

From: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Wednesday, October 06, 2010 8:48 AM
To: 'H'; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: NHL scores big PD win in St. Pete!

At the end of the day, it's all about sports.....

---

From: Mellott, Joseph
Sent: Wednesday, October 06, 2010 8:43 AM
To: McHale, Judith A; DiMartino, Kitty
Subject: NHL scores big PD win in St. Pete!

First-Ever NHL-CHL Exhibition Game Helps Break International Ice in St. Petersburg: Thanks to U/S Judith McHale who brought National Hockey League VP Ken Yaffe to Moscow under the auspices of the U.S.-Russia Bilateral Presidential Commission for an icebreaker with Continental Hockey League representatives, St. Petersburg's beloved SKA hockey team hosted the Carolina Hurricanes for an exhilarating exhibition game at the Ice Palace. From the opening ceremony featuring both the U.S. and Russian national anthems, the capacity crowd of 4,500 – including St. Petersburg Governor Valentina Matviyenko, SKA owner and Gazprom Chairman Alexey Miller, Hurricanes owner and Compuware Corporation CEO Peter Karmanos, Jr., and U.S. Consul General Sheila Gwaltney – cheered the two teams on. The heart-pounding, high-scoring game included dazzling play by the 'Canes Eric Staal and Jeff Skinner (Carolina's game MVP) plus SKA favorites Alexei Yashin (SKA's game MVP) and Maksim Sushinski. With Rossiya TV announcing that "we've waited 20 years for this," SKA broke the second period tie and led their team to a 5-3 victory over the 'Canes in the last period. SKA's enthusiastic organ player rocked the crowd with themes from "Ghostbusters" and "The Addams Family" – plus Tina Turner's "Simply the Best" – and helped the Russian crowd give their home team their traditional electrifying support. Continuing the "sports diplomacy" after the game, dozens of avid Russian hockey fans waited patiently by the team buses and were elated when 'Canes Goalie Cam Ward signed autographs and posed for photographs with them. The Russian crowd's enthusiasm for this match as well as their admiration for the American team were ice-crystal clear from the capacity crowd (the stadium only sells out for championship matches or games against their arch rival Moscow team), their cheers for the Hurricanes, plus the extensive media presence, including live nation-wide coverage on Rossiya TV.

Joe Mellott
Special Assistant
Office of the Under Secretary for Public Diplomacy
U.S. Department of State
HST Rm. 5931
202-647-9901

mellottj@state.gov

Help save paper - do you need to print this email?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, October 6, 2010 9:48 AM
To: H
Subject: H: Got this poll done with Brock; Begala helped. Sid http://www.politico.com/static/PPM170_101005_boehner.html

Our top message--exposing Boehner as beholden to special interests--beat the Republicans" attack by 20 points with swing voters. Our second highest rated message--connecting Karl Rove"s secret efforts to hijack our elections to Boehner--beat the Republican attack by 15 points with swing voters and was the top rated message among Democratic likely voters.

Branding Boehner
RAPIDRESPONSEMEMO · OCTOBER6, 2010
ANALYST: DREWWESTEN, PH.D., WESTENSTRATEGIES
Karl Rove is back in business -- directing tens of millions in secret corporate cash to GOP campaigns to hijack our elections and our public discourse. If he's successful, John Boehner will become Speaker of the House. But the last thing Rove wants is for Boehner to be seen as the face of the GOP. That's why he's claiming it"s an ""inexplicable"" mistake for President Obama to put Boehner front and center. Progressives know better than to take advice from Rove.
Our new message testing shows that progressives should not only talk about Boehner but define him and his agenda. Every narrative we tested about Boehner -- from his loyalty to special interests and corporate donors over the interests of the middle class to Karl Rove"s efforts to elevate him as Speaker -- beat the Republicans" toughest attack language on Obama, Pelosi and Reid. Currently, Boehner is largely unknown, but when voters are told about him, they don't like what they hear.
The following ""one-liners"" beat GOP attack rhetoric by double digits with both likely and swing votersii:
The brief statements above beat this Republican attack:
""Obama, Pelosi and Reid have abused their power to impose an expansive government and destroyed our economy in the process. John Boehner and the Republicans won"t let them continue.""
Does Not Speak for Us or Our Values
□ We need a Speaker who is also a listener, who can hear the voices of ordinary Americans.
□ The Speaker of the House is a heartbeat away from the Presidency. Unfortunately, we know where John Boehner"s heart is, and it isn"t with the middle class.
□ We need moderation, not extremism. If John Boehner wants to speak for a party that has vowed to end Social Security, Medicare and public education--and force women who"ve been raped to bear their rapist"s child--that"s his business. But he doesn"t speak for America or American values.
Cares More about Special Interests
□ Ordinary Americans need a Speaker for their interests, not for the interests of billionaires and corporations that are outsourcing our jobs.
□ It"s not hard to keep a tan like John Boehner"s when you"re always out on the golf course with some CEO or lobbyist.
□ It"s time we return to government of, by, and for the people, not government of, bought, and paid for by special interests. But in John Boehner, big business has finally found their man.
Helped Invent the Problems We Face
□ John Boehner understands deficits. He"s spent nearly 20 years in Washington creating them.
□ John Boehner knows the ways of Washington. He helped invent them: Earmarks, deficits, and tax breaks for corporations that outsource our jobs to China.
Branding Boehner
Page 2
KEYS TO CONNECTING
1. Emphasize whose voices matter to Boehner: Voters want a Speaker who listens to the voice of the people, not the big corporations and lobbyists who Boehner represents.

2. Draw a strong contrast between the interests of working Americans and the special interests of powerful corporations: Speak strongly to populist themes that focus on the loyalty of Boehner and the Republicans in Congress to their corporate donors, like the tobacco CEOs whose campaign donations Boehner handed out on the House floor, over the interests and values of ordinary Americans.
3. Focus on realities that are hard for Boehner to defend: the social and economic extremism of his party and his long history in Washington helping to create the problems we face today.

NARRATIVES THAT BEAT THE GOP ATTACK

Longer narratives against Boehner beat a similar, but more in-depth Republican message, based on language drawn directly from Boehner and other conservative leaders:

Our top message--exposing Boehner as beholden to special interests--beat the Republicans" attack by 20 points with swing voters. Our second highest rated message--connecting Karl Rove"s secret efforts to hijack our elections to Boehner--beat the Republican attack by 15 points with swing voters and was the top rated message among Democratic likely voters.

i We surveyed a national sample of 1,013 adults matching the demographics of registered voters from October 2-3, 2010 using online dial testing. We analyzed their responses as they listened to narratives to understand what they found compelling, as well as their overall ratings of each narrative and additional ""one-liners."" The numbers reported here are likely underestimates of the strength of the narratives, as the statistics refer to the original narratives tested prior to revising them based on analysis of online dial tests.

ii Swing voters are defined as those who described themselves as anywhere from weak/moderate Republicans through Independents to weak/moderate Democrats.

THE REPUBLICAN ATTACK ON OBAMA, PELOSI AND REID

Obama, Pelosi and Reid have abused their power to impose an expansive and intrusive government and destroyed our economy in the process. Democrats think they can get away with their job-killing agenda by ramming it down people"s throats, excluding opposing viewpoints and eliminating fair debate. They are turning their backs on American families and businesses as they continue to tax, borrow and spend into oblivion. John Boehner and the Republicans believe government should reflect the priorities of the American people--priorities that have been ignored, even mocked by the powers-that-be in Washington. Obama, Pelosi and Reid must be stopped from raising taxes on any American during a recession and spending money we don"t have on big government programs no one wants. John Boehner and the Republicans are listening to the American people and understand that government is not the answer, it"s the problem.

""Boehner and Rove""- After the Iraq War went south and the economy went under, most of us thought we"d never hear again from Karl Rove, the architect of the Bush revolution. But Rove is back in business, directing tens of millions in secret corporate cash to hijack our elections, running ads against Members of Congress who want to put the public interest over the special interests. He and John Boehner aren"t working for ordinary Americans. They"re working for the big corporations that outsource our jobs and get tax breaks for doing it. Boehner"s voted down the line for big bonuses for bankers, big tax breaks for big oil, and big loopholes for insurance companies that discriminate against people with ""pre-existing conditions""——which is all of us if we just live long enough. We should be restoring the American Dream for all Americans, not just for the few, and we need a Speaker who stands with the middle class.

""They found their man""- We need to return to government of, by, and for the people, not government of, bought, and paid for by special interests. It"s time billionaires and big businesses paid their fair share of taxes rather than paying politicians to give them special tax breaks and loopholes. They"re putting a lot of money into John Boehner, and for good reason: they know as Speaker, he"d speak for them, not for ordinary Americans. Just ask the tobacco company CEOs whose campaign donations he handed out on the floor of the House of Representatives——which is supposed to be the People"s House, not the smokers" lounge. Or ask the bankers who played Russian roulette with our homes and jobs, who got out their checkbooks as he and his fellow Republicans held a special meeting with them this summer promising to block any efforts to hold Wall Street accountable. We need a Speaker whose voice is our voice, who"ll spend less time working on his tan and more time working on the problems of middle class Americans.

""Boehner and Rove""- After the Iraq War went south and the economy went under, most of us thought we"d never hear again from Karl Rove, the architect of the Bush revolution. But Rove is back in business, directing tens of millions in secret corporate cash to hijack our elections, running ads against Members of Congress who want to put the public interest over the special interests. He and John Boehner aren"t working for ordinary Americans. They"re working for the big corporations that outsource our jobs and get tax breaks for doing it. Boehner"s voted down the line for big bonuses for bankers, big tax breaks for big oil, and big loopholes for insurance companies that discriminate against people with ""pre-existing conditions""——which is all of us if we just live long enough. We should be restoring the American Dream for all Americans, not just for the few, and we need a Speaker who stands with the middle class.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, August 31, 2010 1:36 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Subject: one more, and I'll stop bombarding you
Attachments: Peace Talks Short.doc; ATT1381640.txt; Peace Talks Short.doc; ATT1381640.txt

I don't know if you had time to read the longer paper from Louise Diamond that I sent you, but here she has boiled down her basic arguments into 700 words.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 17, 2010 5:10 PM
To: H
Subject:

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B11.4(B) 1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 3:30 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw:

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Morningstar, Richard L
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Stein, Daniel D; Goldwyn, David L
Sent: Wed Sep 22 15:15:34 2010
Subject:

Please pass on to S.

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

Dear Madam Secretary,

I would like to update you on the Turkmenistan-Afghanistan-Pakistan-India (TAPI) pipeline. Pres. Berdimuhamedov has been very active politically over the past several weeks. He has had several meetings of experts from the four countries and will have a Summit of the leaders of the four countries in December.

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 09/21/2035

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 6, 2010 10:45 AM
To: H
Subject: Bill Burns

It's worth you checking in with him before the meeting. His quick report of meeting with Allawi:

1. Allawi said he pulled back from striking a deal with ISCI because he is concerned that the Shia representation is too small and there is too much difficulty in trying to widen
2. Allawi asked bill if he thought Maliki was serious, suggesting that he was toying with the idea of a grand coalition
3. Allawi will see Barzani on the 11th

Bill's overall take is that Allawi might now be looking to test the wider coalition proposition and is not as interested in the ISCI gambit as first option.

Bill has also seen Al-Mahdi Talabani and Zebari. He said there would be a good meeting with Maliki -- he's obviously feeling confident, but was firm on limiting role of Sadrists and need to bring Iraqiyya into inclusive govt.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772383 Date: 08/31/2015

Reflections on the Mideast Peace Talks

RELEASE IN FULL

By Louise Diamond, Ph.D.

As the direct Israeli-Palestinian peace talks in Washington progress, the U.S. mediation team will need to be attentive to several invisible dynamics. Even as the parties are talking about specifics – boundary lines, water rights, and such – there's more going on under the surface that, if ignored, can derail a successful conclusion.

The first concerns leadership. Everyone already knows the basic elements of a two-state solution. What we have never seen is the personal and political will and courage, on all sides and at the same time, to make the deal. There are bitter pills and unfulfilled dreams for both parties in this settlement, and pockets of resistance to it – sometimes violent – in both populations.

To manage that successfully, leaders need to articulate the immense gains as well, a positive future vision so compelling as to make the sacrifices worthwhile. This vision needs to be framed from a big-picture perspective: a just, viable, and sustainable peace between Israeli and Palestinian states and peoples that also brings regional security, stability, and prosperity. Every concrete item under discussion should be referred to that goal: how will agreeing or not agreeing on any one matter contribute to that ultimate outcome?

In addition to a shared vision, the other factor essential to true peace is a commitment to end, and eventually heal, the acute pain and suffering. In deep-rooted conflicts such as this, the parties develop recognizable patterns intended to help ameliorate the pain. They will emphasize accusing each other of being the roadblock; setting up the other side to fail so it can be blamed for lack of progress; or seeking to convince outsiders that the other side is at fault so as to avoid taking responsibility for its own actions.

Another pattern involves competing victimhoods. While each side has indeed been the target of un-rightable wrongs, emphasizing the role of victim might seem easier than seeing how one's own behavior has contributed to a mutual dance of spiraling enmity. Or each party may insist that its suffering is bigger, stronger, or more worthy of sympathy than that of the other side, as if there were a yardstick for suffering.

What is true, here and in all violent conflicts, is that the loss of life, homes, loved ones, hope, land, and way of life in each individual's experience is immeasurable. There is deep trauma on both sides. Each side has inflicted harm on the other, and has experienced its own pain within the context of its history and collective narrative. Clearly the road to peace will need to involve the building of trust, the healing of wounds, and ultimately, reconciliation.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772383 Date: 08/31/2015

These current peace talks are an opportunity for the parties to stop the cycle of violence before it escalates even further. Each missed opportunity only makes the healing journey that much harder, and with decades of broken bodies, agreements, and dreams, that road is already difficult enough.

So, the combination of a compelling vision and a commitment to stop the violence and start the healing are the true components of a successful peace process, regardless of any specific details of an agreement. Necessary, but not sufficient, I would suggest. The third element has to do with transforming the essential story of the relationship.

Jews and Arabs have been in a family relationship from biblical times. Every family fights occasionally, but this feud has infected the whole world with its bitter and deadly consequences. The only way to get a viable peace is to change the core story of this relationship from the rabid 'us' against 'them' narrative to one about 'we.'

'We' are in this relationship together and always will be, and can choose to take each other down or raise each other up. 'We' are more than just ourselves; 'we' are also our neighbors in a larger regional story. 'We' are our ancestors through whose courage and anguish we came to this point, and our grandchildren who will bear the consequences of what we create. Forging a partnership of 'we' can and must be the lynchpin of this peace journey.

There is a difference between signing a peace accord and securing a lasting peace. The U.S. mediation team will be concerned primarily with the former in this current round of talks. I sincerely hope they will also keep in mind the latter, and the invisible dynamics at play in the process. Secretary Clinton speaks of moving from a multi-polar world to a multi-partner world. These peace talks are a unique opportunity on that road.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 6, 2010 11:01 AM
To: H
Subject: Statement

You asked about this. It was Walter Isaacson.

New BBG chief wants more money to combat "enemies" such as China and Russia Posted By Josh Rogin Tuesday, October 5, 2010 - 4:43 PM

The Broadcasting Board of Governors (BBG) has a new chairman in Walter Isaacson, and the former CNN and Time magazine chief is calling for even more money for the BBG to combat the public diplomacy efforts of America's "enemies," which he identifies as Iran, Venezuela, Russia, and China.

The BBG, which oversees a $700 million annual budget to run such organizations as the Voice of America, Radio Free Europe, and Radio Free Asia, funds breakthrough reporting in some of the most dangerous parts of the world, but at the same time is facing increased competition from other governments' forays into international broadcasting.

Isaacson said that other countries are stepping up their international broadcasting efforts and that the Congress must allow the U.S. government to do the same.

"We can't allow ourselves to be out-communicated by our enemies," he said. "You've got Russia Today, Iran's Press TV, Venezuela's TeleSUR, and of course, China is launching an international broadcasting 24-hour news channel with correspondents around the world [and has] reportedly set aside six to ten billion [dollars] -- we've to go to Capitol Hill with that number -- to expand their overseas media operations."

Isaacson said that combating internet censorship would be a major focus of the BBG under his leadership and that China and Iran were the prime targets.

"China, Iran, and other countries block democratic impulses using their later technologies, and Beijing has deployed armies of cyber militias to go after their country's cyber dissidents," he said. "The BBG is at the forefront of combating this. Through constant innovation and technical evolution, our engineers are opening up the Internet gateway for audiences in China and Iran."

"We know where we stand in the fight for Internet freedom," Isaacson said. "Wherever there is a firewall, it's our duty to storm it, to denounce it and to circumvent it."

Isaacson was speaking at last week's 60th anniversary celebration for Radio Free Europe, which he credited as contributing to the end of the Cold War. He made it clear the BBG's outlets will stick to reporting the news objectively, even if that conflicts with the foreign policy of the Obama administration.

"It's sometimes said that our international broadcasting is in a difficult position because by law and by tradition it's tasked with two separate missions that might conflict: first of all, covering the news with the highest journalistic standards and secondly, being a part of America's public diplomacy by accurately conveying its policies and values to the world," Isaacson said.

"Let me say to you, my fellow journalists, that I will stress and we will stress the primacy of the first of these missions, our mission of being credible journalists, because in fact, it's the only way to carry out the second mission. You can't do it unless you're credible and telling the truth, and in the end, the truth is on our side."

Pressed by The Cable to explain exactly what that means, especially in light of reports that the Obama administration sought to influence BBG reporting after the disputed Iranian presidential elections, Isaacson promised he wouldn't hesitate to air views that contradict American foreign policy on BBG stations.

He said that the goals of American foreign policy and the objectives of credible journalism overlap about 90 percent of the time -- as for the other 10 percent, a choice must be made.

"I feel it's the role of the BBG to always make the choice on the side of credible journalism, just as you would in the private sector," Isaacson said. "We can never compromise our credibility. And in doing so, that will probably help further the foreign policy interests of the United States. But if it's ever a real conflict, our goal one is to protect our credibility."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 12, 2010 11:55 AM
To: H; Fuchs, Michael H
Subject: Re: Cookstoves

Great news. Thanks for doing the call. We will get in touch to nail down their participation.

It has not been announced yet but we also learned that Shell Company is coming in as a founding member at $6M over three years.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M; Fuchs, Michael H
Sent: Sun Sep 12 07:48:57 2010
Subject: Cookstoves

The Norwegian FM told me Norway would join the Alliance and we should coordinate w his UN Rep. Will you pls follow up? Thx.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Feltman, Jeffrey D <FeltmanJD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 12, 2010 12:07 PM
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: RE: John Kerry

I will have with me a big file on this; I raised the case on the margins of Aboul-Gheit's meeting with you on August 30. We will work with CA to have a letter prepared to take.

The case is typical in that the U.S. parent has custody that the Egyptian courts have not yet recognized (case is pending). But it's atypical in that it's the mother who took the kids to Egypt and the father who is in the U.S. We're in touch with Senator Kerry's office on this.

Jeffrey Feltman
Assistant Secretary
Bureau of Near Eastern Affairs
Department of State
202-647-7209

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Saturday, September 11, 2010 5:56 PM
To: Feltman, Jeffrey D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: John Kerry

The Senator called to ask me to raise the Egyptian custody case of the mother absconding w her children from the US using fake passports. He said he has reason to believe if I ask Mubarak directly, "you could bring the kids home w you." Do you know about this?

I'd like to have a letter to Mubarak prepared outlining the facts that I could discuss and leave w him, assuming any of this makes sense.

Pls advise.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, August 31, 2010 3:14 PM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: one more, and I'll stop bombarding you

Printed for her

-----Original Message-----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Tuesday, August 31, 2010 1:36 PM
To: 'H'
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Subject: one more, and I'll stop bombarding you

I don't know if you had time to read the longer paper from Louise Diamond that I sent you, but here she has boiled down her basic arguments into 700 words.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 17, 2010 5:34 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) With statehood, Palestine ready to end all claims

From: Vu, Anny T
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sun Oct 17 17:25:43 2010
Subject: (AP) With statehood, Palestine ready to end all claims

RAMALLAH (AP) – Palestinian President Abbas said the Palestinians are willing to end all historic claims against Israel once they get their state as part of a peace deal. An end-of-claims declaration is a long-standing Israeli demand, and Abbas addressed the issue in an interview with Israel TV on October 17. Abbas said negotiating with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu remains his preferred choice, but that he cannot return to talks unless settlement expansion stops. Abbas said other options remain on the table, including seeking UN recognition of a Palestinian state. He said resignation is not an option for now.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 5:08 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Russia warns of conflict between North and South Korea

From: Sidereas, Evyenia M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Wed Sep 22 16:27:55 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Russia warns of conflict between North and South Korea

MOSCOW (Reuters) - Russia warned that "conflict" could break out any day between North and South Korea, saying tension between the two countries was at its worst in a decade. The unusually stark words by Russian deputy foreign minister Alexei Borodavkin come two months after the North said it would wage a "sacred war" against the United States and its ally, South Korea. Washington replied that it would not enter a "war of words" with the North.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 12, 2010 12:54 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Israeli PM: Current settlement curbs won't remain

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sun Sep 12 12:47:42 2010
Subject: (AP) Israeli PM: Current settlement curbs won't remain

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu said the current restrictions on West Bank settlements will not remain in place, however there will still be some limits on construction.

Israel's 10-month slowdown on new housing starts in West Bank settlements expires at the end of this month and is a key point of contention in newly launched peace talks with Palestinians.

Netanyahu told Mideast envoy Tony Blair the Palestinians want a total freeze in construction. "That will not happen," he said.

Israel will not build "tens of thousands of housing units that are in the pipeline, but we will not freeze the lives of the residents" of the settlements, Netanyahu said.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, August 31, 2010 5:39 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: 8/31 Pakistan Flood Relief Donations Report

FYI

---

From: Klevorick, Caitlin B
Sent: Tuesday, August 31, 2010 3:16 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: Fw: 8/31 Pakistan Flood Relief Donations Report

---

From: Grover, Charles H
To: Kennedy, Patrick F
Cc: Davisson, Brandon; Anderson, Roger W; Bordley, Donna; Klevorick, Caitlin B; Shah, Khushali P; Thessin, James H; Kaplan, Sid L; Millette, James L
Sent: Tue Aug 31 15:15:38 2010
Subject: 8/31 Pakistan Flood Relief Donations Report

Please find the updated Pakistan Flood Relief donation totals through August 30:

1. Have received $37,780 in pledge funds from texting all at $10 each so 3,778 pledges
2. Have received $246,423 in credit card donations from 2,736 donors
3. Have received $ 9,760 in ACH donations from 118 donors
4. Have received $50,144 in mailed in checks/cash from 276 donors

So in total we have received $344,107 in pledges and donations from 6,908 donors

On average this is about $50 per donation/pledge. If you excluded the ten dollar pledges/donations the average donation was $98 dollars.

Charlie

Charles H. Grover
Deputy Director
Bureau of Resource Management
Global Financial Services (RM/GFS)
Department of State
Charleston, SC

843-308-5607 phone
843-308-5577 fax

Save a tree... please don't print this e-mail unless you really need to

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 22, 2010 9:25 PM
To: H
Subject: You up? Can you talk?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 12, 2010 1:56 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Hamas: Israeli strike in Gaza kills 3 Palestinians

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-NEA; NEWS-Mahogany; PA FO Group
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sun Sep 12 13:15:13 2010
Subject: (AP) Hamas: Israeli strike in Gaza kills 3 Palestinians

JERUSALEM (AP) - Hamas security officials said three Palestinians were killed by Israeli tank fire in the northern Gaza Strip. Five people were wounded.

There was no immediate comment September 12 from the Israeli military.

Israeli forces and Palestinians frequently clash in the area.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Coleman, Claire L <ColemanCL@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 6, 2010 3:55 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Reminder re Mike Rienzi

Madame Secretary,

You asked me to remind you to have President Clinton get in touch with Mike Rienzi. His contact info is below.

Mike Rienzi
Rienzi and Sons
18-81 Steinway St
Astoria, NY 11105

B6

Claire L. Coleman
Office Manager to the Secretary of State
U.S. Department of State
Tel: 202-647-7098
E-Mail: ColemanCL@state.gov

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 12, 2010 1:58 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (The Detroit News) Burned Quran smeared with feces found at East Lansing mosque

In case u didn't see story?

---

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; Hensman, Chris D
Cc: SES-O_CMS; SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sun Sep 12 11:41:08 2010
Subject: (The Detroit News) Burned Quran smeared with feces found at East Lansing mosque

(The Detroit News) - A burned Quran was found at a mosque in East Lansing September 11, prompting the Michigan chapter of the Council on American-Islamic Relations (CAIR-MI) to ask the FBI to investigate.

CAIR-MI reports that officials of the Islamic Center of East Lansing say vandals left a burned Quran at the front entrance of the mosque and scatted pages in the street nearby.

"The perpetrators of this unconscionable act of religious intimidation must be apprehended and prosecuted to the full extent of state and federal law," CAIR-MI Executive Director Dawud Walid, said in a statement.

Torn pages of the Quran appeared to be smeared with feces, CAIR officials said.

A spokesman for the FBI could not immediately be reached for comment.

A Florida pastor's plan to burn a Quran on Saturday, the ninth anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, resulted in worldwide condemnation and protests. Pastor Terry Jones of Gainesville, Fla., later abandoned his plan.

From The Detroit News: http://www.detnews.com/article/20100912/METRO/9120311/1361/Burned-Quran-smeared-with-feces-found-at-East-Lansing-mosque#ixzz0zKXB6q00

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,1.4(D)

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 12, 2010 1:59 PM
To: H

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

Ops update on sara shourd:

Per 0420 telcon with Embassy Bern CG Ed Birsner:

[redacted]

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 09/12/2030

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 6, 2010 6:11 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: (Reuters) Netanyahu seeks loyalty oath to Jewish nation-state

---

From: Hsiang, Margaret E
Sent: Wednesday, October 06, 2010 5:57 PM
To: NEWS-NEA; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III; SES-O_OS
Subject: (Reuters) Netanyahu seeks loyalty oath to Jewish nation-state

JERUSALEM (Reuters) - Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu will push for legislation to require those wanting to become Israeli citizens to pledge loyalty to the "nation-state of the Jewish people." Under Israeli law, Jews wanting to immigrate to Israel are granted automatic citizenship and non-Jews have to take a loyalty oath to the "state of Israel".

The amendment would win favor with one of Netanyahu's key coalition partners, Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman, who leads the right-wing Israel our Home party. Lieberman has advocated a loyalty oath to the Jewish state for all Israelis, including Arab citizens who make up some 20 percent of the population.

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, September 12, 2010 3:27 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Fw: Chas Freeman's Speech in Oslo -- YOU SHOULD READ
Attachments: Chas Freeman Speech.docx; Chas Freeman Speech.docx

----- Original Message -----
From: Anne-Marie Slaughter [redacted] B6
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Sun Sep 12 15:20:15 2010
Subject: Chas Freeman's Speech in Oslo -- YOU SHOULD READ

Fmr. Amb. Chas Freeman, whom I know is on the outs w/ us but who nevertheless merits the respect of many of the smartest foreign policy analysts I know, gave the attached speech to the Norwegian Institute of International Affairs in Oslo on Sept 1, the day before you held the opening peace talks in DC. His speech has been widely circulated on the Internet since then, so you should at least skim it for that reason alone. It is long, and there are parts of it you will strongly disagree with, but I would still recommend reading it, above all now. But given your time constraints, in the attached document I have excerpted the parts I think are most valuable for us and added a few comments of my own and then included the speech as a whole. In particular, given your interest in Palestinian/Arab psychology and where I think you personally can make a mark that has eluded others, I would point you to the three excerpted graphs below.

"Arabic has two quite different words that are both translated as "negotiation," making a distinction that doesn't exist in either English or Hebrew. One word, "musaawama," refers to the no-holds-barred bargaining process that takes place in bazaars between strangers who may never see each other again and who therefore feel no obligation not to scam each other. Another, "mufaawadhat," describes the dignified formal discussions about matters of honor and high principle that take place on a basis of mutual respect and equality between statesmen who seek a continuing relationship.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's travel to Jerusalem was a grand act of statesmanship to initiate a process of mufaawadhat - relationship-building between leaders and their polities. So was the Arab peace initiative of 2002. It called for a response in kind. The West muttered approvingly but did not act. After a while, Israel responded with intermittent, somewhat oblique suggestions of willingness to haggle over terms. But an offer to bicker over the terms on which a grand gesture has been granted is, not surprisingly, seen as insultingly unresponsive.

I [this is Freeman talking] cite this not to suggest that non-Arabs should adopt Arabic canons of thought, but to make a point about diplomatic effectiveness. To move a negotiating partner in a desired direction, one must understand how that partner understands things and help him to see a way forward that will bring him to an end he has been persuaded to want. One of the reasons we can't seem to move things as we desire in the Middle East is that we don't make much effort to understand how others reason and how they rank their interests."

Arabic has two quite different words that are both translated as "negotiation," making a distinction that doesn't exist in either English or Hebrew. One word, "musaawama," refers to the no-holds-barred bargaining process that takes place in bazaars between strangers who may never see each other again and who therefore feel no obligation not to scam each other. Another, "mufaawadhat," describes the dignified formal discussions about matters of honor and high principle that take place on a basis of mutual respect and equality between statesmen who seek a continuing relationship.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's travel to Jerusalem was a grand act of statesmanship to initiate a process of mufaawadhat - relationship-building between leaders and their polities. So was the Arab peace initiative of 2002. It called for a response in kind. The West muttered approvingly but did not act. After a while, Israel responded with intermittent, somewhat oblique suggestions of willingness to haggle over terms. But an offer to bicker over the terms on which a grand gesture has been granted is, not surprisingly, seen as insultingly unresponsive.

I cite this not to suggest that non-Arabs should adopt Arabic canons of thought, but to make a point about diplomatic effectiveness. To move a negotiating partner in a desired direction, one must understand how that partner understands things and help him to see a way forward that will bring him to an end he has been persuaded to want. One of the reasons we can't seem to move things as we desire in the Middle East is that we don't make much effort to understand how others reason and how they rank their interests.

EXCERPTS FROM CHAS FREEMAN SPEECH WITH SOME NOTES FROM AMS (SPEECH IN ITS ENTIRELY FOLLOWS)

Peace is a pattern of stability acceptable to those with the capacity to disturb it by violence. It is almost impossible to impose. It cannot become a reality, still less be sustained, if those who must accept it are excluded from it. This reality directs our attention to who is not at this gathering in Washington and what must be done to remedy the problems these absences create.

Obviously, the party that won the democratically expressed mandate of the Palestinian people to represent them - Hamas - is not there. Yet there can be no peace without its buy-in. Egypt and Jordan have been invited as observers. Yet they have nothing to add to the separate peace agreements each long ago made with Israel. (Both these agreements were explicitly premised on grudging Israeli undertakings to accept Palestinian self-determination. The Jewish state quickly finessed both.)

Activists from the Jewish diaspora disproportionately staff the American delegation. A failure to reconcile either American Jews or the Palestine diaspora to peace would doom any accord. But the Palestinian diaspora will be represented in Washington only in tenuous theory, not in fact.

Other Arabs, including the Arab League and the author of its peace initiative, Saudi Arabia, will not be at the talks tomorrow. The reasons for this are both simple and complex. At one level they reflect both a conviction that this latest installment of the "peace process" is just another in a long series of public entertainments for the American electorate and also a lack of confidence in the authenticity of the Palestinian delegation. At another level, they result from the way the United States has defined the problems to be solved and the indifference to Arab interests and views this definition evidences. Then too, they reflect disconnects in political culture and negotiating style between Israelis, Arabs, and Americans.

To begin with, neither Israel nor the conveners of this proposed new "peace process" have officially acknowledged or responded to the Arab peace initiative of 2002. This offered normalization of relations with the Jewish state, should Israel make peace with the Palestinians. Instead, the United States and the Quartet have seemed to pocket the Arab offer, ignore its precondition that Israelis come to terms with Palestinians, and gone on to levy new demands.

In this connection, making Arab recognition of Israel's "right to exist" the central purpose of the "peace process" offends Arabs on many levels. In framing the issue this way, Israel and the United States appear to be asking for something well beyond pragmatic accommodation of the reality of a Jewish state in the Middle East. To the Arabs, Americans now seem to be insisting on Arab endorsement of the idea of the state of Israel, the means by which that state was established, and the manner in which it has comported itself. Must Arabs really embrace Zionism before Israel can cease expansion and accept peace?

Arabs and Muslims familiar with European history can accept that European anti-Semitism justified the establishment of a homeland for traumatized European Jews. But asking them even implicitly to agree that the forcible eviction of Palestinian Arabs was a morally appropriate means to this end is both a nonstarter and seriously off-putting. So is asking them to affirm that resistance to such displacement was and is sinful. Similarly, the Arabs see the demand that they recognize a Jewish state with no fixed borders as a clever attempt to extract their endorsement of Israel's unilateral expansion at Palestinian expense.

B5

The lack of appeal in this approach has been compounded by a longstanding American habit of treating Arab concerns about Israel as a form of anti-Semitism and tuning them out. Instead of hearing out and addressing Arab views, U.S. peace processors have repeatedly focused on soliciting Arab acts of kindness toward Israel. They argue that gestures of acceptance can help Israelis overcome their Holocaust-inspired political neuroses and take risks for peace.

Each time this notion of Arab diplomacy as psychotherapy for Israelis has been trotted out, it has been met with incredulity. To most in the region, it encapsulates the contrast between Washington's sympathy and solicitude for Israelis and its condescendingly exploitative view of Arabs. Some see it as a barely disguised appeal for a policy of appeasement of Israel. Still others suspect an attempt to construct a "peace process" in which Arabs begin to supply Israel with gifts of carrots so that Americans can continue to avoid applying sticks to it.

The effort to encourage Arab generosity as an offset to American political pusillanimity vis-à-vis Israel is ludicrously unpersuasive. It has failed so many times that it should be obvious that it will not work. Yet it was a central element of George Mitchell's mandate for "peace process" diplomacy. And it appears to have resurfaced as part of the proposed follow-up to tomorrow's meeting between the parties in Washington. It should be no puzzle why the Saudis and other Arabs could not be persuaded to join this gathering.

As a last thought before turning to what must be done, let me make a quick comment on a relevant cultural factor. Arabic has two quite different words that are both translated as "negotiation," making a distinction that doesn't exist in either English or Hebrew. One word, "musaawama," refers to the no-holds-barred bargaining process that takes place in bazaars between strangers who may never see each other again and who therefore feel no obligation not to scam each other. Another, "mufaawadhat," describes the dignified formal discussions about matters of honor and high principle that take place on a basis of mutual respect and equality between statesmen who seek a continuing relationship.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's travel to Jerusalem was a grand act of statesmanship to initiate a process of mufaawadhat - relationship-building between leaders and their polities. So was the Arab peace initiative of 2002. It called for a response in kind. The West muttered approvingly but did not act. After a while, Israel responded with intermittent, somewhat oblique suggestions of willingness to haggle over terms. But an offer to bicker over the terms on which a grand gesture has been granted is, not surprisingly, seen as insultingly unresponsive.

I cite this not to suggest that non-Arabs should adopt Arabic canons of thought, but to make a point about diplomatic effectiveness. To move a negotiating partner in a desired direction, one must understand how that partner understands things and help him to see a way forward that will bring him to an end he has been persuaded to want. One of the reasons we can't seem to move things as we desire in the Middle East is that we don't make much effort to understand how others reason and how they rank their interests. In the case of the Israel-Palestine conundrum, we Americans are long on empathy and expertise about Israel and very, very short on these for the various Arab parties. The essential militarism of U.S. policies in the Middle East adds to our difficulties. We have become skilled at killing Arabs. We have forgotten how to listen to them or persuade them.

*********

This brings me to a few thoughts about the Western and Arab interests at stake in the Holy Land and their implications for what must be done.

In foreign affairs, interests are the measure of all things. My assumption is that Americans and Norwegians, indeed Europeans in general, share common interests that require peace in the Holy Land. To my mind, these interests include - but are, of course, not limited to - gaining security and acceptance for a democratic state of Israel; eliminating the gross injustices and daily humiliations that foster Arab terrorism against Israel and its foreign allies and supporters, as well as friendly Arab regimes; and reversing the global spread of religious strife and prejudice, including, very likely, a revival of anti-Semitism in the West if current trends are not arrested. None of these aspirations can be fulfilled without an end to the Israeli occupation and freedom for Palestinians.

Arab states, like Saudi Arabia, also have compelling reasons to want relief from occupation as well as self-determination for Palestinians. They may not be concerned to preserve Israel's democracy, as we are, but they share an urgent interest in ending the radicalization of their own populations, curbing the spread of Islamist terrorism, and eliminating the tensions with the West that the conflict in the Holy Land fuels. These are the concerns that have driven them to propose peace, as they very clearly did eight years ago. For related reasons, Saudi Arabia's King Abdullah has made inter-faith dialogue and the promotion of religious tolerance a main focus of his domestic and international policy.

As the custodian of two of Islam's three sacred places of pilgrimage - Mecca and Medina - Saudi Arabia has long transcended its own notorious religious narrow-mindedness to hold the holy places in its charge open to Muslims of all sects and persuasions. This experience, joined with Islamic piety, reinforces a Saudi insistence on the exemption of religious pilgrimage to Jerusalem from political interference or manipulation. The Ottoman Turks were careful to ensure freedom of access for worship to adherents of the three Abrahamic faiths when they administered the city. It is an interest that Jews, Christians, and Muslims share.

There is, in short, far greater congruity between Western and Arab interests affecting the Israel-Palestine dispute than is generally recognized. This can be the basis for creative diplomacy. The fact that this has not occurred reflects pathologies of political life in the United States that paralyze the American diplomatic imagination. Tomorrow's meeting may well demonstrate that, the election of Barack Obama notwithstanding, the United States is still unfit to manage the achievement of peace between Israel and the Arabs. If so, it is in the American interest as well as everyone else's that others become the path-breakers, enlisting the United States as best they can in support of what they achieve, but not expecting America to overcome its incapacity to lead.

B5

Here, I think, there is a lesson to be drawn from the Norwegian experience in the 1990s. The Clinton Administration was happy to organize the public relations for the Oslo accords but did not take ownership of them. It did little to protect them from subversion and overthrow, and nothing to insist on their implementation. Only a peace process that is protected from Israel's ability to manipulate American politics can succeed.

This brings me to how Europeans and Arabs might work together to realize the objectives both share with most Americans: establishing internationally recognized borders for Israel, securing freedom for the Palestinians, and ending the stimulus to terrorism in the region and beyond it that strife in the Holy Land entails. I have only four suggestions to present today. I expect that more ideas will emerge from the discussion period. A serious effort to cooperate with the Arabs of the sort that Norway is uniquely capable of contriving could lead to the development of still more options for joint or parallel action on behalf of peace.

Now to my suggestions, presented in ascending order of difficulty, from the least to the most controversial.

First, get behind the Arab peace initiative. Saudi Arab culture frowns on self-promotion and the Kingdom is less gifted than most at public diplomacy. Political factors inhibit official Arab access to the Israeli press. The Israeli media have published some - mostly dismissive - commentary on the Arab peace initiative but left most Israelis ignorant of its contents and unfamiliar with its text. Why not buy space in the Israeli media to give Israelis a chance to read the Arab League declaration and consider the opportunities it presents? I suspect the Saudis, as well as other members of the Arab League, would consider it constructive for an outside party to do this. It might facilitate other sorts of cooperation with them in which European capabilities can also compensate for Arab reticence. The Turks and other non-Arab Muslims should be brought in as full participants in any such efforts. This wouldn't be bad for Europe's relations with both. By the way, given the U.S. media's notorious one-sidedness and American ignorance about the Arab peace plan, a well-targeted advertising campaign in the United States might not be a bad idea either.

Second, help create a Palestinian partner for peace. There can be no peace with Israel unless there are officials who are empowered by the Palestinian people to negotiate and ratify it. Israel has worked hard to divide the Palestinians so as to consolidate its conquest of their homeland. Saudi Arabia has several times sought to create a Palestinian peace partner for Israel by bringing Fatah, Hamas, and other factions together. On each occasion, Israel, with U.S. support, has acted to preclude this. Active organization of non-American Western support for diplomacy aimed at restoring a unity government to the Palestinian Authority could make a big difference.

The Obama Administration would be under strong domestic political pressure to join Israel in blocking a joint European-Arab effort to accomplish this. Under some circumstances, however, it might welcome being put to this test.

Third, reaffirm and enforce international law. The UN Security Council is charged with enforcing the rule of law internationally. In the case of the Middle East, however, the Council's position at the apex of the international system has served to erode and subvert the ideal of a rule-bound international order. Almost forty American vetoes have prevented the application to the Israeli occupying authorities of the Geneva Conventions, the Nuremberg precedents, human rights conventions, and relevant Security Council directives. American diplomacy on behalf of the Jewish state has silenced the collective voice of the international community as Israel has illegally colonized and annexed broad swaths of occupied territory, administered collective punishment to a captive people, assassinated their political leaders, massacred civilians, barred UN investigators, defied mandatory Security Council resolutions, and otherwise engaged in scofflaw behavior, usually with only the flimsiest of legally irrelevant excuses.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772410 Date: 08/31/2015

America's Faltering Search for Peace in the Middle East: Openings for Others?

Remarks to staff of the Royal Norwegian Ministry of Foreign Affairs and, separately, to members of the Norwegian Institute of International Affairs

Ambassador Chas W. Freeman, Jr. (USFS, Ret.)
1 September 2010, Oslo, Norway

You have asked me to speak to current American policies in the Middle East, with an emphasis on the prospects for peace in the Holy Land. You have further suggested that I touch on the relationship of the Gulf Arabs, especially Saudi Arabia, to this. It is both an honor and a challenge to address this subject in this capital / at this ministry.

The declaration of principles worked out in Oslo seventeen years ago was the last direct negotiation between Israelis and Palestinian Arabs to reach consequential, positive results. The Oslo accords were a real step toward peace, not another deceptive pseudo-event in an endlessly unproductive, so-called "peace process." And if that one step forward in Oslo in 1993 was followed by several steps backwards, there is a great deal to be learned from how and why that happened.

There can be no doubt about the importance of today's topic. The ongoing conflict in the Holy Land increasingly disturbs the world's conscience as well as its tranquility. The Israel-Palestine issue began as a struggle in the context of European colonialism. In the post-colonial era, tension between Israelis and the Palestinians they dispossessed became, by degrees, the principal source of radicalization and instability in the Arab East and then the Arab world as a whole. It stimulated escalating terrorism against Israelis at home and their allies abroad. Since the end of the Cold War, the interaction between Israel and its captive Palestinian population has emerged as the fountainhead of global strife. It is increasingly difficult to distinguish this strife from a war of religions or a conflict of civilizations.

For better or ill, my own country, the United States has played and continues to play the key international part in this contest. American policies, more than those of any other external actor, have the capacity to stoke or stifle the hatreds in the Middle East and to spread or reverse their infection of the wider world. American policies and actions in the Middle East thus affect much more than that region.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772410 Date: 08/31/2015

Yet, as I will argue, the United States has been obsessed with process rather than substance. It has failed to involve parties who are essential to peace. It has acted on Israel's behalf to preempt rather than enlist international and regional support for peace. It has defined the issues in ways that preclude rather than promote progress. Its concept of a "peace process" has therefore become the handmaiden of Israeli expansionism rather than a driver for peace. There are alternatives to tomorrow's diplomatic peace pageant on the Potomac. And, as Norway has shown, there is a role for powers other than America in crafting peace in the Holy Land.

Over thirty years ago, at Camp David, Jimmy Carter pushed Israel through the door to peace that Egypt's Anwar Sadat had opened. Twenty years ago, the first Bush administration pressed Israel to the negotiating table with Palestinian leaders, setting the stage for their clandestine meetings in Oslo. The capacity of the United States to rally other governments behind a cause that it espouses may have atrophied, but American power remains far greater than that of any other nation. Nowhere is this more evident than in the Middle East.

For more than four decades, Israel has been able to rely on aid from the United States to dominate its region militarily and to sustain its economic prosperity. It has counted on its leverage in American politics to block the application of international law and to protect itself from the political repercussions of its policies and actions. Unquestioning American support has enabled Israel to put the seizure of ever more land ahead of the achievement of a modus vivendi with the Palestinians or other Arabs. Neither violent resistance from the dispossessed nor objections from abroad have brought successive Israeli governments to question, let alone alter the priority they assign to land over peace.

Ironically, Palestinians too have developed a dependency relationship with America. This has locked them into a political framework over which Israel exercises decisive influence. They have been powerless to end occupation, pogroms, ethnic cleansing, and other humiliations by Jewish soldiers and settlers. Nor have they been able to prevent their progressive confinement in checkpoint-encircled ghettos on the West Bank and the great open-air prison of Gaza.

Despite this appalling record of failure, the American monopoly on the management of the search for peace in Palestine remains unchallenged. Since the end of the Cold War, Russia - once a contender for countervailing influence in the region - has lapsed into impotence. The former colonial powers of the European Union, having earlier laid the basis for conflict in the region, have largely sat on their hands while ringing them, content to let America take the lead. China, India, and other Asian powers have prudently kept their political and military distance. In the region itself, Iran has postured and exploited the Palestinian cause without doing anything to advance it. Until recently, Turkey remained aloof.

On rare occasions, as in the case of the 1973 Arab oil embargo, the Arabs have backed their verbal opposition to Israel with action. Egypt and Jordan have settled into an unpopular coexistence with Israel that is now sustained only by U.S. subventions. Saudi Arabia has twice taken the initiative to offer Israel diplomatic concessions if it were to conclude arrangements for peaceful coexistence with the Palestinians. But, overall, Arab governments have earned the contempt of the Palestinians and their own people for their lack of serious engagement. For the most part, Arab leaders have timorously demanded that America solve the Israel-Palestine problem for them, while obsequiously courting American protection against Israel, each other, Iran, and - in some cases - their own increasingly frustrated and angry subjects and citizens.

Islam charges rulers with the duty to defend the faithful and to uphold justice. It demands that they embody righteousness. The resentment of mostly Muslim Arabs at their governing elites' failure to meet these standards generates sympathy for terrorism directed not just at Israel but at both the United States and Arab governments associated with it.

The perpetrators of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attack on the United States saw it in part as reprisal for American complicity in Israeli cruelties to Palestinians and other Arabs. They justified it as a strike against Washington's protection of Arab governments willing to overlook American contributions to Muslim suffering. Washington's response to the attack included suspending its efforts to make peace in the Holy Land as well as invading and occupying Afghanistan and Iraq. All three actions inadvertently strengthened the terrorist case for further attacks on America and its allies. The armed struggle between Americans and Muslim radicals has already spilled over to Pakistan, Yemen, Somalia, and other countries. Authoritative voices in Israel now call for adding Iran to the list of countries at war with America. They are echoed by Zionist and neo-conservative spokesmen in the United States,

The widening involvement of Americans in combat in Muslim lands has inflamed anti-American passions and catalyzed a metastasis of terrorism. It has caused a growing majority of the world's 1.6 billion Muslims to see the United States as a menace to their faith, their way of life, their homelands, and their personal security. American populists and European xenophobes have meanwhile undercut liberal and centrist Muslim arguments against the intolerance that empowers terrorism by equating terrorism and its extremist advocates with Islam and its followers. The current outburst of bigoted demagoguery over the construction of an Islamic cultural center and mosque in New York is merely the most recent illustration of this. It suggests that the blatant racism and Islamophobia of contemporary Israeli politics is contagious. It rules out the global alliances against religious extremists that are essential to encompass their political defeat.

President Obama's inability to break this pattern must be an enormous personal disappointment to him. He came into office committed to crafting a new relationship with the Arab and Muslim worlds. His first interview with the international media was with Arab satellite television. He reached out publicly and privately to Iran. He addressed the Turkish parliament with persuasive empathy. He traveled to a great center of Islamic learning in Cairo to deliver a remarkably eloquent message of conciliation to Muslims everywhere. He made it clear that he understood the centrality of injustices in the Holy Land to Muslim estrangement from the West. He promised a responsible withdrawal from Iraq and a judicious recrafting of strategy in Afghanistan. Few doubt Mr. Obama's sincerity. Yet none of his initiatives has led to policy change anyone can detect, let alone believe in.

It is not for me to analyze or explain the wide gaps between rhetoric and achievement in the Obama Administration's stewardship of so many aspects of my country's affairs. American voters will render their first formal verdict on this two months from tomorrow, on the 2nd of November. The situation in the Holy Land, Iraq, Afghanistan, and adjacent areas is only part of what they will consider as they do so. But I do think it worthwhile briefly to examine some of the changes in the situation that ensure that many policies that once helped us to get by in the Middle East will no longer do this.

Let me begin with the "peace process," a hardy perennial of America's diplomatic repertoire that the Obama Administration will put back on public display tomorrow. In the Cold War, the appearance of an earnest and "even-handed" American search for peace in the Holy Land was the price of U.S. access and influence in the Middle East. It provided political cover for conservative Arab governments to set aside their anger at American backing of Israel so as to stand with America and the Western bloc against Soviet Communism. It kept American relations with Israel and the Arabs from becoming a zero-sum game. It mobilized domestic Jewish support for incumbent presidents. Of course, there hasn't been an American-led "peace process" in the Middle East for at least a decade. Still the conceit of a "peace process" became an essential political convenience for all concerned. No one could bear to admit that the "peace process" had expired. It therefore lived on in phantom form.

Even when there was no "peace process," the possibility of resurrecting one provided hope to the gullible, cover to the guileful, beguilement for the press, an excuse for doing nothing to those gaining from the status quo, and - last but far from least - lifetime employment for career "peace processors." The perpetual processing of peace without the requirement to produce it has been especially appreciated by Israeli leaders. It has enabled them to behave like magicians, riveting foreign attention on meaningless distractions as they systematically removed Palestinians from their homes, settled half a million or more Jews in newly vacated areas of the occupied territories, and annexed a widening swath of land to a Jerusalem they insist belongs only to Israel.

Palestinian leaders with legitimacy problems have also had reason to collaborate in the search for a "peace process." It's not just that there has been no obviously better way to end their people's suffering. Playing "peace process" charades justifies the international patronage and Israeli backing these leaders need to retain their status in the occupied territories. It ensures that they have media access and high-level visiting rights in Washington. Meanwhile, for American leaders, engagement in some sort of Middle East "peace process" has been essential to credibility in the Arab and Islamic worlds, as well as with the ever-generous American Jewish community. Polls show that most American Jews are impatient for peace. Despite all the evidence to the contrary, they are eager to believe in the willingness of the government of Israel to trade land for it.

Previous "peace processes" have exploited all these impulses. In practice, however, these diplomatic distractions have served to obscure Israeli actions and evasions that were more often prejudicial to peace than helpful in achieving it. Behind all the blather, the rumble of bulldozers has never stopped. Given this history, it has taken a year and a half of relentless effort by U.S. Special Envoy George Mitchell to persuade the parties even to meet directly to talk about talks as they first did here in Oslo, seventeen years ago. When the curtain goes up on the diplomatic show in Washington tomorrow, will the players put on a different skit? There are many reasons to doubt that they will.

One is that the Obama administration has engaged the same aging impresarios who staged all the previously failed "peace processes" to produce and direct this one with no agreed script. The last time these guys staged such an ill-prepared meeting, at Camp David in 2000, it cost both heads of delegation, Ehud Barak and Yasser Arafat, their political authority. It led not to peace but to escalating violence. The parties are showing up this time to minimize President Obama's political embarrassment in advance of midterm elections in the United States, not to address his agenda - still less to address each other's agendas. These are indeed difficulties. But the problems with this latest - and possibly final - iteration of the perpetually ineffectual "peace process" are more fundamental.

The Likud Party charter flatly rejects the establishment of a Palestinian Arab state west of the Jordan River and stipulates that: "The Palestinians can run their lives freely in the framework of self-rule, but not as an independent and sovereign state." This Israeli government is committed to that charter as well as to the Jewish holy war for land in Palestine. It has no interest in trading land it covets for a peace that might thwart further territorial expansion. It considers itself unbound by the applicable UN resolutions, agreements from past peace talks, the "Roadmap," or the premise of the "two-state solution."

The Palestinians are desperate for the dignity and security that only the end of the Israeli occupation can provide. But the authority of Palestinian negotiators to negotiate rests on their recognition by Israel and the United States, not on their standing in the occupied territories, Gaza, or the Palestinian diaspora. Fatah is the ruling faction in part of Palestine. Its authority to govern was repudiated by voters in the last Palestinian elections. The Mahmoud Abbas administration retains power by grace of the Israeli occupation authorities and the United States, which prefer it to the government empowered by the Palestinian people at the polls. Mr. Abbas's constitutional term of office has long since expired. He presides over a parliament whose most influential members are locked up in Israeli jails. It is not clear for whom he, his faction, or his administration can now speak.

So the talks that begin tomorrow promise to be a case of the uninterested going through the motions of negotiating with the mandate-less. The parties to these talks seek to mollify an America that has severely lessened international credibility. The United States government had to borrow the modest reputations for objectivity of others - the EU, Russia, and the UN - to be able to convene this discussion. It will be held under the auspices of an American president who was publicly humiliated by Israel's prime minister on the issue that is at the center of the Israel-Palestine dispute - Israel's continuing seizure and colonization of Arab land.

Vague promises of a Palestinian state within a year now waft through the air. But the "peace process" has always sneered at deadlines, even much, much firmer ones. A more definitive promise of an independent Palestine within a year was made at Annapolis three years ago. Analogous promises of Palestinian self-determination have preceded or resulted from previous meetings over the decades, beginning with the Camp David accords of 1979. Many in this audience will recall the five-year deadline fixed at Oslo. The talks about talks that begin tomorrow can yield concrete results only if the international community is prepared this time to insist on the one-year deadline put forward for recognizing a Palestinian state. Even then there will be no peace unless long-neglected issues are addressed.

Peace is a pattern of stability acceptable to those with the capacity to disturb it by violence. It is almost impossible to impose. It cannot become a reality, still less be sustained, if those who must accept it are excluded from it. This reality directs our attention to who is not at this gathering in Washington and what must be done to remedy the problems these absences create.

Obviously, the party that won the democratically expressed mandate of the Palestinian people to represent them - Hamas - is not there. Yet there can be no peace without its buy-in. Egypt and Jordan have been invited as observers. Yet they have nothing to add to the separate peace agreements each long ago made with Israel. (Both these agreements were explicitly premised on grudging Israeli undertakings to accept Palestinian self-determination. The Jewish state quickly finessed both.) Activists from the Jewish diaspora disproportionately staff the American delegation. A failure to reconcile either American Jews or the Palestine diaspora to peace would doom any accord. But the Palestinian diaspora will be represented in Washington only in tenuous theory, not in fact.

Other Arabs, including the Arab League and the author of its peace initiative, Saudi Arabia, will not be at the talks tomorrow. The reasons for this are both simple and complex. At one level they reflect both a conviction that this latest installment of the "peace process" is just another in a long series of public entertainments for the American electorate and also a lack of confidence in the authenticity of the Palestinian delegation. At another level, they result from the way the United States has defined the problems to be solved and the indifference to Arab interests and views this definition evidences. Then too, they reflect disconnects in political culture and negotiating style between Israelis, Arabs, and Americans.

To begin with, neither Israel nor the conveners of this proposed new "peace process" have officially acknowledged or responded to the Arab peace initiative of 2002. This offered normalization of relations with the Jewish state, should Israel make peace with the Palestinians. Instead, the United States and the Quartet have seemed to pocket the Arab offer, ignore its precondition that Israelis come to terms with Palestinians, and gone on to levy new demands.

In this connection, making Arab recognition of Israel's "right to exist" the central purpose of the "peace process" offends Arabs on many levels. In framing the issue this way, Israel and the United States appear to be asking for something well beyond pragmatic accommodation of the reality of a Jewish state in the Middle East.

To the Arabs, Americans now seem to be insisting on Arab endorsement of the idea of the state of Israel, the means by which that state was established, and the manner in which it has comported itself. Must Arabs really embrace Zionism before Israel can cease expansion and accept peace?

Arabs and Muslims familiar with European history can accept that European anti-Semitism justified the establishment of a homeland for traumatized European Jews. But asking them even implicitly to agree that the forcible eviction of Palestinian Arabs was a morally appropriate means to this end is both a nonstarter and seriously off-putting. So is asking them to affirm that resistance to such displacement was and is sinful. Similarly, the Arabs see the demand that they recognize a Jewish state with no fixed borders as a clever attempt to extract their endorsement of Israel's unilateral expansion at Palestinian expense.

The lack of appeal in this approach has been compounded by a longstanding American habit of treating Arab concerns about Israel as a form of anti-Semitism and tuning them out. Instead of hearing out and addressing Arab views, U.S. peace processors have repeatedly focused on soliciting Arab acts of kindness toward Israel. They argue that gestures of acceptance can help Israelis overcome their Holocaust-inspired political neuroses and take risks for peace.

Each time this notion of Arab diplomacy as psychotherapy for Israelis has been trotted out, it has been met with incredulity. To most in the region, it encapsulates the contrast between Washington's sympathy and solicitude for Israelis and its condescendingly exploitative view of Arabs. Some see it as a barely disguised appeal for a policy of appeasement of Israel. Still others suspect an attempt to construct a "peace process" in which Arabs begin to supply Israel with gifts of carrots so that Americans can continue to avoid applying sticks to it.

The effort to encourage Arab generosity as an offset to American political pusillanimity vis-à-vis Israel is ludicrously unpersuasive. It has failed so many times that it should be obvious that it will not work. Yet it was a central element of George Mitchell's mandate for "peace process" diplomacy. And it appears to have resurfaced as part of the proposed follow-up to tomorrow's meeting between the parties in Washington. It should be no puzzle why the Saudis and other Arabs could not be persuaded to join this gathering.

As a last thought before turning to what must be done, let me make a quick comment on a relevant cultural factor. Arabic has two quite different words that are both translated as "negotiation," making a distinction that doesn't exist in either English or Hebrew. One word, "musaawama," refers to the no-holds-barred bargaining process that takes place in bazaars between strangers who may never see each other again and who therefore feel no obligation not to scam each other. Another, "mufaawadhat," describes the dignified formal discussions about matters of honor and high principle that take place on a basis of mutual respect and equality between statesmen who seek a continuing relationship.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's travel to Jerusalem was a grand act of statesmanship to initiate a process of mufaawadhat - relationship-building between leaders and their polities. So was the Arab peace initiative of 2002. It called for a response in kind. The West muttered approvingly but did not act. After a while, Israel responded with intermittent, somewhat oblique suggestions of willingness to haggle over terms. But an offer to bicker over the terms on which a grand gesture has been granted is, not surprisingly, seen as insultingly unresponsive.

I cite this not to suggest that non-Arabs should adopt Arabic canons of thought, but to make a point about diplomatic effectiveness. To move a negotiating partner in a desired direction, one must understand how that partner understands things and help him to see a way forward that will bring him to an end he has been persuaded to want. One of the reasons we can't seem to move things as we desire in the Middle East is that we don't make much effort to understand how others reason and how they rank their interests. In the case of the Israel-Palestine conundrum, we Americans are long on empathy and expertise about Israel and very, very short on these for the various Arab parties. The essential militarism of U.S. policies in the Middle East adds to our difficulties. We have become skilled at killing Arabs. We have forgotten how to listen to them or persuade them.

I am not myself an "Arabist," but I am old enough to remember when there were more than a few such people in the American diplomatic service. These were officers who had devoted themselves to the cultivation of understanding and empathy with Arab leaders so as to be able to convince these leaders that it was in their own interest to do things we saw as in our interest. If we still have such people, we are hiding them well; we are certainly not applying their skills in our Middle East diplomacy.

This brings me to a few thoughts about the Western and Arab interests at stake in the Holy Land and their implications for what must be done.

In foreign affairs, interests are the measure of all things. My assumption is that Americans and Norwegians, indeed Europeans in general, share common interests that require peace in the Holy Land. To my mind, these interests include - but are, of course, not limited to - gaining security and acceptance for a democratic state of Israel; eliminating the gross injustices and daily humiliations that foster Arab terrorism against Israel and its foreign allies and supporters, as well as friendly Arab regimes; and reversing the global spread of religious strife and prejudice, including, very likely, a revival of anti-Semitism in the West if current trends are not arrested. None of these aspirations can be fulfilled without an end to the Israeli occupation and freedom for Palestinians.

Arab states, like Saudi Arabia, also have compelling reasons to want relief from occupation as well as self-determination for Palestinians. They may not be concerned to preserve Israel's democracy, as we are, but they share an urgent interest in ending the radicalization of their own populations, curbing the spread of Islamist terrorism, and eliminating the tensions with the West that the conflict in the Holy Land fuels. These are the concerns that have driven them to propose peace, as they very clearly did eight years ago. For related reasons, Saudi Arabia's King Abdullah has made inter-faith dialogue and the promotion of religious tolerance a main focus of his domestic and international policy.

As the custodian of two of Islam's three sacred places of pilgrimage - Mecca and Medina - Saudi Arabia has long transcended its own notorious religious narrow-mindedness to hold the holy places in its charge open to Muslims of all sects and persuasions. This experience, joined with Islamic piety, reinforces a Saudi insistence on the exemption of religious pilgrimage to Jerusalem from political interference or manipulation. The Ottoman Turks were careful to ensure freedom of access for worship to adherents of the three Abrahamic faiths when they administered the city. It is an interest that Jews, Christians, and Muslims share.

There is, in short, far greater congruity between Western and Arab interests affecting the Israel-Palestine dispute than is generally recognized. This can be the basis for creative diplomacy. The fact that this has not occurred reflects pathologies of political life in the United States that paralyze the American diplomatic imagination. Tomorrow's meeting may well demonstrate that, the election of Barack Obama notwithstanding, the United States is still unfit to manage the achievement of peace between Israel and the Arabs. If so, it is in the American interest as well as everyone else's that others become the path-breakers, enlisting the United States as best they can in support of what they achieve, but not expecting America to overcome its incapacity to lead.

Here, I think, there is a lesson to be drawn from the Norwegian experience in the 1990s. The Clinton Administration was happy to organize the public relations for the Oslo accords but did not take ownership of them. It did little to protect them from subversion and overthrow, and nothing to insist on their implementation. Only a peace process that is protected from Israel's ability to manipulate American politics can succeed.

This brings me to how Europeans and Arabs might work together to realize the objectives both share with most Americans: establishing internationally recognized borders for Israel, securing freedom for the Palestinians, and ending the stimulus to terrorism in the region and beyond it that strife in the Holy Land entails. I have only four suggestions to present today. I expect that more ideas will emerge from the discussion period. A serious effort to cooperate with the Arabs of the sort that Norway is uniquely capable of contriving could lead to the development of still more options for joint or parallel action on behalf of peace.

Now to my suggestions, presented in ascending order of difficulty, from the least to the most controversial.

First, get behind the Arab peace initiative. Saudi Arab culture frowns on self-promotion and the Kingdom is less gifted than most at public diplomacy. Political factors inhibit official Arab access to the Israeli press. The Israeli media have published some - mostly dismissive - commentary on the Arab peace initiative but left most Israelis ignorant of its contents and unfamiliar with its text. Why not buy space in the Israeli media to give Israelis a chance to read the Arab League declaration and consider the opportunities it presents? I suspect the Saudis, as well as other members of the Arab League, would consider it constructive for an outside party to do this. It might facilitate other sorts of cooperation with them in which European capabilities can also compensate for Arab reticence. The Turks and other non-Arab Muslims should be brought in as full participants in any such efforts. This wouldn't be bad for Europe's relations with both. By the way, given the U.S. media's notorious one-sidedness and American ignorance about the Arab peace plan, a well-targeted advertising campaign in the United States might not be a bad idea either.

Second, help create a Palestinian partner for peace. There can be no peace with Israel unless there are officials who are empowered by the Palestinian people to negotiate and ratify it. Israel has worked hard to divide the Palestinians so as to consolidate its conquest of their homeland. Saudi Arabia has several times sought to create a Palestinian peace partner for Israel by bringing Fatah, Hamas, and other factions together. On each occasion, Israel, with U.S. support, has acted to preclude this. Active organization of non-American Western support for diplomacy aimed at restoring a unity government to the Palestinian Authority could make a big difference. The Obama Administration would be under strong domestic political pressure to join Israel in blocking a joint European-Arab effort to accomplish this. Under some circumstances, however, it might welcome being put to this test.

Third, reaffirm and enforce international law. The UN Security Council is charged with enforcing the rule of law internationally. In the case of the Middle East, however, the Council's position at the apex of the international system has served to erode and subvert the ideal of a rule-bound international order. Almost forty American vetoes have prevented the application to the Israeli occupying authorities of the Geneva Conventions, the Nuremberg precedents, human rights conventions, and relevant Security Council directives. American diplomacy on behalf of the Jewish state has silenced the collective voice of the international community as Israel has illegally colonized and annexed broad swaths of occupied territory, administered collective punishment to a captive people, assassinated their political leaders, massacred civilians, barred UN investigators, defied mandatory Security Council resolutions, and otherwise engaged in scofflaw behavior, usually with only the flimsiest of legally irrelevant excuses.

If ethnic cleansing, settlement activity, and the like are not just "unhelpful" but illegal, the international community should find a way to say so, even if the UN Security Council cannot. Otherwise, the most valuable legacy of Atlantic civilization - its vision of the rule of law - will be lost. When one side to a dispute is routinely exempted from principles, all exempt themselves, and the law of the jungle prevails. The international community needs collectively to affirm that Israel, both as occupier and as regional military hegemon, is legally accountable internationally for its actions. If the UN General Assembly cannot "unite for peace" to do what an incapacitated Security Council cannot, member states should not shrink from working in conference outside the UN framework. All sides in the murder and mayhem in the Holy Land and beyond need to understand that they are not above the law. If this message is firmly delivered and enforced, there will be a better chance for peace.

Fourth, set a deadline linked to an ultimatum. Accept that the United States will frustrate any attempt by the UN Security Council to address the continuing impasse between Israel and the Palestinians. Organize a global conference outside the UN system to coordinate a decision to inform the parties to the dispute that if they cannot reach agreement in a year, one of two solutions will be imposed. Schedule a follow-up conference for a year later. The second conference would consider whether to recommend universal recognition of a Palestinian state in the area beyond Israel's 1967 borders or recognition of Israel's achievement of de jure as well as de facto sovereignty throughout Palestine (requiring Israel to grant all governed by it citizenship and equal rights at pain of international sanctions, boycott, and disinvestment). Either formula would force the parties to make a serious effort to strike a deal or to face the consequences of their recalcitrance. Either formula could be implemented directly by the states members of the international community.

Admittedly, any serious deadline would provoke a political crisis in Israel and lead to diplomatic confrontation with the United States as well as Israel, despite the Obama Administration itself having proclaimed a one-year deadline in order to entice the Palestinians to tomorrow's talks. Yet both Israel and the United States would benefit immensely from peace with the Palestinians.

Time is running out. The two-state solution may already have been overtaken by Israeli land grabs and settlement activity. Another cycle of violence is likely in the offing. If so, it will not be local or regional, but global in its reach. Israel's actions are delegitimizing and isolating it even as they multiply the numbers of those in the region and beyond who are determined to destroy it. Palestinian suffering is a reproach to all humanity that posturing alone cannot begin to alleviate. It has become a cancer on the Islamic body politic. It is infecting every extremity of the globe with the rage against injustice that incites terrorism.

It is time to try new approaches. That is why the question of whether there is a basis for expanded diplomatic cooperation between Europeans and Arabs is such a timely one. And it is why I was pleased as well as honored to have been asked to set the stage for a discussion of this issue.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Daniel, Joshua J <DanielJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 17, 2010 6:58 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Schwerin, Daniel B
Subject: Your speech on the Mideast

Madame Secretary,
On Wednesday, you're scheduled to give a 15-minute talk at a gala hosted by the American Task Force on Palestine, a moderate, pro-peace Palestinian-American organization. Here's a quick overview of our plans for the speech, which we developed with NEA. Please let us know if you have any reactions.

B5

The audience in the room will include Palestinian-Americans who are influential in their communities: lawyers, doctors, business leaders, etc. Of course, a much larger audience beyond the room will read this speech as well. This is your first opportunity to address this issue in a serious way since the end of the moratorium.

Key points:

###

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 23, 2010 10:24 AM
To: H
Subject: Israel flights

Flight from JFK leaves 725pm tonight and gets in at 1215pm tomorrow.

I told Hale Blair was thinking of [redacted] B5

[redacted]

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 6, 2010 9:46 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Assad says peace chances with Israel up in the air

From: Hsiang, Margaret E
To: NEWS-NEA; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Wed Oct 06 20:19:50 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Assad says peace chances with Israel up in the air

DAMASCUS (Reuters) - Western efforts to renew peace talks between Syria and Israel are focusing on finding common ground, but nothing has crystallized yet and the chances of success are unknown, Syrian President Bashar al-Assad said. In his first public assessment of U.S. and French moves to relaunch the talks, Assad told Turkey's TRT television that envoys from the two countries are trying to accommodate Syria's demands for the return of the Golan Heights and Israel's security objectives.

Assad said that if the talks were to resume they would be initially indirect, similar to the last four rounds that were mediated by Turkey and broke off in 2008 without a deal.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: jake.sullivan
Sent: Monday, September 13, 2010 8:02 AM
To: H; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Moratorium

Copy that - will do.

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'jake.sullivan B6
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Moratorium
Sent: Sep 13, 2010 7:34 AM

Can you ask SEMP/NEA to put together a chronology of the path to the morarat last year--especially all that we did? Maybe one already exists but I need as much detail as possible. If we can get an outline, Jeff and Dan (who both seem to have vivid memories) can add to it. Thx.

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 6, 2010 10:06 PM
To: H
Subject: You were great today

And your answer to the question about your proudest achievement made all the work on the qddr worth it!
AM

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 17, 2010 8:07 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Changing the subject B5
Attachments: 10.17.10.docx; 10.17.10.docx

Attached is a strategy memo --

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 6, 2010 10:57 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Haaretz) Israeli Labor party expects new settlement freeze as payoff for loyalty oath

B5

From: Hsiang, Margaret E
To: NEWS-NEA; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III; SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Wed Oct 06 22:53:57 2010
Subject: (Haaretz) Israeli Labor party expects new settlement freeze as payoff for loyalty oath

(Hareetz) Labor party ministers angered by Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's snap decision to back a controversial citizenship loyalty oath said late October 6 that they expected a new freeze in settlement building as a payoff. Netanyahu neglected to inform his Labor coalition partners that he had approved a right-wing minister's draft of a new oath that would require anyone taking Israeli citizenship to swear allegiance to Israel as a "Jewish and democratic state."

The move paves the way for a vote in the Knesset and was hailed as victory by ultra-nationalist Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman's Israel our Home party, Netanyahu's major coalition partner. But the prime minister must perform a balancing act. Allies at both ends of the political spectrum and the Labor party hope that his latest concession is a sop to right-wingers ahead of a decision to renew a ban on settlement building in the West Bank – a key demand of the left.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 7, 2010 6:31 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Russia to pay Iran $800 million for scrapped S-300 deal

---

From: Abdalla, Alyce N
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-Iran; NEWS-EUR; NEWS-EB; Einhorn, Robert J
Cc: SES-O_Shift-I; SES-O_OS
Sent: Thu Oct 07 05:50:06 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Russia to pay Iran $800 million for scrapped S-300 deal

NICOSIA (Reuters) - Russia plans to pay Iran about $800 million to compensate for its failure to deliver S-300 missile systems, the head of state-controlled conglomerate Russian Technologies Sergei Chemezov said. Russian President Medvedev outlawed the delivery of the high-precision missiles to Iran last month, saying that sending them would violate sanctions adopted by the UN Security Council in June.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

"Judith Kieffer"

To

01/08/2010 08:46 AM

cc

Subject Update

Heidi reports from the hospital this morning that Mickey had a quiet night.

B6

Judith Kieffer
Executive Director
Los Angeles Parks Foundation
11973 San Vicente Blvd.
Suite 200
Los Angeles, CA 90049
Office: 310-472-1990
FAX: 310-472-0992
Mobile:

B6
B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 7, 2010 6:32 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Haaretz) Israeli Labor party expects new settlement freeze as payoff for loyalty oath

From: Hsiang, Margaret E
To: NEWS-NEA; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III; SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Wed Oct 06 22:53:57 2010
Subject: (Haaretz) Israeli Labor party expects new settlement freeze as payoff for loyalty oath

(Hareetz) Labor party ministers angered by Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's snap decision to back a controversial citizenship loyalty oath said late October 6 that they expected a new freeze in settlement building as a payoff. Netanyahu neglected to inform his Labor coalition partners that he had approved a right-wing minister's draft of a new oath that would require anyone taking Israeli citizenship to swear allegiance to Israel as a "Jewish and democratic state."

The move paves the way for a vote in the Knesset and was hailed as victory by ultra-nationalist Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman's Israel our Home party, Netanyahu's major coalition partner. But the prime minister must perform a balancing act. Allies at both ends of the political spectrum and the Labor party hope that his latest concession is a sop to right-wingers ahead of a decision to renew a ban on settlement building in the West Bank – a key demand of the left.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 14, 2010 11:13 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Three embassies in Israel receive suspicious letters

From: Rudnitski, Jennine R
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Tue Sep 14 11:11:29 2010
Subject: (AP) Three embassies in Israel receive suspicious letters

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israeli police said envelopes containing a suspicious white powder have been discovered at the American, Spanish and Swedish embassies in Tel Aviv. Police spokesman Micky Rosenfeld said workers at the three embassies alerted police after opening the envelopes September 14. Rosenfeld said it is still unclear what the substance is though police said the substance was not poisonous since no one was hurt. Police are trying to find who sent the envelopes and determine whether the incidents were connected.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 14, 2010 11:59 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Here's Iran hiker statement

----- Original Message -----
From: Schwerin, Daniel B
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I
Sent: Tue Sep 14 11:56:36 2010
Subject: Here's Iran hiker statement

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY CLINTON

Release of Sarah Shourd

I welcome Sarah Shourd's release from detention in Iran, and am pleased that she will soon be reunited with her family. I appreciate the efforts of all those who have worked for her release, in particular the Swiss Protecting Power in Tehran, the Omani Government, and the many other world leaders who have raised this case and the cases of other detained or missing American citizens. Sarah's fiancé Shane Bauer, Joshua Fattal, and other U.S. citizens remain detained or missing in Iran. We urge Iranian authorities to extend the same consideration to them by resolving their cases without delay and allowing them to immediately return to their families.

###

Drafted by: NEA/IR: M Schwedt
NEA/PPD: A Sayles, x74184
Approved by:D(S): J Steinberg
NEA/FO: P Dibbleok

Cleared by:NEA/IR: J Hoodok
NEA/IR: S Hornerok
NEA/PPD: E Vasquezok
CA: J Echardok
P: E Catalano ok
D(S): D Schrepelok
S/P: J Burnsok
NSC: K Magsamenok
PA: D Schwerin ok
PA: P Reines ok
S: J Sullivan ok

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,1.4(D)

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 23, 2010 11:47 AM
To: H
Subject: Wen

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 09/22/2025

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 7, 2010 10:09 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Ann

Agreed--Maura is so smart!

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 07 22:03:37 2010
Subject: FW: Ann

FYI

From: Pally, Maura M
Sent: Thursday, January 07, 2010 1:36 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Ann

is so wonderful. Brilliant pick. Every time I meet with her I like her more and more and she is really the right pick for ECA. She brings so much to the table that we need. Everyone here is so pleased with the selection and the fact that R is equally pleased is even better –that we can both think she is "ours" is a testament to Ann. It may have taken a long time but it will be well worth the wait. She can take ECA in a new direction. And if she has the help of Joe Macmanus she can do it even quicker and better (I can't pass up a good plug opportunity!).

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 14, 2010 2:33 PM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: RE:

Will do.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, September 14, 2010 2:31 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Fw:

Pls check w Tamera to see if we can do dinner the 30th at her choice.

----- Original Message -----
From: Tamera Luzzatto [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Sun Sep 12 08:30:17 2010
Subject: Re:

Hooray. 30th looks great (have to go to Edie's on the 29th for Gillibrand, but I can meet you after if that's better).

My other updates are:

With Gina, I'm hosting one of several dinner parties to welcome the new SEIU prez (yes a bit of an unstated message) to women leaders. I think Wendy S and Judy L are doing the others. It's another of Gina's great ideas.

And we're holding a fundraiser for Bennet on the 27th that is looking really good. [redacted]

[redacted]

Finally, I did a brief intv with a Center for Public Service rep for their regular feature in the Post abt compelling leaders in the federal govnt. And this one will be about Kate Beale!
Oh, and after confirming to do so with PIR, did a quickie recalling the thoroughly positive vibes and experiences of you and Laura Bush to our pal at Politico!!

Finally, finally, and hope I didn't say this already, I started yesterday am sending an anniversary greeting and ode to Team 9-11 Clinton to everyone there when we waited for you to come in (for the Mrs. Bush testimony coincidentally) and watched the 2nd plane, and of course the rest was our amazing journey together of work to be so proud of. I even included Ramon on the chain!!! [redacted] Impossible it now seems.

Done blabbing. Have a restful Sunday. Everyone, and I mean everyone despite what I recall about some, is singing your praises.

Xox
-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Sun, 12 Sep 2010 08:02:45
To: 'Luzzatto [redacted]
Subject: Re:

I'm all updated now! So, I will offer up some dates and you will pick the place for a catchup dinner--sounds like a deal!

I'm looking at 9/29 or 9/30. Do either of those work for you?

----- Original Message -----
From: Tamera Luzzatto [redacted] B6
To: H
Cc: Lauren Jiloty <JilotyLC@state.gov>; Lissa Muscatine [redacted] Huma Abedin; Lona Valmoro <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Sep 11 10:43:58 2010
Subject: Re:

Ps to all. My new work address is [redacted] and direct is [redacted] The job is utterly fascinating and invigorating, and only major deficiency is not working with you. Am at 9th and E so great restaurants galore, hint hint.
-----Original Message-----
From: "Tamera Luzzatto" [redacted]
Date: Sat, 11 Sep 2010 14:38:25
To: H<hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Reply-To: luzzatto [redacted]
Cc: Lauren Jiloty<JilotyLC@state.gov>; Lissa Muscatine< [redacted] Huma Abedin-
HRC< [redacted] > B6
Subject: Fw:

Am forwarding this for you to see Al's appreciation to you, and for Lauren to print out his edited as given beautiful and touching eulogy.

Splendid to see you and hope for a fall visit.

Xoxo, T

-----Original Message-----
From: Tamera Luzzatto [redacted]
Date: Sat, 11 Sep 2010 10:10:37
To: 'Tamera S. Luzzatto' [redacted]
Subject: FW:

Sent by Good Messaging (www.good.com)

-----Original Message-----
From: Mottur, Alfred E. [mailto:
Sent: Saturday, September 11, 2010 09:18 AM Eastern Standard Time
To: Tamera Luzzatto
Subject:

B6

Al

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 14, 2010 4:00 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Corker

Will vote yes on START....

Thanks for all your help with him.

Now, we need to [redacted] B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 7, 2010 10:55 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Nye on Japan Alliance

Indeed. I'm a berry farmer.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 07 21:55:58 2010
Subject: RE: Nye on Japan Alliance

Ahh – you will reap what you sow . . . J

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Thursday, January 07, 2010 9:27 PM
To: 'H'
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: Nye on Japan Alliance

Madame S,

I promise I won't abuse the privilege of emailing you directly, but here is the piece by Joe Nye that I mentioned this morning. You may note that my S/P staffer who does Asia, and who is very good, agrees with my assessment that it was a valuable piece to write.

AM

From: Green, James B
Sent: Thursday, January 07, 2010 10:49 AM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Cc: Sokolsky, Richard D
Subject: Nye on Japan Alliance

From today's New York Times. Not sure if someone in this building (or the NSC) put Nye up to this, but agree with this assessment

Not surprisingly, some in Washington want to play hardball with the new Japanese government. But that would be unwise

January 7, 2010

Op-Ed Contributor

An Alliance Larger Than One Issue

By JOSEPH S. NYE Jr.

Cambridge, Mass.

SEEN from Tokyo, America's relationship with Japan faces a crisis. The immediate problem is deadlock over a plan to move an American military base on the island of Okinawa. It sounds simple, but this is an issue with a long back story that could create a serious rift with one of our most crucial allies.

When I was in the Pentagon more than a decade ago, we began planning to reduce the burden that our presence places on Okinawa, which houses more than half of the 47,000 American troops in Japan. The Marine Corps Air Station Futenma was a particular problem because of its proximity to a crowded city, Ginowan. After years of negotiation, the Japanese and American governments agreed in 2006 to move the base to a less populated part of Okinawa and to move 8,000 Marines from Okinawa to Guam by 2014.

The plan was thrown into jeopardy last summer when the Japanese voted out the Liberal Democratic Party that had governed the country for nearly half a century in favor of the Democratic Party of Japan. The new prime minister, Yukio Hatoyama, leads a government that is inexperienced, divided and still in the thrall of campaign promises to move the base off the island or out of Japan completely.

The Pentagon is properly annoyed that Mr. Hatoyama is trying to go back on an agreement that took more than a decade to work out and that has major implications for the Marine Corps' budget and force realignment. Secretary of Defense Robert Gates expressed displeasure during a trip to Japan in October, calling any reassessment of the plan "counterproductive." When he visited Tokyo in November, President Obama agreed to a high-level working group to consider the Futenma question. But since then, Mr. Hatoyama has said he will delay a final decision on relocation until at least May.

Not surprisingly, some in Washington want to play hardball with the new Japanese government. But that would be unwise, for Mr. Hatoyama is caught in a vise, with the Americans squeezing from one side and a small left-wing party (upon which his majority in the upper house of the legislature depends) threatening to quit the coalition if he makes any significant concessions to the Americans. Further complicating matters, the future of Futenma is deeply contentious for Okinawans.

Even if Mr. Hatoyama eventually gives in on the base plan, we need a more patient and strategic approach to Japan. We are allowing a second-order issue to threaten our long-term strategy for East Asia. Futenma, it is worth noting, is not the only matter that the new government has raised. It also speaks of wanting a more equal alliance and better relations with China, and of creating an East Asian community — though it is far from clear what any of this means.

When I helped to develop the Pentagon's East Asian Strategy Report in 1995, we started with the reality that there were three major powers in the region — the United States, Japan and China — and that maintaining our alliance with Japan would shape the environment into which China was emerging. We wanted to integrate China into the international system by, say, inviting it to join the World Trade Organization, but we needed to hedge against the danger that a future and stronger China might turn aggressive.

After a year and a half of extensive negotiations, the United States and Japan agreed that our alliance, rather than representing a cold war relic, was the basis for stability and prosperity in the region. President Bill Clinton and Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto affirmed that in their 1996 Tokyo declaration <http://www.mofa.go.jp/region/n-america/us/security/security.html> . This strategy of "integrate, but hedge" continued to guide American foreign policy through the years of the Bush administration.

This year is the 50th anniversary of the United States-Japan security treaty. <http://www.mofa.go.jp/region/n-america/us/q&a/ref/1.html> The two countries will miss a major opportunity if they let the base controversy lead to bitter feelings or the further reduction of American forces in Japan. The best guarantee of security in a region where China remains a long-term challenge and a nuclear North Korea poses a clear threat remains the presence of American troops, which Japan helps to maintain with generous host nation support.

Sometimes Japanese officials quietly welcome "gaiatsu," or foreign pressure, to help resolve their own bureaucratic deadlocks. But that is not the case here: if the United States undercuts the new Japanese government and creates resentment among the Japanese public, then a victory on Futenma could prove Pyrrhic.

Joseph S. Nye Jr., a professor of government at Harvard and the author of "The Powers to Lead," was an assistant secretary of defense from 1994 to 1995.

James Green

Policy Planning Staff

U.S. Department of State

(202) 647 1178

greenjb@state.gov

RELEASE IN PART
B5

---

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 14, 2010 4:24 PM
To: Verma, Richard R; H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Re: Corker

Yes!

---

From: Verma, Richard R
To: 'H' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Tue Sep 14 16:00:08 2010
Subject: Corker

Will vote yes on START....

Thanks for all your help with him.

Now, we need to [redacted] B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, September 14, 2010 5:10 PM
To: H
Subject: Fyi

From Israel Radio
By Shmuel Tal

"Prime Minister Exploring a trip to the U.S. next week

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is exploring the possibility of leaving at the beginning of next week to New York and Washington in order to meet with European leaders under the auspices of a gathering that is initiated by President Obama with the leaders. In addition, he is requesting to meet with the President of the United States Barack Obama and discuss the issue of Iran sanctions and its nuclear program. No confirmation has been given yet for those meetings to the trip has not been finalized yet."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 7, 2010 8:32 PM
To: H

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 15, 2010 3:12 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) EU to call on Israel to extend settlement halt

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Wed Sep 15 15:10:21 2010
Subject: (Reuters) EU to call on Israel to extend settlement halt

BRUSSELS (Reuters) - European Union leaders meeting in Brussels on September 16 will call on Israel to extend a moratorium on settlement building in the occupied West Bank, according to a draft of the summit conclusions. "The European Union deems it indispensable that both parties observe calm and restraint and refrain from actions that could affect negatively the progress of the negotiation," reads the draft, referring to direct Israeli-Palestinian peace talks that began this month. "In this regard, it recalls that settlements are illegal under international law and, with a view to ensure that these talks continue in a constructive manner, calls for an extension of the moratorium decided by Israel."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 7, 2010 8:33 PM
To: H
Subject: Re:

Just called you - call when conv

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thu Oct 07 20:32:16 2010

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 7, 2010 10:17 PM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: Marc Pacheco

I am currently out of the office with limited access to email. If you need immediate assistance, please contact Nora Toiv, toivnf@state.gov, or Joanne Laszczych, laszczychj@state.gov, at 202-647-5548.

If this is an emergency, please call the Operations Center and have them reach out to me.

thank you.

cdm

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Schwerin, Daniel B <SchwerinDB@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 7, 2010 11:40 PM
To: H; preines [redacted] B6
Cc: Huma Abedin; Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: Re: Economist op-ed

Here's some background: This piece is for a year-ending look-ahead issue of The Economist and we were asked to write about America's priorities and place in the world in 2011, ten years after 9/11 and twenty years after the end of the Cold War. The team (Jake, Josh, Anne-Marie, Derek) felt that this was a good opportunity to pull together for a wide audience some of the key themes you sounded in Krakow and elsewhere, and build on the President's call to action at UNGA. We don't say anything new here, its true, but the idea was to lay down another marker that these are issues that are important to you and to the administration.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'preines [redacted]; Schwerin, Daniel B
Cc: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thu Oct 07 22:36:30 2010
Subject: Economist op-ed

I just got the draft and don't think it says anything. What is the question we are trying to answer or issue we were asked to address in this?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 9, 2010 12:28 PM
To: 'Russorv@state.gov'; 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Tech dinner TYs

Pls get list from Thursday dinner and do TYs. I'd like to sign letters. Thx.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 9, 2010 1:17 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Tech dinner TYs

Also, pls add Gerry Ferraro to my call list.

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 09 12:29:55 2010
Subject: Re: Tech dinner TYs

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Russo, Robert V; Jiloty, Lauren C
Cc: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sat Jan 09 12:28:08 2010
Subject: Tech dinner TYs

Pls get list from Thursday dinner and do TYs. I'd like to sign letters. Thx.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 8:05 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Hamas says group's lawmaker arrested in West Bank

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Mon Oct 18 03:45:04 2010
Subject: (AP) Hamas says group's lawmaker arrested in West Bank

HEBRON (AP) - The Palestinian militant Hamas group says Israeli soldiers have arrested one of its lawmakers in the West Bank.

A Hamas official said Hathem Qufishe was arrested early October 18 at his home in the city of Hebron. The official, Mushir al-Masri, said Israel is trying to "quash the legitimate representatives" of the Palestinian people.

The Israeli military had no comment on the arrest.

Qufishe was recently released from an Israeli prison after more than three years. He was among dozens of Hamas officials arrested after Hamas-affiliated militants captured Israeli soldier Sgt. Gilad Schalit in June 2006.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 8:06 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Israeli official: Moroccan king won't meet Peres

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Mon Oct 18 04:46:28 2010
Subject: (AP) Israeli official: Moroccan king won't meet Peres

JERUSALEM (AP) - An aide to Israel's president says the king of Morocco won't meet with the Israeli statesman because of the impasse in Mideast peace talks.

The aide says King Mohammed VI cited the deadlocked talks in turning down President Shimon Peres' request to meet at an upcoming international conference in Marrakech.

Peace talks have stalled over Israel's refusal to extend building curbs in the West Bank. The Palestinians say they won't negotiate if Israel doesn't relent, but have given the U.S. until early November to try to resolve the dispute.

The aide, who wasn't authorized to discuss the issue with the media and spoke on condition of anonymity, said October 18 that if Peres can't meet with the king, he won't attend the World Economic Forum on the Middle East and North Africa.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 10, 2010 5:45 PM
To: 'doug [redacted] B6
Cc: 'mchaleja@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Good to see you

Raj is off to a brilliant start and thank you for the help you provided him.

We share your assessment of Pakistan's need for a public narrative and better capacity to communicate effectively. Judith has been working on how we improve our comm work there, and I know you were talking to the Pakistani Ambassador about helping them. I'm copying Judith and asking that the two of you discuss what we could do given the very difficult political landscape.

Thx for all your good counsel. We need to follow thru on the campaign for women we discussed some months back. Are you still assisting Melanne? Let me know what I can do to hurry it along. H

----- Original Message -----
From: doug [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 07 16:36:51 2010
Subject: Good to see you

Mme Secretary:

I'm glad I got to see you at Raj's swearing-in. Hope you liked the speech. Alonzo said we hit the right notes and Raj is off to a strong start.

Of course I was kidding about "running away" from your "long list" of things you wanted to talk about with me. I'm happy to talk anytime.

In fact, it would be good to touch base on the women's initiative and Pakistan. I've been talking with NDI's highly regarded country director in Pakistan, who says communications is a desperate need and will definitely do some good for the government.

Look forward to seeing you again soon. All the best, Doug

Sent from my Verizon Wireless BlackBerry

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 10, 2010 5:47 PM
To: 'balderstonkm@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

I don't think I made any progress. What will it mean if we can't raise the remaining $? Where else can we try?

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 07 18:33:26 2010
Subject: Your technology dinner this evening

I noticed on your schedule that you are meeting with a number of tech CEO's this evening. Google should be an obvious co-sponsor of the USA Pavilion and they have consistently pushed us off. Although they bring up IP issues as a reason not to participate, the Chinese frequently note that they do a lot of business in China. We are now at $54 million. If the opportunity arises, it would be helpful to note the importance of a USA standing in Shanghai.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 10, 2010 5:49 PM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Cc: 'cheryl.mills [redacted] B6
Subject: Fw: Andy Young

Pls set up appointment for Andy Young to come see me.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 07 20:32:57 2010
Subject: FW: Andy Young

fyi

-----Original Message-----
From: Giffin, Gordon [mailto:[redacted]
Sent: Thursday, January 07, 2010 8:16 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Andy Young

Happy New Year. I hope you got some time to enjoy the holiday season and could relax before getting back at it this year.
Andy Young is a very good friend of mine, and has been a stalwart for the Clintons over the years. He is also one of the most recognized and respected experts on Africa in America. He asked me today if I thought it would be appropriate for him to seek to see the Secretary to share some of his thoughts on Africa and current issues being confronted there. I told him of course and suggested that he reach out to you to try to arrange that dialogue. Hopefully that is ok from your perspective. Andy is a thoughtful, remarkable and decent man. If you don't know him you will enjoy getting to know him. Thanks and maybe one of these days when I am in DC we can grab a coffee together. Cheers.

Gordon D. Giffin
McKenna Long & Aldridge LLP
303 Peachtree St. Suite 5300
Atlanta, Ga. 30308
404-527-4020

CONFIDENTIALITY NOTICE:
This e-mail and any attachments contain information from the law firm of McKenna Long & Aldridge LLP, and are intended solely for the use of the named recipient or recipients. This e-mail may contain privileged attorney/client communications or work product. Any dissemination of this e-mail by anyone other than an intended recipient is strictly prohibited. If you are not a named recipient, you are prohibited from any further viewing of the e-mail or any attachments or from making any use of the e-mail or attachments. If you believe you have received this e-mail in error, notify the sender immediately and permanently delete the e-mail, any attachments, and all copies thereof from any drives or storage media and destroy any printouts of the e-mail or attachments.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 11:00 AM
To: H
Subject: Hague is not available right now

We will try to get a time for later. He won't be available until after 4:45 PM today.
###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 10, 2010 6:00 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: The VMI "Distinguished Diplomat Award"

Ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 10 17:57:56 2010
Subject: Re: The VMI "Distinguished Diplomat Award"

That's good. I know he'll be delighted to hear that. I think it will be more than a good event.

On Coakley, the Globe has her up 15 today, but my friends in Mass say the Globe screen may be too broad. She's not a very good candidate, dull, dutiful, rote, voters are looking to vent on Deval Patrick, Dem enthusiasm flat. Nonetheless, Dems should pull her across, Danger is coming in below 10 percent win and effect on health care debate if any.

Will write you on NI and UK. Going back and forth with Shaun.

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop [redacted]
Cc: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov' <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sun, Jan 10, 2010 5:51 pm
Subject: Re: Fwd: The VMI "Distinguished Diplomat Award"

Thx for sending this along. I am very interested and am copying Lona so she can follow up w Pat.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop [redacted]

To: H

Sent: Sat Jan 09 15:06:56 2010

Subject: Fwd: The VMI "Distinguished Diplomat Award"

Hillary: Virginia Military Institute, George C. Marshall's school, through Pat Lang, would like to give you the Distinguished Diplomat Award. See Pat's note below. Though you must receive endless invitations, I think this one would be a particularly good venue for you for a host of obvious reasons, and where you could deliver a speech. You will have various speeches to give. You can give one at VMI and get honored. You can respond through me or to Pat directly one way or another. Also, I had a long conversation with Pat, who has many sources within the higher echelons of the military, and he describes what the generals are doing on Afghanistan deployment as a "slow motion mutiny." He believes the White House trying to counter it through press leaks as though this is a primary campaign generates contempt. Cheers, Sid

-----Original Message-----

From: Patrick Lang [redacted] B6

To: sbwhoeop [redacted]

Sent: Sat, Jan 9, 2010 2:54 pm

Subject: The VMI "Distinguished Diplomat Award"

Madame Secretary

I am a 1962 graduate of the Virginia Military Institute. VMI has always been predominately a hard science and engineering school. I happen to have been an English major there. Today, there are more cadets with a "major" or "minor" in International Relations and Political Science than in any other field. The whole student body is around 1200 in number and deliberately kept to that size to keep quality up and to continue to rely on a teaching system that is almost tutorial in nature.

The Institute's most revered alumnus is George C. Marshall. His library is there as well as a brand new "Marshall Center for the Study of Leadership and Ethics."

I am a member of the advisory board of the "International Relations and Political Science" Department. The Institute (and the department) gives a prize from time to time to truly "Distinguished Diplomats. " Under that rubric have been included a few who were not strictly diplomats but who have been of great service to the United States. Jim Lilley was a recipient as was Susan Eisenhower, last year's recipient.

When I recently met with the Superintendent of VMI (my classmate), I told him that you would make an admirable recipient for the "Distinguished Diplomat" award. He was very welcoming of the idea. You may know him, General (ret.) JHB Peay.

I enclose a page from the VMI website that described Ms. Eisenhower's award last year.

VMI now has a substantial number of women cadets. It seems to me that your presence there for this purpose would be a great symbol and a vast encouragement for them.

Best Regards

W. Patrick Lang (Pat)

http://academics.vmi.edu/NewsCenter.aspx?id=38929

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 12:07 AM
To: Schwerin, Daniel B; H; preines [redacted] B6
Cc: Huma Abedin; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: Re: Economist op-ed

To follow up - the team tried its hand at a boiled down version of the CFR speech, but in 700 words it lost the nuance and amounted to a series of generalisms. We felt that a more specific topic would allow for a sharper message. We selected democracy because it allows you to talk about a broad and relevant trend that cuts across global affairs; to reprise signature themes like internet freedom, civil society, and the democracy/development nexus; and to underscore that this administration takes these issues seriously. This was also an element of your CFR speech and provides some continuity in that respect as well. We were not looking to break new ground but rather to reinforce.

----- Original Message -----
From: Schwerin, Daniel B
To: 'HDR22@clintonemail.com' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; 'preines [redacted] B6
Cc: 'Huma@clintonemail.com' <Huma@clintonemail.com>; Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I
Sent: Thu Oct 07 23:40:16 2010
Subject: Re: Economist op-ed

Here's some background: This piece is for a year-ending look-ahead issue of The Economist and we were asked to write about America's priorities and place in the world in 2011, ten years after 9/11 and twenty years after the end of the Cold War. The team (Jake, Josh, Anne-Marie, Derek) felt that this was a good opportunity to pull together for a wide audience some of the key themes you sounded in Krakow and elsewhere, and build on the President's call to action at UNGA. We don't say anything new here, its true, but the idea was to lay down another marker that these are issues that are important to you and to the administration.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'preines [redacted] Schwerin, Daniel B B6
Cc: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thu Oct 07 22:36:30 2010
Subject: Economist op-ed

I just got the draft and don't think it says anything. What is the question we are trying to answer or issue we were asked to address in this?

RELEASE IN PART
B4,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 10, 2010 8:13 PM
To: 'balderstonkm@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

What else can I do to help?

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 10 19:03:24 2010
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

Google has been wierd about this whole deal but this whole Espo experience has been fascinating. Some companies will say absolutely no for months (Qualcomm, Bloomberg, J&J) and then pop out of nowhere and say yes. Others like ATT are in for [redacted] and then decide not to give us a penny. Therefore we have to keep bugging these guys. B4

We WILL raise the money. We are at $54M+ (this wk Hawaii came in for $500k and Bloomberg LLC [redacted] and need $7M more. Ideally we would like to raise $10 to 11M to cover any overruns (it's getting more expensive because the US was so late we are paying more now to build it quicker).

Where it will come from?

A- Right now we have three big companies talking to us in the range of [redacted] each - Monsanto, Disney, and Oracle. Haier may go from [redacted] If two or three come thru big we are done.

B- We also have a number of other companies like Invitrogen, Hormel, Mattel and Major League Baseball in the [redacted] range.

C- Interestingly the cities and states are going to their private funders and trying to raise money on their own to promote their jurisdictions - Chicago, Houston, Georgia, Montana, TN. (In the past, over 20 states participated with public funds but current budgets are tough). Maybe a chat w Mayor Bloomberg would be worthwhile. For example, I spoke to the University of WA and they will probably get benefactors to cosponsor at $250k making them the only university represented.

D- We have approached groups like Pharma and the fashion industry thru Diane von Furstenburg to get them to bundle smaller companies and both have agreed to do it. I met w DVL and she wants you to know that she is very excited about helping (they are in the [redacted] range).

E- We have talked to the elusive Chamber of Commerce again about getting SME's to raise $2-3M in smaller increments. They are contemplating it.

Finally the two obvious industries that are not involved are the banks (and we know why) and the insurance companies who are starting to look into the market over there.

Anyway, I did not mean to go on and on but that's where we stand and these are the potential areas to tap. We'll get there.

On your last Q - I too heard that [redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M
Sent: Sun Jan 10 17:47:22 2010
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

I don't think I made any progress. What will it mean if we can't raise the remaining $? Where else can we try?

Do you know how [redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 07 18:33:26 2010
Subject: Your technology dinner this evening

I noticed on your schedule that you are meeting with a number of tech CEO's this evening. Google should be an obvious co-sponsor of the USA Pavilion and they have consistently pushed us off. Although they bring up IP issues as a reason not to participate, the Chinese frequently note that they do a lot of business in China. We are now at $54 million. If the opportunity arises, it would be helpful to note the importance of a USA standing in Shanghai.

RELEASE IN PART
B4,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 10, 2010 8:41 PM
To: 'balderstonkm@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

If a city gives $ do they put up display/exhibits?

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 10 20:37:29 2010
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

This will be an important two weeks to nail down these big companies. We are negotiating with them now about possible options. I'll keep you posted.

May be good to mention this to Mayor Bloomberg if you run into him or see him. Doctoroff gave us [redacted] from Bloomberg, LLC but he thght the Mayor may be interested for the city. B4

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M
Sent: Sun Jan 10 20:13:04 2010
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

What else can I do to help?

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 10 19:03:24 2010
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

Google has been wierd about this whole deal but this whole Espo experience has been fascinating. Some companies will say absolutely no for months (Qualcomm, Bloomberg, J&J) and then pop out of nowhere and say yes. Others like ATT are in for [redacted] and then decide not to give us a penny. Therefore we have to keep bugging these guys.

We WILL raise the money. We are at $54M+ (this wk Hawaii came in for $500k and Bloomberg LLC [redacted] and need $7M more. Ideally we would like to raise $10 to 11M to cover any overruns (it's getting more expensive because the US was so late we are paying more now to build it quicker).

Where it will come from?

A- Right now we have three big companies talking to us in the range of [redacted] each - Monsanto, Disney, and Oracle. Haier may go from [redacted]. If two or three come thru big we are done.

B- We also have a number of other companies like Invitrogen, Hormel, Mattel and Major League Baseball in the [redacted] range.

C- Interestingly the cities and states are going to their private funders and trying to raise money on their own to promote their jurisdictions - Chicago, Houston, Georgia, Montana, TN. (In the past, over 20 states participated with public funds but current budgets are tough). Maybe a chat w Mayor Bloomberg would be worthwhile. For example, I spoke to the University of WA and they will probably get benefactors to cosponsor at $250k making them the only university represented.

D- We have approached groups like Pharma and the fashion industry thru Diane von Furstenburg to get them to bundle smaller companies and both have agreed to do it. I met w DVL and she wants you to know that she is very excited about helping (they are in the [redacted] range). B4

E- We have talked to the elusive Chamber of Commerce again about getting SME's to raise $2-3M in smaller increments. They are contemplating it.

Finally the two obvious industries that are not involved are the banks (and we know why) and the insurance companies who are starting to look into the market over there.

Anyway, I did not mean to go on and on but that's where we stand and these are the potential areas to tap. We'll get there.

On your last Q - I too heard that [redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M
Sent: Sun Jan 10 17:47:22 2010
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

I don't think I made any progress. What will it mean if we can't raise the remaining $? Where else can we try?

Do you know how [redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 07 18:33:26 2010
Subject: Your technology dinner this evening

I noticed on your schedule that you are meeting with a number of tech CEO's this evening. Google should be an obvious co-sponsor of the USA Pavilion and they have consistently pushed us off. Although they bring up IP issues as a reason not to participate, the Chinese frequently note that they do a lot of business in China. We are now at $54 million. If the opportunity arises, it would be helpful to note the importance of a USA standing in Shanghai.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 8:05 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 10/8/10 Friday

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:30 am DAILY SMALL STAFF MEETING
8:45 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING
9:15 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:20 am EUROPE TRIP MEETING
9:45 am Secretary's Outer Office

10:00 am VIDEOS (5)
10:40 am George Marshall Room, 7th Floor

10:40 am CALL w/QATARI PRIME MINISTER AND FOREIGN MINISTER
11:00 am HAMAD BIN JASIM (T) Secretary's Office

11:00 am CALL w/LIBYAN FOREIGN SECRETARY MOUSA KOUSA
11:15 am Secretary's Office

11:30 am MEETING w/CHERYL MILLS
12:00 pm Secretary's Office

12:00 pm MEETING ON QDDR
1:00 pm Secretary's Conference Room

1:00 pm OFFICE TIME
1:50 pm Secretary's Office

1:50 pm DROP BY w/CALVIN & JANE CAFRITZ
1:55 pm Secretary's Office

2:00 pm DEEP DIVE ON MEXICO
3:30 pm Secretary's Conference Room

4:00 pm CALL w/BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY WILLIAM HAGUE
4:15 pm Secretary's Office

4:15 pm OFFICE TIME
5:15 pm Secretary's Office

5:20 pm DEPART State Department
En route Washington Reagan National Airport

5:40 pm ARRIVE Washington Reagan National Airport (DCA)

6:00 pm WHEELS UP Washington Reagan National Airport via US Air 2182
En route LaGuardia Airport

7:15 pm ARRIVE LaGuardia Airport (LGA)

7:25 pm DEPART LaGuardia Airport
En route Private Residence

8:15 pm ARRIVE Private Residence

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 8:34 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: For HRC Review: Statement on Jones & Donilon

----- Original Message -----
From: Schwerin, Daniel B
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Reines, Philippe I; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Oct 08 08:29:01 2010
Subject: For HRC Review: Statement on Jones & Donilon

Huma, below is a proposed statement on Jones & Donilon.
Dan

General Jim Jones has spent a lifetime serving our country with honor and distinction. In war and in peace, from foreign battlefields to the highest levels of our government, he has exemplified the best traditions of the Marine Corps and the United States. I have been honored to serve with him and to call him my friend. As National Security Advisor he brought a steady hand and clear vision to an unforgiving agenda. His leadership was crucial in winding down the combat mission in Iraq, refocusing the war in Afghanistan, and advancing our nation's interests and values around the world. America is more secure and the world is more stable because of Jim's tireless efforts. He will be sorely missed, but I am pleased that Jim will now be able to spend more time with his wife Diane and their wonderful family.

General Jones leaves Marine-sized shoes to fill, but we are fortunate that a public servant as talented and dedicated as Tom Donilon has agreed to take on the task. I have known Tom for many years and he brings deep experience and valuable skills to this crucial job. He has a proven ability to translate big-picture vision into concrete action. As Deputy National Security Advisor, Tom has been a trusted member of our team and has contributed to every major policy decision. I appreciate his support for the State Department and our diplomacy and development efforts around the world and I look forward to working closely with him to implement the President's agenda.

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 11, 2010 8:00 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: NPR

Can you get me transcript of story on NPR this am about how nearsightedness is cause?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 9:47 AM
To: H
Subject: S/P staff member's article on Mario Vargas Llosa

I thought that you might enjoy this by our newest S/P member, who was a journalist for the Wall Street Journalist and other places before she joined us in September. She is on an International Affairs Fellowship from the Council on Foreign Relations. They asked her to write the following; it was cleared by L. It is quite profound.

By EMILY PARKER

In 2007 I flew down to Lima to interview Mario Vargas Llosa for this newspaper. We talked in his elegant home, surrounded by thousands of books. Mr. Vargas Llosa offered me a glass of red wine. Then he proceeded to discuss why he believes that literature can change the world.

Mr. Vargas Llosa's Nobel Prize is a great victory—and not just for a talented and prolific author. His work is perhaps the greatest rebuttal to those who believe that literature exists on the periphery of history and politics, or who claim that they have "no time" for fiction.

In a New Republic essay in 2001, Mr. Vargas Llosa argued for granting literature "an important place in the life of nations." He wrote, "Without it, the critical mind, which is the real engine of historical change and the best protector of liberty, would suffer an irreparable loss."

Mr. Vargas Llosa's novels reflect his deep, personal hatred of dictatorships and his staunch belief in the value of individual liberty. He is hardly the only novelist to have shed light on these themes, but I would argue that he is among the most successful.

Columnist Mary Anastasia O'Grady on the anti-Communist Peruvian writer.

A case in point is "Conversation in the Cathedral," the work that Mr. Vargas Llosa has said he would rescue first from a fire. The novel is set in Peru, in the dark days of the Manuel Odria dictatorship of the 1950s, which is when Mr. Vargas Llosa grew up. He told me that this was the book in which he wanted to describe how dictatorships impregnate "every act of life."

To demonstrate this, Mr. Vargas Llosa paints around Odria rather than confronting him outright. The book opens with a grim landscape of "uneven and faded buildings" and describes "dull and defeated eyes at the tables of Zela bar, hands that reach for ashtrays and glasses of beer." The narrative, which rapidly jumps from past to present, describes a stalled, confused world. You don't know who to trust.

Mr. Vargas Llosa attacks politics more openly in "The Feast of the Goat," which explicitly details the horrors of the Trujillo regime in the Dominican Republic. Rafael Trujillo was notorious for his victimization of women, and so we see life under his rule through the eyes of one young girl unlucky enough to have crossed his path. "The woman is almost always the first victim of a dictatorship," Mr. Vargas Llosa told me.

For some, Mr. Vargas Llosa's victory will be controversial because of his political background and his outspoken views. He unsuccessfully ran for president of Peru in 1990, losing to Alberto Fujimori. During the campaign Mr. Vargas Llosa gained notoriety for his emphasis on a market economy, free trade and private property. He was no less controversial for his support of the invasion of Iraq, which he saw as necessary to ending what he called the "monstrous dictatorship" of Saddam Hussein.

Mr. Vargas Llosa has now left politics, and he believes that he can better shape the world with his pen. Or as he told me in Lima: "Through writing, one can change history."

Not all of his work is dark. "Aunt Julia and the Scriptwriter" is punctuated with humor, and "The Bad Girl," about one man's world-wide pursuit of an elusive lover, is a thoroughly entertaining read. The one constant is a perceptive and empathetic glimpse into a wide range of human experience.

As Mr. Vargas Llosa wrote in his 2001 essay about literature, "Nothing better protects a human being against the stupidity of prejudice, racism, religious or political sectarianism, and exclusivist nationalism than this truth that invariably appears in great literature: that men and women of all nations and places are essentially equal."

Ms. Parker is an international affairs fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 11, 2010 2:38 PM
To: 'balderstonkm@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Ben Feder

Can you also send me Rocco's #?

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Jan 11 12:43:16 2010
Subject: Ben Feder

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 4:08 PM
To: H
Subject: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

Drew Westen

Psychologist and neuroscientist; Emory University Professor
Posted: October 8, 2010 09:23 AM

Bringing Up Boehner

According to news reports, today Republican minority leader and Coppertone model John Boehner will give his "closing argument" to the American people on why they should throw out the Democrats and kill the Obama-Pelosi-Reid "job-killing agenda." He will be returning to his working class roots, speaking at a piping manufacturing plant, an unusual venue these days for a man who is seen much more frequently at gatherings of Wall Street executives with open checkbooks and the males-only country club where he works on his tan when not making the rounds at other clubs with industry lobbyists.

Either the Speaker-to-be is following the model of Michael Steele and free-lancing, or Karl Rove and the Republicans believe it is safe or even advantageous to bring him out in public after the White House made an effort to put Boehner's face on what a Republican majority might look like, with the president invoking his name eight times in one speech.

I have to admit that at the time I was agnostic as to whether it made sense to try to brand him at this late date, as Boehner has minimal name recognition among voters. But the White House was no doubt responding to three realities.

First, Boehner is an unknown to most Americans, which means that, unlike most Republicans in the news, he has not been well branded by the GOP -- which means for once Democrats might actually brand someone or something first rather than playing catch-up. Second, Boehner would indeed be the highest-ranking Republican were the GOP to assume control over the House (other than of course Karl Rove, who is now directing traffic on the right side of the street in Washington again). And third, a concrete face is always better than an abstraction when telling a story, and other than perhaps Sarah Palin, who Republicans could alternately accept and decline as the leader of their party, Boehner's tanned visage and history as errand-boy for virtually every major corporate special interest in his two decades in Washington (including his stint as the Marlboro Man, handing out tobacco lobby campaign checks to his fellow Republicans on the floor of the House) made him a potential counter-villain to the Republican's bogeywoman, Nancy Pelosi.

I remained agnostic until this week, when colleagues at Media Matters Action Network and I conducted a national messaging survey with 1,000 registered voters, selected to match the demographics of the voting and likely voting populations. The goal was to see how effectively we could speak with voters about Boehner as not only the symbol and standard-bearer for the GOP but also the water-boy for corporate America. (The results were surprisingly similar whether we looked at registered voters or likely voters, although as others have described, precisely how to determine who is a "likely voter" in this election is as much art as science, and the point of good messaging at this point is actually to change the dynamics of likely voting, not just to reflect them.)

As detailed in a memo published in Politico, what we found was clear: Boehner is a target well worth defining, who readily stands for precisely what Americans perceive to be the reasons they would have to hold their noses to vote for Congressional Republicans (perhaps the only group left who poll worse than Congressional Democrats with swing voters). We tested both paragraph-length narratives and single-sentence language designed to capture the essence of those narratives, and in each case, we tested them against the toughest opposition language we could test them against: the words of Boehner, Cantor, Limbaugh and others combined in defining the "Obama-Pelosi-Reid" agenda.

What we found, in brief, is that we could beat a tough GOP narrative about the "job-killing" socialists in the White House and Congress by 15 to 20 points with two narratives starring Boehner in the leading role (with best supporting bad actor going in one of the narratives to Karl Rove and his corporate allies), and we could win with over 15 different sentence-long descriptions of "what's the matter with Boehner" with margins ranging from 10 to 60 points against a tough conservative attack on the Obama-Pelosi-Reid axis of conservative evil.

The narratives that most moved likely voters -- including swing voters, who preferred them by double-digits over tough Republican rhetoric -- made clear whose voices Boehner would be speaking for as Speaker (e.g., the Wall Street executives he convened to try to block Wall Street reform). They harnessed the same populist anger at the hijacking of Washington by corporate special interests that has enlivened the tea partiers and is palpable across the political spectrum, and they focused on the extremism of the party Boehner would Speak for. A narrative that brought Karl Rove into the picture was slightly more polarizing with swing voters but slightly more powerful with likely Democratic voters.

In some ways what was most surprising was the success of the single-line statements of what we need in a Speaker and who John Boehner really speaks for (although these single-line statements came after the narratives, and likely reflect the power of branding, even over the course of a brief online encounter with voters). They ranged from relatively lofty and aspirational (e.g., "We need a Speaker who is also a listener, who can hear the voices of ordinary Americans" -- a theme colleagues and I found highly resonant across the political spectrum in message testing on the role of money in politics) -- to the harder-edged (e.g., "The Speaker of the House is a heartbeat away from the Presidency. Unfortunately, we know where John Boehner's heart is, and it isn't with the middle class," or "John Boehner understands deficits. He's spent nearly 20 years in Washington creating them.")

If there's a message in this message research, it is at once short-term and long-term. In the short run, if Democrats want to hang onto their seats in November, they would do well to define this election in terms of the middle class and small business versus the billionaires and big corporations that are hijacking our democracy; to use Boehner as a poster child for the party whose primary commitment is to the latter and whose tan is a testament to that commitment; and to avoid giving voters reason to regret their vote if they give it to Democrats again this time, by supporting the things they say they stand for and avoiding that golden mean between the public interest and the special interests that finance campaigns on both sides of the aisle.

In the longer run, branding matters. One of the biggest strategic and messaging mistakes of the last two years was the failure of Democrats to brand their opponents while their opponents were busy branding them -- and in particular the failure to brand the Bush Recession as the natural consequence of failed Republican economic principles. Two years ago, that was a virtually uncontested political proposition, as the voters made clear in handing Democrats the White House and supermajorities in both the House and Senate. Today, the public is split down the middle as to who caused the recession.

Reality doesn't brand itself. Hopefully it won't take a debacle in November and another 10 million jobs lost for reality to unveil itself again for a brief political moment and for progressives to have a second bite at the apple.

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 11, 2010 2:38 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Roy Spence

That's what I thought too. Can you get that done?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Jan 11 12:04:35 2010
Subject: FW: Roy Spence

?

This is the role we discussed [redacted] for. B5 B6

cdm

From: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Monday, January 11, 2010 11:53 AM
To: 'H'
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Roy Spence

As per your suggestion, I spoke with Roy Spence over the weekend and will be meeting with him on Wednesday to discuss candidates for the International Information programs (IIP) position. Will let you know how it goes.

JM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 5:21 PM
To: H
Subject: kurt campbell

MS – Kurt Campbell returned your call
###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 11, 2010 3:20 PM
To: 'balderstonkm@state.gov'
Cc: 'Russorv@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Ben Feder

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Jan 11 15:04:47 2010
Subject: RE: Ben Feder

Rocco DiFazio - cell [redacted] work [redacted]

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Monday, January 11, 2010 2:38 PM
To: Balderston, Kris M
Subject: Re: Ben Feder

Can you also send me Rocco's #?

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Jan 11 12:43:16 2010
Subject: Ben Feder

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 5:46 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

Yes will be at home after early rattner book party

Sent via DROID on Verizon Wireless

-----Original message-----

From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: ;sbwhoeop ' <sbwhoeop(
Sent: Fri, Oct 8, 2010 21:30:19 GMT+00:00
Subject: Re: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

Are you reachable by phone tonight?

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Fri Oct 08 16:08:27 2010
Subject: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

The Huffington Post <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/> <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/>

Drew Westen <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/drew-westen>

Psychologist and neuroscientist; Emory University Professor
Posted: October 8, 2010 09:23 AM

Bringing Up Boehner <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/drew-westen/post_1034_b_755497.html>

According to news reports, today Republican minority leader and Coppertone model John Boehner will give his "closing argument" to the American people on why they should throw out the Democrats and kill the Obama-Pelosi-Reid "job-killing agenda." He will be returning to his working class roots, speaking at a piping manufacturing plant, an unusual venue these days for a man who is seen much more frequently at gatherings of Wall Street executives with open checkbooks and the males-only country club where he works on his tan when not making the rounds at other clubs with industry lobbyists.

Either the Speaker-to-be is following the model of Michael Steele and free-lancing, or Karl Rove and the Republicans believe it is safe or even advantageous to bring him out in public after the White House made an effort to put Boehner's face on what a Republican majority might look like, with the president invoking his name eight times in one speech.

I have to admit that at the time I was agnostic as to whether it made sense to try to brand him at this late date, as Boehner has minimal name recognition among voters. But the White House was no doubt responding to three realities.

First, Boehner is an unknown to most Americans, which means that, unlike most Republicans in the news, he has not been well branded by the GOP -- which means for once Democrats might actually brand someone or something first rather than playing catch-up. Second, Boehner would indeed be the highest-ranking Republican were the GOP to assume control over the House (other than of course Karl Rove, who is now directing traffic on the right side of the street in Washington again). And third, a concrete face is always better than an abstraction when telling a story, and other than perhaps Sarah Palin, who Republicans could alternately accept and decline as the leader of their party, Boehner's tanned visage and history as errand-boy for virtually every major corporate special interest in his two decades in Washington (including his stint as the Marlboro Man, handing out tobacco lobby campaign checks to his fellow Republicans on the floor of the House) made him a potential counter-villain to the Republican's bogeywoman, Nancy Pelosi.

I remained agnostic until this week, when colleagues at Media Matters Action Network and I conducted a national messaging survey <http://cloudfront.mediamattersaction.org/static/images/pdf/BrandingBoehner.pdf> with 1,000 registered voters, selected to match the demographics of the voting and likely voting populations. The goal was to see how effectively we could speak with voters about Boehner as not only the symbol and standard-bearer for the GOP but also the water-boy for corporate America. (The results were surprisingly similar whether we looked at registered voters or likely voters, although as others have described, precisely how to determine who is a "likely voter" in this election is as much art as science, and the point of good messaging at this point is actually to change the dynamics of likely voting, not just to reflect them.)

As detailed in a memo published in Politico, what we found was clear: Boehner is a target well worth defining, who readily stands for precisely what Americans perceive to be the reasons they would have to hold their noses to vote for Congressional Republicans (perhaps the only group left who poll worse than Congressional Democrats with swing voters). We tested both paragraph-length narratives and single-sentence language designed to capture the essence of those narratives, and in each case, we tested them against the toughest opposition language we could test them against: the words of Boehner, Cantor, Limbaugh and others combined in defining the "Obama-Pelosi-Reid" agenda.

What we found, in brief, is that we could beat a tough GOP narrative about the "job-killing" socialists in the White House and Congress by 15 to 20 points with two narratives starring Boehner in the leading role (with best supporting bad actor going in one of the narratives to Karl Rove and his corporate allies), and we could win with over 15 different sentence-long descriptions of "what's the matter with Boehner" with margins ranging from 10 to 60 points against a tough conservative attack on the Obama-Pelosi-Reid axis of conservative evil.

The narratives that most moved likely voters -- including swing voters, who preferred them by double-digits over tough Republican rhetoric -- made clear whose voices Boehner would be speaking for as Speaker (e.g., the Wall Street executives he convened to try to block Wall Street reform). They harnessed the same populist anger at the hijacking of Washington by corporate special interests that has enlivened the tea partiers and is palpable across the political spectrum, and they focused on the extremism of the party Boehner would Speak for. A narrative that brought Karl Rove into the picture was slightly more polarizing with swing voters but slightly more powerful with likely Democratic voters.

In some ways what was most surprising was the success of the single-line statements of what we need in a Speaker and who John Boehner really speaks for (although these single-line statements came after the narratives, and likely reflect the power of branding, even over the course of a brief online encounter with voters). They ranged from relatively lofty and aspirational (e.g., "We need a Speaker who is also a listener, who can hear the voices of ordinary Americans" -- a theme colleagues and I found highly resonant across the political spectrum in message testing on the role of money in politics) -- to the harder-edged (e.g., "The Speaker of the House is a heartbeat away from the Presidency. Unfortunately, we know where John Boehner's heart is, and it isn't with the middle class," or "John Boehner understands deficits. He's spent nearly 20 years in Washington creating them.")

If there's a message in this message research, it is at once short-term and long-term. In the short run, if Democrats want to hang onto their seats in November, they would do well to define this election in terms of the middle class and small business versus the billionaires and big corporations that are hijacking our democracy; to use Boehner as a poster child for the party whose primary commitment is to the latter and whose tan is a testament to that commitment; and to avoid giving voters reason to regret their vote if they give it to Democrats again this time, by supporting the things they say they stand for and avoiding that golden mean between the public interest and the special interests that finance campaigns on both sides of the aisle.

In the longer run, branding matters. One of the biggest strategic and messaging mistakes of the last two years was the failure of Democrats to brand their opponents while their opponents were busy branding them -- and in particular the failure to brand the Bush Recession as the natural consequence of failed Republican economic principles. Two years ago, that was a virtually uncontested political proposition, as the voters made clear in handing Democrats the White House and supermajorities in both the House and Senate. Today, the public is split down the middle as to who caused the recession.

Reality doesn't brand itself. Hopefully it won't take a debacle in November and another 10 million jobs lost for reality to unveil itself again for a brief political moment and for progressives to have a second bite at the apple.

<http://getglue.com/?s=w>

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 11, 2010 3:22 PM
To: 'Russorv@state.gov'
Cc: 'balderstonkm@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Ben Feder

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Jan 11 12:43:16 2010
Subject: Ben Feder

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 11, 2010 3:27 PM
To: 'Russorv@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Ben Feder

Thanks.

----- Original Message -----
From: Russo, Robert V <RussoRV@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Jan 11 15:25:38 2010
Subject: RE: Ben Feder

B6

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Monday, January 11, 2010 3:22 PM
To: Russo, Robert V
Cc: Balderston, Kris M
Subject: Fw: Ben Feder

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Jan 11 12:43:16 2010
Subject: Ben Feder

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 11, 2010 11:03 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Global Hunger and Food Security Initiative - Award to Secretary Clinton

That's very nice but you should get it! But, of course, I would accept on behalf of all of us.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Jan 11 22:40:35 2010
Subject: FW: Global Hunger and Food Security Initiative - Award to Secretary Clinton

FYI

From: Rick Leach [mailto [redacted] B6
Sent: Monday, January 11, 2010 11:28 AM
To: Thompson, James F
Subject: Global Hunger and Food Security Initiative - Award to Secretary Clinton
Importance: High

Hello and Happy New Year Jim,

Friends of WFP has decided to provide its annual "Leadership in the Fight Against Hunger" Award to Secretary Clinton this year. The award is presented at a ceremony on Capitol Hill (within one of the House/Senate caucus rooms). Approximately 200 people attend the event including Members of Congress, NGO representatives, business leaders, administration officials and other leaders in the fight against hunger.

As you know, Friends of WFP is a non-profit organization dedicated to addressing global hunger. Its board members include former agriculture secretary Dan Glickman, former Senators George McGovern and Bob Dole, YUM Brands CEO David Novak, former NSC Advisor Sandy Berger and others. I established the organization in 1997.

Before officially announcing Secretary Clinton as this year's award recipient, we hoped to confirm that Secretary Clinton will be available to personally accept the award. We plan to schedule the award ceremony in September on either a Tuesday or Wednesday evening (at approximately 6:30/7pm). We would select the specific date based on Secretary Clinton's schedule.

I think the ceremony would provide another good opportunity to shine a spotlight on the unprecedented commitment of Secretary Clinton and President Obama to addressing global hunger. Thank you for your help in engaging the appropriate officials in the State Department.

All the Best,

Rick Leach

---

From: Thompson, James F [ThompsonJF2@state.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, December 29, 2009 4:16 PM
To: Global Partnership Initiative
Subject: Global Hunger and Food Security Initiative Update

Friends,

As 2009 comes to a close, we wanted to provide you with an update on the U.S. Global Hunger and Food Security Initiative and share with you what is to come in the new year.

First, a word of thanks for the input that many of you provided on our Global Hunger and Food Security Initiative consultation document. We received a large amount of interest and excellent suggestions on the document, and we will soon release a new version that reflects this input.

We are also drafting an implementation plan that will describe in greater detail how we intend to implement the initiative. We look forward to sharing both documents with you.

In recent months, we have continued to garner international support for the five core principles for global food security that form the basis of our strategy. In November, all UN member states endorsed these principles at the World Summit on Food Security in Rome.

1) Invest in country-owned plans

2) Foster strategic coordination

3) Strive for a comprehensive approach to food security

4) Ensure a strong role for the multilateral system

5) Ensure sustained and substantial commitment by all partners to investment in agriculture and food security and nutrition

In establishing the Rome Principles, the international community declared a new business model for coordinated action to increase global food security.

Translating these principles into action, on December 6-8, the Government of Rwanda, together with the Comprehensive Africa Agriculture Development Program, hosted a technical review of its Agriculture Sector Investment Plan and convened a high-level stakeholders meeting. At the meeting, development partners and the African Union/NEPAD endorsed Rwanda's plan and agreed to mobilize support for scaled-up financing. The African Union/NEPAD and representatives from the World Bank, UN, donor countries, the private sector, civil society organizations, and NGOs attended the meeting.

The United States was represented by a whole-of-government team led by Special Assistant to the President Gayle Smith that included representatives from the Departments of State, Treasury, and Agriculture, USAID, and MCC. Our team committed to improve the quality of our aid; to provide robust financial commitments and technical support; and to work to mobilize additional financing of the Investment Plan.

In the new year, we will continue to engage all stakeholders, work with the international community, and build on our experience in Rwanda as we move forward with plans to implement our initiative.

Please continue to visit our website: www.state.gov/s/globalfoodsecurity to stay informed of planning for the initiative and to provide input.

We wish you a happy new year and look forward to continuing to work closely with you.

The Global Hunger and Food Security Team

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 12, 2010 12:49 AM
To: Huma Abedin; 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: John Gill

When can I call him?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 6:51 PM
To: H
Subject: Update

Some cats and dogs:

1. Talked to Denis about EU summit issue and Saakashvili. He said he would work both of them.

2. Hikers meeting was interesting and will fill you in Monday. Bottom line – we are actively working a number of the options, including the British option.

3. Saw Kurt this evening to discuss a potential Asia speech in Hawaii and he was focused on Jim again. I know you spoke with him and assume he gave you the same analysis.

4. Sent you updates on Libya – it played as we expected...a demand for a complete settlement freeze including Jerusalem. Our press line will be to gloss over that and focus on the top line: We have Arab support for efforts to create conditions to continue the negotiations .... i.e., no collapse. You will receive tomorrow morning two Plan B documents, one from the Mitchell team and one from Dennis Ross.

Will continue to report this weekend.

RELEASE IN PART
B4,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 12, 2010 10:45 AM
To: 'balderstonkm@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

Can you send me a call sheet for Bloomberg?

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 10 20:56:15 2010
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

Its not like a traditional trade show/expo with specific booths. It is more subtle and the pavilion folks would negotiate creatively on what they want. .

Depdg on amount, they get on the big wall of contributors, we show multiple scenes of NYC in the shows and displays, they can use the wonderful VIP lounge/auditorium to have NYC day or week at the Expo - the rockettes, Broadway goes to China, commercial diplomacy, mtgs betwn NYC and Chinese officials, .getting SME's access to China etc. We could really be creative.

LA, San Fran, San Antonio already in, chicago on way...

As you know the general theme is "Better Cities, Better Lives". How can NYC not be repped? They cam brag about their innovations.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M
Sent: Sun Jan 10 20:41:04 2010
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

If a city gives $ do they put up display/exhibits?

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 10 20:37:29 2010
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

This will be an important two weeks to nail down these big companies. We are negotiating with them now about possible options. I'll keep you posted.

May be good to mention this to Mayor Bloomberg if you run into him or see him. Doctoroff gave us [redacted] from Bloomberg, LLC but he thght the Mayor may be interested for the city. B4

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M

Sent: Sun Jan 10 20:13:04 2010
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

What else can I do to help?

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 10 19:03:24 2010
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

Google has been wierd about this whole deal but this whole Espo experience has been fascinating. Some companies will say absolutely no for months (Qualcomm, Bloomberg, J&J) and then pop out of nowhere and say yes. Others like ATT are in for [redacted] and then decide not to give us a penny. Therefore we have to keep bugging these guys. B4

We WILL raise the money. We are at $54M+ (this wk Hawaii came in for $500k and Bloomberg LLC [redacted] and need $7M more. Ideally we would like to raise $10 to 11M to cover any overruns (it's getting more expensive because the US was so late we are paying more now to build it quicker).

Where it will come from?

A- Right now we have three big companies talking to us in the range of [redacted] each - Monsanto, Disney, and Oracle. Haier may go from [redacted] If two or three come thru big we are done.

B- We also have a number of other companies like Invitrogen, Hormel, Mattel and Major League Baseball in the [redacted] range.

C- Interestingly the cities and states are going to their private funders and trying to raise money on their own to promote their jurisdictions - Chicago, Houston, Georgia, Montana, TN. (In the past, over 20 states participated with public funds but current budgets are tough). Maybe a chat w Mayor Bloomberg would be worthwhile. For example, I spoke to the University of WA and they will probably get benefactors to cosponsor at $250k making them the only university represented.

D- We have approached groups like Pharma and the fashion industry thru Diane von Furstenburg to get them to bundle smaller companies and both have agreed to do it. I met w DVL and she wants you to know that she is very excited about helping (they are in the [redacted] range).

E- We have talked to the elusive Chamber of Commerce again about getting SME's to raise $2-3M in smaller increments. They are contemplating it.

Finally the two obvious industries that are not involved are the banks (and we know why) and the insurance companies who are starting to look into the market over there.

Anyway, I did not mean to go on and on but that's where we stand and these are the potential areas to tap. We'll get there.

[redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Balderston, Kris M

Sent: Sun Jan 10 17:47:22 2010
Subject: Re: Your technology dinner this evening

I don't think I made any progress. What will it mean if we can't raise the remaining $? Where else can we try?

Do you know how [redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 07 18:33:26 2010
Subject: Your technology dinner this evening

I noticed on your schedule that you are meeting with a number of tech CEO's this evening. Google should be an obvious co-sponsor of the USA Pavilion and they have consistently pushed us off. Although they bring up IP issues as a reason not to participate, the Chinese frequently note that they do a lot of business in China. We are now at $54 million. If the opportunity arises, it would be helpful to note the importance of a USA standing in Shanghai.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 6:52 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Call request: Steinberg

Ms: dep. Sec steinberg has asked, via ops, for a secure call with you.
###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 7:08 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Re: Call request: Steinberg

Ok- ill find out and get back to you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Fri Oct 08 19:06:56 2010
Subject: Re: Call request: Steinberg

Pls let him know I won't be at secure phone for at least two hours. How late can I call?

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Oct 08 18:51:39 2010
Subject: Call request: Steinberg

Ms: dep. Sec steinberg has asked, via ops, for a secure call with you.
###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 7:19 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Re: Call request: Steinberg

We let steinberg know that you won't be at a secure phone for at least two hours. He is unsure of how late he will be available this evening, so his preference is to check back in with ops later on in the evening. When he does that I will let you know.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Fri Oct 08 19:06:56 2010
Subject: Re: Call request: Steinberg

Pls let him know I won't be at secure phone for at least two hours. How late can I call?

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Oct 08 18:51:39 2010
Subject: Call request: Steinberg

Ms: dep. Sec steinberg has asked, via ops, for a secure call with you.
###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 7:50 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Re: Call request: Steinberg

D steinberg informed ops that he has resolved the issue and has rescinded his request to speak with you this evening.

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Oct 08 19:19:23 2010
Subject: Re: Call request: Steinberg

We let steinberg know that you won't be at a secure phone for at least two hours. He is unsure of how late he will be available this evening, so his preference is to check back in with ops later on in the evening. When he does that I will let you know.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Fri Oct 08 19:06:56 2010
Subject: Re: Call request: Steinberg

Pls let him know I won't be at secure phone for at least two hours. How late can I call?

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Oct 08 18:51:39 2010
Subject: Call request: Steinberg

Ms: dep. Sec steinberg has asked, via ops, for a secure call with you.
###

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 12, 2010 11:15 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Statement

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 12 23:12:29 2010
Subject: Statement

Here you go:

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 8, 2010 9:40 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Call tmw with South Korean Foreign Minister Kim Sung-hwan

Ops has confirmed this call for tomorrow at 9:30 am EDT.
Ops informs us that the call with the thai fm will not be confirmed until closer to midnight tonight.
###

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 12:04 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: For HRC: Economist op-ed

Do you want me to have faxed to you as well?

----- Original Message -----
From: Schwerin, Daniel B
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Daniel, Joshua J; Fuchs, Michael H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Oct 08 21:02:59 2010
Subject: For HRC: Economist op-ed

Huma, here's a revised draft of the Economist op-ed that reflects the Secretary's suggestions:

B5

B5

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 8:27 AM
To: H
Subject: Calls

9:30 korean fm confirmed
10am thai fm confirmed
And kouchner called asking to speak to you today.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 14, 2010 4:39 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: FW: Call Me or Email

I'm back on the ground, on the way to the house.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Jan 13 21:44:33 2010
Subject: FW: FW: Call Me or Email

FYI - see Michele message

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Stewart Paperin [redacted] B6
Date: Wed, 13 Jan 2010 15:33:30 -0500
Subject: FW: Call Me or Email
To: raj.shah[redacted] rajivshah[redacted]

Raj,

In organizing efforts for Haiti you may want to reach out to Michele Pierre Louis, the former Prime Minister, who is on the ground. I have attaached below a short email describing the situation. She is a superb executive and has one of the best insights into what is needed.

Stewart

---

From: Michele Duvivier [mailto[redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, January 13, 2010 2:13 PM
To: Stewart Paperin
Subject: Re: Call Me or Email

Stewart,

We are safe but Port-au-Prince is destroyed. My appartment is gone.
FOKAL is safe fortunately but a few employees had their homes destroyed, like mine. The phones don't work so it is easier to stay in touch by internet.

The situation is dramatic. the governement is powerless. The Palace, the Parliament, the Ministries, the Minustah are non operational. We cannot count the dead.[redacted] is dead and Minustah's headquarters collapsed. We ran out of medical supplies, water, food for the first reliefs, and then we have to think about reconstruction.

As soon as we can talk I'll call you to talk about specifics.

The hard part is that there have been over 40 repeats after the first tough seism and we don't know if it is over yet.

We keep in touch.

Michele

---

From: Stewart Paperin [redacted] B6
To: micheleduvivier [redacted]
Cc: Loraine Mangones [redacted]
Sent: Wed, January 13, 2010 12:09:15 PM
Subject: Call Me or Email

Michele,

I heard you, Loraine and the family are ok.. Please call me if you have a chance or ask Loraine to. I talked with [redacted] and want to discuss how we can be helpful.

SJP

--
Sent from my mobile device

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Schwerin, Daniel B <SchwerinDB@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 8:32 AM
To: H; Fuchs, Michael H
Subject: Re: For HRC: Economist op-ed

Thank you, we'll make that change.
Dan

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Schwerin, Daniel B; Fuchs, Michael H
Sent: Sat Oct 09 05:59:29 2010
Subject: Fw: For HRC: Economist op-ed

This is fine but needs to mention the G-20 and the way we used it to address economic crisis.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Oct 09 00:03:36 2010
Subject: Fw: For HRC: Economist op-ed

Do you want me to have faxed to you as well?

----- Original Message -----
From: Schwerin, Daniel B
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Daniel, Joshua J; Fuchs, Michael H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Oct 08 21:02:59 2010
Subject: For HRC: Economist op-ed

Huma, here's a revised draft of the Economist op-ed that reflects the Secretary's suggestions:

B5

B5

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 14, 2010 4:06 PM
To: 'brimmere@state.gov'
Subject: Law of the Seas

Esther--Can you tell me if China has signed this treaty?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 14, 2010 5:19 PM
To: 'brimmere@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Law of the Seas

Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Brimmer, Esther D <BrimmerE@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 14 17:17:47 2010
Subject: RE: Law of the Seas

Yes, Ma'am, China ratified in 1996.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, January 14, 2010 4:06 PM
To: Brimmer, Esther D
Subject: Law of the Seas

Esther--Can you tell me if China has signed this treaty?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 14, 2010 5:52 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Raj Shah

Can you send me his email address?

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772600 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

FOOD INDUSTRY CODEX COALITION

Advancing Sound International Policy Through Science

October 18, 2010

Secretary Hilary Clinton
US Department of State
2201 C Street NW
Washington, DC 20520

Secretary Tom Vilsack
US Department of Agriculture
Whitten Building
1400 Independence Avenue NW
Washington, DC 20250

Dear Secretary Clinton and Secretary Vilsack:

On behalf of the members of the Food Industry Codex Coalition (FICC)[1] we applaud the Administration's global commitment to food security, through its Feed the Future initiative, and urge your strong and continuing support for the US government's role in Codex[2] to further this objective. We address this appeal to both of you, as it relates both to your individual and joint responsibilities on Codex Alimentarius. We are much encouraged by the Administration's view that "the private sector is particularly important for combating food insecurity and increasing the sustainability of our efforts," and we enthusiastically welcome this partnership with the Administration.

We draw your attention especially to the critical relationship between Codex and Feed the Future. A vibrant science-based global food safety regulatory system which Codex fosters is among the most tangible and valuable components in the strategy to further our shared goal to achieve global food security. Safe food is a prerequisite for a sufficient

[1] The FICC represents the interests of over 70 food companies and trade associations keenly interested in the international standard setting activities of the Codex Alimentarius Commission (CAC). FICC recognizes the critical role Codex serves to facilitate trade and protect consumer health. The coalition, which represents the entire food chain from production to retail, works to influence international food policy based on science. FICC members actively engage with U.S. delegates and Codex staff in an effort to support and strengthen U.S. leadership in Codex.

[2] The Codex Alimentarius was created in 1963 under the joint umbrellas of the United Nations' World Health Organization (WHO) and the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) with a dual mandate: protection of the health of consumers and the facilitation of fair practices in food trade.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772600 Date: 08/31/2015

supply. For our developing country partners, Codex standards serve a vital role in protecting the health of their people, and in facilitating market opportunities for their agricultural commodities. For the US food and agriculture industry, these science-based Codex rules help protect our $100 billion agricultural export market by setting global standards for safe and fair food trade. Moreover, they lay the foundation for achieving the President's National Export Initiative goal of doubling exports in the next five years.

For all these reasons the US should increase its presence and influence in Codex. Specifically, we urge your close attention, high priority, and full funding support in these areas:

- US Codex Office, USDA, and international outreach programs;
- Office of the Codex Chairperson, currently held by an American at USDA;
- Codex-related positions at both FAO and WHO, the two Codex UN oversight institutions:
- Committed and focused senior policy level participation in the US Codex Policy Committee;
- High-level participation in US delegations to Codex Commission and committee meetings;
- Consistent policy positions for Codex meetings; and
- Enhanced collaboration between the US Mission and the Codex Secretariat at FAO in Rome.

FICC acknowledges with appreciation our government's responsiveness to previous petitions to the Administration to give strong support to Codex issues, and notes particularly USDA's earlier action to strengthen the leadership of the US Codex Office.

At this time we respectfully urge your renewed attention to these other critical areas of Codex activity. Ensuring the full potential of Codex is an essential component to improve global food safety and achieving America's priority goal of global food security.

Thank you for your consideration of these views.

Sincerely,

American Beverage Association
American Frozen Food Institute
Animal Health Institute
Association of Dressings and Sauces
Biotechnology Industry Organization
Calorie Control Council
Campbell Soup Company
Corn Refiners Association
CropLife America

Enzyme Technical Association
Flavor and Extract Manufacturers Association of the United States
Global Agritrends
Grocery Manufacturers Association
Institute of Shortening and Edible Oils
International Association of Color Manufacturers
International Dairy Foods Association
International Food Additives Council
International Formula Council
Juice Products Association
National Cattleman's Beef Association
National Confectioners Association
National Fisheries Institute
National Oilseed Processors Association
National Pork Producers Council
National Renderers Association
Nestle USA
Pet Food Institute
US Meat Export Federation
ViaGen, Inc.
Vinegar Institute

cc:
Ron Kirk, USTR
Islam Siddiqui, USTR Agriculture Negotiator
Margaret Hamberg, Commissioner FDA
Ertharin Cousin, Ambassador to the US Mission to UN Agencies Rome
Jim Miller, Undersecretary of State USDA FFAS
Elizabeth Hagen, Undersecretary of Food Safety USDA
Catherine Woteki, Undersecretary of State USDA REE
Robert Hormats, Undersecretary of State Economic, Energy and Agriculture
Francisco Sanchez, Undersecretary for International Trade, DOC
Rajiv Shah, Administrator USAID
Jose Fernandez, Assistant Secretary of State, Economic Energy and Business
Ester Brimmer, Assistant Secretary of State, International Organizations
Cheryl Mills, Chief of Staff to Secretary of State
Ann Tutwiler, Global Food Security Coordinator USDA
Michael Taylor, Deputy Commissioner for Foods, FDA
Gayle Smith, White House National Security Council
Karen Hulebak, Codex Chairperson
Karen Stuck, US Codex Manager

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 14, 2010 5:54 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Good Job!

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Jan 13 16:09:53 2010
Subject: FW: Good Job!

fyi

From: hugh parmer [mailto
Sent: Wednesday, January 13, 2010 3:58 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Good Job!

B6

Ms Mills,

I got your email address in a message from my good friend, Kathleen Townsend, several months ago but have never wanted to bother you directly. However, as the former head of humanitarian operations at USAID under Pres. Clinton, I thought it appropriate to commend you and your colleagues on the excellent job that is being done in the early days of the USG response to the tragedy in Haiti. The deployment of Coast Guard and SouthComm resources, the immediate organization of an interdepartmental group to coordinate USG efforts, the deployment of multiple USAID urban search and rescue units as well as a DART, and the ability to make these decisions without delay is impressive. Managing information flow with early statements by the Pres. and Sec. followed by your press conference on relief plans effectively focused attention on the US leadership role. Please pass on my "good job" to whomever has been leading this effort. It's as good as I have seen from the USG. Let me know if there is anyway I can be of help.

Hugh

Hugh Parmer

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 14, 2010 5:54 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Good to see you

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: Doug Hattaway [redacted] B6
Cc: Golden, Jennifer R <GoldenJR@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Jan 13 12:56:19 2010
Subject: RE: Good to see you

Thanks for the note. Would love to follow up on Pakistan and also have another idea I'd like to talk to you about. By copy of this email I am asking Jenn Golden from my office to find a time to meet. Hope to see you soon.

JM

-----Original Message-----
From: Doug Hattaway [mailto:[redacted]
Sent: Wednesday, January 13, 2010 10:01 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: RE: Good to see you

Judith:

I hope you've been well. Following up on the Secretary's request, when would you like to regroup about communications support in Pakistan?

As food for thought, I've been talking with [redacted] She's a great source of insight and information on the ground, with a valuable independent perspective. She is very tuned into the government's communications challenges and opportunities.

In her view, while the need is more urgent than ever, the government does have positive programs and policies that would generate good will if people knew about them. Communications seems to suffer both from a lack of perspective - politicians are obsessed with politics in the capital, rather than the needs of people at the grassroots - and a lack of both practical expertise and proactive strategy. They need a plan for publicizing initiatives that benefit people, as well as hands-on training and support to execute effectively.

This sounds very similar to the situation my team dealt with in Lebanon, where we worked with the government, political parties and NGOs. We learned not to let a state of crisis be an obstacle to moving forward with a communications program - they're always in crisis and, as you know, effective communications is part of the long-term solution.

I know there may be concern about working with US consultants. One approach would be to work through NDI, which has great contacts and credibility on the ground. That's how we did it in Lebanon.

I hope some of this is useful food for thought. You may recall that, when we met before the holidays, I showed you the program we did in Lebanon. Would you like me to put together ideas for a program in Pakistan?

Best, Doug

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, January 10, 2010 5:45 PM
To: 'doug [redacted] B6
Cc: 'mchaleja@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Good to see you

Raj is off to a brilliant start and thank you for the help you provided him.

We share your assessment of Pakistan's need for a public narrative and better capacity to communicate effectively. Judith has been working on how we improve our comm work there, and I know you were talking to the Pakistani Ambassador about helping them. I'm copying Judith and asking that the two of you discuss what we could do given the very difficult political landscape.

Thx for all your good counsel. We need to follow thru on the campaign for women we discussed some months back. Are you still assisting Melanne? Let me know what I can do to hurry it along. H

----- Original Message -----
From: doug [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 07 16:36:51 2010
Subject: Good to see you

Mme Secretary:

I'm glad I got to see you at Raj's swearing-in. Hope you liked the speech. Alonzo said we hit the right notes and Raj is off to a strong start.

Of course I was kidding about "running away" from your "long list" of things you wanted to talk about with me. I'm happy to talk anytime.

In fact, it would be good to touch base on the women's initiative and Pakistan. I've been talking with NDI's highly regarded country director in Pakistan, who says communications is a desperate need and will definitely do some good for the government.

Look forward to seeing you again soon. All the best, Doug

Sent from my Verizon Wireless BlackBerry

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 14, 2010 5:56 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: How to Address Global Burden of Chronic Disease
Attachments: Global Burden Chronic Disease.pdf; Global Burden Chronic Disease.pdf

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Dr. Mark Hyman [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 12 16:16:38 2010
Subject: How to Address Global Burden of Chronic Disease

Dear Hillary,

I wanted to pass on some thoughts we are formulating on how to address the global burden of chronic disease and get your input..... We could have a short call about this if you have time..

I have been thinking about how Paul Farmer created a whole movement around infectious disease globally and how we can apply that to chronic disease -- and yes - I would love to meet him and talk with him about this problem.

So here's the problem.

1. By 2020 global mortality from chronic disease will claim 50 million lives compared to 20 million for communicable or infectious disease and currently mortality in DEVELOPING WORLD is 29 million people a year from chronic disease.

2. As you know in the US, chronic disease care (usually at end stage in acute settings) accounts for almost 80% of health care expenditures. This is likely to increase globally and in developing countries because countries like India have diabetes rates of 25%. Mortality from heart disease in China in 35 to 44 year olds has increased 300% in the last few decades.

3. Global Funding for prevention and treatment of the causes of chronic disease doesn't match the disease burden by an unacceptable margin.

4. Less than 5% of funding from governments, NGO's, private foundations is for chronic disease (i.e. World Bank - $4.5 billion to health sector work, 2.5% for non-communicable disease and Global Fund focuses only on HIV/AIDS, malaria and TB and the WHO spends $7.50 for infectious disease and $0.50 for chronic disease, Gates Foundation: no funding for chronic disease).

So here's what I see as the solution.....

We need a movement to create awareness, build the messaging, fund comparative research on innovative methods for preventing and treating chronic disease, develop changes in medical education to scale training for providers in effective prevention and treatment of chronic disease, build partnerships and support for demonstration projects and other initiatives, and develop health information technology platforms to support chronic disease prevention and care as an integrated system and other disruptive technologies.

There are a lot of potential partners for this -- but I was thinking that a strategic alliance could be made between the Institute for Functional Medicine and the Clinton Foundation (and potentially other key partners) to build and scale this movement -- then it would be much easier to raise awareness and raise money. I have a lot of donors who would fund something like this but it has to have organization and clout and staying power.

I also wonder if Chelsea would be interested in being part of/leading this initiative - it seems right up her alley and I know she is looking for a job in June!

And I also realized that the State Department plays a large role in global health issues and there are ways the State Dept can help address the chronic disease epidemic globally.

Many of pieces of this are already in place and happening - for example the VA of New England wants to bring the Functional Medicine model into the care of their patients. The health system in Colombia is implementing a model based on Functional medicine because they cannot cope with their chronic disease burden. CIGNA wants to bring this into their 11 million subscribers. We are building a research institute at Harvard and clinical programs. But it all needs organization and strategy and coordination and funding in an integrated way.

Would you have a few minute to talk about this in the next week or so?

Hope you are staying warm ..... Thanks again for all your help and support
--

Fondly,

Mark

On 1/4/10 9:56 PM, "Hillary Clinton" <hdr22@clintonemail.com> wrote:

> Dear Mark--
>
> Thank you for your good wishes, and Happy New Year to you and Pier.
> I hope
> 2010 is filled to the brim w blessings and opportunities for you both.
>
> Have you ever met Paul Farmer? He's a good friend and is now > working w Bill in Haiti and Rwanda while continuing to teach at > Harvard and run Partners in Health. Would you like to spend time w him? Even work in one of his programs?
> Just let me know and I could call him for you.
>
> I hope to see you again soon. There's always much to discuss! All > the best always---H
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Dr. Mark Hyman [redacted] B6
> To: H
> Sent: Sun Jan 03 15:09:38 2010
Subject: Happy New Year
>
> Dear Hillary,
>

> I just wanted to wish you a happy new year and let you know how > grateful I am for your help and friendship. Although health reform > as it ended up still leaves a lot to be done I think their are other > ways to create change.
>
> I just finished the book about Paul Farmer mountains beyond mountains > and it made me think about how we can create a movement to address the > global burden of chronic disease which affects hundreds of millions > more than infectious disease.
>
> Once I get the strategy more formed I would love to get your thoughts.
>
> Hope you got some rest over the holidays.
>
> Be well. Fondly.
>
> Mark Hyman, MD
> Sent from my iPhone

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 9:27 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Extremist Jews damage Palestinian olive trees

From: Deyo, Justin A
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: Shaker, Joan P
Sent: Sat Oct 09 08:54:26 2010
Subject: (AP) Extremist Jews damage Palestinian olive trees

IRAQ BURIN (AP) - Palestinians say extremist Jews damaged their olive trees close to a West Bank village as the yearly harvest of the important crop begins. Resident Bilal Eid said that two dozen men from a nearby Jewish settlement tore at about a dozen trees after trying to attack Palestinians bulldozing an access road to their fields. The attack came at the beginning of the 40-day Palestinian olive harvest. It's traditionally a time of heightened violence, as a minority of extremist Jews try to provoke Palestinians. Eid said the damage could kill the trees, which were meant to be harvested this week, near the village of Burin. A military spokeswoman said Israeli forces ordered the Jewish intruders to leave.

Justin Deyo
U.S. Department of State
Operations Center (S/ES-O)
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 9:32 AM
To: H
Subject: Abhisit canceled call. [redacted] B6

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772608 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

JAMA®

Online article and related content current as of January 8, 2010.

The Global Burden of Chronic Diseases: Overcoming Impediments to Prevention and Control

Derek Yach; Corinna Hawkes; C. Linn Gould; et al.

JAMA. 2004;291(21):2616-2622 (doi:10.1001/jama.291.21.2616)

http://jama.ama-assn.org/cgi/content/full/291/21/2616

| | |
|---|---|
| Correction | Contact me if this article is corrected. |
| Citations | This article has been cited 161 times.Contact me when this article is cited. |
| Topic collections | Medical Practice; Health Policy; Public Health; World Health; Pulmonary Diseases; Asthma; Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary DiseaseContact me when new articles are published in these topic areas. |

Subscribe
http://jama.com/subscribe

Email Alerts
http://jamaarchives.com/alerts

Permissions
permissions@ama-assn.org
http://pubs.ama-assn.org/misc/permissions.dtl

Reprints/E-prints
reprints@ama-assn.org

Downloaded from www.jama.com by Mark Hyman on January 8, 2010

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772608 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 10:06 AM
To: H
Subject: Holbrooke wants to talk.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

SPECIAL COMMUNICATION

The Global Burden of Chronic Diseases
Overcoming Impediments to Prevention and Control

Derek Yach, MBChB, MPH
Corinna Hawkes, PhD
C. Linn Gould, MS, MPH
Karen J. Hofman, MD

Chronic diseases are the largest cause of death in the world. In 2002, the leading chronic diseases—cardiovascular disease, cancer, chronic respiratory disease, and diabetes—caused 29 million deaths worldwide. Despite growing evidence of epidemiological and economic impact, the global response to the problem remains inadequate. Stakeholders include governments, the World Health Organization and other United Nations bodies, academic and research groups, nongovernmental organizations, and the private sector. Lack of financial support retards capacity development for prevention, treatment, and research in most developing countries. Reasons for this include that up-to-date evidence related to the nature of the burden of chronic diseases is not in the hands of decision makers and strong beliefs persist that chronic diseases afflict only the affluent and the elderly, that they arise solely from freely acquired risks, and that their control is ineffective and too expensive and should wait until infectious diseases are addressed. The influence of global economic factors on chronic disease risks impedes progress, as does the orientation of health systems toward acute care. We identify 3 policy levers to address these impediments: elevating chronic diseases on the health agenda of key policymakers, providing them with better evidence about risk factor control, and persuading them of the need for health systems change. A more concerted, strategic, and multisectoral policy approach, underpinned by solid research, is essential to help reverse the negative trends in the global incidence of chronic disease.

JAMA. 2004;291:2616-2622 www.jama.com

CHRONIC DISEASES ARE THE largest cause of death in the world (FIGURE 1), led by cardiovascular disease (17 million deaths in 2002, mainly from ischemic heart disease and stroke) and followed by cancer (7 million deaths), chronic lung diseases (4 million), and diabetes mellitus (almost 1 million).[1] These leading diseases share key risk factors: tobacco use, unhealthful diets, lack of physical activity, and alcohol use (TABLE).[2] The current burden of chronic diseases reflects past exposure to these risk factors, and the future burden will be largely determined by current exposures.

The global prevalence of all the leading chronic diseases is increasing, with the majority occurring in developing countries and projected to increase substantially over the next 2 decades (Figure 1).[3] Cardiovascular disease is already the leading cause of mortality in developing countries (FIGURE 2).[1] Between 1990 and 2020, mortality from ischemic heart disease in developing countries is expected to increase by 120% for women and 137% for men.[4] Predictions for the next 2 decades include a near tripling of ischemic heart disease and stroke mortality in Latin America, the Middle East, and sub-Saharan Africa. The global number of individuals with diabetes in 2000 was estimated to be 171 million (2.8% of the world's population), a figure projected to increase in 2030 to 366 million (6.5%), 298 million of whom will live in developing countries.[5] Cancer incidence increased 19% between 1990 and 2000, mainly in developing countries.[6] Death and disability due to chronic obstructive pulmonary disease are increasing across most regions.[7] Risks for chronic disease are also escalating. Smoking prevalence and obesity levels among adolescents in developing countries have risen over the past decade and portend rapid increases in chronic diseases.[8,9]

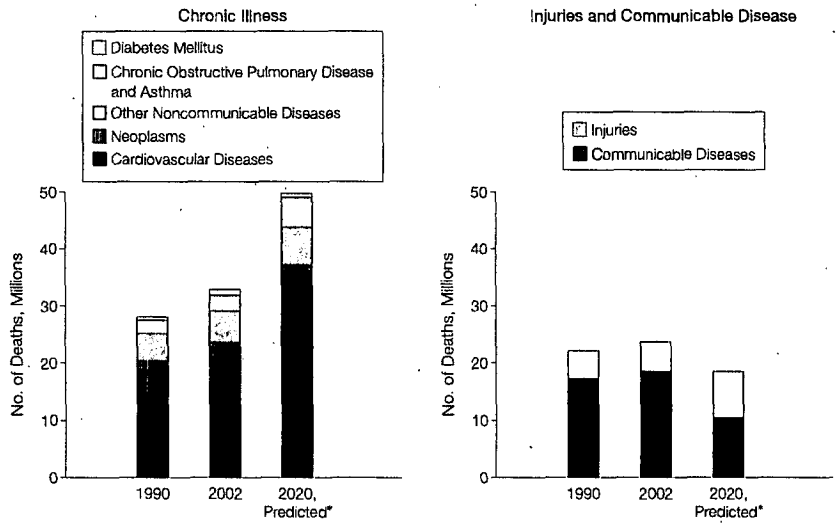
Numerous developing countries and countries in transition have witnessed a rapid deterioration of their chronic disease risk and mortality profiles.[2] In the world's most populous country, China, age-specific death rates from circulatory disease increased between 200% and 300% in those aged 35 through 44 years between 1986 and 1999, and by more than 100% in those aged 45 through 54 years.[10] During the same period, cancer death rates in-

Author Affiliations: World Health Organization, Geneva, Switzerland (Drs Yach, Hawkes, and Gould) and Fogarty International Center/US National Institutes of Health, Washington, DC (Dr Hofman). Linn Gould is now at Erda Environmental Services, Inc, Seattle, Wash.
Correspondence: Derek Yach, MBChB, MPH, World Health Organization, 20, Avenue Appia, CH-1211 Geneva 27 Switzerland (yachd@who.int).

 ©2004 American Medical Association. All rights reserved.

Downloaded from www.jama.com by Mark Hyman on January 8, 2010
UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015



creased between 100% and 200% in those aged 35 through 44 years and between 100% and 160% in those aged 45 through 54 years.

Chronic diseases have not simply displaced acute infectious ones in developing countries. Rather, such countries now experience a polarized and protracted double burden of disease.[11] India, the second most populous country, has the highest number of diabetics in the world and annual coronary deaths are expected to reach 2 million by 2010.[12] At the same time, around 2.5 million children in India die from infections such as pneumonia, diarrhea, and malaria every year. In South Africa, infectious diseases account for 28% of years of lives lost while chronic diseases account for 25%.[13]

The increased burden of chronic diseases in countries that also have a high infectious disease burden is straining their health services. In all countries, it is also leading to growing economic costs, best documented with respect to tobacco-related diseases,[8] with increasing evidence emerging for cardiovascular disease,[4] diabetes,[14] and obesity.[15] Many developed nations have focused considerable efforts on addressing the burden of chronic diseases. In contrast, the rising burden of chronic diseases on developing countries has received inadequate attention.[16]

The rates and potential risks of chronic disease, vis-à-vis policy decisions, can be described conceptually. For example, as economic development occurs, tobacco use and obesity (and presumably other risk behaviors) increase.[9,17] Eventually uptake of risk factors leads to onset of disease. Mortality and morbidity from chronic disease subsequently decline along with continued economic development. Thus far, only the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries have achieved these declines,[4] which have been associated with consumption behavior, while declining mortality from chronic diseases is associated with very high levels of social and economic development. Thus, in the absence of policy actions, consumption of tobacco, alcohol, and foods high in fat and sugar increases along with gross national product, followed by associated increases in chronic diseases decades later. This contrasts with infectious diseases, which generally decline with economic growth.[18] Chronic disease risk rates do not begin to fall un-

Figure 1. Global Mortality From Chronic Diseases

Source derived from data in the World Health Report 2003[1] and Murray and Lopez.[3]
*The 2020 projections were estimated by Murray and Lopez.[3]

Table. Contribution of 10 Selected Risk Factors to Burden of Disease by Level of Development and Mortality*

| | Percentage of Mortality Attributable to Risk Factors | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Developing Countries† | | |
| Risk Factor | High Mortality (Population: 2.3 Billion) | Low Mortality (Population: 2.4 Billion) | Developed Countries (Population: 1.4 Billion)† |
| Underweight | 14.9 | 3.1 | ... |
| Unsafe sex | 10.2 | ... | 0.8 |
| Unsafe water, sanitation and hygiene | 5.5 | 1.7 | ... |
| Indoor smoke from solid fuels | 3.7 | 1.9 | ... |
| Zinc deficiency | 3.2 | ... | ... |
| Iron deficiency | 3.1 | 1.8 | 0.7 |
| Vitamin A deficiency | 3.0 | ... | ... |
| Blood pressure | 2.5 | 5.0 | 10.9 |
| Tobacco | 2.0 | 4.0 | 12.2 |
| Cholesterol | 1.9 | 2.1 | 7.6 |
| Alcohol | ... | 6.2 | 9.2 |
| Overweight | ... | 2.7 | 7.4 |
| Low fruit and vegetable intake | ... | 1.9 | 3.9 |
| Physical inactivity | ... | ... | 3.3 |
| Illicit drugs | ... | ... | |

Ellipses indicates that it is not a top-10 mortality risk factor.
*Based on The World Health Report 2003.[2]
†Developed countries include the United States, Japan, and Australia; low-mortality developing countries include China, Brazil, and Thailand; and high-mortality developing countries include India, Mali, and Nigeria.

©2004 American Medical Association. All rights reserved.

Downloaded from www.jama.com by Mark Hyman on January 8, 2010
UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

til high levels of wealth and literacy are reached, whereupon governments are more likely to respond to public health concerns and use a broad range of policy instruments to influence consumption trends. The global challenge policymakers face is how to implement policies now that support continued economic development while simultaneously reducing the rates of increase of chronic diseases.

KEY PLAYERS' POLICY RESPONSES TO THE GLOBAL BURDEN OF CHRONIC DISEASES

Although many key groups have responded to the infectious disease burdens of developing nations, they have not responded to the expanded chronic disease burden.

Heads of State

Heads of state of the G8 countries recognized health as a global challenge at their Summit in 2000, acknowledging that health is the "key to prosperity" and that "poor health drives poverty."[19] The G8 leaders agreed to mobilize resources, ultimately leading to the establishment of the Global Fund for HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis, and Malaria.[20] No subsequent commitment has yet been made for chronic diseases.

Similarly, the G77, representing heads of state from approximately 130 developing countries, recently discussed global health issues.[21] Their focus was communicable diseases although they did support the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control—a reversal for many G77 members, who previously feared reduced tobacco consumption would negatively affect their farmers.[21] The G77 have also expressed concerns that efforts to reduce sugar consumption might harm their economies.[22]

Health Ministries

The capacity of 185 countries to prevent and treat chronic diseases was recently assessed by the World Health Organization (WHO).[23] Although there was a high level of awareness about chronic diseases among health ministry officials, this was not supported by comprehensive policies and budgets to develop integrated approaches to their prevention, surveillance, and control. Thirty-nine percent of countries reviewed had budget lines for chronic diseases. Only a few developing countries have committed significant resources to chronic disease control.[23]

World Health Organization

Many of WHO's functions are directly related to chronic disease control. WHO member states first requested action on chronic diseases in 1956 when India proposed a resolution on cardiovascular disease and hypertension at the Ninth World Health Assembly.[24] Subsequently, member states from both developed and developing countries have demanded action on chronic diseases, including the global strategy on "Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases" in 2000[25] and a resolution and subsequent strategy on "Diet, Physical Activity and Health" in 2002-2004.[26] The landmark resolution on the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control in 2003[27] was the first time WHO used its constitutional treaty-making right to address a global public health threat.

With the important exception of tobacco control, WHO's financial resources for chronic disease control are small. WHO Headquarters spends only $0.50 on chronic diseases (all noncommunicable diseases except for mental health) per death per person compared with $7.50 for leading communicable diseases.[28]

Academic Health Centers and Research Institutions

Schools of public health in the United States train thousands of health professionals from developing countries who return home as potential future public health leaders. A survey of the core requirements of the curricula of members of the Association of Schools of Public Health indicates that international health course work does not yet reflect the current global burden of chronic diseases.[29] Although Johns Hopkins, University of North Carolina, and Yale now address obesity in their nutrition courses and Yale teaches chronic diseases and has

Figure 2. Deaths Attributable to 16 Leading Causes in Developing Countries, 2001

©2004 American Medical Association. All rights reserved.

Downloaded from www.jama.com by Mark Hyman on January 8, 2010

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

a international tobacco seminar in its introductory global health course, the primary focus remains on infectious diseases and primary health care.

International committees convened by the Global Forum on Health Research recommend that greater support be given to chronic disease research specific to developing countries.[30] Yet the exponential growth of funding over the past decades has not been proportionally allocated to the growing burden of chronic disease.[31] Most research support focuses on infectious diseases.[32,33] A recent review showed that total health research funds spent on chronic diseases was only 7.4% in Cuba, 2.3% in Kazakhstan, and 14.4% in the Philippines.[34]

Nevertheless, there are efforts to focus more research on chronic diseases. The Fogarty International Center has begun to allocate one third of its resources to chronic disease research and training programs in the developing world.[35] Research funding agencies in India, Mexico, and South Africa are devoting increasing budgetary resources to chronic diseases.[36-38] Important insights into policies needed to strengthen research capability for chronic diseases in developing nations can be gained from experiences in tropical disease research and training over the past 3 decades.[39]

Donors

Although official development assistance for health has increased in the past 5 years, these trends have been almost entirely absorbed by human immunodeficiency virus (HIV)/AIDS in sub-Saharan Africa (Catherine M. Michaud, MD, PhD, written communication, October 2003). Bilateral aid agencies rarely prioritize chronic disease or related risk factors.[40] Official Overseas Development Aid to the health sector in 2002 reached $2.9 billion, of which 0.1% was officially allocated to chronic diseases (including mental health; Catherine M. Michaud, MD, PhD, written communication, March 2004). The true figure may be higher since about 30% of Overseas Development Aid to health goes to basic health services, of which a proportion would benefit chronic disease control.

Private investment in global health far exceeds government assistance, but most target infectious diseases and humanitarian needs. There has been modest support for tobacco control from the UN Foundation, the Rockefeller Foundation, and the Soros Foundations,[41,42] but this is now declining. The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation does not include chronic diseases in its portfolio.[43] Although several US foundations support innovative domestic chronic disease research and training programs, they provide little support for such programs internationally.

World Bank and Regional Development Banks

Although the World Bank recognizes the increasing burden of chronic diseases on the poor,[44] it has no comprehensive chronic disease policy. Over the last 5 years, it provided $4.25 billion in loans to countries for health sector work, about 2.5% of which was allocated to "noncommunicable disease prevention and control" programs, all in eastern Europe (Catherine M. Michaud, MD, PhD, written communication, March 2004).

The lack of an integrated approach to chronic diseases is reflected by the Bank's Poverty Strategy Reduction Papers, which are intended to guide investment priorities to reduce poverty in the poorest countries in the world. However, the Poverty Strategy Reduction Papers present no strategies to address chronic diseases, and in particular smoking.[45]

The Regional Development Banks have policies on health, but only the Asian Development Bank includes chronic diseases.[46] This policy has been met by minimal spending commitments. A review carried out for the Asian Development Bank in 1999 recommends that subsidies for chronic diseases would be better spent on the prevention and treatment of communicable diseases.[47] The rationale was that the cost of treating chronic disease is most likely to accrue to individuals and, as such, should be left to the private market.

Global Nongovernmental Organizations

Nationally, nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) are reported to play a variety of roles in chronic disease control, but their precise roles and effectiveness are not well known.[23] Internationally, NGOs proved critical in the development of the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control.[16] Nongovernmental organizations have a wide geographic spread and have the ability to build capacity. Yet overall, there has been no concerted effort on chronic diseases by NGOs. Nongovernmental organizations concerned with diet and nutrition in developed countries have not built capacity in developing countries. International consumer group input is inadequate. Initiatives such as "sustainable development" and "corporate social responsibility" have not been applied to chronic diseases.

Health and Development Initiatives

United Nations health and development reports play a major role in setting priorities for global health. Persistent problems that hinder development, such as infant and maternal mortality, malnutrition, and HIV/AIDS have received priority in the poorest countries. But the emphasis on communicable diseases has excluded consideration of chronic diseases in low-middle and middle income countries. The Millennium Development Goals are illustrative in this respect. Millennium Development Goal 6 is to "Combat HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases."[48] Although the other diseases category theoretically includes chronic diseases, in practice, they are ignored. The UN Population Fund does not mention chronic diseases in its strategy on population and development[49] and UN Children's Fund's recent goal-setting program, "A World Fit for Children" does not include risk factors for chronic conditions among the 25 action points proposed to "promote healthy lives" despite strong evidence to the contrary.[50]

©2004 American Medical Association. All rights reserved.

Downloaded from www.jama.com by Mark Hyman on January 8, 2010

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

Reasons for Neglect: Impediments to Control Global Chronic Diseases

In most developing countries inadequate financing and lack of manpower to address chronic diseases have been major impediments to chronic disease control. Other impediments are the failure to provide key decision makers with up-to-date evidence on the burden of chronic diseases; a lack of understanding of the economic factors that influence chronic disease risks; and the current orientation of health systems toward acute care.

Up-to-Date Evidence Is Not in the Hands of Key Decision Makers

Many key decision makers still believe that chronic diseases afflict only the affluent and the elderly and arise only from freely acquired risks and that their control is ineffective and too expensive and should wait until infectious diseases are addressed.

These beliefs are based on a misunderstanding of the chronic disease burden. In developed countries, the relationship between socioeconomic inequalities and many chronic diseases and their risk factors are well described.[51] Although the disease burden is more variable in developing countries, the poorest populations, particularly in rapidly growing cities, in many cases already exhibit the highest risks for tobacco use, alcohol use, and physical activity, with evidence emerging for obesity.[52-54] This will lead to a higher burden of chronic diseases over the long-term. Poverty also leads to greater comorbidity and decreased access to quality medical care.

Chronic diseases in developing countries are not just diseases of the elderly, since cardiovascular disease accounts for as many deaths in young and middle-aged adults as HIV/AIDS.[1] Also, in developing countries chronic diseases affect a much higher proportion of people during their prime working years than in developed countries. Male deaths during middle age could create a significant cohort of widows, which increases the likelihood that women will live out their final years in poverty.[4]

Many decision makers mistakenly believe that chronic diseases arise only as a result of the irresponsibility of the individuals who contract them, with the perception that "smoking is a free choice with health consequences."[55] Yet age and uptake of smoking in developing countries are showing a trend toward early teenage years,[8] the stage of life when the addictiveness of tobacco belies freedom of choice. Tobacco marketing is often targeted specifically at children,[56] alcohol advertisements shape young peoples' perceptions and encourage prodrink attitudes,[57] and food marketing works its way "into the skin" of children and adolescents.[58] There will always be a tension between the role of individuals vs the role of government, but it is clear that governments (and industry) must take some responsibility.[59]

Chronic disease control is not necessarily expensive or ineffective. For example, a recent review of tobacco control in Brazil, South Africa, Thailand, Poland, Bangladesh, and Canada showed that tobacco prevalence can be reduced cost-effectively in high-, middle-, and low-income countries.[60] Several clinical and public health interventions have the potential to reduce the burden of disease from cardiovascular disease, diabetes, and hypertension significantly and at low cost.[2] There is, however, an urgent need to develop best practices for obesity control.

The belief that scarce resources should not be used for chronic diseases until infectious diseases are addressed is also fallacious. Several infectious agents cause cancers[6]; tobacco increases deaths from tuberculosis in already infected populations,[61] and antiretroviral regimens in HIV-infected patients increase the risk of heart disease.[62] Better tobacco control would reduce tuberculosis mortality, and new vaccines could reduce the prevalence of cervical cancer and perhaps other cancers.

Economic Factors Influence Chronic Disease Risks

At a macroeconomic level, it is often assumed that global economic development increases income and subsequently improves all aspects of health in developing countries. Yet, although greater economic investment and higher incomes among some groups have eased some of the health challenges in developing countries, chronic diseases have been exacerbated.[4]

Important drivers here are urbanization, trade, foreign investment, and promotional marketing. More open conditions for trade and foreign investment can bring economic benefits, but also encourage unhealthful behavior risks.[63] Several of the world's top 100 nonfinancial transnational corporations ranked by foreign assets in 2000 are associated with chronic disease risk factors, including tobacco, food, and automobile companies.[64] These companies all invest heavily in marketing their products,[56-58] which, if unregulated, encourages acquisition of the risk factors for chronic diseases.

Lobbyists for tobacco, sugar, and other food interests have diverted attention from the need to address consumption patterns that drive chronic diseases, and their views have become the accepted position of many policymakers.[65] Some companies and their trade associations have actively tried to thwart introduction of regulations and effective advocacy in advancing tobacco control.[66] Sugar lobbyists have been effective in having their messages that "sugar doesn't harm health—but less sugar consumption harms their economies" accepted by some governments despite evidence to the contrary.[67]

Health Systems Are Not Oriented Toward Managing Chronic Diseases

Acute problems, such as certain infectious diseases and maternal and child care, have been the principal focus of health care systems.[68] Although infectious diseases continue to be a threat in many developing countries, their health systems now must address a double burden of chronic and acute conditions.

The chronic disease management model is more complex than that required for acute problems, such as ©2004 American Medical Association. All rights reserved.

Downloaded from www.jama.com by Mark Hyman on January 8, 2010
UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

many infectious diseases.[68] It entails multiple causes over a lifetime and a more horizontal and integrated approach, with patient, family, and the community being active participants.

Chronic care has tended to screen high-risk individuals with a high probability of contracting chronic diseases. Yet for chronic diseases, most risk factors are widely distributed in the population, with all individuals at risk but differing in the extent of their risk.[69] Prevention and treatment therefore requires a sustained, multisectoral commitment well beyond the traditional health sector. This model is also required for communicable diseases such as HIV/AIDS, since antiretroviral therapy must be taken for life.[70]

TOWARD THE FUTURE—LEVERING LONG-TERM CHANGE

The rising global burden of chronic diseases needs stronger leadership by policy makers, advocates, and health professionals.

Placing Chronic Diseases Higher on the Political and Health Agenda

Decision makers need to be fully informed with the up-to-date evidence about the burden and impacts of chronic diseases. Clearer messages on chronic diseases are needed and the advocacy base expanded. Gaps in our knowledge about chronic disease control should be tackled using a "grand challenges initiative."[71]

Controlling Risk Factors for Chronic Diseases

The negative impacts of global economic development can be ameliorated through multisectoral action to tackle chronic diseases upstream. Policy leaders need to encourage transnational corporations to improve health while also making a profit by putting in place new business models, such as those being developed by Unilever (Paulus Verschuen and Harry Jongeneelan, written communication, May 13, 2004) and Novo Nordisk SA.[72] They should also encourage the creation of codes and incentives for healthy foreign investment in developing countries and incorporating chronic diseases into accountability initiatives such as the UN Global Compact.[73]

The role of government is critical to the development and implementation of well grounded risk-factor control programs such as the WHO's Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, which also has implications for food policies.[74] Age-specific death rates from the leading chronic diseases in Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development countries have declined as a result of governmental and civil society action against tobacco use, emphasis on maintaining healthful lifestyles, and access to treatments.[4] Over the last decade, increased longevity has been accompanied by a compression of morbidity: in the United States, disability rates in people older than 65 years have decreased 2% a year while mortality rates have declined by 1%.[75]

Governments can play a role by altering economic incentives for business and individuals. Expanding markets for fruit and vegetables will allow developing countries to gain from increased export earnings and consumption. Raising the tobacco excise tax to levels that will reduce consumption effectively[76] will increase government revenue and reduce the burden of disease.

Health System Realignment

Health systems should be realigned to accommodate diagnosis, secondary prevention, and primary prevention of chronic diseases. Governments need to support this transformation if they are to realize significant health gains. In an approach that has international applications, the United Kingdom Government Treasury has recommended a set of clear health targets and objectives for the nation based on scenarios.[77] The new financing opportunities for chronic infectious diseases like HIV/AIDS and tuberculosis create a chance to build integrated systems in the poorest countries. The potential for secondary prevention of cardiovascular disease and diabetes in developing countries has been highlighted by several academics[4,16,68] but needs to be translated into action.

We are now at a critical juncture with respect to the global health agenda. Coordinated and focused emphasis on chronic disease is essential to address the enormity of the burden of those who now survive beyond childhood around the world.

Disclaimer: The views in this article represent the opinions of the authors and do not necessarily reflect the views or position of either the World Health Organization or the views or position of the US National Institutes of Health.

Acknowledgment: The authors would like to thank Dr Catherine Michaud for her analysis of Overseas Development Assistance for chronic diseases. Thanks also to Ian Neil from WHO and the anonymous reviewer for comments that helped strengthen the article.

REFERENCES

1. World Health Organization. The World Health Report 2003—Shaping the Future. Geneva, Switzerland: World Health Organization; 2003.
2. World Health Organization. The World Health Report 2002—Reducing Risks, Promoting Healthy Life. Geneva, Switzerland: World Health Organization; 2002.
3. Murray CJL, Lopez AD. The Global Burden of Disease. Boston, Mass: Harvard School of Public Health; 1996.
4. Leeder S, Raymond S, Greenberg H, Liu H, Esson K. A Race Against Time: The Challenge of Cardiovascular Disease in Developing Economies. New York, NY: Columbia University; 2004.
5. Wild S, Roglic G, Green A, Sicree R, King H. Global prevalence of diabetes: estimates for 2000 and projections for 2030. Diabetes Care. 2004;27:1047-1053.
6. Stewart BW, Kleihaus P, eds. World Cancer Report. Lyon, France: IARC Press; 2003.
7. World Health Organization. WHO Strategy for Prevention and Control of Chronic Respiratory Diseases. Geneva, Switzerland: World Health Organization; 2002.
8. Jha P, Chaloupka FJ. Curbing the Epidemic: Governments and the Economics of Tobacco Control. Washington, DC: International Bank for Reconstruction and Development/World Bank; 1999.
9. Popkin BM, Doak CM. The obesity epidemic is a worldwide phenomenon. Nutr Rev. 1998;56:106-114.
10. Bumgarner R. China: non-communicable disease issues and options revisited. Soc Prev Med. In press.
11. Frenk J, Bobadilla JL, Sepulveda J, Cervantes LM. Health Transition in middle-income countries: new challenges for health care. H Policy Plann. 1989;4:29-39.
12. Basnayar B, Rajapasha LC. Cardiovascular and infectious diseases in South Asia: the double whammy. BMJ. 2004;328:781.
13. Steyn K, Bradshaw D, Norman R, Laubscher R. Determinants and Treatment of Hypertension in South Africa/Determinants of Hypertension and Its Treatment in South Africa During 1998: The First Demographic and Health Survey (draft). Tygerburg, South Africa: South Africa Medical Research Council; 2003.
14. International Diabetes Federation. Diabetes Atlas. 2nd ed. Brussels, Belgium: Internal Diabetes Federation; 2003.
15. Thompson D, Wolf AM. The medical-care cost burden of obesity. Obes Rev. 2001;2:189-197.
16. Beaglehole R, Yach D. Globalization and the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases:

©2004 American Medical Association. All rights reserved.

Downloaded from www.jama.com by Mark Hyman on January 8, 2010
UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

the neglected chronic diseases of adults. Lancet. 2003; 362:903-908.
17. Yach D. Tobacco-induced diseases in South Africa. Int J Epidemiol. 1990;19:1122-1123.
18. McKeown T. The Origins of Human Disease. Oxford, England: Basil Blackwell; 1988.
19. G8 Communiqué. Okinawa 2000. Available at: http://www.g8.utoronto.ca/summit/2000okinawa/finalcom.htm. Accessed January 12, 2004.
20. Sommet D'Evian 2003. 2003 G8 Summit. Available at: http://www.g8.fr/evian/english/navigation/2003_g8_summit/summit_documents/health_-_a_g8_action_plan.html. Accessed January 12, 2004.
21. Group of seventy-seven. final communique: adopted by the thirty-fourth meeting of chairment/coordinators of the chapters of the Group of 77. Geneva, 26-27 June 2003 [press release]. Available at: http://www.g77.org/news/pr062703.htm. Accessed January 13, 2004.
22. Fleck F. Rich and poor to clash over sugar in WHO's healthy diet plan. BMJ. 2004;328:730.
23. Alwan A, MacLean D, Mandil A. Assessment of National Capacity for Noncommunicable Disease Prevention and Control. Geneva, Switzerland: World Health Organization; 2001.
24. World Health Organization. Cardiovascular diseases and hypertension. In: Program of the 9th World Health Assembly. Geneva, Switzerland: World Health Organization; 1956. WHA9.3121.
25. World Health Organization. Prevention and control of non-communicable diseases. Fifty-third World Health Assembly; May 20, 2000; Geneva, Switzerland. WHA53/17. Available at: http://www.who.int/gb/EB_WHA/PDF/WHA53/ResWHA53/17.pdf. Accessed January 13, 2004.
26. World Health Organization. Integrated prevention of noncommunicable diseases: draft global strategy on diet, physical activity and health. World Health Organization, Geneva, Switzerland; 2003. Available at: http://www.who.int/gb/EB_WHA/PDF/EB113/eeb11344a1.pdf. Accessed January 13, 2004.
27. Resolution: WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control. Fifty-sixth World Health Assembly; May 2003. WHA56.1. Available at: http://www.who.int/gb/EB_WHA/PDF/WHA56/ea56r1.pdf. Accessed January 13, 2004.
28. Financial management report: expenditure on implementation of objectives in programme budget 2002-2003—all sources of funds, covering the period 1 January 2002-31 December 2002. Geneva, Switzerland: World Heath Organization; 2003.
29. Association of Schools of Public Health Web site. Available at: http://www.asph.org/document.cfm?page=200. Accessed March 28, 2004.
30. The 10/90 Report on Health Research 2001-2002. Geneva, Switzerland: Global Forum for Health Research; 2002:89-94.
31. Monitoring Financial Flows for Health Research. Geneva, Switzerland: Global Forum for Health Research; 2002.
32. Wellcome Trust Web site. Available at: http://www.wellcome.ac.uk/en/1/biosfgintpopsuprem.html. Accessed January 12, 2004.
33. United Kingdom Medical Research Council Web site. Available at: http://www.mrc.ac.uk. Accessed January 12, 2004.
34. Alano BP, Almario ES. Tracking funds flow for health R & D. Presented at: The Global Forum for Health Research Forum 7; December 2003; Geneva, Switzerland.
35. Fogarty International Center Web site. Available at: http://www.fic.nih.gov/. Accessed January 12, 2004.
36. Indian Council of Medical Research. Noncommunicable diseases Web page. Available at: http://www.icmr.nic.in/thrust/thrustncd.htm. Accessed January 12, 2004.
37. Instituto Nacionale de Salud de Mexico Web site. Available at: http://www.insp.mx. Accessed January 12, 2004.
38. South Africa Medical Research Council Web site. Available at: http://www.mrc.ac.za. Accessed January 12, 2004.
39. Nchinda T. Research capacity strengthening in the South. Soc Sci Med. 2002;54:1699-1711.
40. Bilateral Aid Guide. Geneva, Switzerland: World Health Organization, Dept of Government and Private Sector Relations; 2003.
41. United Nations Foundation Project: building alliances and taking action to create a generation of tobacco-free children and youth—a WHO/UNICEF project supported by the United Nations Foundation. Geneva, Switzerland: WHO; 1999. Available at: http://www.who.int/tobacco/areas/training/un_foundation/en. Accessed March 30, 2004.
42. Rockefeller Foundation launches a new program to support reducing the health burden of tobacco on the poor in developing countries. Press release (May 30, 2000). New York, Rockefeller Foundation, 2000. Available at: http://www.rockfound.org/display.asp?context=1&Collection=4&DocID=54&Preview=0&ARCurrent=1. Accessed March 30, 2004.
43. Global Health Program fact sheet. Seattle, Wash: Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, Seattle; 2004. Available at: http://www.gatesfoundation.org/MediaCenter/Publications/GlobalHealthFactSheet-021201.htm. Accessed March 30, 2004.
44. World Bank. Health, nutrition, and population sector strategy paper. Washington, DC: World Bank: Health Nutrition and Population Division; 1997.
45. Dodd R, Hinshelwood E. Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers—Their Significance for Health. Geneva, Switzerland: World Health Organization; 2002.
46. Policy for the health sector. Manila, Phillipines: Asian Development Bank; 1999. Available at: http://www.adb.org/Documents/Policies/Health/health100.asp. Accessed January 13, 2004.
47. Ramesh A, Gertler P, Lagman A. Economic Analysis of Health Sector Projects—A Review of Issues, Methods, and Approaches. Manila, Philippines: Asian Development Bank; 1999:8.
48. United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). Implementing the Millennium Declaration: Goal 6—Combat HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases. Available at: http://www.undp.org/mdg/goal6.pdf. Accessed January 13, 2004.
49. United Nations Population Fund. Summary of the ICPD Programmed of Action. Available at: http://www.unfpa.org/icpd/summary.htm. Accessed January 13, 2004.
50. United Nations General Assembly. Resolution S-27/2: a world fit for children. Adopted by the General Assembly October 11, 2002.
51. Wilkinson RG, Marmot M. Social Determinants of Health: The Solid Facts. 2nd ed. Copenhagen: Denmark: World Health Organization Regional Office for Europe; 2003.
52. Yach D. Chronic disorders: cardiovascular disease, cancer, and diabetes. In: Levy BS, Sidel VW, eds. Social Justice and Public Health. Oxford, England: Oxford University Press; in press.
53. Pena M, Bacallao J, eds. Obesity among the poor: an emerging problem in Latin America and the Caribbean. In: Obesity and Poverty: A New Public Health Challenge. Washington, DC: Pan American Health Organization, 2000:3-10. Scientific publication 576.
54. Jha P, Chaloupka FJ, eds. Tobacco Control in Developing Countries. New York, NY. Oxford University Press; 2000.
55. A manipulated dichotomy in global health policy [editorial]. Lancet. 2000;355:1923.
56. Wakefield M, Flay B, Nichter M, Giovino G. Role of the media in influencing trajectories of youth smoking. Addiction. 2003;98:79-103.
57. Babor T, Caetano R, Casswell S, et al. Alcohol: No Ordinary Commodity. New York, NY. Oxford University Press; 2003.
58. Hawkes C. Marketing activities of global soft drink and fast food companies in emerging markets: a review. In: Globalization, Diets and Noncommunicable Diseases. Geneva, Switzerland: World Health Organization; 2002.
59. Marmot M. Evidence based policy or policy based evidence? BMJ. 2004;328:906-907.
60. de Beyer J, Waverley Brigden L. Tobacco Control Policy: Strategies, Successes and Setbacks. Washington, DC: World Bank/Research for International Tobacco Control; 2003.
61. Gajalakshmi V, Peto R, Kanaka TS, Jha P. Smoking and mortality from tuberculosis and other diseases in India. Lancet. 2003;362:507-515.
62. Sklar P, Henry M. HIV Infection and cardiovascular disease—is there really a link? N Engl J Med. 2003; 349:2065-2067.
63. Bettcher DW, Yach D, Guindon GE. Global trade and health: key linkages and future challenges. Bull World Health Organ. 2000;78:521-534.
64. United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD). World Investment Report 2003. New York, NY: UNCTAD; 2003.
65. Brownell KD, Hagen KB. Food Fight: The Inside Story of the Food Industry: America's Obesity Crisis, and What We Can Do About It. Chicago, Ill: Contemporary Books; 2004.
66. World Health Organization. Tobacco Company Strategies to Undermine Tobacco Control Activities at the World Health Organization. Report of the Committee of Experts on Tobacco Industry Documents. Geneva, Switzerland: World Health Organization; 2000:46;116.
67. Mann J. Free sugars and human health: sufficient evidence for action? Lancet. 2004;363:1068-1070.
68. World Health Organization. Innovative Care for Chronic Conditions: Building Blocks for Action. Geneva, Switzerland: World Health Organization; 2002.
69. Rose G. Sick individuals and sick populations. Int J Epidemiol. 1985:14(1).
70. World Health Organization/Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS). Treating 3 million by 2005: making it happen: the WHO Strategy. Geneva, Switzerland: World Health Organization; 2003. Available at: http://www.who.int/3by5/publications/documents/isbn9241591129/en/. Accessed January 13, 2004.
71. Varmus H, Klausner R, Zerhouni E, Acharya T, Daar AS, Singer PA. Grand Challenges in Global Health. Science. 2003;302:398-399. Available at: http://www.grandchallengesgh.org/ArDisplay.aspx?ID=78&SecID=302. Accessed January 13, 2004.
72. Novo Nordisk's New Strategy: from fighting disease to improving health [translation]. Mandag Morgen. February 9, 2004.
73. Guide to the Global Compact: A Practical Understanding of the Vision and Nine Principles. New York, NY: UN Global Compact; 2001.
74. Yach D, Hawkes C, Epping-Jordan JE, Galbraith S. The World Health Organization's Framework Convention on Tobacco Control: implications for global epidemics of food-related deaths and disease. J Public Health Policy. 2003;24:274-290.
75. Fries J. Measuring and monitoring success in compressing morbidity. Ann Intern Med. 2003;139(5 pt 2):455-459.
76. Guindon GE, Tobin S, Yach D. Trends and affordability of cigarette prices: ample room for tax increases and related health gains. Tob Control. 2002; 11:35-43.
77. Wanless D. Securing Our Future Health: Taking a Long-term View. London, England: HM Treasury; 2002.

©2004 American Medical Association. All rights reserved.

Downloaded from www.jama.com by Mark Hyman on January 8, 2010
UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05772611 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 14, 2010 5:58 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Issues I cover
Attachments: Note on current projects.docx; Note on current projects.docx

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Fuchs, Michael H <FuchsMH@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 10 11:17:32 2010
Subject: Issues I cover

Madam Secretary,

Attached and below, please find a list of the issues I cover.

Thanks,

Mike

MEMORANDUM

TO: Secretary Clinton

FROM: Mike

CC: Cheryl, Jake

SUBJECT: Issues I Cover

In addition to the day-to-day projects and follow-up items I work on with Jake, I cover the following issues:

Long-Range Policy

- Helping Cheryl and Jake plan for, and follow-up on, the bi-monthly policy meetings
- Working with bureaus on end-of-year reports follow-up
- Keeping up to speed on issues discussed at Deputies meetings for weekly memos
- Helping shepherd speech ideas and providing feedback on drafts

Substantive Issue Areas

- Human rights/democracy
- Sudan
- Mexico
- Cookstoves
- Yemen-related issues
- Export controls
- Cybersecurity
- Terrorist finance issues
- Military families issues
- Climate change
- Dialogues and partnerships with Nigeria, South Africa, Angola, Indonesia, Brazil

State Department Reform

- Report reform: Working with Rich Verma and his team on reforming state's system for producing annual reports to Congress
- QDDR-related assistance

RELEASE IN FULL

MEMORANDUM

TO: Secretary Clinton

FROM: Mike

CC: Cheryl, Jake

SUBJECT: Issues I Cover

In addition to the day-to-day projects and follow-up items I work on with Jake, I cover the following issues:

Long-Range Policy

- Helping Cheryl and Jake plan for, and follow-up on, the bi-monthly policy meetings
- Working with bureaus on end-of-year reports follow-up
- Keeping up to speed on issues discussed at Deputies meetings for weekly memos
- Helping shepherd speech ideas and providing feedback on drafts

Substantive Issue Areas

- Human rights/democracy
- Sudan
- Mexico
- Cookstoves
- Yemen-related issues
- Export controls
- Cybersecurity
- Terrorist finance issues
- Military families issues
- Climate change
- Dialogues and partnerships with Nigeria, South Africa, Angola, Indonesia, Brazil

State Department Reform

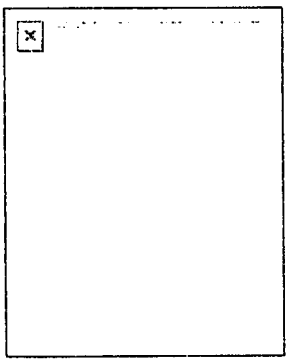
- Report reform: Working with Rich Verma and his team on reforming state's system for producing annual reports to Congress
- QDDR-related assistance



RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop B6
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 10:50 AM
To: H
Subject: H: Dems should demand Boehner remove this GOP Nazi reenactor. Put Boehner in this blitzkrieg. Sid

Why is This GOP House Candidate Dressed as a Nazi?

By Joshua Green

An election year already notable for its menagerie of extreme and unusual candidates can add another one: Rich Iott, the Republican nominee for Congress from Ohio's 9th District, and a Tea Party favorite, who for years donned a German Waffen SS uniform and participated in Nazi re-enactments.

Rich Iott, second from right, in a Nazi SS Waffen uniform.

Iott, whose district lies in Northwest Ohio, was involved with a group that calls itself Wiking, whose members are devoted to re-enacting the exploits of an actual Nazi division, the 5th SS Panzer Division Wiking, which fought mainly on the Eastern Front during World War II. Iott's participation in the Wiking group is not mentioned on his campaign's website, and his name and photographs were removed from the Wiking website.When contacted by The Atlantic, Iott confirmed his involvement with the group over a number of years, but said his interest in Nazi Germany was historical and he does not subscribe to the tenets of Nazism. "No, absolutely not," he said. "In fact, there's a disclaimer on the [Wiking] website. And you'll find that on almost any reenactment website. It's purely historical interest in World War II."

Rich Iott and his wife, as shown on his campaign website.

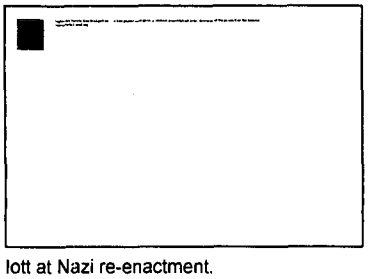
Iott, a member of the Ohio Military Reserve, added, "I've always been fascinated by the fact that here was a relatively small country that from a strictly military point of view accomplished incredible things. I mean, they took over most of Europe and Russia, and it really took the combined effort of the free world to defeat them. From a purely historical military point of view, that's incredible."

Iott says the group chose the Wiking division in part because it fought on the Eastern Front, mainly against the Russian

Army, and not U.S. or British soldiers. The group's website includes a lengthy history of the Wiking unit, a recruitment video, and footage of goose-stepping German soldiers marching in the Warsaw victory parade after Poland fell in 1939. The website makes scant mention of the atrocities committed by the Waffen SS, and includes only a glancing reference to the "twisted" nature of Nazism. Instead, it emphasizes how the Wiking unit fought Bolshevist Communism:

> Nazi Germany had no problem in recruiting the multitudes of volunteers willing to lay down their lives to ensure a "New and Free Europe", free of the threat of Communism. National Socialism was seen by many in Holland, Denmark, Norway, Finland, and other eastern European and Balkan countries as the protector of personal freedom and their very way of life, despite the true underlying totalitarian (and quite twisted, in most cases) nature of the movement. Regardless, thousands upon thousands of valiant men died defending their respective countries in the name of a better tomorrow. We salute these idealists; no matter how unsavory the Nazi government was, the front-line soldiers of the Waffen-SS (in particular the foreign volunteers) gave their lives for their loved ones and a basic desire to be free.

Historians of Nazi Germany vehemently dispute this characterization. "These guys don't know their history," said Charles W. Sydnor, Jr., a retired history professor and author of "Soldiers of Destruction: The SS Death's Head Division, 1933-45," which chronicles an SS division. "They have a sanitized, romanticized view of what occurred." Sydnor added that re-enactments like the Wiking group's are illegal in Germany and Austria. "If you were to put on an SS uniform in Germany today, you'd be arrested."



See web-only content:
http://www.theatlantic.com/politics/archive/2010/10/why-is-this-gop-house-candidate-dressed-as-a-nazi/64319/

Christopher Browning, a professor of history at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, said, "It is so unhistorical and so apologetic that you don't know to what degree they've simply caught up innocent war memorabilia enthusiasts who love putting on uniforms."

Iott says he does not recall exactly when he joined the Wiking group (his name appears on a unit roster as far back as 2003), but did so with his son "as a father-son bonding thing." He says his name and pictures were removed from the Wiking website not out of concern that they would harm his political career, but because he quit the group three years ago, after his son lost interest.

Iott participated in the group under his own name, and also under the alias "Reinhard Pferdmann," which has also been removed, and which Iott described as being his German alter ego. "Part of the reenactor's [experience]," Iott said, "is the living-history part, of really trying to get into the persona of the time period. In many, not just in our unit, but in many units what individuals do is create this person largely based on a Germanized version of their name, and a history kind of based around your own real experiences. 'Reinhard' of course is 'Richard' in German. And 'Pferdmann,' 'pferd' is a horse. So it's literally 'horse man.'"

Asked whether his participation in a Nazi re-enactor's group might not upset voters, particularly Jewish voters, Iott said he hoped it would not: "They have to take it in context. There's reenactors out there who do everything. You couldn't do Civil War re-enacting if somebody didn't play the role of the Confederates. [This] is something that's definitely way in the past. ... [I hope voters] take it in context and see it for what it is, an interest in World War II history. And that's strictly all."

Iott at Nazi re-enactment.

Rabbi Moshe Saks, of the Congregation B'nai Israel in Sylvania, Ohio, a suburb of Toledo that sits in the 9th district, disagreed. "Any kind of reenactment or glorification of Nazi Germany, to us, would be something unacceptable and certainly in poor taste, if not offensive," he said. "I think the reaction here will be very negative. And not just among the Jewish community, but the broader community."

In a follow-up email today, Iott seemed at pains to address concerns that his conduct may have alienated veterans groups but made no specific mention of possible offense to Jews or human rights groups: "Never, in any of my reenacting of military history, have I meant any disrespect to anyone who served in our military or anyone who has been affected by the tragedy of war. In fact, I have immense respect for veterans who served our country valiantly, and my respect of the military and our veterans is one of the reasons I have actively studied military history throughout my life." He added that he has participated in re-enactments as a Civil War Union infantryman, a World War I dough boy and World War II American infantryman and paratrooper.

The actual Wiking unit has a history as grisly as that of other Nazi divisions. In her book "The Death Marches of Hungarian Jews Through Austria in the Spring of 1945," Eleonore Lappin, the noted Austrian historian, writes that soldiers from the Wiking division were involved in the killing of Hungarian Jews in March and April 1945, before surrendering to American forces in Austria.

"What you often hear is that the [Wiking] division was never formally accused of anything, but that's kind of a dodge," says Prof. Rob Citino, of the Military History Center at the University of North Texas, who examined the Wiking website. "The entire German war effort in the East was a racial crusade to rid the world of 'subhumans,' Slavs were going to be enslaved in numbers of tens of millions. And of course the multimillion Jewish population of Eastern Europe was going to be exterminated altogether. That's what all these folks were doing in the East. It sends a shiver up my spine to think that people want to dress up and play SS on the weekend."

This article available online at:
http://www.theatlantic.com/politics/archive/2010/10/why-is-this-gop-house-candidate-dressed-as-a-nazi/64319/
Copyright © 2010 by The Atlantic Monthly Group. All Rights Reserved.
<img src="http://b.scorecardresearch.com/p?c1=2&c2=6463921&c3=&c4=&c5=&c6=&c15=&cj=1" alt="" />

RELEASE IN PART
B5

---

From: Daniel, Joshua J <DanielJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 9:06 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Your speech on the Mideast

Of course. We're working on the deliverables now per your request.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Daniel, Joshua J
Sent: Mon Oct 18 20:59:36 2010
Subject: Re: Your speech on the Mideast

Thx, Josh. May I see a draft tomorrow?

----- Original Message -----
From: Daniel, Joshua J <DanielJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>; Schwerin, Daniel B <SchwerinDB@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Oct 17 18:57:42 2010
Subject: Your speech on the Mideast

Madame Secretary,

On Wednesday, you're scheduled to give a 15-minute talk at a gala hosted by the American Task Force on Palestine, a moderate, pro-peace Palestinian-American organization. Here's a quick overview of our plans for the speech, which we developed with NEA. Please let us know if you have any reactions.

The audience in the room will include Palestinian-Americans who are influential in their communities: lawyers, doctors, business leaders, etc. Of course, a much larger audience beyond the room will read this speech as well. This is your first opportunity to address this issue in a serious way since the end of the moratorium.

B5

Key points:

B5

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 2:26 PM
To: H
Subject: Holbrooke called again. Wants to talk before his 4pm flight

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: postmaster@state.gov
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 2:51 PM
To: H
Subject: Undeliverable: Schedule
Attachments: details.txt; Schedule (1.98 KB)

Delivery has failed to these recipients or distribution lists:

woodardew2@state.gov
The recipient's e-mail address was not found in the recipient's e-mail system. Microsoft Exchange will not try to redeliver this message for you. Please check the e-mail address and try resending this message, or provide the following diagnostic text to your system administrator.

Diagnostic information for administrators:

Generating server: MSWASHDCIB03.washdc.state.sbu

woodardew2@state.gov
#< #5.1.1> #SMTP#

Original message headers:

```
Received: from vance2.state.gov ([10.4.16.238]) by
 MSWASHDCIB03.washdc.state.sbu with Microsoft SMTPSVC(6.0.3790.3959);         Sat, 9
 Oct 2010 14:50:50 -0400
Received: from mail.clintonemail.com (ool-18bbeabb.static.optonline.net [24.187.234.187])
        by vance2.state.gov  with ESMTP id o99IRX3G009077
        (version=TLSv1/SSLv3 cipher=AES128-SHA bits=128 verify=CAFAIL)
        for <woodardEW2@state.gov>; Sat, 9 Oct 2010 14:27:34 -0400
Received: from CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993]) by
 CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993%10]) with mapi; Sat, 9
 Oct 2010 14:48:40 -0400
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: "'woodardEW2@state.gov'" <woodardEW2@state.gov>, Huma Abedin
                                                                              B6
Date: Sat, 9 Oct 2010 14:48:39 -0400
Subject: Schedule
Thread-Topic: Schedule
Thread-Index: Actn4paKaQgL7soQQ5W0UtK1rs/T1g==
Message-ID: <786762D781A7FF4FAC9060892B4044881607D4E774@CLNTINET08.clinton.local>
Accept-Language: en-US
Content-Language: en-US
X-MS-Has-Attach:
X-MS-TNEF-Correlator:
acceptlanguage: en-US
Content-Type: text/plain; charset="utf-8"
Content-Transfer-Encoding: base64
MIME-Version: 1.0
```

Return-Path: HDR22@clintonemail.com
X-OriginalArrivalTime: 09 Oct 2010 18:50:50.0911 (UTC) FILETIME=[E4CD22F0:01CB67E2]
X-TM-AS-Product-Ver: SMEX-8.0.0.4160-6.500.1024-17690.006
X-TM-AS-Result: No--12.519900-5.000000-31
X-TM-AS-User-Approved-Sender: No
X-TM-AS-User-Blocked-Sender: No

RELEASE IN PART
B6

---

From: jake.sullivan [redacted] B6
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 5:01 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Faxes

Odd - the specials say they sent to NY and got confirmation. Working to get them out again.

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'jake.sullivan [redacted]
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Faxes
Sent: Oct 9, 2010 2:51 PM

They did not arrive in NY so were they sent to DC instead? If they were, I will get them tomorrow by noon when I return.

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Lauren Jiloty [redacted] B6
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 7:40 PM
To: H
Cc: woodardew@state.gov
Subject: RE: Undeliverable: Schedule

MS,
It's WoodardEW@state.gov
I apologize for not seeing this sooner - I don't get my hotmail to my blackberry.
I'm copying Eric here.
-Lauren

From: HDR22@clintonemail.com
To: Laurenjiloty[redacted]
Date: Sat, 9 Oct 2010 14:52:40 -0400
Subject: Fw: Undeliverable: Schedule

What is Eric W's address? The one below didn't work.

----- Original Message -----
From: postmaster@state.gov <postmaster@state.gov>
To: woodardew2@state.gov <woodardew2@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Oct 09 14:51:11 2010
Subject: Undeliverable: Schedule

Delivery has failed to these recipients or distribution lists:

woodardew2@state.gov
The recipient's e-mail address was not found in the recipient's e-mail system. Microsoft Exchange will not try to redeliver this message for you. Please check the e-mail address and try resending this message, or provide the following diagnostic text to your system administrator.

Diagnostic information for administrators:

Generating server: MSWASHDCIB03.washdc.state.sbu

woodardew2@state.gov
#< #5.1.1> #SMTP#

Original message headers:

Received: from vance2.state.gov ([10.4.16.238]) by
 MSWASHDCIB03.washdc.state.sbu with Microsoft SMTPSVC(6.0.3790.3959); Sat, 9
 Oct 2010 14:50:50 -0400
Received: from mail.clintonemail.com (001-18bbeabb.static.optonline.net [24.187.234.187])
 by vance2.state.gov with ESMTP id o99IRX3G009077

(version=TLSv1/SSLv3 cipher=AES128-SHA bits=128 verify=CAFAIL)
for <woodardEW2@state.gov>; Sat, 9 Oct 2010 14:27:34 -0400
Received: from CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993]) by
CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993%10]) with mapi; Sat, 9
Oct 2010 14:48:40 -0400
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: "'woodardEW2@state.gov'" <woodardEW2@state.gov>, Huma Abedin
[redacted] B6
Date: Sat, 9 Oct 2010 14:48:39 -0400
Subject: Schedule
Thread-Topic: Schedule
Thread-Index: Actn4paKaQgL7soQQ5W0UtK1rs/T1g==
Message-ID: <786762D781A7FF4FAC9060892B4044881607D4E774@CLNTINET08.clinton.local>
Accept-Language: en-US
Content-Language: en-US
X-MS-Has-Attach:
X-MS-TNEF-Correlator:
acceptlanguage: en-US
Content-Type: text/plain; charset="utf-8"
Content-Transfer-Encoding: base64
MIME-Version: 1.0
Return-Path: HDR22@clintonemail.com
X-OriginalArrivalTime: 09 Oct 2010 18:50:50.0911 (UTC) FILETIME=[E4CD22F0:01CB67E2]
X-TM-AS-Product-Ver: SMEX-8.0.0.4160-6.500.1024-17690.006
X-TM-AS-Result: No--12.519900-5.000000-31
X-TM-AS-User-Approved-Sender: No
X-TM-AS-User-Blocked-Sender: No

--Forwarded Message Attachment--
From: HDR22@clintonemail.com
To: woodardEW2@state.gov; Huma [redacted]
Date: Sat, 9 Oct 2010 14:48:39 -0400
Subject: Schedule

Line block questions:

Why is the Julia Roberts interview during the time I have weekly depoartmental meeting?

Also, I don't see a mtg w POTUS on the 15th--can we get that scheduled?

I want to have my own pre-brief before the Kissinger event.

And, I notice that the HBO event conflicts w a PC mtg at WH. Now w/Donilon in charge can we get a set time for all the regular mtgs so we don't schedule conflicting events?

When is Adm Mullen having his small Pakistan dinner? If it's the 21st, can I get back in time from Paris?

If La Raza can pay for a reception for Raul, why is his swearing in ceremony in the Treaty Room instead of the Franklin? Can't we find a time for them? Also, I won't be able to go to his reception at a hotel since I have to go to the screening for the Nat Geo special so that day doesn't work so well. What about on the 26th after I get back from NY since Bill will be in Haiti and could come back to DC?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 14, 2010 6:40 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Irwin redlener

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 14 18:35:16 2010
Subject: Fw: Irwin redlener

Ill add him to your grid
[redacted] c.

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Thu Jan 14 18:34:22 2010
Subject: Irwin redlener

Just called me for her. Wants to talk to her about pediatric casualties in haiti

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 10, 2010 5:51 AM
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: Fw: InterAction op-ed on branding in Pakistan

Fyi

---

From: Schwartz, Larry
To: McHale, Judith A; Douglas, Walter T; Davidson, Mark J
Sent: Sun Oct 10 01:35:11 2010
Subject: FW: InterAction op-ed on branding in Pakistan

Interaction op-ed that Raj Shah was told will appear in the Washington Post also appeared in Sunday Daily Times in Pakistan.

---

by Samuel A. Worthington

The work that relief and humanitarian organizations carry out in Pakistan is far from easy or safe. We go to difficult areas and are targets for militants seeking to destroy our lifesaving mission through a campaign of killing, kidnapping and intimidation.

Overtly branding our efforts as sponsored by the U.S. government — as the Obama administration wants us to do — only makes our jobs harder and more dangerous.

I have the privilege of leading InterAction, an alliance of U.S.-based nongovernmental organizations conducting relief work around the world; nearly a quarter of our 200 members are responding to the recent floods in Pakistan, and many of them have been in Pakistan for decades.

Though our efforts are supported by public donations, much of the assistance we deliver — whether food, water, essential health care or education — comes via funding from the U.S. government. And in recent weeks, the Obama administration has pressured us to make that link as clear and public as possible. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton questioned our courage, suggesting last month that some NGOs are too "afraid to have association with the U.S. government" while distributing aid in Pakistan.

None of the NGO workers in Pakistan — living under a daily threat of kidnappings or targeted killings — are cowards. The dangers they face are immense, and their bravery must be commended as they help people whose lives have been devastated by terrorism or the epic floods.

Of course, I understand where the administration is coming from. The U.S.-funded assistance we provide saves lives and helps struggling communities rebuild. In the battle for hearts and minds in Pakistan, U.S. officials argue, the failure to clearly advertise that the American government is behind this help — with, for instance, logos on medicines or signs on food-distribution centers — is a missed opportunity. In 2009 the United States approved $7.5 billion in assistance to Pakistan over the next five years; however, as Washington Post columnist David Ignatius noted recently, Pakistanis read more about American drone attacks than about these aid dollars.

In countries such as Liberia or Democratic Republic of Congo, U.S. NGOs that get funding from the U.S. government routinely promote the fact that they are delivering help "from the American people." But in Pakistan, where aid workers' lives are more often at stake, an enforced branding campaign could undermine our ability to deliver assistance as fast as possible without being a lightning rod for protests or attacks. It would also put the lives of Americans and their Pakistani colleagues at risk. (It is usually Pakistani nationals who do the bulk of the work on the ground.)

In an environment where we are often soft targets for militants, drawing attention to our connection to the U.S. government makes us even more vulnerable.

In March, one of InterAction's most active members in Pakistan, World Vision — which works on issues from health care to farming to literacy — was attacked in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa (formerly called the North-West Frontier Province), and seven of its employees were killed. And a year ago, the office of the World Food Program in Islamabad was attacked, and five employees were killed.

There must be a balance among mitigating the risks NGOs face, communicating U.S. goodwill and delivering assistance effectively. NGOs must be allowed to strike that balance on their own every day — even if the upshot is that we don't include U.S. signs on new health clinics.

In some cases, particularly in less-volatile regions of Pakistan, conspicuously identifying aid as American may not pose a threat to our work. But in areas where militants are particularly active, the risks to those delivering the aid may be great. These judgments must be made by the NGOs on the ground, depending on local circumstances, and not directed by the State Department's branding concerns.

In Pakistani tribal areas along the Afghan border, for instance, the U.S. Agency for International Development has granted our members waivers allowing us not to brand U.S. assistance, but there is growing pressure by the government for these waivers to be phased out. While I agree that U.S. aid to the Pakistani people and government needs to be more visible, this could put humanitarian workers' lives in jeopardy.

The American people are enormously generous, as shown after Haiti's devastating earthquake in January and in the aftermath of the December 2004 tsunami in Asia. In Pakistan, the United States — through military and civilian assistance, as well as through NGOs — is playing a major role in response to the recent floods, which forced at least 15 million people from their homes. The humanitarian groups I represent are providing basics, including clean water, medicine and shelter.

The debate over branding our efforts is not simply another technical policy decision; for us, it can be a matter of life and death. NGOs and the Obama administration must work together to find a solution that allows humanitarian workers in the field flexibility to brand or not, according to security conditions on the ground.

We are ready and eager to have that dialogue. The lives of our front-line workers depend on it.

Samuel A. Worthington is president of InterAction, an alliance of U.S.-based nongovernmental organizations carrying out international humanitarian and development work.
END

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 10, 2010 7:40 AM
To: H

Jon davidson will print your press clips today.
Was going to have monica help marina tomorrow morning unless you don't need it.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 10, 2010 9:08 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: InterAction op-ed on branding in Pakistan

I agree. As you know I believe passionately that it is not in our national interests to continue to provide billions of dollars in aid and assistance without the very people we are helping knowing we are the ones providing the assistance. Some of our research in Pakistan indicates that many people believe the assistancee is coming from China and of course the Chinese do nothing to correct the record.

I asked INR to provide me with an assessment of the current situation after the floods to determine the impact of our assistance. I have also asked them to work with the IC to give us an accurate and unbiased assessment of the security risks involved. I aksed for it a couple of weeks ago so hopefully they will have something we can use now which might be helpful in drafting a response.

In terms of the security arguments he makes, it is worth noting that the incidents he references are situations where the attacks occured in places where there was NO USG branding. The reality is that the terrorists attack any group or institution which might impede their ability to prevail.

I had already planned a USAID/State meeting to address this issue this week. I'll try to get everyone together today or tomorrow and will report back to you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Sun Oct 10 08:08:19 2010
Subject: Re: InterAction op-ed on branding in Pakistan

JM- [redacted] B5
[redacted] HRC

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Reines, Philippe I <reinesp@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Oct 10 05:50:43 2010
Subject: Fw: InterAction op-ed on branding in Pakistan

Fyi

---

From: Schwartz, Larry
To: McHale, Judith A; Douglas, Walter T; Davidson, Mark J
Sent: Sun Oct 10 01:35:11 2010
Subject: FW: InterAction op-ed on branding in Pakistan

Interaction op-ed that Raj Shah was told will appear in the Washington Post also appeared in Sunday Daily Times in Pakistan.

---

by Samuel A. Worthington

The work that relief and humanitarian organizations carry out in Pakistan is far from easy or safe. We go to difficult areas and are targets for militants seeking to destroy our lifesaving mission through a campaign of killing, kidnapping and intimidation.

Overtly branding our efforts as sponsored by the U.S. government — as the Obama administration wants us to do — only makes our jobs harder and more dangerous.

I have the privilege of leading InterAction, an alliance of U.S.-based nongovernmental organizations conducting relief work around the world; nearly a quarter of our 200 members are responding to the recent floods in Pakistan, and many of them have been in Pakistan for decades.

Though our efforts are supported by public donations, much of the assistance we deliver — whether food, water, essential health care or education — comes via funding from the U.S. government. And in recent weeks, the Obama administration has pressured us to make that link as clear and public as possible. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton questioned our courage, suggesting last month that some NGOs are too "afraid to have association with the U.S. government" while distributing aid in Pakistan.

None of the NGO workers in Pakistan — living under a daily threat of kidnappings or targeted killings — are cowards. The dangers they face are immense, and their bravery must be commended as they help people whose lives have been devastated by terrorism or the epic floods.

Of course, I understand where the administration is coming from. The U.S.-funded assistance we provide saves lives and helps struggling communities rebuild. In the battle for hearts and minds in Pakistan, U.S. officials argue, the failure to clearly advertise that the American government is behind this help — with, for instance, logos on medicines or signs on food-distribution centers — is a missed opportunity. In 2009 the United States approved $7.5 billion in assistance to Pakistan over the next five years; however, as Washington Post columnist David Ignatius noted recently, Pakistanis read more about American drone attacks than about these aid dollars.

In countries such as Liberia or Democratic Republic of Congo, U.S. NGOs that get funding from the U.S. government routinely promote the fact that they are delivering help "from the American people." But in Pakistan, where aid workers' lives are more often at stake, an enforced branding campaign could undermine our ability to deliver assistance as fast as possible without being a lightning rod for protests or attacks. It would also put the lives of Americans and their Pakistani colleagues at risk. (It is usually Pakistani nationals who do the bulk of the work on the ground.)

In an environment where we are often soft targets for militants, drawing attention to our connection to the U.S. government makes us even more vulnerable.

In March, one of InterAction's most active members in Pakistan, World Vision — which works on issues from health care to farming to literacy — was attacked in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa (formerly called the North-West Frontier Province), and seven of its employees were killed. And a year ago, the office of the World Food Program in Islamabad was attacked, and five employees were killed.

There must be a balance among mitigating the risks NGOs face, communicating U.S. goodwill and delivering assistance effectively. NGOs must be allowed to strike that balance on their own every day — even if the upshot is that we don't include U.S. signs on new health clinics.

In some cases, particularly in less-volatile regions of Pakistan, conspicuously identifying aid as American may not pose a threat to our work. But in areas where militants are particularly active, the risks to those delivering the aid may be great. These judgments must be made by the NGOs on the ground, depending on local circumstances, and not directed by the State Department's branding concerns.

In Pakistani tribal areas along the Afghan border, for instance, the U.S. Agency for International Development has granted our members waivers allowing us not to brand U.S. assistance, but there is growing pressure by the government for these waivers to be phased out. While I agree that U.S. aid to the Pakistani people and government needs to be more visible, this could put humanitarian workers' lives in jeopardy.

The American people are enormously generous, as shown after Haiti's devastating earthquake in January and in the aftermath of the December 2004 tsunami in Asia. In Pakistan, the United States — through military and civilian assistance, as well as through NGOs — is playing a major role in response to the recent floods, which forced at least 15 million people from their homes. The humanitarian groups I represent are providing basics, including clean water, medicine and shelter.

The debate over branding our efforts is not simply another technical policy decision; for us, it can be a matter of life and death. NGOs and the Obama administration must work together to find a solution that allows humanitarian workers in the field flexibility to brand or not, according to security conditions on the ground.

We are ready and eager to have that dialogue. The lives of our front-line workers depend on it.

Samuel A. Worthington is president of InterAction, an alliance of U.S.-based nongovernmental organizations carrying out international humanitarian and development work.

END

SBU

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 10, 2010 11:12 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: InterAction op-ed on branding in Pakistan

Thx. I feel the same way! Just got off a call with usaid, srap and my team. We are drafting a response. I think we need something firm, accurate and rapid. Still deciding who will sign and whether it will be an op ed or letter to the editor. I want to be sure we avoid a public battle with the ngo community on this issue. UsAID is recommending that Raj meet with Worthington and read him the riot act for the op ed.

Will forward the draft before we send.

BTW, USAID confirmed that there was no USG branding in the attacks Worthington references.

Jm

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Sun Oct 10 10:48:22 2010
Subject: Re: InterAction op-ed on branding in Pakistan

Thx--I love working w you--I feel sometimes we were separated at birth! Onward!

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Oct 10 09:07:53 2010
Subject: Re: InterAction op-ed on branding in Pakistan

I agree. As you know I believe passionately that it is not in our national interests to continue to provide billions of dollars in aid and assistance without the very people we are helping knowing we are the ones providing the assistance. Some of our research in Pakistan indicates that many people believe the assistancee is coming from China and of course the Chinese do nothing to correct the record.

I asked INR to provide me with an assessment of the current situation after the floods to determine the impact of our assistance. I have also asked them to work with the IC to give us an accurate and unbiased assessment of the security risks involved. I aksed for it a couple of weeks ago so hopefully they will have something we can use now which might be helpful in drafting a response.

In terms of the security arguments he makes, it is worth noting that the incidents he references are situations where the attacks occured in places where there was NO USG branding. The reality is that the terrorists attack any group or institution which might impede their ability to prevail.

I had already planned a USAID/State meeting to address this issue this week. I'll try to get everyone together today or tomorrow and will report back to you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>

To: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Sun Oct 10 08:08:19 2010
Subject: Re: InterAction op-ed on branding in Pakistan

JM- [redacted] B5
[redacted] HRC B5

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Reines, Philippe I <reinesp@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Oct 10 05:50:43 2010
Subject: Fw: InterAction op-ed on branding in Pakistan

Fyi

---

From: Schwartz, Larry
To: McHale, Judith A; Douglas, Walter T; Davidson, Mark J
Sent: Sun Oct 10 01:35:11 2010
Subject: FW: InterAction op-ed on branding in Pakistan

Interaction op-ed that Raj Shah was told will appear in the Washington Post also appeared in Sunday Daily Times in Pakistan.

---

by Samuel A. Worthington

The work that relief and humanitarian organizations carry out in Pakistan is far from easy or safe. We go to difficult areas and are targets for militants seeking to destroy our lifesaving mission through a campaign of killing, kidnapping and intimidation.

Overtly branding our efforts as sponsored by the U.S. government — as the Obama administration wants us to do — only makes our jobs harder and more dangerous.

I have the privilege of leading InterAction, an alliance of U.S.-based nongovernmental organizations conducting relief work around the world; nearly a quarter of our 200 members are responding to the recent floods in Pakistan, and many of them have been in Pakistan for decades.

Though our efforts are supported by public donations, much of the assistance we deliver — whether food, water, essential health care or education — comes via funding from the U.S. government. And in recent weeks, the Obama administration has pressured us to make that link as clear and public as possible. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton questioned our courage, suggesting last month that some NGOs are too "afraid to have association with the U.S. government" while distributing aid in Pakistan.

None of the NGO workers in Pakistan — living under a daily threat of kidnappings or targeted killings — are cowards. The dangers they face are immense, and their bravery must be commended as they help people whose lives have been devastated by terrorism or the epic floods.

Of course, I understand where the administration is coming from. The U.S.-funded assistance we provide saves lives and helps struggling communities rebuild. In the battle for hearts and minds in Pakistan, U.S. officials argue, the failure to clearly advertise that the American government is behind this help — with, for instance, logos on medicines or signs on food-distribution centers — is a missed opportunity. In 2009 the United States approved $7.5 billion in assistance to Pakistan over the next five years; however, as Washington Post columnist David Ignatius noted recently, Pakistanis read more about American drone attacks than about these aid dollars.

In countries such as Liberia or Democratic Republic of Congo, U.S. NGOs that get funding from the U.S. government routinely promote the fact that they are delivering help "from the American people." But in Pakistan, where aid workers' lives are more often at stake, an enforced branding campaign could undermine our ability to deliver assistance as fast as possible without being a lightning rod for protests or attacks. It would also put the lives of Americans and their Pakistani colleagues at risk. (It is usually Pakistani nationals who do the bulk of the work on the ground.)

In an environment where we are often soft targets for militants, drawing attention to our connection to the U.S. government makes us even more vulnerable.

In March, one of InterAction's most active members in Pakistan, World Vision — which works on issues from health care to farming to literacy — was attacked in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa (formerly called the North-West Frontier Province), and seven of its employees were killed. And a year ago, the office of the World Food Program in Islamabad was attacked, and five employees were killed.

There must be a balance among mitigating the risks NGOs face, communicating U.S. goodwill and delivering assistance effectively. NGOs must be allowed to strike that balance on their own every day — even if the upshot is that we don't include U.S. signs on new health clinics.

In some cases, particularly in less-volatile regions of Pakistan, conspicuously identifying aid as American may not pose a threat to our work. But in areas where militants are particularly active, the risks to those delivering the aid may be great.

These judgments must be made by the NGOs on the ground, depending on local circumstances, and not directed by the State Department's branding concerns.

In Pakistani tribal areas along the Afghan border, for instance, the U.S. Agency for International Development has granted our members waivers allowing us not to brand U.S. assistance, but there is growing pressure by the government for these waivers to be phased out. While I agree that U.S. aid to the Pakistani people and government needs to be more visible, this could put humanitarian workers' lives in jeopardy.

The American people are enormously generous, as shown after Haiti's devastating earthquake in January and in the aftermath of the December 2004 tsunami in Asia. In Pakistan, the United States — through military and civilian assistance, as well as through NGOs — is playing a major role in response to the recent floods, which forced at least 15 million people from their homes. The humanitarian groups I represent are providing basics, including clean water, medicine and shelter.

The debate over branding our efforts is not simply another technical policy decision; for us, it can be a matter of life and death. NGOs and the Obama administration must work together to find a solution that allows humanitarian workers in the field flexibility to brand or not, according to security conditions on the ground.

We are ready and eager to have that dialogue. The lives of our front-line workers depend on it.

Samuel A. Worthington is president of InterAction, an alliance of U.S.-based nongovernmental organizations carrying out international humanitarian and development work.

END

SBU

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 14, 2010 8:38 PM
To: 'rshah[redacted]; 'cheryl.mills[redacted] B6
Cc: 'FuchsMH@state.gov'; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Is there still a bottleneck at the airport? I'm listening to a doctor (Bob Hoff w Salvation Army)on NPR saying he is upset because they are running out of supplies and he keeps being told they are in the air.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 10:18 PM
To: H
Subject: Gates says he needs to talk to u tonight

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Campbell, Kurt M <CampbellKM@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 10, 2010 11:13 AM
To: H
Subject: Have talked a few times with Tom

Can debrief or discuss at your convenience Madame Secretary. Ops can find me at any time. Will be out of pocket 1 to 4. Thanks Kurt

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 14, 2010 9:21 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: FYI - Colombian President Uribe intends to travel to Haiti January 17,

When can you talk?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Jan 14 20:54:25 2010
Subject: FYI - Colombian President Uribe intends to travel to Haiti January 17,

INTERNATIONAL COORDINATION

(U) Colombian President Uribe intends to travel to Haiti January 17, according to press. His government will also send a naval hospital ship. (Rendon News Alerts)

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 10:25 PM
To: H
Cc: Jiloty, Lauren C
Subject: Fw: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake
Attachments: [Untitled].pdf; [Untitled].pdf

----- Original Message -----
From: Huang, Cindy Y
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Haslach, Patricia M
Sent: Mon Oct 18 18:39:51 2010
Subject: FW: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

Handwritten note of thanks from Tony Lake to S. Glad that he notes the meeting was "useful" -- maybe a sign that we managed to make it more than just talking heads? Thx!

-----Original Message-----
From: Sabar, Aisha (USUN)
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 6:38 PM
To: Nagy, Eleanor; Huang, Cindy Y
Subject: FW: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

Nice note from Tony Lake to the Secretary regarding the nutrition event in case you didn't already see it..

Aisha I. Sabar
Economic and Social Affairs Adviser
U.S. Mission to the United Nations

799 United Nations Plaza
New York, NY 10017
Tel: 212-415-4229
Email: sabara2@state.gov

This email is UNCLASSIFIED

This email is UNCLASSIFIED-----Original Message-----
From: Sammis, John F (USUN)
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 12:39 PM
To: Nemroff, Courtney R (USUN); Glucksman, Tobias H (USUN)
Subject: FW: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

Who had the lead on the nutrition event for us?

This email is UNCLASSIFIED

-----Original Message-----
From: Myers, Honora L (USUN)
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 12:38 PM
To: DiCarlo, Rosemary A (USUN); Anderson, Brooke D (USUN); Barton, Rick (USUN); Ahmed, Salman (USUN); Sammis, John F (USUN); Nemroff, Courtney R (USUN)
Subject: FW: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

-----Original Message-----
From: EXECUTIVE [mailto:EXECGRP@STATE.GOV]
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 12:35 PM
To: Myers, Honora L (USUN)
Subject: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

This email is UNCLASSIFIED

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: jake.sullivan[redacted] B6
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 4:38 PM
To: H; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Faxes

Sorry - just seeing. I was told they were sent and received. Will check.

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'jake.sullivan[redacted]
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Faxes
Sent: Oct 9, 2010 2:51 PM

They did not arrive in NY so were they sent to DC instead? If they were, I will get them tomorrow by noon when I return.

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 7:28 AM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Schedule

Yes.

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Jan 15 05:57:10 2010
Subject: Schedule

MS -- Rich Verma would like to add a conference call this afternoon with the House Republicans to give them an update on the Haiti relief efforts. It would be an ideal way to cover many of these people instead of doing individual calls down the road. The time that works best for folks on the Hill is 3:30pm -- okay to add to your schedule?
Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
[redacted] (direct) B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 10, 2010 5:42 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: H
Subject: Representation

Jake -

Re the matter we discussed - no on-going representation since 2001.

Cdm

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Megan Rooney [redacted] B6
Sent: Saturday, October 9, 2010 7:54 PM
To: H
Cc: Daniel, Joshua J; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: framework for Sarajevo town hall

Madam Secretary,

I'm writing remarks for your town hall in Sarajevo on Tuesday. Jake and Josh discussed having the speechwriters send you bullets summarizing significant remarks ahead of time, so you can know the direction we're taking and let us know if we're on the right or wrong track.

Below are the main points for Sarajevo; the draft I'm writing is covering this ground. It will follow the flow of many of your previous town hall appearances.

If there is anything you'd like me to emphasize, add, or subject, let me know and I'll go for it.

Thanks very much,
Megan
[redacted] B6

- [redacted] B5
-
-
-

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 7:53 AM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Schedule

I also want to call the head of the Red Cross.

----- Original Message -----
From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Jan 15 05:57:10 2010
Subject: Schedule

MS -- Rich Verma would like to add a conference call this afternoon with the House Republicans to give them an update on the Haiti relief efforts. It would be an ideal way to cover many of these people instead of doing individual calls down the road. The time that works best for folks on the Hill is 3:30pm -- okay to add to your schedule?
Lona Valmoro
Special Assistant to the Secretary of State
redacted B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: jake.sullivan
Sent: Sunday, October 10, 2010 7:38 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Letter draft

I flagged same thing - Dan S said he would revert first thing tomorrow.

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
To: 'jake.sullivan
Subject: Letter draft
Sent: Oct 10, 2010 7:26 PM

In the copy delivered to me, words appear missing at the end of para beginning w "Fifth." Pls check your copy and advise. Thx.

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop B6
Sent: Sunday, October 10, 2010 8:46 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

Good and I will tell shaun

Sent via DROID on Verizon Wireless

-----Original message-----

From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: sbwhoeop" <sbwhoeop B6
Sent: Mon, Oct 11, 2010 00:24:56 GMT+00:00
Subject: Re: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

I gave to Bill who is trying to influence strategy.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop B6
To: H
Sent: Fri Oct 08 16:08:27 2010
Subject: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

The Huffington Post <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/> <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/>

Drew Westen <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/drew-westen>

Psychologist and neuroscientist; Emory University Professor
Posted: October 8, 2010 09:23 AM

Bringing Up Boehner <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/drew-westen/post_1034_b_755497.html>

According to news reports, today Republican minority leader and Coppertone model John Boehner will give his "closing argument" to the American people on why they should throw out the Democrats and kill the Obama-Pelosi-Reid "job-killing agenda." He will be returning to his working class roots, speaking at a piping manufacturing plant, an unusual venue these days for a man who is seen much more frequently at gatherings of Wall Street executives with open checkbooks and the males-only country club where he works on his tan when not making the rounds at other clubs with industry lobbyists.

Either the Speaker-to-be is following the model of Michael Steele and free-lancing, or Karl Rove and the Republicans believe it is safe or even advantageous to bring him out in public after the White House made an effort to put Boehner's face on what a Republican majority might look like, with the president invoking his name eight times in one speech.

I have to admit that at the time I was agnostic as to whether it made sense to try to brand him at this late date, as Boehner has minimal name recognition among voters. But the White House was no doubt responding to three realities.

First, Boehner is an unknown to most Americans, which means that, unlike most Republicans in the news, he has not been well branded by the GOP -- which means for once Democrats might actually brand someone or something first rather than playing catch-up. Second, Boehner would indeed be the highest-ranking Republican were the GOP to assume control over the House (other than of course Karl Rove, who is now directing traffic on the right side of the street in Washington again). And third, a concrete face is always better than an abstraction when telling a story, and other than perhaps Sarah Palin, who Republicans could alternately accept and decline as the leader of their party, Boehner's tanned visage and history as errand-boy for virtually every major corporate special interest in his two decades in Washington (including his stint as the Marlboro Man, handing out tobacco lobby campaign checks to his fellow Republicans on the floor of the House) made him a potential counter-villain to the Republican's bogeywoman, Nancy Pelosi.

I remained agnostic until this week, when colleagues at Media Matters Action Network and I conducted a national messaging survey <http://cloudfront.mediamattersaction.org/static/images/pdf/BrandingBoehner.pdf> with 1,000 registered voters, selected to match the demographics of the voting and likely voting populations. The goal was to see how effectively we could speak with voters about Boehner as not only the symbol and standard-bearer for the GOP but also the water-boy for corporate America. (The results were surprisingly similar whether we looked at registered voters or likely voters, although as others have described, precisely how to determine who is a "likely voter" in this election is as much art as science, and the point of good messaging at this point is actually to change the dynamics of likely voting, not just to reflect them.)

As detailed in a memo published in Politico, what we found was clear: Boehner is a target well worth defining, who readily stands for precisely what Americans perceive to be the reasons they would have to hold their noses to vote for Congressional Republicans (perhaps the only group left who poll worse than Congressional Democrats with swing voters). We tested both paragraph-length narratives and single-sentence language designed to capture the essence of those narratives, and in each case, we tested them against the toughest opposition language we could test them against: the words of Boehner, Cantor, Limbaugh and others combined in defining the "Obama-Pelosi-Reid" agenda.

What we found, in brief, is that we could beat a tough GOP narrative about the "job-killing" socialists in the White House and Congress by 15 to 20 points with two narratives starring Boehner in the leading role (with best supporting bad actor going in one of the narratives to Karl Rove and his corporate allies), and we could win with over 15 different sentence-long descriptions of "what's the matter with Boehner" with margins ranging from 10 to 60 points against a tough conservative attack on the Obama-Pelosi-Reid axis of conservative evil.

The narratives that most moved likely voters -- including swing voters, who preferred them by double-digits over tough Republican rhetoric -- made clear whose voices Boehner would be speaking for as Speaker (e.g., the Wall Street executives he convened to try to block Wall Street reform). They harnessed the same populist anger at the hijacking of Washington by corporate special interests that has enlivened the tea partiers and is palpable across the political spectrum, and they focused on the extremism of the party Boehner would Speak for. A narrative that brought Karl Rove into the picture was slightly more polarizing with swing voters but slightly more powerful with likely Democratic voters.

In some ways what was most surprising was the success of the single-line statements of what we need in a Speaker and who John Boehner really speaks for (although these single-line statements came after the narratives, and likely reflect the power of branding, even over the course of a brief online encounter with voters). They ranged from relatively lofty and aspirational (e.g., "We need a Speaker who is also a listener, who can hear the voices of ordinary Americans" -- a theme colleagues and I found highly resonant across the political spectrum in message testing on the role of money in politics) -- to the harder-edged (e.g., "The Speaker of the House is a heartbeat away from the Presidency. Unfortunately, we know where John Boehner's heart is, and it isn't with the middle class," or "John Boehner understands deficits. He's spent nearly 20 years in Washington creating them.")

If there's a message in this message research, it is at once short-term and long-term. In the short run, if Democrats want to hang onto their seats in November, they would do well to define this election in terms of the middle class and small business versus the billionaires and big corporations that are hijacking our democracy; to use Boehner as a poster child for the party whose primary commitment is to the latter and whose tan is a testament to that commitment; and to avoid giving voters reason to regret their vote if they give it to Democrats again this time, by supporting the things they say they stand for and avoiding that golden mean between the public interest and the special interests that finance campaigns on both sides of the aisle.

In the longer run, branding matters. One of the biggest strategic and messaging mistakes of the last two years was the failure of Democrats to brand their opponents while their opponents were busy branding them -- and in particular the failure to brand the Bush Recession as the natural consequence of failed Republican economic principles. Two years ago, that was a virtually uncontested political proposition, as the voters made clear in handing Democrats the White House and supermajorities in both the House and Senate. Today, the public is split down the middle as to who caused the recession.

Reality doesn't brand itself. Hopefully it won't take a debacle in November and another 10 million jobs lost for reality to unveil itself again for a brief political moment and for progressives to have a second bite at the apple.

<http://getglue.com/?s=w>

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 9:11 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'; Huma Abedin; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti; Lady Ashton

Ok to do conf call 1300 Sunday and call w Lady Ashton before that.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Jan 15 20:58:51 2010
Subject: FW: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti; Lady Ashton

FYI Below.

FYI – I spoke to Lady Catherine Ashton who called to 1) wish you well on this trip and express her gratefulness that you are traveling; and 2) ask if you might be willing to call her Sunday morning to give her a read out of your trip b/c she has a briefing in Brussels and having a first hand report from you will allow her to forestall a trip to Haiti in the next week.

cdm

From: Jacobson, Roberta S
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 7:52 PM
To: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Valmoro, Lona J; Mills, Cheryl D; Reynoso, Julissa; Jacobson, David
Cc: De Pirro, Velia M; Sheaffer, Gary L; Breese, Terry A; Kelly, Craig A; Gonzalez, Juan S
Subject: FW: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti
Importance: High

7th floor colleagues: Please advise whether Sunday at 1300 would work for S; Canadian-led conference call with Friends of Haiti. Many thanks. Roberta

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Alex.Bugailiskis

B6

Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 7:48 PM
To: Jacobson, Roberta S
Subject: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti

Roberta,

with regard to the conference call of FMs of the Friends of Haiti, can we agree on Sunday, January 17th at 1300h?

We will be sending you a proposed agenda for the call and a list of participating Ministers.

Cheers

Alex Bugailiskis

Assistant Deputy Minister

Latin America and the Caribbean

Foreign Affairs and International Trade Canada

125 Sussex Drive

Ottawa, ON K1A 0G2

Tel. [redacted] Fax 613-944-1910 B6

Sous-ministre adjointe

Amérique latine et Caraïbes

Affaires étrangères et Commerce international Canada

125, promenade Sussex

Ottawa (ON) K1A 0G2

Tel. [redacted] Fax 613-944-1910 B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

---

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 9:17 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'; Huma Abedin; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti; Lady Ashton

W/whom? I thought she wanted to speak w me Sunday morning. I just want to do it as late as possible.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H; Huma Abedin; Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Jan 15 21:11:07 2010
Subject: RE: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti; Lady Ashton

I think she may do an earlier call

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 9:11 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Huma Abedin; Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: Re: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti; Lady Ashton

Ok to do conf call 1300 Sunday and call w Lady Ashton before that.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Jan 15 20:58:51 2010
Subject: FW: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti; Lady Ashton

FYI Below.

FYI – I spoke to Lady Catherine Ashton who called to 1) wish you well on this trip and express her gratefulness that you are traveling; and 2) ask if you might be willing to call her Sunday morning to give her a read out of your trip b/c she has a briefing in Brussels and having a first hand report from you will allow her to forestall a trip to Haiti in the next week.

cdm

From: Jacobson, Roberta S
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 7:52 PM
To: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Valmoro, Lona J; Mills, Cheryl D; Reynoso, Julissa; Jacobson, David
Cc: De Pirro, Velia M; Sheaffer, Gary L; Breese, Terry A; Kelly, Craig A; Gonzalez, Juan S
Subject: FW: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti

Importance: High

7th floor colleagues: Please advise whether Sunday at 1300 would work for S; Canadian-led conference call with Friends of Haiti. Many thanks. Roberta

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Alex.Bugailiskis [redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 7:48 PM
To: Jacobson, Roberta S
Subject: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti

Roberta,

with regard to the conference call of FMs of the Friends of Haiti, can we agree on Sunday, January 17th at 1300h?

We will be sending you a proposed agenda for the call and a list of participating Ministers.

Cheers

Alex Bugailiskis

Assistant Deputy Minister

Latin America and the Caribbean

Foreign Affairs and International Trade Canada

125 Sussex Drive

Ottawa, ON K1A 0G2

Tel. [redacted]; Fax 613-944-1910

Sous-ministre adjointe

Amérique latine et Caraïbes

Affaires étrangères et Commerce international Canada

125, promenade Sussex

Ottawa (ON) K1A 0G2

Tel. [redacted] Fax 613-944-1910

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mikulski, BAM (Mikulski) <BAM@Mikulski.senate.gov>
Sent: Sunday, October 10, 2010 10:05 PM
To: H
Subject: Happy Anniversary

Pres Bill lft a $$$$raiser 4 me and is on his way home to u//// he was a big draw and hit. Am doing well. My opponent is a doc who is a self funder who's media person is the guy who did that cruel campaign. Against max clealand. This $$event is agreat insurane policy. Hope all is going great with u. You are doing such. Good. Work. Take care. And. Big. Thanks 4lending. Bill 4 part of eve.

---

Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 9:20 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: [redacted] response to S call B6

Very touching.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jan 15 21:17:49 2010
Subject: FW: [redacted] response to S call

From: Kennedy, Patrick F
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Jan 15 19:21:18 2010
Subject: FW: [redacted] response to S call

Cheryl

E-mail from the Department's Casualty Assistance Office, who is in contact with the sister [principle living relative] of the [redacted]

Regards

pat

From: Boncy, Virginia W
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 11:26 AM
To: Powell, Nancy J; Browning, Steve A; Manzanares, J Robert (Bob); Taglialatela, Linda S
Cc: Leach, Kirk A
Subject: [redacted] response to S call B6

When I spoke to [redacted] this morning she said that the Secretary had called, and she said, "I can't tell you how much it meant to us." She went on to say that she and her husband were very moved by the Secretary's words and by how much everyone cares.

Ginny

Virginia Boncy
Deputy Director
Office of Casualty Assistance
Tel: 202-736-4302
Fax: 202-647-5313

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 9:33 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti; Lady Ashton

Bill wants me to speak to/meet w Eduard Mulette who will replace head of UN Mission. Do you know him?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H; Huma Abedin; Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Jan 15 21:20:53 2010
Subject: RE: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti; Lady Ashton

Not sure who they were but fine to do 1pm - I'll make sure it works.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 9:17 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Huma Abedin; Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: Re: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti; Lady Ashton

W/whom? I thought she wanted to speak w me Sunday morning. I just want to do it as late as possible.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H; Huma Abedin; Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Jan 15 21:11:07 2010
Subject: RE: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti; Lady Ashton

I think she may do an earlier call

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 9:11 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Huma Abedin; Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: Re: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti; Lady Ashton

Ok to do conf call 1300 Sunday and call w Lady Ashton before that.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Jan 15 20:58:51 2010
Subject: FW: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti; Lady Ashton

FYI Below.

FYI – I spoke to Lady Catherine Ashton who called to 1) wish you well on this trip and express her gratefulness that you are traveling; and 2) ask if you might be willing to call her Sunday morning to give her a read out of your trip b/c she has a briefing in Brussels and having a first hand report from you will allow her to forestall a trip to Haiti in the next week.

cdm

From: Jacobson, Roberta S
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 7:52 PM
To: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Valmoro, Lona J; Mills, Cheryl D; Reynoso, Julissa; Jacobson, David
Cc: De Pirro, Velia M; Sheaffer, Gary L; Breese, Terry A; Kelly, Craig A; Gonzalez, Juan S
Subject: FW: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti
Importance: High

7th floor colleagues: Please advise whether Sunday at 1300 would work for S; Canadian-led conference call with Friends of Haiti. Many thanks. Roberta

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Alex.Bugailiskis [redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 7:48 PM
To: Jacobson, Roberta S
Subject: Conference Call of Friends of Haiti

Roberta,

with regard to the conference call of FMs of the Friends of Haiti, can we agree on Sunday, January 17th at 1300h?

We will be sending you a proposed agenda for the call and a list of participating Ministers.

Cheers

Alex Bugailiskis

Assistant Deputy Minister

Latin America and the Caribbean

Foreign Affairs and International Trade Canada

125 Sussex Drive

Ottawa, ON K1A 0G2

Tel. [redacted] Fax 613-944-1910

B6

Sous-ministre adjointe

Amérique latine et Caraïbes

Affaires étrangères et Commerce international Canada

125, promenade Sussex

Ottawa (ON) K1A 0G2

Tel. [redacted] Fax 613-944-1910

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 9:41 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: David (Lindwall)'s house in PoP....

What a reminder and tribute to our team.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Jan 15 21:36:12 2010
Subject: FW: David (Lindwall)'s house in PoP....

Take a look – a reminder of the trauma our workers have confronted.

From: Kennedy, Patrick F
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 4:06 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: David (Lindwall)'s house in PoP....

Cheryl

Photo of Port au Prince DCM David Lindwall's house post-earthquake

Regards

pat

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 12:43 AM
To: 'cheryl.mills[redacted]'; 'rshah[redacted]'; Huma Abedin B6
Subject: Fw: Help for dying patients

Mark, emergency room doc, is w Paul Farmer; Pier is his orthopedic surgeon wife. Is there any way to help asap? This should be the highest priority. Coulc one of the medical teams alreay there move over to help? Could Gen Keen or UN get the supplies and generators they need to them at first light?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: mark[redacted] H; Shah, Rajiv (AID/A)[redacted]
Cc: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>; cheryl.mills[redacted]; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 17 00:33:23 2010
Subject: Re: Help for dying patients

Adding raj as well.

----- Original Message -----
From: Dr. Mark Hyman[redacted]
To: Hillary Clinton <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Jiloty, Lauren C; cheryl.mills[redacted] Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sat Jan 16 22:00:42 2010
Subject: Help for dying patients

Dear Hillary and all.

We arrived at the general hospital last night with 1500 people sick or dying with 40 percent needing surgery. It has no water electricity or food and very limited surgical suites or supplies It the largest and most well known public hospital in the city and according to PIH and paul farmer needs to be supported and it's infrastucture needs to be rebuilt.

Right now we have surgeons but not enough operating rooms set up. We desperately need to get a generator and fuel and surgical lights and surgery supplies not just first aid. There are hundreds including children with festering wounds needing amputation and emergency surgical care. The doctors nurses and patients have no food or water.

Can you help get the infrastructure of electricity water and a medical hospital tent for post op patients. We are operating with headlamps and hacksaws rinsed with alcohol.

If we have the electricity and water we can open 11 operating rooms tomorrow if we get what we need. Can the military help ASAP and for security of equipment and medication.

Until this morning when [redacted] did the first amuptation there was almost no surgery happening at all here in the city and none at the General. B6

Five days after the quake with no acute surgical care wounds are festering patients are getting septic and dying. If we had a little help with basic servcices we could stop this.

I don't have cell or email at the hospital. Please coordinate with Claire Pierre or Nancy from PIH.

Thank you thank you thank you.

Mark Hyman, MD
Sent from my iPhone

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 12:44 AM
To: 'cheryl.mill[redacted]; 'rshah[redacted]; Huma Abedin B6
Subject: Re: Help for dying patients

Also food and water?

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'cheryl.mills[redacted]; 'rshah[redacted]; Huma Abedin
Sent: Sun Jan 17 00:42:53 2010
Subject: Fw: Help for dying patients

Mark, emergency room doc, is w Paul Farmer; Pier is his orthopedic surgeon wife. Is there any way to help asap? This should be the highest priority. Coulc one of the medical teams alreay there move over to help? Could Gen Keen or UN get the supplies and generators they need to them at first light?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: mark[redacted]>; H; Shah, Rajiv (AID/A)[redacted]
Cc: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>; cheryl.mills[redacted]; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 17 00:33:23 2010
Subject: Re: Help for dying patients

Adding raj as well.

----- Original Message -----
From: Dr. Mark Hyman[redacted]
To: Hillary Clinton <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Jiloty, Lauren C; cheryl.mills[redacted] Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sat Jan 16 22:00:42 2010
Subject: Help for dying patients

Dear Hillary and all.

We arrived at the general hospital last night with 1500 people sick or dying with 40 percent needing surgery. It has no water electricity or food and very limited surgical suites or supplies It the largest and most well known public hospital in the city and according to PIH and paul farmer needs to be supported and it's infrastucture needs to be rebuilt.

Right now we have surgeons but not enough operating rooms set up. We desperately need to get a generator and fuel and surgical lights and surgery supplies not just first aid. There are hundreds including children with festering wounds needing amputation and emergency surgical care. The doctors nurses and patients have no food or water.

Can you help get the infrastructure of electricity water and a medical hospital tent for post op patients. We are operating with headlamps and hacksaws rinsed with alcohol.

If we have the electricity and water we can open 11 operating rooms tomorrow if we get what we need. Can the military help ASAP and for security of equipment and medication.

Until this morning when [redacted] did the first amuptation there was almost no surgery happening at all here in the city and none at the General. B6

Five days after the quake with no acute surgical care wounds are festering patients are getting septic and dying. If we had a little help with basic servcices we could stop this.

I don't have cell or email at the hospital. Please coordinate with Claire Pierre or Nancy from PIH.

Thank you thank you thank you.

Mark Hyman, MD
Sent from my iPhone

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 12:54 AM
To: 'jacobjlew 'lewjj@state.gov' B6
Subject: Monday

Jack--

In looking at my schedule, I could talk w you by phone Sunday or Monday, rather than meeting, which would give you back your Monday and service event. I learned the office will be closed Monday, so I will be working from home. Does that make sense?

What times would be good to talk tomorrow or Monday?

Thx, Hillary

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 10:13 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: URGENT: Friends of Haiti Teleconference

I cannot do either time. We could send Raj or Jack.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 10:08:43 2010
Subject: FW: URGENT: Friends of Haiti Teleconference

B5

Copying you as heads up for your 1pm call only –not for decision.

cdm

From: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 10:00 AM
To: Jacobson, Roberta S; S_SpecialAssistants; Valmoro, Lona J; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Reynoso, Julissa; Kelly, Craig A; Valenzuela, Arturo A; Gonzalez, Juan S
Subject: Re: URGENT: Friends of Haiti Teleconference

Cheryl needs to address

---

From: Jacobson, Roberta S
To: S_SpecialAssistants; Abedin, Huma; Valmoro, Lona J; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Reynoso, Julissa; Kelly, Craig A; Valenzuela, Arturo A; Gonzalez, Juan S
Sent: Sun Jan 17 09:58:11 2010
Subject: FW: URGENT: Friends of Haiti Teleconference

Please see attached additional information and question from Canadian government prior to this afternoon's 1300 phone call. Specifically, the Canadian government is asking whether the Secretary could come to Montreal for the GOC's "prep" donors meeting the evening of 1/23 or morning of 1/24? [Note: Montreal has world's second largest Haitian diaspora, hence location.]

WHA would recommend participation if at all possible. Thank you, Roberta

From: Alex.Bugailiskis[redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 8:41 AM
To: Jacobson, Roberta S
Subject: URGENT: Friends of Haiti Teleconference

Good morning Roberta! Congratulations on a successful visit by the Secretary of State. We are looking forward to this afternoon's teleconference. After opening remarks, Minister Cannon will ask Prime Minister Bellerive to speak and the UN (we may only have DPKO LeRoy on line due to visit of Sec Gen to Haiti). He will then ask FM Amorim and Sec State Clinton to provide their views on the situation and then open the floor to Kouchner and others. Response has been good and most will be represented at FM level (Mexico/Espinosa may still be in flight from Japan, and Argentina and Costa Rica will be Vice-Ministers).

There is as well agreement in principle to begin laying the groundwork for a broader Donors Conference on Reconstruction and our offer to host a preparatory meeting on January 25th has been well received. However, early indications are that the EU has a conflict as they have their General Relations and Foreign Relations meetings scheduled for that day. As the EU would be essential for such a meeting we are scrambling to look for alternative dates. Given the momentum we would rather go earlier than later. Minister Cannon would be available to host this on the weekend of the 23-24th of January (dinner on the 23rd, meeting on the morning of the 24th). However, I believe that Ambassador Jacobsen had indicated that Mrs. Clinton has another engagement on the 23rd. Could you please let me know, before this afternoon's teleconference, if in principle, Mrs.Clinton might be available to attend a meeting in Montreal on the evening of the 23rd or the morning of the 24th?

Many thanks Roberta.

Alex

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 10:16 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: URGENT: Friends of Haiti Teleconference

Also, if they're holding a mtg, I would think they'd want the UN/Bill and he can't go either (it's a CVC thing).

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 10:08:43 2010
Subject: FW: URGENT: Friends of Haiti Teleconference

B5

Copying you as heads up for your 1pm call only –not for decision.

cdm

From: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 10:00 AM
To: Jacobson, Roberta S; S_SpecialAssistants; Valmoro, Lona J; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Reynoso, Julissa; Kelly, Craig A; Valenzuela, Arturo A; Gonzalez, Juan S
Subject: Re: URGENT: Friends of Haiti Teleconference

Cheryl needs to address

---

From: Jacobson, Roberta S
To: S_SpecialAssistants; Abedin, Huma; Valmoro, Lona J; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Reynoso, Julissa; Kelly, Craig A; Valenzuela, Arturo A; Gonzalez, Juan S
Sent: Sun Jan 17 09:58:11 2010
Subject: FW: URGENT: Friends of Haiti Teleconference

Please see attached additional information and question from Canadian government prior to this afternoon's 1300 phone call. Specifically, the Canadian government is asking whether the Secretary could come to Montreal for the GOC's "prep" donors meeting the evening of 1/23 or morning of 1/24? [Note: Montreal has world's second largest Haitian diaspora, hence location.]

WHA would recommend participation if at all possible. Thank you, Roberta

From: Alex.Bugailiskis [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 8:41 AM
To: Jacobson, Roberta S
Subject: URGENT: Friends of Haiti Teleconference

Good morning Roberta! Congratulations on a successful visit by the Secretary of State. We are looking forward to this afternoon's teleconference. After opening remarks, Minister Cannon will ask Prime Minister Bellerive to speak and the UN (we may only have DPKO LeRoy on line due to visit of Sec Gen to Haiti). He will then ask FM Amorim and Sec State Clinton to provide their views on the situation and then open the floor to Kouchner and others. Response has been good and most will be represented at FM level (Mexico/Espinosa may still be in flight from Japan, and Argentina and Costa Rica will be Vice-Ministers).

There is as well agreement in principle to begin laying the groundwork for a broader Donors Conference on Reconstruction and our offer to host a preparatory meeting on January 25th has been well received. However, early indications are that the EU has a conflict as they have their General Relations and Foreign Relations meetings scheduled for that day. As the EU would be essential for such a meeting we are scrambling to look for alternative dates. Given the momentum we would rather go earlier than later. Minister Cannon would be available to host this on the weekend of the 23-24th of January (dinner on the 23rd, meeting on the morning of the 24th). However, I believe that Ambassador Jacobsen had indicated that Mrs. Clinton has another engagement on the 23rd. Could you please let me know, before this afternoon's teleconference, if in principle, Mrs.Clinton might be available to attend a meeting in Montreal on the evening of the 23rd or the morning of the 24th?

Many thanks Roberta.

Alex

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 1:43 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: 1pm call sheet.

He did. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 12:51:07 2010
Subject: Re: 1pm call sheet.

Marina told me she left. I'm faxing to secret service. Dan will make sure u get it

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sun Jan 17 12:48:20 2010
Subject: 1pm call sheet.

This is what you should have just gotten.

B5

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 1:44 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: 1pm call manifest

The Canadians said they would do transcript of call so pls ask WHA to obtain one for me.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 12:52:09 2010
Subject: 1pm call manifest

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 1:48 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: 1pm call manifest

Can you ask WHA to work for times so I can fly up mid morning and return late afternoon. Could I see Frattini next day? What seems best?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 12:52:51 2010
Subject: 1pm call manifest

We now have confirmed participation by Brazil/Amorim; France/Kouchner; Haiti/PM; Chile, Uruguay, Peru at ministerial level; Argentina, Mexico, and Costa Rica at Vice Min level. UN has committed to high-level participation as well, [redacted] B5

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 2:28 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: 1pm call manifest

If he's coming to London, could I see him there? Also what's status of France?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 14:14:07 2010
Subject: Re: 1pm call manifest

Contacting with wha now. Frattini would have to cancel his trip so we would have to re-schedule for another date or just do in context of one of these multilateral meetings. He has a big speech in italy on the 26th.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Jan 17 13:48:18 2010
Subject: Re: 1pm call manifest

Can you ask WHA to work for times so I can fly up mid morning and return late afternoon. Could I see Frattini next day? What seems best?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 12:52:51 2010
Subject: 1pm call manifest

We now have confirmed participation by Brazil/Amorim; France/Kouchner; Haiti/PM; Chile, Uruguay, Peru at ministerial level; Argentina, Mexico, and Costa Rica at Vice Min level. UN has committed to high-level participation as well, B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 2:28 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Can you do update call?

Of course.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H; cheryl.mills <cheryl.mills B6
Sent: Sun Jan 17 14:25:28 2010
Subject: RE: Can you do update call?

Give me a few minutes

From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 2:03 PM
To: 'cheryl.mills
Subject: Can you do update call?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 7:35 AM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Serbian anti-gay riots send wrong message to EU

You should discuss Dan's email w/ S on plane

---

From: Vu, Anny T
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Mon Oct 11 05:47:15 2010
Subject: (AP) Serbian anti-gay riots send wrong message to EU

BELGRADE (AP) – Serbia's failure to prevent anti-gay riots could hurt its bid to join the European Union, a EU official said. Jelko Kacin, in charge of the European Parliament's evaluation reports on Serbia, said in a statement the anti-gay riots "show an elementary lack" of tolerance for minority rights in Serbia and the "inefficiency" of the state in preventing such a trend. "A very bad message was sent from Belgrade" that could hurt its bid to join the EU, the Slovenian official said. The gay pride march, was viewed as a major test for Serbia's government, which has pledged to protect human rights as it seeks EU membership.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 2:36 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: 1pm call manifest

Since Davos is now about Haiti, do I need to go? Bill is going.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 14:32:08 2010
Subject: Re: 1pm call manifest

Ill confirm if he'll be there for london.
As for paris, looks like sarkozy will be there but we won't know for sure till tomorrow. So it would mean sarkozy meeting, speech and kouchner around 6pm when he's back from davos.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Jan 17 14:27:44 2010
Subject: Re: 1pm call manifest

If he's coming to London, could I see him there? Also what's status of France?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 14:14:07 2010
Subject: Re: 1pm call manifest

Contacting with wha now. Frattini would have to cancel his trip so we would have to re-schedule for another date or just do in context of one of these multilateral meetings. He has a big speech in italy on the 26th.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Jan 17 13:48:18 2010
Subject: Re: 1pm call manifest

Can you ask WHA to work for times so I can fly up mid morning and return late afternoon. Could I see Frattini next day? What seems best?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 12:52:51 2010
Subject: 1pm call manifest

We now have confirmed participation by Brazil/Amorim; France/Kouchner; Haiti/PM; Chile, Uruguay, Peru at ministerial level; Argentina, Mexico, and Costa Rica at Vice Min level. UN has committed to high-level participation as well, [redacted] B5

[redacted]

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 7:38 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: H
Subject: Re: (AP) Serbian anti-gay riots send wrong message to EU

Will do.

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Mon Oct 11 07:35:04 2010
Subject: Fw: (AP) Serbian anti-gay riots send wrong message to EU

You should discuss Dan's email w/ S on plane

---

From: Vu, Anny T
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Mon Oct 11 05:47:15 2010
Subject: (AP) Serbian anti-gay riots send wrong message to EU

BELGRADE (AP) – Serbia's failure to prevent anti-gay riots could hurt its bid to join the European Union, a EU official said. Jelko Kacin, in charge of the European Parliament's evaluation reports on Serbia, said in a statement the anti-gay riots "show an elementary lack" of tolerance for minority rights in Serbia and the "inefficiency" of the state in preventing such a trend. "A very bad message was sent from Belgrade" that could hurt its bid to join the EU, the Slovenian official said. The gay pride march, was viewed as a major test for Serbia's government, which has pledged to protect human rights as it seeks EU membership.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 5:29 PM
To: 'lewjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Monday

Let's talk tomorrow. I'll call you in the morning about two subjects: Haiti and Af-Pak. Is there anything else you want to raise?

----- Original Message -----
From: Lew, Jacob J <LewJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 06:08:52 2010
Subject: Re: Monday

Welcome back. I changed my plans and will be back in DC this morning. I have meetings between 9 and noon but will be available any time in the afternoon today or tomorrow and can work around your schedule. After spending several hours on the phone last night I wanted to come back and attend to some of the logistical coordination issues.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'jacobjlew [redacted] <jacobjlew [redacted] ; Lew, Jacob J B6
Sent: Sun Jan 17 00:54:07 2010
Subject: Monday

Jack--

In looking at my schedule, I could talk w you by phone Sunday or Monday, rather than meeting, which would give you back your Monday and service event. I learned the office will be closed Monday, so I will be working from home. Does that make sense?

What times would be good to talk tomorrow or Monday?

Thx, Hillary

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 8:31 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) U.S. commander orders probe into UK Afghan aid worker's death

From: Deyo, Justin A
To: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS
Cc: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-Afghanistan
Sent: Mon Oct 11 08:15:44 2010
Subject: (Reuters) U.S. commander orders probe into UK Afghan aid worker's death

KABUL (Reuters) - The commander of U.S. and NATO forces in Afghanistan, General David Petraeus, has ordered a probe into the death of a British aid worker killed during a rescue bid by U.S. forces, the U.S. military said. "Initial reports indicated the explosion was caused by a detonation triggered by one of the captors who was in close proximity to Linda Norgrove. Subsequent review of surveillance footage and discussions with members of the rescue team do not conclusively determine the cause of her death," it said. The statement comes shortly after British Prime Minister David Cameron told a news conference Norgrove may have been killed by a grenade from foreign forces during the rescue operation.

Justin Deyo
U.S. Department of State
Operations Center (S/ES-O)
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 10:05 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

Did this with Sean. Sid

The Political Scene

Confounding Fathers

The Tea Party's Cold War roots.

by Sean Wilentz October 18, 2010

Glenn Beck's view of American history stems from the paranoid politics of the fifties.

A few months ago, the cable-television and radio host Glenn Beck began his Fox News show with one of his favorite props: a pipe clenched between his teeth. "I've got my pipe," he told his audience, his speech slightly muddled by the stem, "because we're going to speak about schoolish kind of things." The theme of the day was "Restoring History," and Beck, looking professorial in a neat dark blazer and a pink button-down shirt, began the lesson by peering at a stack of history textbooks and pronouncing them full of falsehoods, produced by "malicious progressive intent." Progressives, he explained—liberals, socialists, Communists, the entire spectrum of the left—"knew they had to separate us from our history to be able to separate us from our Constitution and God." For the next hour, Beck earnestly explained some of the history that "is being stolen from us": the depression of 1920, for example, or how conservative economics saved the nation from the "near-depression" of 1946—crises that progressives don't want you to know about. "You've been taught one lie, I think, your whole life," he said.

For the fractious Tea Party movement, Beck—a former drive-time radio jockey, a recovering alcoholic, and a Mormon convert—has emerged as both a unifying figure and an intellectual guide. One opinion poll, released in July by Democracy Corps, showed that he is "the most highly regarded individual among Tea Party supporters," seen not merely as an entertainer, like Rush Limbaugh, but as an "educator." And in the past few months Beck has established his own institute of learning: the online, for-profit Beck University. Enrollees can take courses like Faith 102, which contends with "revisionists and secular progressives" about the separation of church and state; Hope 102, an attack on the activist federal government; and the combined Charity 101/102/103, a highly restrictive interpretation of rights, federalism, and the division of powers.

During the "Restoring History" episode, Beck twice encouraged viewers to join his Web seminars, where they can hear "lessons from the best and brightest historians and scholars that we could find." The B.U. faculty consists of three members, including one bona-fide academic, James R. Stoner, Jr., the chair of the political-science department at Louisiana State University; the other two are the head of a management consulting firm and the founder of WallBuilders, which the Web site calls "a national pro-family organization." Beck himself often acts as a professor, a slightly jocular one, on his Fox News program. Surrounded by charts and figures, he offers explanations of current politics and history lessons about the country's long march to Obama-era totalitarianism. The decline, he says, began with the Progressive era of the early twentieth century, in particular with the Presidency of Woodrow Wilson, when both the Federal Reserve System and the graduated federal income tax came into existence. "Wilson," Beck told his radio audience in August, "just despised what America was."

Beck's claims have found an audience among Tea Party spokesmen and sympathizers. At the movement's Freedom Summit in Washington last September, one activist told a reporter, "The election between Teddy Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson in 1912 was when it started going downhill." And in April an angry member of the Tea Party Patriots group from Cape Fear, North Carolina, claimed on the group's Web site that "the very things you see happening in this country today started with the Wilson Administration."

At a Tax Day rally this past spring, the veteran conservative organizer Richard Viguerie described the Tea Party as "an unfettered new force of the middle class." And, indeed, calling Obama a socialist in the tradition of Woodrow Wilson is audacious enough to seem like the marker of a new movement—or, at least, a new twist in the nation's long history of conspiracy-mongering. In fact, it marks a revival of ideas that circulated on the extremist right half a century ago, especially in the John Birch Society and among its admirers.

Beck's version of American history relies on lessons from his own acknowledged inspiration, the late right-wing writer W. Cleon Skousen, and also restates charges made by the Birch Society's founder, Robert Welch. The political universe is, of course, very different today from what it was during the Cold War. Yet the Birchers' politics and their view of American history—which focussed more on totalitarian threats at home than on those posed by the Soviet Union and Communist China—has proved remarkably persistent. The pressing historical question is how extremist ideas held at bay for decades inside the Republican Party have exploded anew—and why, this time, Party leaders have done virtually nothing to challenge those ideas, and a great deal to abet them.

The early nineteen-sixties were a turbulent time in American politics, for the right wing in particular. In the South, racist violence against civil-rights workers was constant, deepening sectional splits in the Democratic Party that would in time deliver the once solidly Democratic South to the Republicans. Southern elected officials, in support of what they called "massive resistance" to civil-rights laws and judicial rulings, resurrected the ideas of nullification and interposition, which claimed that individual states could void federal laws within their own borders. Others focussed on what they considered a fearsome Communist menace inside the United States. General Edwin A. Walker caused an enormous stir when he resigned from the Army in 1961, after President John F. Kennedy's Pentagon reprimanded him for spreading right-wing propaganda among his troops and accusing prominent American officials of Communist sympathies. Senator Strom Thurmond, the Dixiecrat from South Carolina, spoke for many on the far right when he declared that various modestly liberal domestic programs "fall clearly within the category of socialism."

The John Birch Society was one of the decade's most controversial right-wing organizations. Founded in 1958 by Robert Welch, a candy manufacturer from Massachusetts, the society took its name from a Baptist missionary and military-intelligence officer killed by Communist Chinese forces in 1945, whom Welch called the first American casualty of the Cold War. The group was founded at a propitious time. After Senator Joseph McCarthy's fall, in 1954, many of McCarthy's followers felt bereft of a voice, and Welch seemed to speak for them; by the mid-sixties, his society's membership was estimated to be as high as a hundred thousand. Welch, exploiting fears of what McCarthy had called an "immense" domestic conspiracy, declared that the federal government had already fallen into the Communists' clutches. In a tract titled "The Politician," he attacked President Dwight D. Eisenhower as "a dedicated, conscious agent of the Communist conspiracy" who had been serving the plot "all of his adult life." Late in 1961, after the disastrous Bay of Pigs invasion, he accused the Kennedy Administration of "helping the Communists everywhere in the world while pretending to do the opposite."

Wherever he looked, Welch saw Communist forces manipulating American economic and foreign policy on behalf of totalitarianism. But within the United States, he believed, the subversion had actually begun years before the Bolshevik Revolution. Conflating modern liberalism and totalitarianism, Welch described government as "always and inevitably an enemy of individual freedom." Consequently, he charged, the Progressive era, which expanded the federal government's role in curbing social and economic ills, was a dire period in our history, and Woodrow Wilson "more than any other one man started this nation on its present road to totalitarianism."

In the nineteen-sixties, Welch became convinced that even the Communist movement was but "a tool of the total conspiracy." This master conspiracy, he said, had forerunners in ancient Sparta, and sprang fully to life in the eighteenth century, in the "uniformly Satanic creed and program" of the Bavarian Illuminati. Run by those he called "the Insiders," the conspiracy resided chiefly in international families of financiers, such as the Rothschilds and the Rockefellers, government agencies like the Federal Reserve System and the Internal Revenue Service, and nongovernmental organizations like the Bilderberg Group, the Council on Foreign Relations, and the Trilateral Commission. Since the early twentieth century, they had done a good deal of their evil work under the guise of humanitarian uplift. "One broad avenue down which these conspiratorial forces advance was known as progressive legislation," Welch declared in 1966. "The very same collectivist theories and demagogic pretenses which had destroyed earlier civilizations were now paraded forth in the disguise of new and modern concepts."

In the worst case, Welch believed, military action might be necessary to dislodge the totalitarians. But for the moment a nonviolent political revolution would suffice. Accordingly, he designed the Birch Society roughly, if not explicitly, on the Marxist-Leninist model of a vanguard revolutionary party: a series of small cells that would work in secret to agitate the populace and elect right-thinking candidates to office. "It isn't numbers we have to worry about," Welch wrote, "but the courage on the part of our followers to stick their necks out and play rough—the same as the Communists do."

The "Founder" himself would dictate the society's policies, advised by a council of about two dozen businessmen and professionals, and the local cells would be overseen by unyielding commanders. "It is the leadership that is most demanding, most exacting of its followers," Welch observed, "that achieves really dedicated support." Welch's group became synonymous with right-wing extremism, earning satirical blasts from critics ranging from the cartoonist Walt Kelly to the musicians Bob Dylan and Dizzy Gillespie. The trumpeter, whose actual name was John Birks Gillespie, made a humorous run for the Presidency in 1964, organizing John Birks Societies in twenty-five states.

Still, the most outlandish of the era's right-wing anti-Communists was not Welch but Willard Cleon Skousen. A transplanted Canadian who served as a Mormon missionary in his teens, Skousen was considered so radical in the early nineteen-sixties that even J. Edgar Hoover's F.B.I. watched him closely; one 1962 memo in his extensive F.B.I. file noted that "during the past year or so, Skousen has affiliated himself with the extreme right-wing 'professional communists' who are promoting their own anticommunism for obvious financial purposes." Skousen was himself employed by the F.B.I., from 1935 until 1951, much of that time as a special agent working chiefly in administration. These desk jobs, he claimed implausibly, gave him access to confidential domestic intelligence about Communism. Skousen also maintained that he had served as Hoover's administrative assistant; Hoover informed inquirers that there was no such position.

Skousen taught for years in the speech and religion departments at Brigham Young University, interrupted by a stint, from 1956 to 1960, as the police chief of Salt Lake City. His time in office was contentious, and after he raided a friendly card game attended by the city's right-wing mayor, J. Bracken Lee, he was promptly fired. Lee called Skousen "a master of half truths" and said that he ran the police department "like a Gestapo"; Skousen's supporters placed burning crosses on the Mayor's lawn.

After losing his police job, Skousen founded a group called the All-American Society, which Time described in 1961 as an exemplar of the far-right "ultras." Although he did not join the Birch Society, Skousen worked with its American Opinion Speakers' Bureau, and, in 1963, wrote a rousing tract titled "The Communist Attack on the John Birch Society," which condemned the society's critics for "promoting the official Communist Party line." (This was a tic of Skousen's; he later defended the Mormon policy of denying the priesthood to blacks with a pamphlet called "The Communist Attack on the Mormons.")

All along, Skousen's evolving thoughts ran in tandem with Welch's. In "The Naked Communist," a lengthy primer published in 1958, he enlivened a survey of the worldwide leftist threat with outlandish claims, writing that F.D.R.'s adviser Harry Hopkins had treasonously delivered to the Soviets a large supply of uranium, and that the Russians built the first Sputnik with plans stolen from the United States. A year before Richard Condon's novel "The Manchurian Candidate" appeared, Skousen announced that the Communists were creating "a regimented breed of Pavlovian men whose minds could be triggered into immediate action by signals from their masters." A later book, "The Naked Capitalist," decried the Ivy League Establishment, who, through the Federal Reserve, the Council on Foreign Relations, and the Rockefeller Foundation, formed "the world's secret power structure." The conspiracy had begun, Skousen wrote, when reformers like the wealthy banker Edward M. (Colonel) House, a close adviser to President Woodrow Wilson, helped put into place the Federal Reserve and the graduated income tax.

In 1971, Skousen organized another group, the Freemen Institute, which he later renamed the National Center for Constitutional Studies. According to an article published in the Review of Religious Research, the center's targets included "the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Federal Communication Commission's fairness doctrine in editorial broadcasting, the federal government's change of the gold standard in currency, all subsidies to farmers, all federal aid to education, all federal social welfare, foreign aid, social security, elimination of public school prayer and Bible reading, and (that familiar right-wing nemesis) the United Nations."

Skousen's pronouncements made him a pariah among most conservative activists, including some on the right-wing fringe. In 1962, the ultraconservative American Security Council threw him out, because members felt that he had "gone off the deep end." In 1971, a review in the Mormon journal Dialogue accused Skousen of "inventing fantastic ideas and making inferences that go far beyond the bounds of honest commentary," and advancing doctrines that came "perilously close" to Nazism. And in 1979, after Skousen called President Jimmy Carter a puppet of the Council on Foreign Relations and the Rockefeller family, the president of the Mormon church issued a national order banning announcements about his organizations.

Skousen was undeterred. In 1981, he produced "The 5,000 Year Leap," a treatise that assembles selective quotations and groundless assertions to claim that the U.S. Constitution is rooted not in the Enlightenment but in the Bible, and that the framers believed in minimal central government. Either proposition would have astounded James Madison, often described as the guiding spirit behind the Constitution, who rejected state-established religions and, like Alexander Hamilton, proposed a central government so strong that it could veto state laws. "The 5,000 Year Leap" is not a fervid book. Instead, it is calmly, ingratiatingly misleading. Skousen quotes various eighteenth-century patriots on the evils of what Samuel Adams, in 1768, called "the Utopian schemes of leveling," which Skousen equates with redistribution of wealth. But he does not mention the Founders' endorsement of taxing the rich to support the general welfare. Thomas Jefferson, for example, wrote approvingly in 1811 of having federal taxes (then limited to tariffs) fall solely on the wealthy, which meant that "the farmer will see his government supported, his children educated, and the face of his country made a paradise by the contributions of the rich alone, without his being called on to spend a cent from his earnings."

Skousen also challenges the separation of church and state, asserting that "the Founders were not indulging in any idle gesture when they adopted the motto 'In God We Trust.' " In reality, the motto that came out of the Constitutional Convention was "E Pluribus Unum": out of many, one. "In God We Trust" came much later; its use on coins was first permitted in 1864, and only in 1955, at the height of the Cold War, did Congress mandate that it appear on all currency. The following year, President Eisenhower—who Welch charged was a Communist agent—approved "In God We Trust" as the national motto.

In 1982, Skousen published a follow-up work, an ancestor-worshipping history text titled "The Making of America," and prepared a study guide for nationwide seminars based on its contents. As Alexander Zaitchik reports in his informative study of Beck, "Common Nonsense," the new book became an object of controversy in 1987, after the California Bicentennial Commission sold it as part of a fund-raising drive. Among its offenses was an account of slavery drawn from long-disgraced work by the historian Fred A. Shannon, which characterized slave children as "pickaninnies" and suggested that the worst victims of slavery were the slaveholders themselves. The constitutional scholar Jack Rakove, of Stanford, inspected Skousen's book and seminars and pronounced them "a joke that no self-respecting scholar would think is worth a warm pitcher of spit."

By the time Skousen died, in 2006, he was little remembered outside the ranks of the furthest-right Mormons. Then, in 2009, Glenn Beck began touting his work: "The Naked Communist," "The Naked Capitalist," and, especially, "The 5,000 Year Leap," which he called "essential to understanding why our Founders built this Republic the way they did." After Beck put the book in the first spot on his required-reading list—and wrote an enthusiastic new introduction for its reissue—it shot to the top of the Amazon best-seller list. In the first half of 2009, it sold more than two hundred and fifty thousand copies. Local branches of the Tea Party Patriots, the United American Tea Party, and other groups across the country have since organized study groups around it. "It is time we learn and follow the FREEDOM principles of our Founding Fathers," a United American Tea Party video declares, referring to the principles expounded by Skousen's book. If Beck is the movement's teacher, "The 5,000 Year Leap" has become its primer, with "The Making of America" as a kind of 102-level text.

The popularity of Beck's broadcasts, which now reach two million viewers each day, has brought neo-Birchite ideas to an audience beyond any that Welch or Skousen might have dreamed of. Several times a week, Beck informs his audience that socialists (whom he also sometimes calls Fascists or Communists) led by Obama have seized power, and that patriotic Americans must take their country back. His TV show for some time featured "Comrade Updates," in which Beck described perfidy while the Soviet anthem played in the background. He attacks all the familiar bogeymen: the Federal Reserve System (which he asserts is a private conglomerate, unaccountable to the public); the Council on Foreign Relations (born of a "progressive idea" to manipulate the media in order to "let the masses know what should be done"); and a historical procession of evildoers, including Skousen's old target Colonel House and Welch's old target Woodrow Wilson. His sources on these matters, quite apart from Skousen's books, can be unreliable. On September 22nd, amid a diatribe about House, Beck cited a passage from "Secrets of the Federal Reserve," by Eustace Mullins. The book, commissioned in 1948 by Ezra Pound, is a startlingly anti-Semitic fantasy of how a Jewish-led conspiracy of all-powerful bankers established the Federal Reserve in service of their plot to dominate the world.

Part of Beck's allure is the promise that he will reveal secret information. In one segment last year, he produced a drawing of fasces—which he described, anachronistically, as "the Roman symbol of Fascism"—and then a picture of an old Mercury dime, with fasces on the reverse side. "Who brought this dime in? It happened in 1916—Woodrow Wilson was the President," he said. "We've been on the road to Fascism for a while." Benito Mussolini, of course, didn't adopt the ancient symbol of authority as the Fascist emblem until the nineteen-twenties; the designer of the coin, the sculptor Adolph A. Weinman, intended it to signify the nation's military preparedness, and paired it with an olive branch to illustrate the desire for peace.

Beck's readings of Progressive-era politics are nearly as bizarre. Whatever can be said about Theodore Roosevelt, he was not a crypto-radical. It was Roosevelt who coined the term "lunatic fringe" to describe the extreme leftists of his day, and his concept of New Nationalism—in which an activist government built a vibrant capitalism, partly by regulating big business—looked back to Alexander Hamilton, not Karl Marx. Nor was Wilson a Bolshevik; in fact, in 1917 he sent American troops to Russia to support the anti-Bolshevik White Army. At home, his reforms sought to break up monopolies in order to restore competition among small companies. "If America is not to have free enterprise," Wilson declared, "then she can have no freedom of any sort whatever."

In 2007, Beck, then the host of "Glenn Beck," on CNN's Headline News, brought to his show a John Birch Society spokesman named Sam Antonio, who warned of a government plot to abolish U.S. borders with Mexico and Canada, "and eventually all throughout the Americas." Beck told Antonio, "When I was growing up, the John Birch Society—I thought they were a bunch of nuts." But now, he said, "you guys are starting to make more and more sense to me." His guest beamed. "Yes, we at the John Birch Society are not nuts," Antonio said. "We are just exposing the truth that's been out there for many, many years." Since then, the Birch Society's Web site has run clips from Beck's Fox broadcasts, proudly pointing out similarities with their own ideas. Last June, an essay on the site described a presentation by Beck on Communism in America as "the ultimate in complete agreement between the Beck and JBS presentations of American history."

Beck has also praised Ezra Taft Benson, one of Skousen's close associates. Benson, the Secretary of Agriculture under President Eisenhower and the thirteenth president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, gained notoriety for a speech in 1966 in which he denounced Democratic officeholders and intellectuals (including the historian Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr.) as socialists and Communist sympathizers, warned that "the Constitution will be endangered and hang, as it were, by a single thread," and praised the John Birch Society as "the most effective non-church organization in our fight against creeping socialism and Godless Communism." Last June, Beck aired a clip from another Benson speech, intoning, "Ezra Taft Benson warned about what was coming." The Birch Society's Web site subsequently praised Beck for "getting progressively (sorry for the bad word choice) closer to presenting American history in the way that The John Birch Society has been doing it for over 50 years."

Beck is no more the sole representative of today's multifaceted Tea Party than Welch or Skousen was of the nineteen-sixties far right; he recently told the Times, a bit disingenuously, that he was "not involved with the Tea Party." Why, then, have the politics of Skousen, Benson, and the John Birch Society had such a resurgence among conservative Republicans—not just through Beck but through Tea Party heroes like the Nevada Republican Senate candidate Sharron Angle? (Last month, Angle gave a warm address to a "freedom conference" in Salt Lake City, co-sponsored by the John Birch Society and Skousen's old group, the National Center for Constitutional Studies, praising her audience as "mainstream America" and patriots who had "heard the call.") The columnist Frank Rich, among others, has suggested that the election of a black President sowed "fears of disenfranchisement among a dwindling and threatened minority in the country." There are signs that this is so: Republicans' singling out of Thurgood Marshall as an "activist Justice" during Elena Kagan's Supreme Court confirmation hearings, the warnings on Fox News about the terrible dangers posed by the minuscule New Black Panther Party. But "socialist" is not a racial slur. Jim Crow was not built out of fears of the Federal Reserve and the I.R.S. The Tea Party's fulminations against cap-and-trade, federal-government bailouts, and big government generally play on very old themes that have nothing to do with the color of President Obama's skin.

The current right-wing resurgence has more to do with the inner dynamics of American conservatism in the past half century. In the nineteen-fifties and nineteen-sixties, the far right was condemned by liberals, as might be expected; in November, 1961, President Kennedy devoted part of a speech in Los Angeles to denouncing those "discordant voices of extremism" that "equate the Democratic Party with the welfare state, the welfare state with socialism, and socialism with Communism." But the Bircher right also provoked deep anxiety among conservatives, who feared being perceived as paranoids and conspiracy-mongers.

The leading intellectual spokesman and organizer of the anti-Bircher conservatives was William F. Buckley, Jr., the editor of National Review. Buckley was by no means moderate in his conservatism. He was a lifelong defender of Joseph McCarthy and a foe of New Deal liberalism. But he drew the line at claiming that the course of American government was set by a socialist conspiracy, and he feared that the ravings of the extreme right would cost more balanced, practical conservatives their chance at national power. "By 1961," his biographer John B. Judis writes, "Buckley was beginning to worry that with the John Birch Society growing so rapidly, the right-wing upsurge in the country would take an ugly, even Fascist turn rather than leading toward the kind of conservatism National Review had promoted." In the next two decades, with Buckley's support and counsel, Richard Nixon and Ronald Reagan completed a conservative revolution that succeeded by keeping extremist elements far from the centers of power.

As confidant and adviser to leading conservative politicians, Buckley had far more political influence than might be expected from the editor of a weekly journal. Yet in the early nineteen-sixties he found fighting the Birchers and their fellow-travellers extremely difficult. Even though some of Buckley's colleagues at National Review thought that the Birch Society went too far, they would not attack the society publicly, for fear of alienating both the Birchers and the conservatives who sympathized with their views. When Buckley wrote an editorial in 1962 that accused Welch of "distorting reality" and failing to make "the crucial moral and political distinction" between Communists and liberals, the magazine immediately lost subscriptions and financial support.

By 1960, Senator Barry Goldwater, of Arizona, was emerging as the great political hope of conservative Republicans, and he consulted closely with Buckley. At a meeting at the Breakers hotel, in Palm Beach, in January, 1962, Buckley urged Goldwater to repudiate the Birch Society. Goldwater demurred; though he conceded that some embarrassing "kooks" lurked among the Birchers, he insisted to Buckley that there were also some "nice guys," and that it would be injudicious to attack the group in public. The Birchers' support helped gain Goldwater the Republican Presidential nomination in 1964, and he winked at them in his acceptance speech with his famous line: "Extremism in the defense of liberty is no vice. . . . Moderation in the pursuit of justice is no virtue."

In the general election, though, Goldwater suffered a crushing loss to Lyndon Johnson, partly because Democrats succeeded in making him look like a captive of the loony right. (To the Goldwater slogan "In Your Heart, You Know He's Right," the Democrats shot back, "In Your Guts, You Know He's Nuts.") Buckley's fears had been confirmed. But he was undeterred in his efforts to build a respectable and viable conservative movement. In 1967, he favored Richard Nixon among a field of Republican aspirants. He liked Ronald Reagan's politics, but considered Reagan, who had only recently been elected the governor of California, too new to national politics. George Romney, the governor of Michigan, a wishy-washy moderate, was obviously unsuitable, to say nothing of the Republican archliberal Nelson Rockefeller, of New York. Nixon was a hard-nosed Republican with strong conservative views, especially on Communism and the Cold War; he had established himself as a Communist-hunter in the nineteen-forties by pressing the charge that Alger Hiss, a former official at the State Department, had spied for the Soviets. And, promisingly, Nixon was the front-runner. "It seems to me that we ought to have a real chance of winning this year," Buckley wrote to Goldwater around the time of the Republican National Convention. He served the campaign as an adviser, and by aiding his friend Frank Shakespeare, who had taken charge of Nixon's media operations.

But Buckley's candidate had a reputation for shiftiness that made him unpopular across the political spectrum. Some of the editors of National Review, recalling that Nixon had cut a deal with Rockefeller in order to secure the G.O.P. nomination in 1960, didn't sufficiently trust him. And the Birch Society had nothing but contempt for the figure whom Welch had called one of "the slipperiest politicians that ever showed up on the American scene." As President, in 1969, Nixon began to open diplomatic relations with Communist China, and the right wing placed him on its list of perfidious appeasers. When he visited Beijing in 1972, even Buckley was deeply offended. But when the general election took place later that year, with the antiwar Democratic candidate, George McGovern, voicing the country's anxieties over Vietnam, Buckley and the mainstream of what he called "responsible conservatism" returned to Nixon. The purist conservatives were left to back the third-party candidacy of John Schmitz, a Republican congressman and a member of the John Birch Society.

Nixon won in a landslide, and the next year he appointed Buckley the American delegate to the United Nations. The conservative pragmatists had found the way to real power. And, despite the embarrassment of Watergate, in Nixon's second term, their strategy proved effective over time. Nixon's campaign against McGovern sharpened the Democrats' internal divisions over civil rights and Vietnam, and, Buckley wrote, revealed that the Democrats had "an indifference toward national independence and a hostility toward national freedom." Meanwhile, the Buckley mainstream, having read the Birchers out of the conservative movement, established itself as a permanent and growing force in the Republican Party and in national politics.

In 1976, Buckley and National Review supported Ronald Reagan's primary challenge to Nixon's successor, Gerald Ford. After two terms as governor, Reagan had matured into what Buckley considered a nearly ideal conservative politician: a shrewd leader as well as a man of principle. Reagan nearly succeeded in wresting the nomination from Ford, demonstrating how formidable a national figure he had become. The Bircher right had flourished in his political bastion of Orange County, and Reagan was adept at winning extremists' allegiance while he pursued realistic strategies. His pragmatic side showed immediately after he finally secured the Republican nomination in 1980, when he chose the relatively moderate George H. W. Bush, his bitter foe during the primaries, as his running mate. Though the decision dismayed right-wing ideologues, it had two practical benefits: it instantly healed the divisions between Republican moderates and conservatives, and it helped dampen charges from the Democrats that Reagan was a reckless right-winger. Nobody was more pleased by Bush's selection than his fellow Skull and Bones man William F. Buckley, who understood the political logic as clearly as Reagan had.

As President, Reagan flattered the extremists—he even delivered some admiring words about Skousen's Freemen Institute—but he saved his political capital for his real goals: undoing the fiscal underpinnings of New Deal-style government, and redirecting U.S. foreign policy by battling the Soviet Union and its proxies around the world. He appointed moderates to positions of importance, as when he made James Baker III, Bush's close associate, his first chief of staff, rather than the far more ideological Edwin Meese III, his former chief of staff from California. (As a top policy adviser, Meese helped Reagan stack the federal bench with conservatives, but he was otherwise eclipsed by Baker and Baker's deputy, the pragmatic Reaganite Michael Deaver, and his crusade, as Attorney General, to roll back civil-rights legislation largely failed.) When zealots in the Administration were exposed, as in the Iran-Contra scandal, Reagan skillfully evaded responsibility and replaced them with more centrist Republicans. And, when he recognized in Mikhail Gorbachev a Soviet leader with whom he could undertake genuine efforts to reduce the nuclear threat, Reagan pushed forward, ignoring the complaints that he had become, in the hard-liner Howard Phillips's phrase, "a useful idiot for Soviet propaganda."

Whatever misgivings may have arisen about him on the right, Reagan achieved a dramatic conservative overhaul of the federal tax code, a profound reconfiguring of the judiciary, and a near-victory for the West in the Cold War. From the standpoint of the mainstream right, the only problem with his legacy was that no other Republican could come close to matching his public appeal and political savvy. For the party of Reagan, his departure was the beginning of a long decline, and it is the absence of a similarly totemic figure, during the past twenty years, that has allowed the current resurgence of extremism. George H. W. Bush repelled right-wingers with his moderate tendencies—not least when, in the face of fiscal calamity, he broke his campaign pledge not to raise taxes. Bill Clinton inspired them to an almost ecstatic series of attacks, and though there remained enough of an older conservative establishment, personified by Senator Bob Dole, to check some of the wildest charges, the new Republican House majority after 1994, pushed by such ideologues as Tom DeLay and Dick Armey, had little interest in maintaining the center. They harassed Clinton, forcing an impeachment even though polls showed that more than sixty per cent of the American people disapproved. George W. Bush seemed at first to have a bit of Reagan's conservative charisma, but the right wing turned against him for failing to win the war in Iraq, for his moderate position on immigration, and for spending hundreds of millions of federal dollars to combat the financial collapse in 2008. When William F. Buckley died, during the 2008 primary season, it seemed to symbolize the end of a conservative era. David Klinghoffer, a former literary editor at National Review, lamented that "urbane visionaries and builders of institutions" such as Buckley have been replaced by media figures "who make their money by stirring fears and resentments." Conservatism, Klinghoffer added, "has undergone a shift toward demagoguery and hucksterism," and is now ruled by those he called "the crazy-cons."

Some Republicans have tried to extend the Buckley tradition, but to little effect. The commentator David Frum, a former speechwriter for George W. Bush, lost his job at the American Enterprise Institute after he complained about the Republicans' obstruction of health-care reform and called the right-wing surge a threat to conservatism. In June, the congressman Bob Inglis, of South Carolina, a tough conservative who nonetheless backed Bush's financial bailout, lost a vicious primary fight with a right-wing insurgent named Trey Gowdy. To his amazement, Inglis was confronted on the campaign trail by voters who were convinced that numbers on their Social Security cards indicated that a secret bank had bought them at birth. "And then, of course," he recalls, "it turned into something about the Federal Reserve and the Bilderbergers and all that stuff." Not even Karl Rove can afford open dissent with the Tea Partiers. Appearing on Fox News the night of the recent primaries, he described the Tea Party-backed Senate candidate in Delaware, Christine O'Donnell, as probably unelectable and said that some of her statements were "nutty." Instantly, criticism came from Sarah Palin, Rush Limbaugh, and other right-wing Republicans. Within days, he was back on Fox, proclaiming himself "a huge Tea Party fan," endorsing O'Donnell, and affirming that the National Republican Senatorial Committee would give her its full backing.

So far, Rove, an unlikely dissident, is the only prominent Republican leader to so much as gesture at stepping forward, as Buckley and his allies did. Even strong conservatives like Inglis have been pushed aside, as have such former G.O.P. stalwarts as Charlie Crist, in Florida, and Mike Castle, in Delaware, both beaten in the primaries by Tea Party candidates; Crist is now running a long-shot campaign as an Independent. Desperate for gains in the midterm elections, the Republicans are neglecting the struggle it took to make politics safe for Reagan.

Fifty years ago, President Kennedy deplored the far right's "counsels of fear and suspicion." Today, Obama's White House is still struggling to make sense of its enemies. In the absence of forthright leadership, on both the right and the left, the job of standing up to extremists appears to have been left to the electorate. Candidates like O'Donnell may prove too eccentric to prevail, or voters may simply become disillusioned by politicians who campaign on their hatred of government. After the election, mainstream conservatives may well engage in what Richard Viguerie has forecast as "a massive, almost historic battle for the heart and soul of the Republican Party." (Already, Rove and some leading Bush political operatives, including the former Republican National Committee chairman Ed Gillespie, have been quietly supplanting the battered G.O.P. establishment in the effort to raise funds for this year's candidates.) But, according to a recent poll, more than seventy per cent of Republicans support the Tea Party, and it seems almost certain that a Republican Party that has unstintingly appeased the far right will enjoy a strong and perhaps smashing victory in the coming midterm elections.

In 1906, early in the Progressive era, the humorist Finley Peter Dunne's fictional barroom sage, Mr. Dooley, put the social and political tumult of the day into perspective. "Th' noise ye hear is not th' first gun iv a revolution," Dooley remarked. "It's on'y th' people iv th' United States batin' a carpet." A century from now, or even a year from now, Americans may say the same about the Tea Party. For the moment, though, it appears that the extreme right wing is on the verge of securing a degree of power over Congress and the Republican Party that is unprecedented in modern American history. For defenders of national cohesion and tempered adversity in our politics, it is an alarming state of affairs. ♦

Read more http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/10/18/101018fa_fact_wilentz?printable=true#ixzz123hWc5bz

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop [redacted] <sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
Sent: Sun, Oct 10, 2010 8:24 pm
Subject: Re: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

I gave to Bill who is trying to influence strategy.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] <sbwhoeop [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Fri Oct 08 16:08:27 2010
Subject: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

The Huffington Post <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/> <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/>

Drew Westen <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/drew-westen>

Psychologist and neuroscientist; Emory University Professor
Posted: October 8, 2010 09:23 AM

Bringing Up Boehner <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/drew-westen/post_1034_b_755497.html>

According to news reports, today Republican minority leader and Coppertone model John Boehner will give his "closing argument" to the American people on why they should throw out the Democrats and kill the Obama-Pelosi-Reid "job-killing agenda." He will be returning to his working class roots, speaking at a piping manufacturing plant, an unusual venue these days for a man who is seen much more frequently at gatherings of Wall Street executives with open checkbooks and the males-only country club where he works on his tan when not making the rounds at other clubs with industry lobbyists.

Either the Speaker-to-be is following the model of Michael Steele and free-lancing, or Karl Rove and the Republicans believe it is safe or even advantageous to bring him out in public after the White House made an effort to put Boehner's face on what a Republican majority might look like, with the president invoking his name eight times in one speech.

I have to admit that at the time I was agnostic as to whether it made sense to try to brand him at this late date, as Boehner has minimal name recognition among voters. But the White House was no doubt responding to three realities. First, Boehner is an unknown to most Americans, which means that, unlike most Republicans in the news, he has not been well branded by the GOP -- which means for once Democrats might actually brand someone or something first rather than playing catch-up. Second, Boehner would indeed be the highest-ranking Republican were the GOP to assume control over the House (other than of course Karl Rove, who is now directing traffic on the right side of the street in Washington again). And third, a concrete face is always better than an abstraction when telling a story, and other than perhaps Sarah Palin, who Republicans could alternately accept and decline as the leader of their party, Boehner's tanned visage and history as errand-boy for virtually every major corporate special interest in his two decades in Washington (including his stint as the Marlboro Man, handing out tobacco lobby campaign checks to his fellow Republicans on the floor of the House) made him a potential counter-villain to the Republican's bogeywoman, Nancy Pelosi.

I remained agnostic until this week, when colleagues at Media Matters Action Network and I conducted a national messaging survey <http://cloudfront.mediamattersaction.org/static/images/pdf/BrandingBoehner.pdf> with 1,000 registered voters, selected to match the demographics of the voting and likely voting populations. The goal was to see how effectively we could speak with voters about Boehner as not only the symbol and standard-bearer for the GOP but also the water-boy for corporate America. (The results were surprisingly similar whether we looked at registered voters or likely voters, although as others have described, precisely how to determine who is a "likely voter" in this election is as much art as science, and the point of good messaging at this point is actually to change the dynamics of likely voting, not just to reflect them.)

As detailed in a memo published in Politico, what we found was clear: Boehner is a target well worth defining, who readily stands for precisely what Americans perceive to be the reasons they would have to hold their noses to vote for Congressional Republicans (perhaps the only group left who poll worse than Congressional Democrats with swing voters). We tested both paragraph-length narratives and single-sentence language designed to capture the essence of those narratives, and in each case, we tested them against the toughest opposition language we could test them against: the words of Boehner, Cantor, Limbaugh and others combined in defining the "Obama-Pelosi-Reid" agenda.

What we found, in brief, is that we could beat a tough GOP narrative about the "job-killing" socialists in the White House and Congress by 15 to 20 points with two narratives starring Boehner in the leading role (with best supporting bad actor going in one of the narratives to Karl Rove and his corporate allies), and we could win with over 15 different sentence-long descriptions of "what's the matter with Boehner" with margins ranging from 10 to 60 points against a tough conservative attack on the Obama-Pelosi-Reid axis of conservative evil.

The narratives that most moved likely voters -- including swing voters, who preferred them by double-digits over tough Republican rhetoric -- made clear whose voices Boehner would be speaking for as Speaker (e.g., the Wall Street executives he convened to try to block Wall Street reform). They harnessed the same populist anger at the hijacking of Washington by corporate special interests that has enlivened the tea partiers and is palpable across the political spectrum, and they focused on the extremism of the party Boehner would Speak for. A narrative that brought Karl Rove into the picture was slightly more polarizing with swing voters but slightly more powerful with likely Democratic voters.

In some ways what was most surprising was the success of the single-line statements of what we need in a Speaker and who John Boehner really speaks for (although these single-line statements came after the narratives, and likely reflect the power of branding, even over the course of a brief online encounter with voters). They ranged from relatively lofty and aspirational (e.g., "We need a Speaker who is also a listener, who can hear the voices of ordinary Americans" -- a theme colleagues and I found highly resonant across the political spectrum in message testing on the role of money in politics) -- to the harder-edged (e.g., "The Speaker of the House is a heartbeat away from the Presidency. Unfortunately, we know where John Boehner's heart is, and it isn't with the middle class," or "John Boehner understands deficits. He's spent nearly 20 years in Washington creating them.")

If there's a message in this message research, it is at once short-term and long-term. In the short run, if Democrats want to hang onto their seats in November, they would do well to define this election in terms of the middle class and small business versus the billionaires and big corporations that are hijacking our democracy; to use Boehner as a poster child for the party whose primary commitment is to the latter and whose tan is a testament to that commitment; and to avoid giving voters reason to regret their vote if they give it to Democrats again this time, by supporting the things they say they stand for and avoiding that golden mean between the public interest and the special interests that finance campaigns on both sides of the aisle.

In the longer run, branding matters. One of the biggest strategic and messaging mistakes of the last two years was the failure of Democrats to brand their opponents while their opponents were busy branding them -- and in particular the failure to brand the Bush Recession as the natural consequence of failed Republican economic principles. Two years ago, that was a virtually uncontested political proposition, as the voters made clear in handing Democrats the White House and supermajorities in both the House and Senate. Today, the public is split down the middle as to who caused the recession.

Reality doesn't brand itself. Hopefully it won't take a debacle in November and another 10 million jobs lost for reality to unveil itself again for a brief political moment and for progressives to have a second bite at the apple.

<http://getglue.com/?s=w>

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 10:14 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

This is the distilled, pure and utterly conventional wisdom of much of the DC political chattering class at this moment. The first two paragraphs are the most important, completely accurate in assessment, the rest twaddle:

[redacted]
Monday, Oct. 11, 2010

Why Obama Is Losing the Political War

By Mark Halperin
Barack Obama is being politically crushed in a vise. From above, by elite opinion about his competence. From below, by mass anger and anxiety over unemployment. And it is too late for him to do anything about this predicament until after November's elections.
With the exception of core Obama Administration loyalists, most politically engaged elites have reached the same conclusions: the White House is in over its head, isolated, insular, arrogant and clueless about how to get along with or persuade members of Congress, the media, the business community or working-class voters. This view is held by Fox News pundits, executives and anchors at the major old-media outlets, reporters who cover the White House, Democratic and Republican congressional leaders and governors, many Democratic business people and lawyers who raised big money for Obama in 2008, and even some members of the Administration just beyond the inner circle. (See Obama's troubled first year, issue by issue.)
On Friday, after the release of the latest bleak unemployment data — the last major jobs figures before the midterms — Obama said, "Putting the American people back to work, expanding opportunity, rebuilding the economic security of the middle class is the moral and national challenge of our time." But elites feel the President has failed to meet that challenge and are convinced he will be unable to do so in the remainder of his term. Moreover, there is a growing perception that Obama's decisions are causing harm — that businesses are being hurt by the Administration's legislation and that economic recovery is stalling because of the uncertainty surrounding energy policy, health care, deficits, housing, immigration and spending.
And that sentiment is spreading. Many members of the general public appear deeply skeptical of Obama's capacity to turn things around, especially, but not exclusively, those inclined to dislike him — Tea Partyers and John McCain voters, but also tens of millions of middle-class Americans, including quite a few who turned out for Obama in 2008. (See how some Americans are facing the prospect of long-term unemployment.)
The misery afflicting the country has no political affiliation. Listen to the voices from this striking TV ad for Rob Portman, the Republican former Congressman and Bush budget director who is running for Senate from Ohio. One woman at a Dayton career fair says starkly, "There are no jobs." A man announces plaintively and with obvious frustration, "I've been looking for a job now for 13 months." Events like this job fair are becoming the grim iconic gatherings of our time, the breadlines for the Obama years.
Most of Obama's private (and sometimes public) rebuttals to the voices slamming him on all sides are justified or spot on. He did inherit a lot of problems from the Bush Administration. He did act quickly in the initial weeks of his Administration to stave off a worldwide depression. His efforts at job creation have been obstructed by Republicans (even the proposals based on policies supported by the GOP in the past). His opponents haven't put forth specifics of their own, nor offered genuine compromise, while the media have allowed the right's activists and gabbers to run wild with criticism without furnishing legitimate alternative solutions. (See Barack Obama's top 10 sound bites.)
But Obama has exacerbated his political problems not just by failing to enact policies that would have actually turned the economy around, but also by authorizing a series of tactical moves intended to demonize Republicans and distract from the problems at hand. He has wasted time lambasting his foes when he should have been putting forth his agenda in a clear, optimistic fashion, defending the benefits of his key decisions during the past two years (health care and the Troubled Asset Relief Program, for example) and explaining what he would do with a re-elected Democratic majority to spur growth.

Throughout the year, we have been treated to Obama-led attacks on George W. Bush and Dick Cheney, Rush Limbaugh, Congressman Joe Barton (for his odd apology to BP), John Boehner (for seeking the speakership — or was it something about an ant?) and Fox News (for everything). Suitable Democratic targets in some cases, perhaps, but not worth the time of a busy Commander in Chief. In the past few days, we have witnessed the spectacle of the President himself and his top advisers wading into allegations that Republicans are attempting to buy the election using foreign money laundered through the Chamber of Commerce, combining with Karl Rove and his wealthy backers to fund a flood of negative television commercials. Not only is this issue convoluted and far-fetched, but it also distracts from the issues voters care about, frustrating political insiders and alienating struggling citizens (not that many are following such an offbeat story line). Feinting and gibing can't obscure those job numbers. (See the best viral campaign ads of 2010.)

The President and Democrats have passed many significant measures (the stimulus spending, the auto-company rescue, the health care law and the financial regulation effort) that someday may be seen as brave and bold, the foundation for a better economy. Obama and his closest aides certainly think that will happen. But the President was correct when he said Friday, "the only piece of economic news that folks still looking for work want to hear is, 'You're hired,'" and that's still not occurring for too many Americans.

The politically good news for Obama is that no matter what the outcome of the midterm elections, everything changes in January. Republicans will have a greater obligation, politically and morally, to help govern, rather than thwart and badger. The President will get a chance, in his State of the Union address and in his budget proposal, to show he is turning the page on the political horrors of 2010 for his party and the nation. But before then, Republicans are almost certainly going to demonstrate that you can beat something with nothing, especially when Americans seem to think that the Obama Administration hasn't much to offer either, except more of the same that isn't working.

- Find this article at:
- http://www.time.com/time/politics/article/0,8599,2024718,00.html

Copyright © 2010 Time Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited.

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop [redacted] <sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
Sent: Sun, Oct 10, 2010 8:24 pm
Subject: Re: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

I gave to Bill who is trying to influence strategy.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] <sbwhoeop [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Fri Oct 08 16:08:27 2010
Subject: H: The Boehner poll. Sid

The Huffington Post <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/> <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/>

Drew Westen <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/drew-westen>

Psychologist and neuroscientist; Emory University Professor
Posted: October 8, 2010 09:23 AM

Bringing Up Boehner <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/drew-westen/post_1034_b_755497.html>

According to news reports, today Republican minority leader and Coppertone model John Boehner will give his "closing argument" to the American people on why they should throw out the Democrats and kill the Obama-Pelosi-Reid "job-killing agenda." He will be returning to his working class roots, speaking at a piping manufacturing plant, an unusual venue these days for a man who is seen much more frequently at gatherings of Wall Street executives with open checkbooks and the males-only country club where he works on his tan when not making the rounds at other clubs with industry lobbyists.

Either the Speaker-to-be is following the model of Michael Steele and free-lancing, or Karl Rove and the Republicans believe it is safe or even advantageous to bring him out in public after the White House made an effort to put Boehner's face on what a Republican majority might look like, with the president invoking his name eight times in one speech.

I have to admit that at the time I was agnostic as to whether it made sense to try to brand him at this late date, as Boehner has minimal name recognition among voters. But the White House was no doubt responding to three realities. First, Boehner is an unknown to most Americans, which means that, unlike most Republicans in the news, he has not been well branded by the GOP -- which means for once Democrats might actually brand someone or something first rather than playing catch-up. Second, Boehner would indeed be the highest-ranking Republican were the GOP to assume control over the House (other than of course Karl Rove, who is now directing traffic on the right side of the street in Washington again). And third, a concrete face is always better than an abstraction when telling a story, and other than perhaps Sarah Palin, who Republicans could alternately accept and decline as the leader of their party, Boehner's tanned visage and history as errand-boy for virtually every major corporate special interest in his two decades in Washington (including his stint as the Marlboro Man, handing out tobacco lobby campaign checks to his fellow Republicans on the floor of the House) made him a potential counter-villain to the Republican's bogeywoman, Nancy Pelosi.

I remained agnostic until this week, when colleagues at Media Matters Action Network and I conducted a national messaging survey <http://cloudfront.mediamattersaction.org/static/images/pdf/BrandingBoehner.pdf> with 1,000 registered voters, selected to match the demographics of the voting and likely voting populations. The goal was to see how effectively we could speak with voters about Boehner as not only the symbol and standard-bearer for the GOP but also the water-boy for corporate America. (The results were surprisingly similar whether we looked at registered voters or likely voters, although as others have described, precisely how to determine who is a "likely voter" in this election is as much art as science, and the point of good messaging at this point is actually to change the dynamics of likely voting, not just to reflect them.)

As detailed in a memo published in Politico, what we found was clear: Boehner is a target well worth defining, who readily stands for precisely what Americans perceive to be the reasons they would have to hold their noses to vote for Congressional Republicans (perhaps the only group left who poll worse than Congressional Democrats with swing voters). We tested both paragraph-length narratives and single-sentence language designed to capture the essence of those narratives, and in each case, we tested them against the toughest opposition language we could test them against: the words of Boehner, Cantor, Limbaugh and others combined in defining the "Obama-Pelosi-Reid" agenda.

What we found, in brief, is that we could beat a tough GOP narrative about the "job-killing" socialists in the White House and Congress by 15 to 20 points with two narratives starring Boehner in the leading role (with best supporting bad actor going in one of the narratives to Karl Rove and his corporate allies), and we could win with over 15 different sentence-long descriptions of "what's the matter with Boehner" with margins ranging from 10 to 60 points against a tough conservative attack on the Obama-Pelosi-Reid axis of conservative evil.

The narratives that most moved likely voters -- including swing voters, who preferred them by double-digits over tough Republican rhetoric -- made clear whose voices Boehner would be speaking for as Speaker (e.g., the Wall Street executives he convened to try to block Wall Street reform). They harnessed the same populist anger at the hijacking of Washington by corporate special interests that has enlivened the tea partiers and is palpable across the political spectrum, and they focused on the extremism of the party Boehner would Speak for. A narrative that brought Karl Rove into the picture was slightly more polarizing with swing voters but slightly more powerful with likely Democratic voters.

In some ways what was most surprising was the success of the single-line statements of what we need in a Speaker and who John Boehner really speaks for (although these single-line statements came after the narratives, and likely reflect the power of branding, even over the course of a brief online encounter with voters). They ranged from relatively lofty and aspirational (e.g., "We need a Speaker who is also a listener, who can hear the voices of ordinary Americans" -- a theme colleagues and I found highly resonant across the political spectrum in message testing on the role of money in politics) -- to the harder-edged (e.g., "The Speaker of the House is a heartbeat away from the Presidency. Unfortunately, we know where John Boehner's heart is, and it isn't with the middle class," or "John Boehner understands deficits. He's spent nearly 20 years in Washington creating them.")

If there's a message in this message research, it is at once short-term and long-term. In the short run, if Democrats want to hang onto their seats in November, they would do well to define this election in terms of the middle class and small business versus the billionaires and big corporations that are hijacking our democracy; to use Boehner as a poster child for the party whose primary commitment is to the latter and whose tan is a testament to that commitment; and to avoid giving voters reason to regret their vote if they give it to Democrats again this time, by supporting the things they say they stand for and avoiding that golden mean between the public interest and the special interests that finance campaigns on both sides of the aisle.

In the longer run, branding matters. One of the biggest strategic and messaging mistakes of the last two years was the failure of Democrats to brand their opponents while their opponents were busy branding them -- and in particular the failure to brand the Bush Recession as the natural consequence of failed Republican economic principles. Two years ago, that was a virtually uncontested political proposition, as the voters made clear in handing Democrats the White House and supermajorities in both the House and Senate. Today, the public is split down the middle as to who caused the recession.

Reality doesn't brand itself. Hopefully it won't take a debacle in November and another 10 million jobs lost for reality to unveil itself again for a brief political moment and for progressives to have a second bite at the apple.
<http://getglue.com/?s=w>

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 10:24 AM
To: H
Subject: H: when you have time... Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

October 11, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: David Miliband, Third Way, etc.

I just had a conversation with Jonathan Powell. David Sainsbury (chief donor to the Labour Party, Shaun's wife's cousin) wants to fund a new Third Way organization headed by David Miliband. David is up for it. Tony very keen. To discuss.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 10:34 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Qaeda offers to free French if burqa ban ended - TV

From: Deyo, Justin A
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O
Sent: Mon Oct 11 10:30:48 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Qaeda offers to free French if burqa ban ended - TV

DUBAI/PARIS (Reuters) - Al Qaeda's north African arm wants a repeal of a ban on the Muslim face veil in France, the release of militants and 7 million Euros in exchange for freeing hostages who include five French, Al Arabiya TV said. Al Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM) is holding seven foreigners in the Sahara desert after kidnapping them last month. "The abductors have unrealistic demands which Mali and France could not accept... including withdrawing a ban on the face veil in France and the release of some of the group's elements detained in France, Mauritania and other countries," the television quoted unnamed sources as saying. The sources did not specify which militants the hostage-takers wanted released. France's Foreign Ministry dismissed the report as one of several "rumors" since the kidnappings in mid-September.

Justin Deyo
U.S. Department of State
Operations Center (S/ES-O)
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 10:43 AM
Subject: Rothkopf on Jones, et al

http://www.foreignpolicy.com/articles/2010/10/08/goodbye_mr_jones

Goodbye, Mr. Jones

And good riddance. Why Jim Jones was the worst national security advisor in decades.

BY DAVID J. ROTHKOPF | OCTOBER 8, 2010

The president's inexperience did in Jones more than any of the general's deficits. He didn't know what he wanted. He vacillated on key issues. He simply demonstrated the problems America repeatedly has when it hires men with no foreign-policy background to take on the most important international job in the world. Further, he did not really know enough about how the presidency works to nip in the bud the creation of the inner-circle bubble that effectively negated much of the work that the formal policy process did. Obama encouraged (or tolerated for long-enough that it looks like encouragement) his campaign foreign-policy deputies to continue to report directly to him, and this led to some public and private backdooring of Jones that undercut his authority dramatically. He did not empower Jones, and that combined with Jones's own shortcomings led to the zero-chemistry, ineffective collaboration that has been openly criticized by senior White House and foreign policy officials since the spring of Obama's first year in office.

In fact the situation got so bad that Jones was publicly undercut by true Obama confidante Denis McDonough more than once. It is something of a surprise he lasted this long. As one former national security advisor said to me while we were discussing a well-known instance of McDonough publicly undercutting Jones, "That would have only happened once on my watch. It would have been me or him."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 12:27 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Kosovo-Serbia talks likely delayed to March

From: Deyo, Justin A
To: SES-O_OS; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: Shaker, Joan P
Sent: Mon Oct 11 12:13:47 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Kosovo-Serbia talks likely delayed to March

PRISTINA (Reuters) - European Union-mediated talks between Belgrade and Pristina will begin only after a new Kosovo government takes power following elections in February, Kosovo's acting president said. Last month Serbia, which does not recognize Kosovo's independence, agreed to hold talks with Pristina after it was told its hardline stance on its former province could halt progress to the EU. In an interview, acting President Jakup Krasniqi said it would be difficult to start talks during a political crisis that followed President Fatmir Sejdiju's resignation last month. "The first half of February is the optimal time to hold early elections," he told Reuters. "The end of March is the period when Kosovo will have its own institutions and then it can have talks with Serbia." Krasniqi said he will announce the date of early elections a day or two after U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton visits Pristina. Kosovo had scheduled elections for November 2011, but Sejdiju's resignation hurt relations between the two main coalition partners: the Democratic League of Kosovo (LDK) and Democratic Party of Kosovo (PDK). Krasniqi said early elections could postpone the sale of Telekom, which is expected to bring between 300 million - 600 million euros. Whether the government can secure a parliamentary majority for necessary legislation to sell Telekom is uncertain, he said. "This is complicated at this point," he said.

Justin Deyo
U.S. Department of State
Operations Center (S/ES-O)
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 4:46 PM
To: H
Subject: H: FYI. Sid

The Huffington Post
October 12, 2010

Howard Fineman
fineman@huffingtonpost.com | HuffPost Reporting

The Power Of Clinton, The Invisibility Of Obama

First Posted: 10-12-10 02:37 PM | Updated: 10-12-10 02:37 PM

LOUISVILLE -- I see that Dr. Rand Paul has taken out after Bill Clinton, dredging up Monica Lewinsky. And I know why Paul did so. The former president was here in Kentucky yesterday and in this state, as in many others, he is a far more potent and popular foe than President Barack Obama.

On my first day working for The Huffington Post, I came back to Kentucky, where I began my career many years ago at the Courier-Journal. The people who run the University of Louisville Kentucky Author Forum wanted me to do an on-stage interview with a certain best-selling author who is also my new boss: Arianna Huffington. It was a tricky mix of professional incest and personal nostalgia, but the event worked out well and I also got a chance to play Kentucky reporter once again out in the state.

I raced over to Lexington and here is the ground-level, outside-the-Beltway reality I witnessed:

Like Voldemort's, Obama's is a name no one dares utter -- and that includes Clinton speaking to Democrats.

At a sunny, noontime rally on the campus of the University of Kentucky in Lexington yesterday, the former president made a stirring, well-argued case for Democratic Senate candidate Jack Conway and for Democrats generally -- without once mentioning Obama and rarely mentioning the presidency. It was as though we suddenly had only two branches of government.

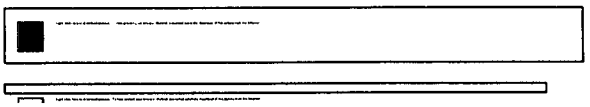
To be fair, almost no one else at the one-hour rally mentioned the sitting president. And Kentucky is staunch Republican territory. "We're farther ahead in the generic ballot here than ever," GOP Senator Mitch McConnell of Kentucky told me yesterday. "President Obama was never popular here, even at his peak."

Still, the eerie invisibility of the president is a telling commentary on the Democrats' confused, divided and defensive predicament as they brace for the verdict of the voters on Election Day, Nov. 2. There was something odd -- and, if you're a Democrat, depressing -- about a former Democratic president avoiding any mention of his Democratic successor.

Clinton sincerely wants to help out on the trail -- and certainly wants to avoid the accusation that he didn't try to help. But his travels have turned into a personal victory lap that often makes him -- not the candidate he's touting -- the center of attention. That was true here in Kentucky. The rally's mechanics were mostly handled by the Secret Service; more to the point, the final (and therefore top-billed) speaker wasn't Conway. It was Clinton. The Conway people didn't mind. They were glad to have him.

Rail-thin but not frail, wearing a tweedy professorial sports coat and his signature rueful, knowing smile, Clinton was treated with a respect bordering on awe. His familiar mane of white hair, thinning now, was translucent in the sun, giving him an almost otherworldly look: the Sage from a Better Age.

Clinton is beloved In Kentucky. He won the state twice. He speaks the local dialect, which contains Appalachian notes of working-class pride, suspicion of big shots and Baptist revivalism. But more than that -- and more than just in Kentucky -- Clinton's economic record (22.7 million jobs created, and he tends not to forget to mention the .7) looks spectacularly good in the context of what has followed.



These days there is almost an Old Testament, milk-and-honey reverence for that economic record, at least as expressed by former Kentucky Sen. Wendell Ford. An old-school podium pounder, Ford -- stooped but still strong voiced at 86 -- talked of the former president in messianic terms. "Bill Clinton found us the path to gold!" he shouted. The crowd of 2,000, most of them students, didn't laugh. They seemed to think he was right.

How any of this helps Obama is far from clear; it isn't even clear that it helps many Democrats -- since they'd be joining the same Washington party that the current president ostensibly heads.

But Clinton is all too happy to show Obama how it's done. As a campaigner and as president, Clinton's gift was his ability to untangle the knots of even the most complex policy issue and explain it in plain language to people suspicious of the powerful -- but eager not to be screwed by them or to be seen as dupes. Republicans and their corporate allies were out to shut down the few good things that government does for you, he said, in the name of balancing a budget that they themselves destroyed. "I gave you budget surpluses!" Clinton said, as if this had been an act of personal beneficence.

Knowing his audience, the former president focused on Pell Grants, and on a new program that allows graduates to pay back their loans over longer periods and at lower rates. Paul, he said, will try to take that new program away -- and, given the GOP's deliberate vagueness about spending cuts -- there is reason to think Clinton is right.

Which is why Paul got personal today. Which means Clinton drew blood. Which means that he did what he came to do. Which means Obama will remain invisible, at least in Kentucky, at least for now, and probably for a long time to come.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 9:31 PM
To: 'muscatinel@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Haiti - child trafficking

That is important. I will work on it--there's a very long and sobering list. Does Jillian have specific ideas?

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
To: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; H
Sent: Fri Jan 15 12:28:05 2010
Subject: FW: Haiti - child trafficking

This is a good suggestion from Jillian Burns in S/P....to make sure that children (and wonen) don't become targets of traffickers, as happened in Pakistan.

From: Burns, Jillian L
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 12:01 PM
To: Gonzalez, Francisco J; Muscatine, Lissa
Subject: Haiti - child trafficking

http://www.cbsatlanta.com/news/22239047/detail.html

Child Trafficking Major Concern After Quake

Thousands Of Children Left Without Parents

By Mike Paluska, CBS Atlanta Reporter

POSTED: 4:58 pm EST January 14, 2010

UPDATED: 5:28 pm EST January 14, 2010

ATLANTA -- UNICEF and international adoption agencies said getting children into safe zones is a top priority after the devastating earthquake in Haiti.

The massive magnitude 7.0 earthquake that hit the island of Hispaniola has left thousands of children without parents.

Before the quake even hit UNICEF statistics from 2007 show there were 380,000 orphans already in Haiti.

"There are so many children that are in desperate need of help that's what we are here to do to keep them alive and get them the nutrients they need and clean water. It becomes the one place of stability for the kids where they have people UNICEF workers they can relate to they have educational material so they can start back with school," said Alissa

Silverman, deputy director for UNICEF in the southeast region. "UNICEF is tracing family members and caring for children orphaned by the disaster to protect them from harm or exploitation."

The number of children on the island is staggering. Forty-six percent of Haiti's population (nearly 10 million) is under the age of 18, more than half of the population is under 21. Prior to the earthquake, four of every 10 children lived in homes with mud floors or severely overcrowded conditions.

"My first concern is who is with the kids how many of our nannies our ok and who is watching the kids and then all the kids on the streets," said Chareyl Moyes, the program manager for Wasatch International Adoption. Moyes works with a number of different agencies and orphanages in Haiti. She said early reports about how much damage they suffered are good.

"But, there is going to be a concern about child trafficking so both Haitian and the United States governments are going to be careful about forging ahead with new adoptions. The need is going to be great," Moyes said.

A lot of families in the U.S. according to a number of international adoption agencies across the country said some people were at the very end of the process to adopt a child from Haiti. "Now, it will set everyone back," Moyes said.

Even though child trafficking is a major concern for Moyes she worries about the immediate help children need trapped in the rubble from a country in ruins. "How long will that child survive without somebody rescuing them," Moyes said.

http://www.westportnow.com/index.php?/v2/26294/

Save the Children Emergency Team Reaches Haiti <http://www.westportnow.com/index.php?/v2/comments/26294/>

An emergency response team from Westport's Save the Children successfully reached Haiti today and worked quickly with staff already on the ground to organize the distribution of tents, medicine, and toiletries to children and families in desperate need, the charity said.
"Save the Children is extremely concerned about the well-being of children in Haiti at this critical moment and we are doing everything we can to quickly get relief supplies to those who need it most," said Charles MacCormack, president and CEO of Save the Children, in a news release.

"Our staff on the ground is pulling out all the stops to overcome hurdles like blocked roads and unreliable access to the airport."

"This is just the beginning of what will be a comprehensive five-year effort to build back better in Haiti. We are dedicated to not only addressing the immediate needs of children and families, but to making sure they have a brighter future ahead."

http://children.foreignpolicyblogs.com/2010/01/13/haitis-disastrous-earthquake-hits-children-hardest/

As someone in the anti-trafficking news of the disaster in Haiti has my mind rushing to worrying thoughts on how the disaster will increase human trafficking in the country. Such a large scale disaster will undoubtedly leave thousands and thousands of children, and their families, at an increased to be victimized by modern slavery.

Haiti's Restavek system still has a tight grip on the community, leaving some 300,000 children in the country enslaved as domestic workers according to the UN. It is these children who will continue to anguish and suffer the most in the shadows of the earthquake.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 9:32 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Haiti - child trafficking

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
To: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; H
Sent: Fri Jan 15 12:28:05 2010
Subject: FW: Haiti - child trafficking

This is a good suggestion from Jillian Burns in S/P....to make sure that children (and wonen) don't become targets of traffickers, as happened in Pakistan.

From: Burns, Jillian L
Sent: Friday, January 15, 2010 12:01 PM
To: Gonzalez, Francisco J; Muscatine, Lissa
Subject: Haiti - child trafficking

http://www.cbsatlanta.com/news/22239047/detail.html

Child Trafficking Major Concern After Quake

Thousands Of Children Left Without Parents

By Mike Paluska, CBS Atlanta Reporter

POSTED: 4:58 pm EST January 14, 2010

UPDATED: 5:28 pm EST January 14, 2010

ATLANTA -- UNICEF and international adoption agencies said getting children into safe zones is a top priority after the devastating earthquake in Haiti.

The massive magnitude 7.0 earthquake that hit the island of Hispaniola has left thousands of children without parents.

Before the quake even hit UNICEF statistics from 2007 show there were 380,000 orphans already in Haiti.

"There are so many children that are in desperate need of help that's what we are here to do to keep them alive and get them the nutrients they need and clean water. It becomes the one place of stability for the kids where they have people UNICEF workers they can relate to they have educational material so they can start back with school," said Alissa

Silverman, deputy director for UNICEF in the southeast region. "UNICEF is tracing family members and caring for children orphaned by the disaster to protect them from harm or exploitation."

The number of children on the island is staggering. Forty-six percent of Haiti's population (nearly 10 million) is under the age of 18, more than half of the population is under 21. Prior to the earthquake, four of every 10 children lived in homes with mud floors or severely overcrowded conditions.

"My first concern is who is with the kids how many of our nannies our ok and who is watching the kids and then all the kids on the streets," said Chareyl Moyes, the program manager for Wasatch International Adoption. Moyes works with a number of different agencies and orphanages in Haiti. She said early reports about how much damage they suffered are good.

"But, there is going to be a concern about child trafficking so both Haitian and the United States governments are going to be careful about forging ahead with new adoptions. The need is going to be great," Moyes said.

A lot of families in the U.S. according to a number of international adoption agencies across the country said some people were at the very end of the process to adopt a child from Haiti. "Now, it will set everyone back," Moyes said.

Even though child trafficking is a major concern for Moyes she worries about the immediate help children need trapped in the rubble from a country in ruins. "How long will that child survive without somebody rescuing them," Moyes said.

http://www.westportnow.com/index.php?/v2/26294/

Save the Children Emergency Team Reaches Haiti <http://www.westportnow.com/index.php?/v2/comments/26294/>

An emergency response team from Westport's Save the Children successfully reached Haiti today and worked quickly with staff already on the ground to organize the distribution of tents, medicine, and toiletries to children and families in desperate need, the charity said.
"Save the Children is extremely concerned about the well-being of children in Haiti at this critical moment and we are doing everything we can to quickly get relief supplies to those who need it most," said Charles MacCormack, president and CEO of Save the Children, in a news release.

"Our staff on the ground is pulling out all the stops to overcome hurdles like blocked roads and unreliable access to the airport."

"This is just the beginning of what will be a comprehensive five-year effort to build back better in Haiti. We are dedicated to not only addressing the immediate needs of children and families, but to making sure they have a brighter future ahead."

http://children.foreignpolicyblogs.com/2010/01/13/haitis-disastrous-earthquake-hits-children-hardest/

As someone in the anti-trafficking news of the disaster in Haiti has my mind rushing to worrying thoughts on how the disaster will increase human trafficking in the country. Such a large scale disaster will undoubtedly leave thousands and thousands of children, and their families, at an increased to be victimized by modern slavery.

Haiti's Restavek system still has a tight grip on the community, leaving some 300,000 children in the country enslaved as domestic workers according to the UN. It is these children who will continue to anguish and suffer the most in the shadows of the earthquake.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 9:33 PM
To: 'FuchsMH@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Issues I cover

Thx Mike. I'd like to meet w you this week. Pls get a time from Lona.

----- Original Message -----
From: Fuchs, Michael H <FuchsMH@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 10 11:17:32 2010
Subject: Issues I cover

Madam Secretary,

Attached and below, please find a list of the issues I cover.

Thanks,

Mike

MEMORANDUM

TO: Secretary Clinton

FROM: Mike

CC: Cheryl, Jake

SUBJECT: Issues I Cover

In addition to the day-to-day projects and follow-up items I work on with Jake, I cover the following issues:

Long-Range Policy

- Helping Cheryl and Jake plan for, and follow-up on, the bi-monthly policy meetings
- Working with bureaus on end-of-year reports follow-up
- Keeping up to speed on issues discussed at Deputies meetings for weekly memos
- Helping shepherd speech ideas and providing feedback on drafts

Substantive Issue Areas

- Human rights/democracy
- Sudan
- Mexico
- Cookstoves
- Yemen-related issues
- Export controls
- Cybersecurity
- Terrorist finance issues
- Military families issues
- Climate change
- Dialogues and partnerships with Nigeria, South Africa, Angola, Indonesia, Brazil

State Department Reform

- Report reform: Working with Rich Verma and his team on reforming state's system for producing annual reports to Congress
- QDDR-related assistance

RELEASE IN PART B6

CONFIDENTIAL

October 15, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI conference

Shaun has been excluded from the NI conference in its entirety. I've included the exchange of emails below. Exactly how Shaun has been shut out remains unclear.

Sid - my email exchange with Declan. Seems like Labour is firmly to be excluded!

On 15/10/10 18:22, "Declan Kelly" <[redacted]> wrote: B6

> Shaun,
>
> Ran the traps on this. I'm told Sidney asked S if it would be ok for you to > attend and she said she had no problem with it if there were no issues > associated with same, but if there are then it can't happen.
>
> Unfortunately there are a number of protocol issues. Owen Paterson and
Peter
> Power (michael cannot come now) are only attending the first remarks by the > Secretary and not participating in the conference. Owen is not attending the > dinner because he has to go back for the Cabinet mtg next day, so having his > Opposition counterpart there would obviously cause protocol issues as you can > appreciate. It also would raise questions in the Irish government as to why > the opposition representative from their side wasn't invited either.
Finally,

> there just isn't enough time to rewind the tape on all of this with just one > working day left between now and the event.
>
> As you know, it's nothing personal but that appears to be the situation. I > hope you understand and if you want to chat further give me a call.
>
> Best,
>
> Declan

------ Forwarded Message
From: Shaun Woodward [redacted]
Date: Fri, 15 Oct 2010 20:50:24 +0100
To: Declan Kelly [redacted]
Conversation: <no subject>
Subject: Re: <no subject>

B6

Declan,

Thanks for your email. Of course it's not personal. But I do think it's wrong.

When we were in Government we believed we could only succeed if we treated Northern Ireland as a bi-partisan issue and I encouraged other Governments to adopt the same approach. That meant when President Bush was in the White House, I went out of my way always to see and brief Democrats - in Congress and in the Senate - whenever I came to the States. It also meant when we held the first economic conference led by Mayor Bloomberg in Belfast, the dinner we gave at Hillsborough was not restricted to just those in respective Governments.

In respect of how we handled the issue within the UK, that didn't mean I invited the Shadow Secretary of State to share every platform, but the Shadow was not excluded from being at major events. Indeed we made a point of not only saying we were bi-partisan, but acted accordingly.

Having brokered the Hillsborough Agreement and having discussed with your Secretary of State - at all stages - how the US could help through an Economic Conference, I am obviously somewhat disappointed not to have been invited to attend the Conference in any capacity.

That of course should never be confused with my deep respect and admiration for Secretary Clinton. Frankly without her help during her time in the White House, as a Senator, as a candidate and now as Secretary, we could never have made the progress we did. You will know that, at the time, I was always disappointed that her contribution to the peace process and political process was not recognized appropriately by the Conservative Party and their spokesmen when they were in Opposition.

The decision by Owen Patterson to decide not to be present at next week's Conference is a matter for him and the political demands he has chosen on which to determine his priorities. You would not expect me to comment on his decision.

However, I don't have to rehearse with you that successful long-term

>
> Best,
>
> Declan

------ Forwarded Message
From: Shaun Woodward <[redacted]> B6
Date: Fri, 15 Oct 2010 20:50:24 +0100
To: Declan Kelly [redacted]
Conversation: <no subject>
Subject: Re: <no subject>

Declan,

Thanks for your email. Of course it's not personal. But I do think it's wrong.

When we were in Government we believed we could only succeed if we treated Northern Ireland as a bi-partisan issue and I encouraged other Governments to adopt the same approach. That meant when President Bush was in the White House, I went out of my way always to see and brief Democrats - in Congress and in the Senate - whenever I came to the States. It also meant when we held the first economic conference led by Mayor Bloomberg in Belfast, the dinner we gave at Hillsborough was not restricted to just those in respective Governments.

In respect of how we handled the issue within the UK, that didn't mean I invited the Shadow Secretary of State to share every platform, but the Shadow was not excluded from being at major events. Indeed we made a point of not only saying we were bi-partisan, but acted accordingly.

Having brokered the Hillsborough Agreement and having discussed with your Secretary of State - at all stages - how the US could help through an Economic Conference, I am obviously somewhat disappointed not to have been invited to attend the Conference in any capacity.

That of course should never be confused with my deep respect and admiration for Secretary Clinton. Frankly without her help during her time in the White House, as a Senator, as a candidate and now as Secretary, we could never have made the progress we did. You will know that, at the time, I was always disappointed that her contribution to the peace process and political process was not recognized appropriately by the Conservative Party and their spokesmen when they were in Opposition.

The decision by Owen Patterson to decide not to be present at next week's Conference is a matter for him and the political demands he has chosen on which to determine his priorities. You would not expect me to comment on his decision.

However, I don't have to rehearse with you that successful long-term economic investment in Northern Ireland will require building not only a stable peace process, but continuing to build cross-party and cross-community consensus. I am sorry we have not been invited to help.

The current coalition Government in Britain will not always be in power and it may not even last the course. It seems regrettable that in such a challenging global economic environment that those of us who helped build the peace are not even invited to continue helping.

Best,

Shaun

economic investment in Northern Ireland will require building not only a stable peace process, but continuing to build cross-party and cross-community consensus. I am sorry we have not been invited to help.

The current coalition Government in Britain will not always be in power and it may not even last the course. It seems regrettable that in such a challenging global economic environment that those of us who helped build the peace are not even invited to continue helping.

Best,

Shaun

RELEASE IN PART
B6

CONFIDENTIAL

October 15, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI conference

Shaun has been excluded from the NI conference in its entirety. I've included the exchange of emails below. Exactly how Shaun has been shut out remains unclear.

Sid - my email exchange with Declan. Seems like Labour is firmly to be excluded!

On 15/10/10 18:22, "Declan Kelly" [redacted] wrote: B6

> Shaun,
>
> Ran the traps on this. I'm told Sidney asked S if it would be ok for you to > attend and she said she had no problem with it if there were no issues > associated with same, but if there are then it can't happen.
>
> Unfortunately there are a number of protocol issues. Owen Paterson and
Peter
> Power (michael cannot come now) are only attending the first remarks by the > Secretary and not participating in the conference. Owen is not attending the > dinner because he has to go back for the Cabinet mtg next day, so having his > Opposition counterpart there would obviously cause protocol issues as you can > appreciate. It also would raise questions in the Irish government as to why > the opposition representative from their side wasn't invited either.
Finally,

> there just isn't enough time to rewind the tape on all of this with just one > working day left between now and the event.
>
> As you know, it's nothing personal but that appears to be the situation. I > hope you understand and if you want to chat further give me a call.
>
> Best,
>
> Declan

------ Forwarded Message
From: Shaun Woodward [redacted] B6
Date: Fri, 15 Oct 2010 20:50:24 +0100
To: Declan Kelly [redacted]
Conversation: <no subject>
Subject: Re: <no subject>

Declan,

Thanks for your email. Of course it's not personal. But I do think it's wrong.

When we were in Government we believed we could only succeed if we treated Northern Ireland as a bi-partisan issue and I encouraged other Governments to adopt the same approach. That meant when President Bush was in the White House, I went out of my way always to see and brief Democrats - in Congress and in the Senate - whenever I came to the States. It also meant when we held the first economic conference led by Mayor Bloomberg in Belfast, the dinner we gave at Hillsborough was not restricted to just those in respective Governments.

In respect of how we handled the issue within the UK, that didn't mean I invited the Shadow Secretary of State to share every platform, but the Shadow was not excluded from being at major events. Indeed we made a point of not only saying we were bi-partisan, but acted accordingly.

Having brokered the Hillsborough Agreement and having discussed with your Secretary of State - at all stages - how the US could help through an Economic Conference, I am obviously somewhat disappointed not to have been invited to attend the Conference in any capacity.

That of course should never be confused with my deep respect and admiration for Secretary Clinton. Frankly without her help during her time in the White House, as a Senator, as a candidate and now as Secretary, we could never have made the progress we did. You will know that, at the time, I was always disappointed that her contribution to the peace process and political process was not recognized appropriately by the Conservative Party and their spokesmen when they were in Opposition.

The decision by Owen Patterson to decide not to be present at next week's Conference is a matter for him and the political demands he has chosen on which to determine his priorities. You would not expect me to comment on his decision.

However, I don't have to rehearse with you that successful long-term economic investment in Northern Ireland will require building not only a stable peace process, but continuing to build cross-party and cross-community consensus. I am sorry we have not been invited to help.

The current coalition Government in Britain will not always be in power and it may not even last the course. It seems regrettable that in such a challenging global economic environment that those of us who helped build the peace are not even invited to continue helping.

Best,

Shaun

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 9:53 PM
To: 'oterom2@state.gov'; 'slaughtera@state.gov'; 'cheryl.mills [redacted] B6
Cc: 'FuchsMH@state.gov'
Subject: Water

Maria, Anne-Marie and Cheryl,

March 22 is World Water Day (who knew?) Could we have a policy ready to announce by then? I have some ideas so when we all get a chance to breathe, let's discuss. Here's to H2O.

[redacted] B5

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 17, 2010 10:28 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re:

Ok. Has it gone out yet?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 22:19:45 2010
Subject: Fw:

See final b/l - [redacted] B5

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Jan 17 21:45:46 2010

JOINT COMMUNIQUÉ OF
THE GOVERNMENTS OF HAITI AND THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA ISSUED AT PORT-AU-PRINCE, HAITI JANUARY 17, 2010

President René Préval of Haiti and Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton of the United States of America met in Port-au-Prince in the wake of the catastrophic earthquake of January 12, 2010 and its tragic aftermath, and issued the following joint communiqué:

Recognizing:

the long history of friendship between the people of Haiti and the people of the United States and their mutual respect for each other's sovereignty;

the grievous suffering of the people of Haiti, including the massive loss of life, widespread injuries, and extensive damage to public infrastructure and private property;

the urgent need for an immediate response to the requests by the Government of Haiti and the paramount importance of safe, swift and effective implementation of rescue, relief, recovery, and reconstruction efforts;

the current, unprecedented challenges facing the Haitian Government; and the January 15, 2010 conversation between President Obama and President Préval underscoring the urgency of the needs of Haiti and its people, President Obama's pledge of the full support of the American people for the Government and people of Haiti in relation to both the immediate recovery effort and the long-term rebuilding effort, and the two Presidents' commitment to coordinate assistance among the various parties, including the Haitian Government, the United Nations, the United States and the many international partners and organizations on the ground;

President Préval, on behalf of the Government and people of Haiti, welcomes as essential the efforts in Haiti by the Government and people of the United States to support the immediate recovery, stability and long-term rebuilding of Haiti and requests the United States to assist as needed in augmenting security in support of the Government and people of Haiti and the United Nations, international partners and organizations on the ground;

Secretary Clinton, on behalf of the Government and people of the United States, reaffirms the intention of the United States, through its assistance, to stand by the Haitian people in this time of great tragedy; and President Préval and Secretary Clinton jointly reaffirm that the Governments of Haiti and the United States will continue to cooperate under this shared understanding to promote the most safe and effective rescue, relief, recovery and reconstruction efforts possible.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 6:56 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Can you come back--I have one more question.

Coming.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Mon Oct 11 18:53:11 2010
Subject: Can you come back--I have one more question.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 8:32 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Obama, Cameron call for review over slain worker

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS
Sent: Mon Oct 11 20:09:20 2010
Subject: (AP) Obama, Cameron call for review over slain worker

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House said President Obama and British Prime Minister Cameron agree their nations must investigate what happened during an American rescue attempt in which a captive British aid worker was killed in Afghanistan.

The White House said President Obama called Cameron to offer condolences. Officials said Obama and Cameron both agreed the rescue operation was necessary and it was essential to "get to the bottom" of what happened in the rescue attempt.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 10:30 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: USSC LTG Dayton

fyi

-----Original Message-----
From: Dayton, Keith W
Sent: Thursday, October 07, 2010 8:40 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: USSC LTG Dayton

Cheryl

You have graciously facilitated a couple of meetings between me and Secretary Clinton and I need to express my thanks.

Today is my last day as the US Security Coordinator for Israel/Palestine and I would be grateful if you could pass my appreciation for S's support these past two years. Our Ambassadors in Jordan and Israel think it would be useful for me to give her a summary of where I see things after almost 5 years here in Jerusalem, but I do not wish to intrude. However, should she want to chat, I will be on pre-retirement leave in the DC area until mid-November.

Thanks again for the assistance along the way.

Lieutenant General Dayton

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 8:40 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: names for my swearing in

---

From: White, Pamela (Monrovia/Dir) [mailto
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 8:14 AM
To: Silski, Andrew L
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: names for my swearing in

B6

I will have people coming from Portland Oregon and Portland Maine ( ). Minister Konneh will represent Liberia - isn't that GREAT! This should all be in the Sec State's short remarks - she will get a kick out of this I think. Some of her HUGEST fans will be in the room - that is for sure.

---

From: Amara Konneh [mailto
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 12:14 PM
To: White, Pamela (Monrovia/Dir)
Subject: RE: names for my swearing in GREAT! I will be there my friend. I am so HAPPY, HAPPY for you.

Amara M. Konneh
MINISTER
National Coordinator
Liberia Reconstruction & Development Committee
Ministry of Planning & Economic Affairs
Republic of Liberia
Tel: +231 661-1777
Email:
www.mopea.gov.lr
www.liftliberia.gov.lr

---

From: White, Pamela (Monrovia/Dir) [mailto
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 11:57 AM
To: Silski, Andrew L
Cc: Williams, Aaron; Sandy Nadeau; Cynthia Watson; cindiwatsor ; Phillips, Lucianne; Luten, Drew (M/AA); David Shear; Hubbard, Peter (AFR/WA); Cromer, Sharon (AFR/AA); Crites, Sarah (AFR/WA); Knepp, Paul C(AFR/DP/PAB); Pitas, Cecilia (HR/FSP); Sarah Cowper; Patrick White; Kristopher White; Dickson-Horton, Valerie (HR/OD); Weisenfeld, Paul (LAC/AA); MUMPAT ; Ballantyne, Janet (HR/OD); nicole mechem; Virginia Leavitt; mretzer mark green; Fine, Patrick C (DCO/VP) [MCC]; mimar Nedelcovych, Mima; Nancy Gehron; DeeDee Spence; Dei, Carleene (HAITI/DIR); Shauket, Maureen(M/OAA/OD); Freeman, Karen (HARARE/DIR); Ott, Dana (AFR/DP); Sukin, Hope(AFR/SD); Myers, Gregory(EGAT/NRM/LRM); Julie Stagliano; Buckley, Bishop (HR/PPIM); wbucknam ; Stein-Olson, Monica (HAITI/ORC); Kent B. Hickman; Thomas-Greenfield, Linda(MS); Delly, Daniel P; Ostermeyer, David(M/ICFO); Russell, Ranta L (AFR/AA); Amara

Konneh; Keita, Fanta M. (Bamako/DIR); Sally Shelton-Colby; Hardy, Sharon L; Chaka, Malik (DPE/POL-CPI) [MCC]; Caroline Connolly; seansharifi[redacted] B6
Subject: names for my swearing in

I would like the people in the cc line to be sent invitations to my swearing in - on the 18th of November. If I have forgotten someone important please let me know. I am limited to 100 people so this is my A list. MAKE sure you say yes or no to Andrew because I have another 50 people waiting in line! Thanks. Some I sent invites (like Fanta) just because I love you - I know you cannot come but I wanted to invite you anyway.

For those of you who will be coming in from out of town, Andrew will ask you for certain information (needed for security reasons).

Steve - send names of people you want invited with email addresses - I sent Sarah's already but not Diane or John H. or Bill Livengood or Nickie.

Ambassdor T-Greenfield please forward to Deuce - I do not have his email (I thought I did).

Andrew this list does NOT include the MUST invites like Ambassador Carson, Amb Yamamoto, Undersecretary Patrick Kennedy and Chief of Staff Cheryl Mills (SHE IS VERY IMPORTANT TO ME). AND of course Administrator Shah.

[redacted]

Patrick and Kris - if Robbie or Fred want to come FINE - send their emails to Andrew but ONLY if they are really coming.
Pam White
USAID Director/Liberia

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 10:39 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: some nice news

To take your mind off the Balkans for a second, see below – a great plug for our global entrepreneurship program, which Lorraine Hariton and Steve Koltai are running. I commissioned a memo last week from Greg Behrman on S/P as to how we could pull the various different entrepreneurship efforts/initiatives that are part of MEPI, post-Cairo follow up etc. into something bigger under the Global Entrepreneurship Program umbrella; we will have it for you when you get back. AM

---

From: Behrman, Greg M
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 10:25 AM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Chollet, Derek H
Subject: FYI, a nice piece

FINANCIAL TIMES

Innovative path for Egypt's entrepreneurs

By Ian Wylie
Published: October 10 2010 19:57 | Last updated: October 10 2010 19:57

http://www.ft.com/cms/s/2/ebfe3b30-d2e6-11df-9166-00144feabdc0.html

The Great Mosque of Cordoba in Spain is the inspiration for the grand, domed entrance to the American University in Cairo's new campus. Its architects wanted to symbolise the height of intellectual and mathematical achievement in Islamic civilisation.

But this new $400m, 260-acre oasis of sandstone, mashrabiya window screens and malqaf windcatchers in the 40-degree heat is also a hot spot of western credo: entrepreneurship.

An hour's drive east of Cairo's gridlocked streets, the Cairo desert campus is one of the first nodes in a network of universities and business schools that the US government is using to support and educate entrepreneurs in Egypt and other Muslim-majority countries.

"Tell me what innovation we Egyptians have done since the pyramids?" asks Hassan Azzazy, a professor at AUC, who points out that Egypt was ranked last in a study of education in 30 countries by Global Entrepreneurship Monitor, a not-for-profit academic research consortium.

"Where are all the entrepreneurs? The Egyptian mindset needs to be rewired. We are not China – but we are blessed with a large number of smart people, so education has to be the missing link."

It was to Cairo that Barack Obama, US president, came last year to announce foreign policy toward the Middle East and that promoting entrepreneurship would be the platform for encouraging economic, political and social change.

It was Egypt that Mr Obama selected as the pilot country for a new Global Entrepreneurship Program. Some 17 organisations have signed up to this US-inspired effort to educate Egyptian entrepreneurs – including AUC and Nile University and their business schools, the Ministry of Communications and Information Technology and the Egyptian Junior Business Association.

But it is a project that might have caused even the Pharaohs to pause. Throughout its history, Cairo has been a crossroads in the trade of spices, silk, incense and gold between Africa, the Middle East, Europe and the Asia. But today Egypt is far from being a top entrepreneurial economy; the World Bank ranks it 106th among 183 economies in terms of the ease of doing business. More significantly, says Prof Azzazy, young Egyptians still hesitate to take the entrepreneurial path.

According to Prof Azzazy, the prevailing culture discourages entrepreneurship but exalts positions in academia or the government. It does not help that going bankrupt is still a crime punishable by imprisonment. "Parents in Egypt will tell you, I want my son to have a government job, it's secure. Their children will say, I would like to start a business... but I might lose money. We need to change this."

Prof Azzazy is not a professor of business but chemistry. At AUC, he has been replicating the work he pioneered at the University of Maryland, where he helped teach biotechnology students the skills and training to spin out their ideas into companies. He has since introduced entrepreneurship courses in AUC's school of science to graduate students and in the engineering school to both degree and graduate students.

In 2008, he was appointed by the Ministry of Industry to work alongside ETF, a European Union agency that supports education in countries surrounding the EU and has marked entrepreneurial learning as a priority. With the representatives from 16 other countries, Prof Azzazy helped draft entrepreneurship education indicators and policy objectives for both government and universities.

"We agreed that universities must implement entrepreneurial learning across campus and achieve a critical mass of professors who can teach it." After hosting a conference at AUC on the topic, Prof Azzazy convinced university provost Lisa Anderson to pilot the indicators.

"But AUC has 6,000 students, compared with Cairo University, which alone has 250,000," says Prof Azzazy. "We need to transfer this experience to larger universities, so we are in the process of developing a national policy to introduce entrepreneurship."

Prof Azzazy works in partnership with AUC's School of Business. "I can teach biotech entrepreneurship, ethics and intellectual property, but I do not teach business planning or marketing" he says. "When it comes to that, we bring in faculty from the school of business. I know the science, so I can speak the same language as my students, but we respect expertise and we do not cross boundaries.

"We've also been thinking about introducing entrepreneurship into the core curriculum so that anyone coming to AUC, whether they are doing music or engineering, would have to do it, regardless of their discipline."

Last year, AUC restructured its School of Business to align undergraduate and graduate programmes with three themes: entrepreneurship, innovation and leadership. The school is also the location for one of Goldman Sachs's 10,000 Women in Leadership and Entrepreneurship Centres, where it delivers certificate programmes in partnership with the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania. The 10,000 Women initiative aims to boost the number of women in developing nations who receive management training.

"Our mission is to educate principled, innovative entrepreneurs who can make a difference," says Sherif Kamel, dean of the business school. "It's more than just a fashion. We've been teaching entrepreneurship courses for 20 years but last year we decided to look at it differently."

Is he concerned that a chemistry professor is teaching entrepreneurship within his university? "I think entrepreneurship is a very horizontal platform – knowledge should be shared by everyone and not dominated by one school," says Prof Kamel. "In business life, you work with people from different, complementary backgrounds.

"What Hassan is doing definitely complements what we are doing. And our students will be the beneficiaries."

Several paths to the same goal

On the door of Steven Koltai's office at the State Department, Washington DC, is a banner that reads "World Peace Through Entrepreneurship".

"I was an entrepreneur myself," says Mr Koltai, a senior adviser who created and now manages the Global Entrepreneurship Program. "And I believe that entrepreneurship is something that is fundamental to every country in the world."

According to Mr Koltai, GEP consists of six categories of activity that he believes are needed to grow entrepreneurship: identify, train, connect, guide to funding, sustain and celebrate entrepreneurs.

In Egypt, GEP is pulling together a number of training programmes, including those offered by AUC and Nile University, as well as non-government organisations, which provide training for entrepreneurs, such as the Cisco Entrepreneur Institute, which has a centre in Egypt and in nine other Muslim-majority countries. In the US, the Legatum Institute Center for Development and Entrepreneurship at MIT has created a two-week boot camp for up to 100 entrepreneurs identified through business plan competitions around the world and taught by faculty from Harvard, Tufts, Wellesley and MIT.

There is no single path. "Our different partners will offer boot camps that are two weeks long, some programmes that are six weeks long, full-time programmes or evening programmes.

"Our idea is to assemble a menu with as many choices as possible," says Mr Koltai.

None of the programmes is being underwritten by State Department money. "We're giving them zero dollars. What we are doing is asking them to do more with their own resources," adds Mr Koltai.

"What we introduce to a country like Egypt is new organisations that were not previously there, such as American players, NGOs, universities, and foundations focused on entrepreneurship. However, we can also tap into existing US government programmes from USAID or the departments of commerce, education or small business administration that might be relevant. We are looking for countries near a tipping point to go entrepreneurial, but GEP will look entirely different in each country."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 11:45 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Germany wins Security Council seat

From: Moore, Anna W
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-IO; NEWS-EUR; NEWS-WHA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS; SES-O_CMS
Sent: Tue Oct 12 11:40:56 2010
Subject: (AP) Germany wins Security Council seat

UNITED NATIONS (AP) – Germany won a seat on the U.N. Security Council in a heated three-way race. Portugal and Canada must now battle for a second seat on the U.N.'s most powerful body for pro-Western nations. African, Asian and Latin American seats were uncontested so South Africa, India and Colombia easily won on Tuesday's first ballot in the 192-member General Assembly. Germany received 128 votes, one more than the two-thirds required. Portugal received 122 and Canada 114.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 11:59 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Inzko

---

From: Gordon, Philip H
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Tue Oct 12 11:58:07 2010
Subject: Fw: Inzko

Huma can you pass this along to S? Thx.

---

From: Moore, Roderick W
To: Gordon, Philip H
Cc: Moon, Patrick S
Sent: Tue Oct 12 10:19:43 2010
Subject: Inzko

Phil-

The Secretary's messages at the meeting were outstanding, from OHR's point of view. Inzko is elated - particular with her firm support for 5+2 and for judicious use of Bonn Powers (BP). Other than from the U.S., and usually from the UK, there has been, at most, strong reluctance in the Quint to support BP use -- even when there are direct challenges to Dayton and the functionality of the BH state. We have also sensed some Quint backsliding on 5+2. Although he missed the opportunity you gave him to make the pitch directly, he later asked me to convey to you his hope that the Secretary would be willing to help shore up European support for 5+2 and BP with key PIC colleagues -- especially from Quint countries (Germany, France; Italy in particular). We certainly foresee a need to employ BP on the State Property issue, unless Dodik abruptly alters course. Inzko is grateful as well to the Secretary for her offer to speak with Lady Ashton.

Many thanks and best regards, Rod

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 1:11 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Inzko

From phil

---

From: Gordon, Philip H
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Tue Oct 12 11:58:07 2010
Subject: Fw: Inzko

Huma can you pass this along to S? Thx.

---

From: Moore, Roderick W
To: Gordon, Philip H
Cc: Moon, Patrick S
Sent: Tue Oct 12 10:19:43 2010
Subject: Inzko

Phil-

The Secretary's messages at the meeting were outstanding, from OHR's point of view. Inzko is elated - particular with her firm support for 5+2 and for judicious use of Bonn Powers (BP). Other than from the U.S., and usually from the UK, there has been, at most, strong reluctance in the Quint to support BP use -- even when there are direct challenges to Dayton and the functionality of the BH state. We have also sensed some Quint backsliding on 5+2. Although he missed the opportunity you gave him to make the pitch directly, he later asked me to convey to you his hope that the Secretary would be willing to help shore up European support for 5+2 and BP with key PIC colleagues -- especially from Quint countries (Germany, France, Italy in particular). We certainly foresee a need to employ BP on the State Property issue, unless Dodik abruptly alters course. Inzko is grateful as well to the Secretary for her offer to speak with Lady Ashton.

Many thanks and best regards, Rod

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 1:10 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: UNSC Elections

Fyi

From: Brimmer, Esther D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Tue Oct 12 13:09:50 2010
Subject: UNSC Elections

Huma, Jake,
Germany and Portugal were elected to the UNSC to serve in the two non-permanent WEOG slots in 2011-2012. Germany won a seat in the first round of voting. Canada withdrew in the second round of voting after losing support from the first round. The WEOG group was the only contested regional group.
Esther

Dr. Esther Brimmer
Assistant Secretary
Bureau of International Organization Affairs
U.S. Department of State

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 2:02 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Your meeting with Simoes [Brazil]

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,1.4(D)

HRC

Just fyi for you - note the highlighted parts.

-----Original Message-----
From: Shannon, Thomas A
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 9:10 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Your meeting with Simoes

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 10/12/2030

Cheryl:

I met with Simoes last week, and he expressed his appreciation for your willingness to meet with him. He has a high regard for you, and sees today's meeting as evidence of our respect for and interest in Brazil's role in Haiti.

He is in D.C. trying to get IDB funding for an energy production project in Haiti. He expressed frustration at the slow pace of decision-making [redacted] on nearly all issues related to reconstruction and development, and also at the discrepancy within the international community between pledged monies and actual obligation of funds. 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1

Several other issues that you should be aware of.

[redacted]

Not good. I can fix all of this, and I have been working with Patriota and Simoes to keep our conversations [redacted] on a positive plane. Again, I don't think Simoes will raise this, but you should be aware that there is friction.

Finally, regarding your trip here, the second round of the elections is all consuming. Until the outcome of the October 31 vote is in hand, I don't think you would get done here what you would like to accomplish. You might want to raise this with Simoes. The polls still point to a Dilma win, but it will be a fight to the finish. Could we think about a November or December trip?

Happy to talk about any or all of this.

Regards,
Tom

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 3:05 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Iranian participation in Rome

Fyi

---

From: Feldman, Daniel F
To: 'HolbrookeR@state.gov' <HolbrookeR@state.gov>; Singh, Vikram J; Ruggiero, Frank J; Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Blanc, Jarrett N
Sent: Tue Oct 12 15:02:16 2010
Subject: Fw: Iranian participation in Rome

---

From: Hach, Clemens
To: Feldman, Daniel F; Blanc, Jarrett N
Sent: Tue Oct 12 13:34:50 2010
Subject: Iranian participation in Rome

Steiner informed me that he had been told that

1. Ambassador Mohammad Ali Qanezadeh, Director General for Asia at the MoFA, and
2. Mr. Mahmoud Bajat, Director General for International affairs at the Presidency in charge of anti-narcotics were likely to form the Iranian delegation in Rome.

Clemens

---

Clemens A. Hach
Senior Adviser, International Partnership
Special Representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan
US Department of State
2201 C Street N.W.
Washington D.C., 20520 USA
(202) 647 6288

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 3:14 PM
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Fw: BBC on Apps4Africa - "Moo-bile Innovation"

Fyi, good coverage.

Jm

---

From: Wharton, David B
To: McHale, Judith A; Stanton, Katie; Berkowitz, Elana
Cc: Diallo, Robin D; Namba, Nicholas; Haynes, John D; Thomas, Katya
Sent: Tue Oct 12 14:46:02 2010
Subject: FW: BBC on Apps4Africa - "Moo-bile Innovation"

In case you haven't seen this yet.

Bruce Wharton
Deputy Assistant Secretary for Public Diplomacy
Bureau of African Affairs
202-663-0500

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

---

From: Scott, Marianne C
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 2:17 PM
To: Kemp, Edward; Strassberger, William R; Wharton, David B; Roche, Lynn W; McClanahan, Julie A; Bergin, Caitlin D; Domowitz, Susan
Subject: BBC on Apps4Africa - "Moo-bile Innovation"

BBC NEWS

8 October 2010 Last updated at 05:40 ET
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/technology-11496993

Cow farming program wins Apps 4 Africa competition

An application which tracks the fertility of cows has won the first ever Apps 4 Africa competition to find new talent as smartphones become increasingly popular in Africa.

Offering a prize fund of $5,000, the competition asked developers in Kenya, Uganda, Rwanda and Tanzania to come up with a mobile application that is widely accessible, easy to use and simple.

"I want to thank you for lending your innovate spirit and creativity to the enterprise of building a better future for your communities."

End Quote Hillary Clinton US Secretary of State

The competition, funded by the United States government, hoped to unite the brightest African developers with people who could benefit most from innovate mobile technology.

Launched back in July in Nairobi, the competition attracted 20 entrants - each offering a unique approach to improving life in the region.

Moo-bile innovation

The winner, announced this week, was iCow - an application that helps cow farmers maximise breeding potential by tracking the fertility cycle of their animals.

"It's a voice-based application, meaning they don't have to have a special smart-phone," explained Charles Kithika, the app's creator.

"[They] just need an ordinary phone and then dial in a toll-free number."

Mr Kithika said the rise in popularity of mobile apps in Africa is partly down to M-PESA, software which facilitates the transfer of money.

Runner-up in the competition was Kleptocracy Fighters, an app which helps users combat instances of government corruption.

Features include the ability to upload audio, video and text to the web quickly - acting as evidence of bribery or other wrong-doing.

All the competition entrants were praised by US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, who said that the apps "solved real problems".

"The ideas generated from this competition will help doctors monitor the growth and nutrition of young patients, will help expand trade by translating prices and quantities into local languages, will hold public officials accountable by reporting election violations and tracking public expenditures.

"I want to thank you for lending your innovative spirit and creativity to the enterprise of building a better future for your communities."

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 3:16 PM
To: McHale, Judith A; H
Subject: Re: BBC on Apps4Africa - "Moo-bile Innovation" Really solid.

---

From: McHale, Judith A
To: 'HDR22@clintonemail.com' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Tue Oct 12 15:14:14 2010
Subject: Fw: BBC on Apps4Africa - "Moo-bile Innovation"

Fyi, good coverage.

Jm

---

From: Wharton, David B
To: McHale, Judith A; Stanton, Katie; Berkowitz, Elana
Cc: Diallo, Robin D; Namba, Nicholas; Haynes, John D; Thomas, Katya
Sent: Tue Oct 12 14:46:02 2010
Subject: FW: BBC on Apps4Africa - "Moo-bile Innovation"

In case you haven't seen this yet.

Bruce Wharton
Deputy Assistant Secretary for Public Diplomacy
Bureau of African Affairs
202-663-0500

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

---

From: Scott, Marianne C
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 2010 2:17 PM
To: Kemp, Edward; Strassberger, William R; Wharton, David B; Roche, Lynn W; McClanahan, Julie A; Bergin, Caitlin D; Domowitz, Susan
Subject: BBC on Apps4Africa - "Moo-bile Innovation"

BBC NEWS

8 October 2010 Last updated at 05:40 ET
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/technology-11496993

Cow farming program wins Apps 4 Africa competition

An application which tracks the fertility of cows has won the first ever Apps 4 Africa competition to find new talent as smartphones become increasingly popular in Africa.

Offering a prize fund of $5,000, the competition asked developers in Kenya, Uganda, Rwanda and Tanzania to come up with a mobile application that is widely accessible, easy to use and simple.

"I want to thank you for lending your innovate spirit and creativity to the enterprise of building a better future for your communities."

End Quote Hillary Clinton US Secretary of State

The competition, funded by the United States government, hoped to unite the brightest African developers with people who could benefit most from innovate mobile technology.

Launched back in July in Nairobi, the competition attracted 20 entrants - each offering a unique approach to improving life in the region.

Moo-bile innovation

The winner, announced this week, was iCow - an application that helps cow farmers maximise breeding potential by tracking the fertility cycle of their animals.

"It's a voice-based application, meaning they don't have to have a special smart-phone," explained Charles Kithika, the app's creator.

"[They] just need an ordinary phone and then dial in a toll-free number."

Mr Kithika said the rise in popularity of mobile apps in Africa is partly down to M-PESA, software which facilitates the transfer of money.

Runner-up in the competition was Kleptocracy Fighters, an app which helps users combat instances of government corruption.

Features include the ability to upload audio, video and text to the web quickly - acting as evidence of bribery or other wrong-doing.

All the competition entrants were praised by US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, who said that the apps "solved real problems".

"The ideas generated from this competition will help doctors monitor the growth and nutrition of young patients, will help expand trade by translating prices and quantities into local languages, will hold public officials accountable by reporting election violations and tracking public expenditures.

"I want to thank you for lending your innovative spirit and creativity to the enterprise of building a better future for your communities."

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 7, 2010 6:06 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Israeli police flatten mosque, say built illegally

From: Vu, Anny T
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Sun Nov 07 05:30:53 2010
Subject: (AP) Israeli police flatten mosque, say built illegally

RAHAT (AP) – Israeli police said they demolished an illegally built mosque in the southern Bedouin city of Rahat, touching off rock-throwing protests by residents. Police spokesman Micky Rosenfeld said the two-story mosque was knocked down November 7 in keeping with a court ruling. Mosque activist Yousef Abu-Jama said residents built the structure illegally because Israeli authorities would take too long to issue approval. Authorities rarely target mosques for demolition. This particular mosque was financed by a group that is frequently in conflict with authorities.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 7, 2010 4:01 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Canada considering staying in Afghanistan

From: Moore, Anna W
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sun Nov 07 15:33:32 2010
Subject: (AP) Canada considering staying in Afghanistan

HALIFAX (AP) – Canada's defense minister says Canada is considering a U.S. request to keep troops in Afghanistan past 2011 and switch from a combat to a training role. Defense Minister Peter MacKay said November 7 the troops would be "behind the wire" and not remain in Afghanistan's volatile southern Kandahar province. Parliament has mandated that the combat mission end in 2011. U.S. Senators John McCain said Lindsey Graham, who both sit on the Armed Services Committee, urged Canada November 6 to remain in Afghanistan past 2011.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 7, 2010 5:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Haaretz) Netanyahu to Biden: Palestinians must not take unilateral steps toward state

From: Moore, Anna W
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sun Nov 07 17:23:35 2010
Subject: (Haaretz) Netanyahu to Biden: Palestinians must not take unilateral steps toward state

HAARETZ.com

- Published 23:57 07.11.10
- Latest update 23:57 07.11.10

Premier meets U.S. Vice President on sidelines of Jewish GA, warns that sanctions have not been enough against Iran.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu told U.S. Vice President Joe Biden during their meeting in New Orleans on Sunday that Israel had made enough efforts to reach a peace settlement with the Palestinians, and has not received sufficient gestures in return.

Speaking to the vice president before the latter's address to the General Assembly of Jewish Federations, Netanyahu said that a peace agreement could not be reached from above and added that the Palestinians must be stopped from taking unilateral action at the United Nations in their quest to establish a state.

Netanyahu also told Biden that other Arab states must be brought into the peace process to give Israel the political backing needed.

An Israeli political source said earlier Sunday that Netanyahu would tell Biden that the U.S. must create a credible threat in the form of a military campaign to prevent Iran from acquiring nuclear weapons.

According to the official in Jerusalem, Netanyahu planned to stress that the West must operate with suspicion and great caution in the face of Iran's recently stated intentions to renew dialogue over its nuclear program.

The source also said that Netanyahu would warn Biden that the international community must be careful not to fall into any sort of Iranian trap with regard to this expressed willingness, said the official.

The prime minister was expected to say that a credible threat of military action is the only way to ensure that Iran will rethink its nuclear program, according to the Jerusalem official. Although Netanyahu believes that the harsh military sanctions have weakened Iran, said the official, there is still no sign that they have led the Islamic Republic to consider halting its nuclear program.

"The only way to ensure that Iran will not go nuclear is to create a credible threat of military action against it if it doesn't cease its race for a nuclear weapon," the source said Netanyahu would tell Biden.

"The economic sanctions are making it difficult for Iran, but there is no sign that the Ayatollah regime plans to stop its nuclear program because of them," the source said Netanyahu would add.

Netanyahu was also say that the only time Iran stopped its nuclear program was in 2003, when it believed there was a threat of American military action, the source said, adding that the threat alone is enough to prevent the need for military action.

Netanyahu arrived earlier Sunday in the U.S., where he was also set to meet Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and address the General Assembly of Jewish Federations in New Orleans.

Asked about the comments, an Israeli official traveling with Netanyahu said the prime minister call in all his meetings in the United States for pressure to be stepped up against Iran. He is also expected to discuss with U.S. officials Israel's impasse in direct negotiations with the Palestinians.

"It is our fervent desire that the current impasse can be overcome and we see an expeditious return to direct talks with the Palestinians," Netanyahu spokesman Mark Regev said on board the prime minister's flight from Tel Aviv to New Orleans.

Netanyahu will meet Biden before the latter's own address to the GA. Netanyahu will deliver his speech to the forum on Monday, before his four-day visit to New York.

During the trip, he will not see President Barack Obama, who is on a visit to Asia. But the U.S. visit will give Netanyahu an opportunity to gauge the impact of last week's Republican rout of Obama's Democrats in the midterm congressional elections.

Netanyahu was scheduled to hold talks in New York with UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon on Monday and Clinton on Thursday, before flying home.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 7, 2010 7:51 PM
To: H
Subject: Burma

Quick summary of Burma elections:

While there was no independent election observation or monitoring of Burma's November 7 elections, anecdotal and initial media reports suggest low to medium voter turnout. There were no major incidents that disrupted polling, according to available information. The United States declined to participate in staged-Government of Burma (GOB) led "election tours" as did EU missions. Though all signs point to a full victory for pro-regime parties, the GOB has not announced election results yet and has not provided any clear indication of when it plans to do so. Opposition and exile groups claim advance voting schemes are one indication of significant fraud and vote rigging. End Summary.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 7, 2010 10:54 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Canada considering staying in Afghanistan

---

From: Moore, Anna W
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sun Nov 07 15:33:32 2010
Subject: (AP) Canada considering staying in Afghanistan

HALIFAX (AP) – Canada's defense minister says Canada is considering a U.S. request to keep troops in Afghanistan past 2011 and switch from a combat to a training role. Defense Minister Peter MacKay said November 7 the troops would be "behind the wire" and not remain in Afghanistan's volatile southern Kandahar province. Parliament has mandated that the combat mission end in 2011. U.S. Senators John McCain said Lindsey Graham, who both sit on the Armed Services Committee, urged Canada November 6 to remain in Afghanistan past 2011.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 8, 2010 10:19 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Israel announces new east Jerusalem housing plans

See Alon's analysis below

---

From: Sachar, Alon (NEA/IPA)
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Rudman, Mara
Sent: Mon Nov 08 10:12:22 2010
Subject: RE: (AP) Israel announces new east Jerusalem housing plans

In addition to the longer chain, you should know that the location of these units is very problematic and would significantly change the demographic dynamics of the city and the ability to divide it, if we get to the point. Har Homa is located in southern Jerusalem just north of Bethlehem. The B and C phases of Har Homa will expand the neighborhood eastward (hotdog shape), going a long ways to cutting off Bethlehem for Jerusalem and the Arab neighborhoods there.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

---

From: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Monday, November 08, 2010 9:46 AM
To: Sachar, Alon (NEA/IPA); Rudman, Mara
Subject: Fw: (AP) Israel announces new east Jerusalem housing plans

What do you know?

---

From: Virgil, Lynn C
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Mon Nov 08 09:31:55 2010
Subject: (AP) Israel announces new east Jerusalem housing plans

JERUSALEM - (AP) Israel says it is moving ahead with plans to build 1,300 new apartments in disputed east Jerusalem. The Interior Ministry's announcement and its timing could embarrass Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who is visiting the U.S. Washington is already frustrated over his refusal to curb settlement construction. Palestinians condemned the plans. They claim east Jerusalem for a future capital. The government plans to expand the Har Homa neighborhood by 978 apartments and to build 320 new apartments in the Ramot neighborhood.

Lynn Virgil
Watch Officer
Operations Center
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 8, 2010 3:47 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Jiloty, Lauren C
Subject: FW: Cheryl -- Wanted to make sure Hillary and you'd seen this -- Released at 1:00 PM Today: Statement from Lisa McGovern

From: Buhl, Cindy [mailto:Cindy.Buhl@mail.house.gov]
Sent: Monday, November 08, 2010 2:23 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Buhl, Cindy
Subject: Cheryl -- Wanted to make sure Hillary and you'd seen this -- Released at 1:00 PM Today: Statement from Lisa McGovern

For Immediate Release:
November 8, 2010

Contact: Michael Mershon
(202) 225-6101

STATEMENT FROM LISA MCGOVERN:

"Earlier today, Jim underwent successful surgery in Washington to remove his thyroid gland. During a recent routine examination, we discovered a small nodule that a biopsy showed to be cancerous. This type of thyroid cancer grows very slowly, and is successfully treatable. He's feeling good, and his prognosis is excellent. Jim will take a few days off and is looking forward to being back at work next week for the lame-duck session. Until then, I'll be trying to convince him to rest and stay off the phone!

"As Executive Director of the Congressional Families program at the Prevent Cancer Foundation, I know how important early detection and treatment can be. Jim and I urge everyone to get their regular check-ups and screenings, and to take steps to prevent cancer by making healthy lifestyle choices, which include a good diet, exercise, not smoking and knowing your family history and risk factors. Lots of good information can be found at www.preventcancer.org."

The following is a statement from Dr. Brian P. Monahan, the Congressional Attending Physician:

"Congressman McGovern was admitted to the Washington Hospital Center today for surgery to remove the thyroid gland in his neck. He was discovered to have a nodule in his thyroid gland on routine health examination. A biopsy of this nodule showed papillary cancer of the thyroid gland. He underwent today's procedure to remove the gland from his neck as a curative therapy for his cancer. He completed the surgery without complications and will be discharged from the hospital after a brief period of observation.

"Thyroid cancer is diagnosed in about 37,000 people in the United States each year with over 75% of these being the papillary type. The vast majority of patients are cured with surgery and do not experience any further issues with the disease. Further tests and therapies will be determined after study of the thyroid gland removed at surgery, and Congressman McGovern will take a daily thyroid medication to replace the functions of his thyroid gland. He will return to his usual duties next week after a brief convalescence."

-30-30-30-

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, November 8, 2010 5:52 PM
To: H
Subject: Tomorrow

This is your day tomorrow. Anything you want to add or take off?
8:15 am DEPART Private Residence
En route State Department
[drive time: 10 minutes]

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING
9:15 am Secretary's Conference Room
Participants: Jack Lew, Pat Kennedy, P.J. Crowley, Cheryl Mills, Steve Mull, Harold Koh, Anne-Marie Slaughter, Rich Verma and Joe Macmanus

9:15 am MONDAY MEETING w/ASSISTANT SECRETARIES
10:00 am Principals Conference Room 7516

10:00 am OFFICE TIME
11:30 am Secretary's Office

11:30 am VIDEOS
12:00 pm George Marshall Room, 7th Floor
Staff: Case

Note: Room reserved from 10:15 am to 12:00 pm

- International Education Week

- FINCA 25th Anniversary

- Mobile Money Policy Forum

- Freedom Fields USA Gala

12:00 pm OFFICE TIME
2:00 pm Secretary's Office

2:00 pm STAFF MEETING*
3:00 pm Secretary's Outer Office
Participants: Ellen Tauscher, Jack Lew, Cheryl Mills, Philippe Reines, Jake Sullivan, Derek Chollet, Kurt Campbell, Rich Verma

Note: Meeting called for 2:00 pm

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: jake.sullivan
Sent: Monday, November 8, 2010 11:04 PM
To: H; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Did you get any feedback from BC?

No - we spoke for about 30 mins before the meeting - he said he'd try to call after but did not.

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
To: 'jake.sullivan
Subject: Did you get any feedback from BC?
Sent: Nov 8, 2010 11:01 PM

I just landed and can't get him so he probably took off.

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 9, 2010 12:08 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Fwd: Mark's election night HuffPo piece

Rec'd all 7.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Mon Nov 08 23:36:43 2010
Subject: Fw: Fwd: Mark's election night HuffPo piece

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mark J. Penn [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Wed Nov 03 07:26:45 2010
Subject: Fwd: Mark's election night HuffPo piece

Begin forwarded message:

> From: Don Baer [redacted]
> Date: November 3, 2010 5:43:12 AM EDT
> To: Andrew Stillman - BM [redacted]
> Cc: "Mark J. Penn" [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Mark's election night HuffPo piece
>
> Here is my quick take on the results -- see below. It's 1994 all over again -- that's for sure. Brilliant of you to be thousands of miles away from this.
>
> No Tea Party for the Tea Party
>
> But Obama must heed the message of exit polls

By Mark Penn

Without doubt the Tea Party will be rejoicing at the results and laying down ultimatums to the Republican Party to steer to the right , and the Republican Party having embraced the Tea party will be hard pressed to say "no" to the new right wing in America.

Poll after poll shows that the Tea Party is really a splinter of the Republican Party, and the exit polls show that this was a vote about the economy, not ideology. Only 23% of the voters said that they were casting a vote for the Tea Party while 56% said it was not a factor and the rest outright opposed them.

But 62% of the voters said that the economy was the key factor determining their vote. The polls show that the voters want tax cuts not tax increases, modification or repeal of healthcare, spending cuts and above all jobs.

With healthcare reform, cap and trade bills, and tax increases, President Obama got out of step with the voters. Why he didn't just kick the Bush tax cuts down the road a year and get them out of the election cycle is mystifying. Instead -- just like in 1994 -- the Democrats ran on the platform of increasing taxes for the wealthy, amplifying class warfare rather than ending it.

Whoever told President Obama "don't worry, just pass healthcare and they will love it" must be squirming in his seat tonight. And all those who think that tacking further to the left is the answer for the Democrats should look at these results carefully and think again.

President Obama and the Democrats lost many of the new constituencies they had won in 2008 -- they lost independents by 15 per cent in the CNN exit poll. Obama had won them by 8 points. They lost seniors by 16 points, doubling the loss from 8 points while seniors turned out in droves. And they lost voters in households making over $100,000 by 16 points, compared to an even split in 2008, evidence of the damage of the reinvigorated class warfare strategy. These are all battleground voting blocks that Obama had done well enough with to trounce McCain.

And the two other core constituencies of President Obama -- young voters and minorities -- stayed home, with their percentage of the vote dropping dramatically. In the end the Republicans and the Tea Party won the turnout war and those differences are also a major factor in the outcome. 41% of the voters were conservative, up from 34% in the 2008 presidential election. Only 11% of the voters were aged 18 to 29 compared to 18% in the presidential election.

These results are just plain facts, and the President needs to stand up and take notice. The voters are rejecting the current course and have thrown up a major roadblock to his policies.

But this does not mean that the voters want to gut Medicare, Medicaid, Education or the Environment. They don't want the government shut down; they want it fully open for business. Above all, they want jobs, and they are willing to vote for any party they believe may have the answer to the presidential election. Nancy Pelosi became the poster child of the left and became the target of the Republican right. They scored a bulls eye on her, but all glory is fleeting. The burden will be on the Republicans now to be a responsible handbrake -- if they again shut down the government they will lose the public's trust and support very quickly.

If President Obama wants to serve a second term, he will have to heed the call to recalibrate his administration. He was elected as a centrist. They want him to be one. He was elected as a youthful, vigorous candidate who would lead us into a more global future. They want him to do just that. He was elected to end, not amplify partisanship. President Clinton turned his White House around from a similar defeat in 1994. President Obama faces the same choices and opportunities to remain true to democratic values and yet set a new direction to turn all this around.

RELEASE IN FULL

---

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 9, 2010 8:10 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 11/9/10 Tuesday

8:15 am DEPART Private Residence
En route State Department

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30am Secretary's Office

8:45am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING
9:15am Secretary's Conference room

9:15am MONDAY MEETING w/ASSISTANT SECRETARIES
10:00am Principals conference Room 7516

10:00am OFFICE TIME
11:30 am Secretary's Office

11:30 am VIDEOS (4)
12:00 pm George Marshall Room, 7th Floor

12:00 pm OFFICE TIME
2:00 pm Secretary's Office

2:00pm STAFF MEETING
3:00 pm Secretary's Outer Office

TBD DEPART State Department *En route Private Residence

TBD ARRIVE Private Residence

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 9, 2010 9:42 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: Issa plans hundreds of hearings

FYI

From: Toiv, Nora F
Sent: Tuesday, November 09, 2010 8:51 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Issa plans hundreds of hearings

POLITICO

Issa plans hundreds of hearings

By: Jake Sherman and Richard E. Cohen
November 8, 2010 05:13 PM EST

California Rep. Darrell Issa is already eyeing a massive expansion of oversight for next year, including hundreds of hearings; creating new subcommittees; and launching fresh investigations into the bank bailout, the stimulus and, potentially, health care reform.

Issa told POLITICO in an interview that he wants each of his seven subcommittees to hold "one or two hearings each week."

"I want seven hearings a week, times 40 weeks," Issa said.

Issa is also targeting some ambitious up-and-comers like Reps. Jason Chaffetz of Utah, Patrick McHenry of North Carolina and Jim Jordan of Ohio — all aggressive partisans — to chair some of his subcommittees.

He also wants to organize aggressive oversight beyond his committee and plans to refer inquiries to other House panels, drawing even more incoming GOP chairmen to the cause of investigating the executive branch.

"As Clint Eastwood says, a man needs to know his limitations," Issa said in the interview. "With other committees, we have good working relationships. Our committees have some areas of primary jurisdiction, including the federal work force, procurement and the Postal Service. We will take care of our core knitting, but we have very narrow legislative jurisdiction."

While he promises an ambitious — and some say confrontational — agenda, Issa is making overtures to the Obama administration: He already has a meeting scheduled with Vice President Joe Biden to discuss stimulus oversight.

But Issa's specific plans bring a certain reality to what has been known for months: Oversight of the Obama administration and congressional Democrats will be a central purpose for the new Republican House.

To give an idea of how expansive Issa's oversight plans are, look at the record of Rep. Henry Waxman (D-Calif.) when he chaired the oversight committee during in the 110th Congress during George W. Bush's presidency. Waxman held 203 oversight hearings in two years; Issa has signaled he's prepared to hold about 280 in just one year.

Issa sees the committee's role as not policy but to "measure failures." He likens his job to seeing "whether the fuel being consumed meets the specifications." And he isn't looking to catch witnesses off guard, saying that "oversight should be done with a balance for the American people and not as a gotcha."

Issa won't have a shortage of targets. He's been hammering for better tracking of the stimulus and has a growing list of other investigative targets, including the housing meltdown and the bank bailout.

Earlier this year, Issa pressured Oversight and Government Reform Committee Chairman Edolphus Towns (D-N.Y.) to issue a subpoena to Countrywide Financial about its VIP loan program. Other investigations during the minority included inquests into actions taken during the financial meltdown and a look at problems with Toyota automobiles.

There are already résumés piling up from people looking to join Issa's staff — mostly lawyers, a source said. Republicans have a good deal of hiring to do in the weeks ahead, although the House Republican Steering Committee will approve chairmen in December. Issa will most likely face no serious challenge.

In the coming weeks, Issa and his staff are also planning to reach out to the inspector general community and staffers at the various bureaucracies the committee will oversee.

Issa also is looking to dig into procurement and government contracting, and he seems sure to return to the Countrywide VIP program — which has subpoenaed records en route to the Capitol. He's also got inquiries into Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac's role in the financial collapse. And with earmarks all but gone from the Capitol, Issa will turn his fire toward the White House and the far larger sums of cash controlled by the executive branch at a time of huge deficits.

"We really want to study presidential earmarks and the grant-making process: How do we take all this discretionary money and see what is necessary," Issa said. "The debate on how to shrink the federal government is at the core of our problem of government not doing its job."

Issa is also pointedly looking to avoid probing what he seems to view as peripheral issues — like Waxman and former Chairman Tom Davis's foray into hearings on steroids in baseball.

"This is important, in contrast to hearings on steroids in baseball, where I felt that it was inherently wrong to get Roger Clemens to lie to Congress," Issa said. "The American people really want us to shrink government."

Issa also wants to avoid the sometimes petty controversies that enmeshed Rep. Dan Burton (R-Ind.) as committee chairman during the Clinton presidency and sometimes made him the issue.

Another, more cosmetic change could be coming up the pipe.

"We will seriously consider a name change back to what it was," Issa said, hinting the committee will again be named the Government Reform and Oversight Committee — "to emphasize government reform and not oversight."

© 2010 Capitol News Company, LLC

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 9, 2010 9:58 AM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: just a little self-promotion

I know I'm not supposed to lift my head from the QDDR, but just thought you would like to see this – it's for all the ideas you wanted promoted when you picked me. AM

---

The Crossroads Nation

By DAVID BROOKS

Bill Clinton used to talk about building a bridge to the 21st century. President Obama talks about laying down a "new foundation." But Clinton was always vague about what the land on the other side of that bridge was going to look like, and Obama is vague about what edifice is going to go on top of that foundation.

They are vague because nobody is clear about what sort of country America is going to be in 2030 or 2050. Nobody has quite defined America's coming economic identity.

In thinking about this question, it probably helps to start at the beginning. Five hundred years ago, agriculture was the major economic activity. One hundred years ago, it was industrial production. Now, of course, we're living in an information age. Innovation and creativity are the engines of economic growth.

Howard Gardner of Harvard once put together a composite picture of the extraordinarily creative person: She comes from a little place somewhat removed from the center of power and influence. As an adolescent, she feels herself outgrowing her own small circle. She moves to a metropolis and finds a group of people who share her passions and interests. She gets involved with a team to create something amazing.

Then, at some point, she finds her own problem, which is related to and yet different from the problems that concern others in her group. She breaks off and struggles and finally emerges with some new thing. She brings it back to her circle. It is tested, refined and improved.

The main point in this composite story is that creativity is not a solitary process. It happens within networks. It happens when talented people get together, when idea systems and mentalities merge.

Now imagine you are this creative person in the year 2010, 2025 or 2050. You are living in some small town in Ukraine or Kenya or some other place, foreign or domestic. You long to break out and go to a place where people are gathering to think about the things you are thinking about, creating the things you want to create.

If you are passionate about fashion, maybe you will go to Paris. If it's engineering, maybe it'll be Germany. But if you are passionate about many other spheres, I suspect you'll want to be in America.

You'll want to be in the U.S. because English has become the global language. You'll want to come because American universities lead the world in research and draw many of the best minds from all corners of the earth.

You'll want to be there because American institutions are relatively free from corruption. Intellectual property is protected. Huge venture capital funds already exist.

Moreover, the United States is a universal nation. There are already people there with connections all over the world. A nation of immigrants is more permeable than say, Chinese society.

You also observe that America hosts the right kind of networks — ones that are flexible and intense. Study after study suggests that America is one of those societies with high social trust. Americans build large, efficient organizations that are not bound by the circles of kinship and clan. Study after study finds that Americans are not hierarchical. American children are raised to challenge their parents. American underlings are relatively free to challenge their bosses. In this country you're less likely to have to submit to authority.

From this story you can see that economic power in the 21st century is not going to look like economic power in the 20th century. The crucial fact about the new epoch is that creativity needs hubs. Information networks need junction points. The nation that can make itself the crossroads to the world will have tremendous economic and political power.

In 2009, Anne-Marie Slaughter, now director of policy planning at the State Department, wrote an essay for Foreign Affairs in which she laid out the logic of this new situation: "In a networked world, the issue is no longer relative power, but centrality in an increasingly dense global web."

Slaughter's essay was titled "America's Edge." That is apt. Americans are now in a depressed state of mind. As China and India rise, nearly two-thirds of Americans believe their nation is in decline.

In fact, the U.S. is well situated to be the crossroads nation. It is well situated to be the center of global networks and to nurture the right kinds of networks. Building that America means doing everything possible to thicken connections: finance research to attract scientists; improve infrastructure to ease travel; fix immigration to funnel talent; reform taxes to attract superstars; make study abroad a rite of passage for college students; take advantage of the millions of veterans who have served overseas.

The nation with the thickest and most expansive networks will define the age. There's no reason to be pessimistic about that.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 9, 2010 10:05 AM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: RE: just a little self-promotion

Love it.

---

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Tuesday, November 09, 2010 9:58 AM
To: 'H'
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: just a little self-promotion

I know I'm not supposed to lift my head from the QDDR, but just thought you would like to see this – it's for all the ideas you wanted promoted when you picked me. AM

---

The Crossroads Nation

By DAVID BROOKS

Bill Clinton used to talk about building a bridge to the 21st century. President Obama talks about laying down a "new foundation." But Clinton was always vague about what the land on the other side of that bridge was going to look like, and Obama is vague about what edifice is going to go on top of that foundation.

They are vague because nobody is clear about what sort of country America is going to be in 2030 or 2050. Nobody has quite defined America's coming economic identity.

In thinking about this question, it probably helps to start at the beginning. Five hundred years ago, agriculture was the major economic activity. One hundred years ago, it was industrial production. Now, of course, we're living in an information age. Innovation and creativity are the engines of economic growth.

Howard Gardner of Harvard once put together a composite picture of the extraordinarily creative person: She comes from a little place somewhat removed from the center of power and influence. As an adolescent, she feels herself outgrowing her own small circle. She moves to a metropolis and finds a group of people who share her passions and interests. She gets involved with a team to create something amazing.

Then, at some point, she finds her own problem, which is related to and yet different from the problems that concern others in her group. She breaks off and struggles and finally emerges with some new thing. She brings it back to her circle. It is tested, refined and improved.

The main point in this composite story is that creativity is not a solitary process. It happens within networks. It happens when talented people get together, when idea systems and mentalities merge.

Now imagine you are this creative person in the year 2010, 2025 or 2050. You are living in some small town in Ukraine or Kenya or some other place, foreign or domestic. You long to break out and go to a place where people are gathering to think about the things you are thinking about, creating the things you want to create.

If you are passionate about fashion, maybe you will go to Paris. If it's engineering, maybe it'll be Germany. But if you are passionate about many other spheres, I suspect you'll want to be in America.

You'll want to be in the U.S. because English has become the global language. You'll want to come because American universities lead the world in research and draw many of the best minds from all corners of the earth.

You'll want to be there because American institutions are relatively free from corruption. Intellectual property is protected. Huge venture capital funds already exist.

Moreover, the United States is a universal nation. There are already people there with connections all over the world. A nation of immigrants is more permeable than say, Chinese society.

You also observe that America hosts the right kind of networks — ones that are flexible and intense. Study after study suggests that America is one of those societies with high social trust. Americans build large, efficient organizations that are not bound by the circles of kinship and clan. Study after study finds that Americans are not hierarchical. American children are raised to challenge their parents. American underlings are relatively free to challenge their bosses. In this country you're less likely to have to submit to authority.

From this story you can see that economic power in the 21st century is not going to look like economic power in the 20th century. The crucial fact about the new epoch is that creativity needs hubs. Information networks need junction points. The nation that can make itself the crossroads to the world will have tremendous economic and political power.

In 2009, Anne-Marie Slaughter, now director of policy planning at the State Department, wrote an essay for Foreign Affairs in which she laid out the logic of this new situation: "In a networked world, the issue is no longer relative power, but centrality in an increasingly dense global web."

Slaughter's essay was titled "America's Edge." That is apt. Americans are now in a depressed state of mind. As China and India rise, nearly two-thirds of Americans believe their nation is in decline.

In fact, the U.S. is well situated to be the crossroads nation. It is well situated to be the center of global networks and to nurture the right kinds of networks. Building that America means doing everything possible to thicken connections: finance research to attract scientists; improve infrastructure to ease travel; fix immigration to funnel talent; reform taxes to attract superstars; make study abroad a rite of passage for college students; take advantage of the millions of veterans who have served overseas.

The nation with the thickest and most expansive networks will define the age. There's no reason to be pessimistic about that.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 9, 2010 5:59 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Newt Gingrich: Hillary Clinton 'Terrific' Defense Secretary

From: Toiv, Nora F
Sent: Tuesday, November 09, 2010 5:03 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Newt Gingrich: Hillary Clinton 'Terrific' Defense Secretary

Newt Gingrich: Hillary Clinton 'Terrific' Defense Secretary

If President Obama decides to move Hillary Clinton to the Pentagon as part of a mid-term shake-up, he can count on some unlikely support -- from Newt Gingrich.

"She is knowledgeable, she is tough, I think that she'd be a very aggressive defender of the military in terms of what it needs, its budgets and its concerns," Gingrich told me.

The Washington rumor mill has been talking about Clinton moving over to the Pentagon for some time -- but the secretary of state told my colleague Cynthia McFadden that she has "made it clear that I love the job I have."

The former speaker of the House said he was impressed with Clinton when they served together on the Transformation Advisory Group for the Joint Forces Command.

"If she would take it she would be terrific," he told me.

"I'm not sure she would have quite as much fun," Gingrich added. "I think she probably would have an even better time being secretary of state."

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 9, 2010 6:33 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Pls start calls again

ok

---

From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, November 09, 2010 6:30 PM
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Subject: Pls start calls again

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: pverveer
Sent: Tuesday, November 9, 2010 7:23 PM
To: H
Subject: Welcome back!

B6

Your trip looked very prodcutive from here and thanks for embracing the women's initiatives in AU and NZ. Their governments were thrilled and the press was excellent. Lots of good work ahead.

The video for the women presidents was gratefully received. I sat with Lithuania, Slovakia and Liberia at dinner and they all mentioned it.

You were lucky to miss election day.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Lauren Jiloty <laurenjiloty
Sent: Tuesday, November 9, 2010 8:11 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Pls try the following

I didnt get it to my State account! So frustrating. but I see it here now... I'll get going on them

> From: HDR22@clintonemail.com
> To: Laurenjiloty
> Date: Tue, 9 Nov 2010 20:00:10 -0500
> Subject: Fw: Pls try the following
>
> Did you get this at state.gov?
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: H
> To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov' <JilotyLC@state.gov>
> Sent: Tue Nov 09 19:31:58 2010
> Subject: Pls try the following
>
> Murray
> Boxer
> Feingold
> Blumenthal
> Boccieri
> Bosweil
> Andrew Cuomo
> Mark Dayton
> Diane Denish
> Ted Deutch
> Dingell
> Steve Grossman
> Kanjorski
> Chris Carney
> Nita Lowey
> John Lynch
> Dan Maffei
> Joe Manchin
> Kendrick Meek
> Mikulski
> Libby Mitchell
> Gavin Newsom
> Martin O'Mallry
> Dan Onorato
> Rory Reid
> Loretta Sanchez
> Mark Schauer
> Ted Strickland
> Dina Titus
> Wasserman-Schultz

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 9, 2010 9:17 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: RE: Pls try the following

MS,
Here (below) is where we stand on calls. You left a lot of messages. The ones that are blank we have not yet tried. I'll mesh this with your call grid.
-Lauren
----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov' <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Nov 09 19:31:58 2010
Subject: Pls try the following

Murray - DONE
Boxer – She returned your call – she is in Hawaii with bad cell reception. She will try you back tomorrow.
Feingold – You LM.
Blumenthal – You LM.
Boccieri – You LM.
Boswell – DONE
Andrew Cuomo – You LM at his office (my cell number is bad).
Mark Dayton – You LM at his office.
Diane Denish – You LM.
Ted Deutch – You LM.
Dingell – You LM.
Steve Grossman – You LM.
Kanjorski
Chris Carney
Nita Lowey – You LM.
John Lynch
Dan Maffei – You LM.
Joe Manchin
Kendrick Meek
Mikulski - DONE
Libby Mitchell
Gavin Newsom
Martin O'Malley - DONE
Dan Onorato
Rory Reid
Loretta Sanchez
Mark Schauer
Ted Strickland
Dina Titus
Wasserman-Schultz

###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 9, 2010 11:21 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Commission on the Status of Women

Anyone else you want?

---

From: Jones, Kerri-Ann
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tue Nov 09 19:18:47 2010
Subject: Commission on the Status of Women

Cheryl,

As you know, we are working with Melanne on the upcoming Commission on the Status of Women/February 2011. The US has been asked to nominate experts to participate in interactive panels during the meeting. Specifically, experts should focus on the link between women's education and employment, women's participation in science and technology education and employment, women's access to and use of technology, or gender biases in scientific knowledge production and product design. We understand that US nominees are often not selected for these panels given needs to balance regional representations. Still, we should submit one or two names for consideration. Our suggested nominations would be [redacted] who could speak to any of the topical areas listed; Dr. [redacted] another possibility is [redacted] who just left DOE. Just wondering if S would have anyone else in particular she would like to put forward. B6

Thanks.
Kerri-Ann

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Jake Sullivan [redacted]
Sent: Tuesday, November 9, 2010 11:32 PM
To: H
Cc: millscd@state.gov; cheryl.mills[redacted]sullivanjj@state.gov
Subject: Re: QDDR

we will get you the most up-to-date chapter 3 tomorrow.

On Tue, Nov 9, 2010 at 10:23 PM, H <HDR22@clintonemail.com> wrote:
Will I get the revised chapter 3 tomorrow?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, November 10, 2010 8:18 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 11/10/10 Wednesday

8:15 am DEPART Private Residence *En route State Department

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING
9:15 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:30 am MANAGEMENT TEAM MEETING
10:00 am Deputy Secretary's Conference Room

10:15 am DIGITAL VIDEO CONFERENCE w/PALESTINIAN AUTHORITY
10:45 am PRIME MINISTER SALAM FAYYAD HST 2209 (Press Briefing Room)

10:50 am DEPART State Department *En route White House

11:00 am ARRIVE White House

11:00 am MEETING w/VICE PRESIDENT JOE BIDEN
12:00 pm Office of The Vice President, West Wing, The White House

12:00 pm DEPART White House, En route State Department

12:10 pm ARRIVE State Department

12:15 pm MEETING w/HEIFER INTERNATIONAL PRESIDENT JO LUCK
12:30 pm Secretary's Outer Office

12:30 pm OFFICE TIME
1:00 pm Secretary's Office

1:00 pm WORKING LUNCH w/EGYPTIAN FOREIGN MINISTER AHMED ALI
2:00 pm ABOUL GHEIT Madison/Monroe Rooms, 8th Floor

2:00 pm PRESS PREP
2:05 pm Secretary's Office

2:05 pm JOINT PRESS AVAILABILITY w/EGYPTIAN FOREIGN MINISTER ALI
2:20 pm ABOUL GHEIT Treaty Room, 7th Floor

2:30 pm OFFICE TIME
3:30 pm Secretary's Office

3:30 pm MEETING w/SLOVAK PRIME MINISTER IVETA RADICOVA
4:00 pm Secretary's Conference Room

4:15 pm DROP-BY EAP POST-TRIP CELEBRATION PARTY
4:45 pm HST 6205 (EAP Front Office)

5:00 pm PHOTO w/TRINIDAD AND TOBAGO PRIME MINISTER
5:10 pm KAMALA PERSAD-BISSESSAR East Hall, 7th Floor

Tbd pm DEPART State Department *En route Private Residence

Tbd pm ARRIVE Private Residence

###

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, November 10, 2010 10:41 AM
To: H
Subject: "Direct"

This is Jonathan's email on the issue:

[redacted] B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, November 10, 2010 3:40 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: FROM MIKE POSNER - trip report

FYI

---

From: Graze, Deborah E
Sent: Wednesday, November 10, 2010 1:07 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FROM MIKE POSNER - trip report

Jake, Cheryl,
Mike sent this note from Israel, and we will send to S as a note for the Secretary – wanted to give you an advance copy. Will share with Jeff Feltman and Mara Rudman too.
Regards, Deborah G

NOTE from Mike Posner for the Secretary
Tomorrow, Nov. 11, we are completing a four day visit to Israel. I am accompanied by Colonel (Ret.) David Graham, the Director of the Army Jag School in Charlottesville. This trip builds on our January visit in which we met with various Israeli officials, including the Chief of Staff of the IDF, to discuss follow-up to the Goldstone Report.

Our approach has been to offer our support and willingness to work with the Government of Israel to reframe the public debate from defensive (responding to Goldstone or Flotilla reports and resolutions at the UN, etc.) to a more pro-active narrative focused on the challenges of fighting an urban or asymmetrical war. We are having productive, and generally positive preliminary conversations about a possible GOI white paper that would: 1) set the context, outlining the challenges in fighting an asymmetrical conflict; 2) spell out the steps the IDF and other agencies have taken to address these challenges; and 3) identify ongoing challenges that Israel and other professional armies will need to address in the future.

We have been clear that this must be an Israeli initiative, not ours, but that we can help promote and use the report once it has been completed. Thus far we have met with Deputy Foreign Minister Dan Ayalon, Minister without Portfolio Benny Begin, Justice Minister Yaakov Neeman, and Deputy PM, Dan Meridor. Meridor, in particular is very interested and supportive of what we are exploring. Tomorrow we will meet with Gabi Ashkenazi, the IDF Chief of Staff, and with several other senior IDF officials, including General Avichai Mandelblit, the IDF's Judge Advocate, who has led the the government's investigation of the Goldstone/Cast Lead cases.

At this juncture we do not expect or need you to raise any of this with the PM or other Israeli officials. I simply wanted you to know what we are doing, and the status of these efforts, in case anyone in the Israeli delegation raises this with you.

End note

Deborah Graze
Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary
Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights, and Labor

U.S. Department of State
202 647 2590

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: aclb
Sent: Wednesday, November 10, 2010 8:15 PM
To: H
Cc: 'jake.sullivan
Subject: Note
Attachments: PLAN 10.11.2010.docx

Hi Hillary. Here is the note I promised. It is at least a first stab. I would be grateful if it could be kept just between us.

Best Tony

DISCLAIMER

WARNING – This email is only intended for the person to whom or entity to which it is addressed and, together with any files transmitted with it, is confidential and may also be privileged. If you are not the intended recipient, you must not copy, forward, use or rely on any part of it or disclose its contents to any person. If you have received it in error, please notify our system manager on +44 20 7647 7782 and delete all copies immediately.

Except where this email is sent in the usual course of our business, the views expressed in this email are those of the sender and not those of The Office of Tony Blair.

The Office of Tony Blair accepts no responsibility for software viruses and you should check for viruses before opening any attachments. Internet communications are not secure and therefore The Office of Tony Blair does not provide any guarantee or warranty that this email or any attachments shall remain confidential.

The Office of Tony Blair is a trading name of Windrush Ventures Limited and Windrush Ventures No.3 LP. Windrush Ventures Limited is a limited company registered in England and Wales with registered number 06397276. Its registered office is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL.

Windrush Ventures No. 3 LP is a limited partnership registered in England and Wales with registered number LP012665. Its registered office is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL. The members of Windrush Ventures No.3 LP are BDBCO No.819 Limited and Windrush Ventures No.2 LLP and the address at which each of these can be served is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL.

This email may relate to or be sent from other members of the Windrush group.

This email has been scanned by the MessageLabs Email Security System.
For more information please visit http://www.messagelabs.com/email

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 18, 2010 8:28 AM
To: 'stalbott [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: All praise on Haiti

Can you talk/meet today?

----- Original Message -----
From: Strobe Talbott <[redacted]>
To: H
Sent: Mon Jan 18 08:24:03 2010
Subject: All praise on Haiti

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 18, 2010 8:32 AM
To: 'stalbott[redacted] B6
Subject: Re: All praise on Haiti

Am on call now so let me know when you can talk later.

----- Original Message -----
From: Strobe Talbott <[redacted]>
To: H
Sent: Mon Jan 18 08:30:32 2010
Subject: Re: All praise on Haiti

At airport, flying to LA. Landing around 3 p.m. Available for a few minutes now on [redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Strobe Talbott
Sent: Mon Jan 18 08:28:29 2010
Subject: Re: All praise on Haiti

Can you talk/meet today?

----- Original Message -----
From: Strobe Talbott <[redacted]>
To: H
Sent: Mon Jan 18 08:24:03 2010
Subject: All praise on Haiti

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 18, 2010 8:58 AM
To: 'valenzuelaaa@state.gov'; 'KellyC@state.gov'
Subject: Venezuela

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 18, 2010 10:00 AM
To: 'KellyC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Venezuela

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Kelly, Craig A <KellyC@state.gov>
To: H; Valenzuela, Arturo A <ValenzuelaAA@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Jan 18 09:38:54 2010
Subject: Re: Venezuela

Madam Secretary:

[redacted] B5

Best,

Craig

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valenzuela, Arturo A; Kelly, Craig A
Sent: Mon Jan 18 08:58:13 2010
Subject: Venezuela

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 18, 2010 10:05 AM
To: 'oterom2@state.gov'; 'slaughtera@state.gov'; 'cheryl.mills[redacted] B6
Cc: 'FuchsMH@state.gov'; 'MauldinCP@state.gov'; 'SchonanderCE@state.gov'; 'JonesK@state.gov'; 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Water

Lona--pls pull together a meeting after Maria gets back on Feb 2 for us to review where we are. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Otero, Maria <OteroM2@state.gov>
To: H; Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>; cheryl.mills[redacted]<cheryl.mills[redacted]
Cc: Fuchs, Michael H <FuchsMH@state.gov>; Mauldin, Caroline P <MauldinCP@state.gov>; Schonander, Carl E <SchonanderCE@state.gov>; Jones, Kerri-Ann <JonesK@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Jan 18 09:41:13 2010
Subject: Re: Water

Dear all:

To update you, at G we have been working on water and World Water Day (the event planned takes place at the National Geographic Building), since I am taking on water as the key issue I am/will working on. I sent S a memo on water in December outlining our plans. Note that we are mandated to report to Congress annually as part of the "Water for the Poor" Act.

I have met with Kerri-Ann, with OES "water" staff in the last weeks to address this and also with several regional bureau A/S (Carson, Feltman, Blake so far) on water in the respective regions.
There is a great deal of interest on their part and we have started outlining specific initiatives that we could focus on.

We've also met on the Nile Basin Initiative, with World Bank "experts" leading NGOs, McKinsey, etc. I've also spoken to Raj (USAID allocated about $480 million in FY 2009 to water, and MCC about $500 million) but of course he has been unable to focus on this. And Cheryl and I haven't spoken yet about Food Security/water.

[redacted] B5

Best,
Maria

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Otero, Maria; Slaughter, Anne-Marie; 'cheryl.mills[redacted]<cheryl.mills[redacted]
Cc: Fuchs, Michael H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 21:53:19 2010
Subject: Water

Maria, Anne-Marie and Cheryl,

March 22 is World Water Day (who knew?) Could we have a policy ready to announce by then? I have some ideas so when we all get a chance to breathe, let's discuss. Here's to H2O.

[redacted] B5

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 18, 2010 10:33 AM
To: 'KellyC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Venezuela

Good. Let's document all of this.

----- Original Message -----
From: Kelly, Craig A <KellyC@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Jan 18 10:29:43 2010
Subject: Re: Venezuela

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Kelly, Craig A
Sent: Mon Jan 18 10:00:01 2010
Subject: Re: Venezuela

----- Original Message -----
From: Kelly, Craig A <KellyC@state.gov>
To: H; Valenzuela, Arturo A <ValenzuelaAA@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Jan 18 09:38:54 2010
Subject: Re: Venezuela

Madam Secretary:

Best,

Craig

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valenzuela, Arturo A; Kelly, Craig A
Sent: Mon Jan 18 08:58:13 2010
Subject: Venezuela

B5

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 18, 2010 11:12 AM
To: 'oterom2@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Water

Ok. Safe travels.

----- Original Message -----
From: Otero, Maria <OteroM2@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Jan 18 11:01:48 2010
Subject: Re: Water

Hillary:
I had planned to meet with you on water after returning from Bolivia's inauguration - there is so much we can do. Haiti is beyond what one's spirit can absorb. I am grateful that my former colleagues from ACCION, missing until friday, are safe.
Best,
Maria

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Otero, Maria; Slaughter, Anne-Marie; 'cheryl.mills [redacted] <cheryl.mills [redacted] B6
Cc: Fuchs, Michael H
Sent: Sun Jan 17 21:53:19 2010
Subject: Water

Maria, Anne-Marie and Cheryl,

March 22 is World Water Day (who knew?) Could we have a policy ready to announce by then? I have some ideas so when we all get a chance to breathe, let's discuss. Here's to H2O.

[redacted] B5

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 7:23 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Hope you are well, where ever you get this-- below are ideas re: education corps for Haiti that you asked for Great ideas (no surprise). Let's work toward solid proposal maybe to Red Cross and Clinton Foundation since they have unencumbered $

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Jan 19 03:43:19 2010
Subject: Fw: Hope you are well, where ever you get this-- below are ideas re: education corps for Haiti that you asked for

Read all the way down (2 emails)

Cdm

---

From: David Domenici <[redacted]> B6
To: David Domenici <[redacted]>; Mills, Cheryl D; Cheryl Mills <[redacted]>
Sent: Mon Jan 18 21:05:40 2010
Subject: RE: Hope you are well, where ever you get this-- below are ideas re: education corps for Haiti that you asked for

One other thought.

If the idea of building network of small new schools is just nuts given the infrastructure challenges, an alternative is more of the 'street school' approach. We take storefronts, little mom and pop storefronts, etc...and do minor reconfiguration and you have a whole set of little street schools clustered around central location. This could work, poses some challenges re: isolation of teachers, ability to offer a robust set of classes/offerings, but can still do the job, and can still have clear grand openings to help jumpstart culture, etc.

dd

---

From: David Domenici
Sent: Monday, January 18, 2010 7:55 PM
To: 'Mills, Cheryl D'; 'Cheryl Mills'
Subject: Hope you are well, where ever you get this-- below are ideas re: education corps for Haiti that you asked for

Hey Cheryl,

Here are some quick thoughts on re-building school infrastructure in Port-au-Prince. Feel free to share with whomever you'd like.

I have little idea of the larger context here – how many schools/kids are we looking at, but one thing we've learned in the US in the last 5 years is that good teachers are the #1 lever of change in education. If we got 1,000 really great teachers into Port-au-Prince (w/ even a modicum of support and materials), they'd make a big difference and touch the lives of 30,000-60,000 kids.

I think this is totally doable, in short-order, in a magnificent way that could set the foundation for a well-educated generation of Haitians who could lead the country out of poverty, to self-sustainability, self-governance and openness.

To do--

Goal 1: Bring immediate influx of human capital into education sector in concentrated areas, and map out plan for long-term development of teachers/human capital.

Goal 2: Build curriculum, instructional materials that will support current Haitian elementary age students learning the academic and related skills they need to lead country to long-term sustainability.

Goal 3: Build/reconstruct schools and training centers that will support high quality education, and on their own, motivate and inspire children, families, and communities to send children to school.

Goal 4: Create (develop) family, community, economic, cultural, socio-political infrastructure that encourages and support all children going to school through elementary school, with goal of eradicating illiteracy and expanding the average level of education for Port-a-Prince residents to the [6th/8th] grade.

Goal 1: Human Capital:

Create Haiti Teacher Corps. Model loosely off of Peace Corps/Teach for America, CityYear

- Teacher corps (US): Recruit, train, and place 500-1000 teachers from US this spring and summer. We can do this.

o Recruiting: Limit variable this year, and build up and out as we go. This spring we go to Georgetown, Univ of Maryland and Univ of Miami and University of Florida/S. Florida. Given crisis, current opportunities in the US, we could easily hire 500 college graduates of very high quality from 4 major universities under 2 year contracts.

o Summer institute is 8 weeks in US; language training, intensive teacher training; onsite at two major universities (College Park, Univ. of Miami).

o Language/culture training: TDB – find the best folks out there to train in French/Creole, and Haitian culture, current socio-political situation – 50% of the training program.

o Academic training: We'll work w/ TFA and others and develop 8 week intensive teacher training program for other 50% of program.

- Teacher Corps (Haitian):

o I need to learn more on this...but this would likely be critical both short-and long-term.

o Need to know who/how to recruit. Avoid political pitfalls; focus on what we've learned about good teachers—you want people who have excelled in something—almost anything; so, we set up recruiting team on the ground in Haiti to find cohort of 500 new teachers; training is nearly identical to US teaching corp (i.e., modeled off of TFA summer institute).

o Training: either bring them over to US to live and learn w/ US counterparts, or if that's too precarious, look to move them out of the city for 6-8 weeks over the summer. Find space 100 miles out and build summer camp/institute for them.

- Teacher leaders/principals/trainers:

o Much easier than you'd think. Huge network now in the charter and ed reform community of hard-working, mission-driven teacher-leaders who would take this on.

o (US Based) TFA/New Teacher Project alumni are in schools all over the US. They have taught for 2-6 years, want a chance to do something totally meaningful. This is is. We'll recruit 100-200 of them, and they will lead cohorts of 20 teachers...

o Haiti-based: Less clear what the teacher-leader pipeline is like...but we can figure out and get whoever we can.

- Compensation, related.

o We should build dorms/apts for people. Serve food in cafeteria's on-site at the schools; have community kitchens available, etc.

o All US staff gets paid minimally during their tour/commitment, but earns stipends/completion bonuses. If folks convinced their expenses will be covered, they will have money to spend, we then backload this. So, might be a $10,000 salary and a $10,000 bonus upon completion. You live cheap; two years later, you get check that amounts to what you would have saved if you had been living, working, paying bills, etc. in the US.

o Not sure about how to do Haitian pay. But structure similarly.

- What do we need to accomplish the Human Capital Goal?

o In the US, not much.

§ A small staff of the right people could recruit, interview, assess and hire 500 corp members and we could get that done between Feb 1 and June 1, 2010—easily.

§ Cost:

- 2-4 staff on board by 2.1; 10-15 staff on board by 3.1.10; that team will get everyone hired by 6.1.10

· Summer training institutes: 500-100 teachers, housing at universities; training/supervision staff at 1:20 ratio to recruits

· 8.1.10—Teaching Corp heads to Haiti, ongoing cost of housing, stipends/salary, health care, training/supervision, etc (we could build out draft operating budget quickly, but not doing that now).

o In Haiti, less clear, but I think if we identify the right people, we'd concurrently recruit, interview, assess, hire 500 people.

§ Staffing and Cost: See notes above re: US recruitment and training. Assess current status in Haiti, and set up staffing, recruiting, hr function.

- Concurrently, we have team that is developing summer training materials, and working on curriculum/content (see below).

- Concurrently, we have team that is working on facilities (see below)

- Concurrently, we have team working on community outreach (see below).

Goal 2: Build a robust curriculum and teacher instruction program

We need to immediately tilt teaching and learning in the early grades to the skills and contents that are necessary in Haiti so that it people can enable it grow and develop economically, politically.

I am not a curriculum expert, but I think this is really doable, as well, so long as we get the right team—which in this case is likely a team of leading experts from Haiti, possibly other countries that have intentionally undergone an intensive ramp-up in the education sector, and US curriculum writers.

- US-Team:

o Similar to above, there is incredible talent in the charters, and in a few major cities where structural education reform has taken hold.

o We just need a small team to join us for 1 year to help us jump start the project.

- Haiti/Other countries:

o We need to talk w/ folks in Haiti and find current state of curriculum, standards, instructional guides, books, materials, etc.

- Backwards Mapping: This is not as hard as it seems.

o We get the right people to help us figure out what a 10-12 year old Haitian should know and we map backwards, all the way to preschool.

o Once we get an end goal in key areas – math, reading, writing, history/social studies, science...we map backwards and start to define what we will teach.

o And once we decide this, we use some of the tools we've developed in the US in the last 5-10 years to help us write curriculum, produce instructional materials.

o This will be a jumbled mess to start...but will work and sort itself out.

o We build it in clusters and in modules that can be swapped in and out, and mixed and matched. You want to give teachers tools so they can be successful with kids of different ages and abilities, particularly early on when we're likely to be operating more like one-room school houses than grade level schools we're used to here.

o We build in assessments, standards, and teach teachers how to recognize when kids are falling behind, how to build in supports and tutorials.

o The goal is to get large cohort of younger kids, I think, who start to learn and be taught to standards...all the while, we push hard in the upper grades, knowing it will be a lot less clear (and possibly much more directed towards helping current teens develop basic skills they need to be employable and contributing members of the rebuilding efforts –so this may be basic literacy, key vocational skills, etc.).

- Cost/staffing: Small US team that works with Haitian/other country team. Within a year or so, this team should be Haiti-based, w/ possible long-term support/membership from the US team. The start-up team sets up framework, establishing learning standards, builds tools and cranks out curricular materials—some of which are developed specifically for Haiti, but many of which may be translations from high quality materials from US and elsewhere.

Goal 3: Build high quality, durable schools that entice families, children into education.

In spite of current situation, this seems like another very doable goal.

- Get some schools built quickly to entice attendance.

o Once rebuilding starts up, we can build schools quickly, affordably. And once they are up, if done correctly, they will immediately be attractive to families and communities. This, ironically, will be the case if we can get schools up quickly—while much of the other infrastructure is still in poor shape. Families will want kids in schools if the schools are safe, offer food, health care and structure—much of which will be wanting in devastated, poor neighborhoods.

- I'm not facilities expert, either; this is an area where we can look to other examples in the developing world for best practices. Nonprofits and governments have worked together to build great schools in many places in Africa, South America, and even recently in the Middle East.

- To think about: Consider technology and technology infrastructure as a part of the initial construction plan so it's not add-on later.

- To think about: Keeping the schools small, functional, really basic will help us get them up; including significant health care and related services complicates planning, build-out, but increases functionality.

- Cost/staffing: I don't have enough knowledge about this, particularly in Haiti. I think it would be quite easy to find the best models and quickly develop turnkey model for design/build that would ensure functionality, safety, and cost compliance.

- Once we have this, we either develop this capacity internally, or contract out and get these built, quickly.

Goal 4: Create family, community impetus for all school age children to be in school

This is both the end-game and a necessary condition along the way.

- The simpleton in me thinks that highly engaged, spirited teachers, inside safe, modern school buildings that serve healthy meals at no charge will, for some period of time (years) be a catalyst for socio-political change. And if we can get traction for a few years, and get large cohorts of young children actively engaged in school, then it will be hard to unwind the long-term, salutary benefits.

- Clearly, if families remain in poverty, and adults have no means to earn enough money to support families, then children of all ages, but particularly as they move toward teen years, will be attracted to alternatives other than school—some legitimate, but low-wage, and others illegal and destructive.

- In short-term, while we are developing program, we should be doing extensive community outreach and in all cases, getting neighborhoods and communities engaged in the pre-planning process. Families everywhere get excited about a new school, new teachers, and a new chance. And w should play on this—this will enable us to do necessary planning around enrollment, student/family needs, etc. We shouldn't sort of move slowly from no school to some school, we should go from no school to a new school and fresh start—even if that delays opening a bit. The first day should be major community event, that everyone can reflect upon and hold to in difficult times.

Gotta run. See you shortly.

xo,

dd

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 7:23 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Hope you are well, where ever you get this-- below are ideas re: education corps for Haiti that you asked for

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Jan 19 03:43:19 2010
Subject: Fw: Hope you are well, where ever you get this-- below are ideas re: education corps for Haiti that you asked for

Read all the way down (2 emails)

Cdm

---

From: David Domenici <[redacted]> B6
To: David Domenici <[redacted]>; Mills, Cheryl D; Cheryl Mills [redacted]
Sent: Mon Jan 18 21:05:40 2010
Subject: RE: Hope you are well, where ever you get this-- below are ideas re: education corps for Haiti that you asked for

One other thought.

If the idea of building network of small new schools is just nuts given the infrastructure challenges, an alternative is more of the 'street school' approach. We take storefronts, little mom and pop storefronts, etc...and do minor reconfiguration and you have a whole set of little street schools clustered around central location. This could work, poses some challenges re: isolation of teachers, ability to offer a robust set of classes/offerings, but can still do the job, and can still have clear grand openings to help jumpstart culture, etc.

dd

---

From: David Domenici
Sent: Monday, January 18, 2010 7:55 PM
To: 'Mills, Cheryl D'; 'Cheryl Mills'
Subject: Hope you are well, where ever you get this-- below are ideas re: education corps for Haiti that you asked for

Hey Cheryl,

Here are some quick thoughts on re-building school infrastructure in Port-au-Prince. Feel free to share with whomever you'd like.

I have little idea of the larger context here – how many schools/kids are we looking at, but one thing we've learned in the US in the last 5 years is that good teachers are the #1 lever of change in education. If we got 1,000 really great teachers into Port-au-Prince (w/ even a modicum of support and materials), they'd make a big difference and touch the lives of 30,000-60,000 kids.

I think this is totally doable, in short-order, in a magnificent way that could set the foundation for a well-educated generation of Haitians who could lead the country out of poverty, to self-sustainability, self-governance and openness.

To do--

Goal 1: Bring immediate influx of human capital into education sector in concentrated areas, and map out plan for long-term development of teachers/human capital.

Goal 2: Build curriculum, instructional materials that will support current Haitian elementary age students learning the academic and related skills they need to lead country to long-term sustainability.

Goal 3: Build/reconstruct schools and training centers that will support high quality education, and on their own, motivate and inspire children, families, and communities to send children to school.

Goal 4: Create (develop) family, community, economic, cultural, socio-political infrastructure that encourages and support all children going to school through elementary school, with goal of eradicating illiteracy and expanding the average level of education for Port-a-Prince residents to the [6th/8th] grade.

Goal 1: Human Capital:

Create Haiti Teacher Corps. Model loosely off of Peace Corps/Teach for America, CityYear

- Teacher corps (US): Recruit, train, and place 500-1000 teachers from US this spring and summer. We can do this.

o Recruiting: Limit variable this year, and build up and out as we go. This spring we go to Georgetown, Univ of Maryland and Univ of Miami and University of Florida/S. Florida. Given crisis, current opportunities in the US, we could easily hire 500 college graduates of very high quality from 4 major universities under 2 year contracts.

o Summer institute is 8 weeks in US; language training, intensive teacher training; onsite at two major universities (College Park, Univ. of Miami).

o Language/culture training: TDB – find the best folks out there to train in French/Creole, and Haitian culture, current socio-political situation – 50% of the training program.

o Academic training: We'll work w/ TFA and others and develop 8 week intensive teacher training program for other 50% of program.

- Teacher Corps (Haitian):

o I need to learn more on this...but this would likely be critical both short-and long-term.

o Need to know who/how to recruit. Avoid political pitfalls; focus on what we've learned about good teachers—you want people who have excelled in something—almost anything; so, we set up recruiting team on the ground in Haiti to find cohort of 500 new teachers; training is nearly identical to US teaching corp (i.e., modeled off of TFA summer institute).

o Training: either bring them over to US to live and learn w/ US counterparts, or if that's too precarious, look to move them out of the city for 6-8 weeks over the summer. Find space 100 miles out and build summer camp/institute for them.

- Teacher leaders/principals/trainers:

o Much easier than you'd think. Huge network now in the charter and ed reform community of hard-working, mission-driven teacher-leaders who would take this on.

o (US Based) TFA/New Teacher Project alumni are in schools all over the US. They have taught for 2-6 years, want a chance to do something totally meaningful. This is is. We'll recruit 100-200 of them, and they will lead cohorts of 20 teachers...

o Haiti-based: Less clear what the teacher-leader pipeline is like...but we can figure out and get whoever we can.

- Compensation, related.

o We should build dorms/apts for people. Serve food in cafeteria's on-site at the schools; have community kitchens available, etc.

o All US staff gets paid minimally during their tour/commitment, but earns stipends/completion bonuses. If folks convinced their expenses will be covered, they will have money to spend, we then backload this. So, might be a $10,000 salary and a $10,000 bonus upon completion. You live cheap; two years later, you get check that amounts to what you would have saved if you had been living, working, paying bills, etc. in the US.

o Not sure about how to do Haitian pay. But structure similarly.

- What do we need to accomplish the Human Capital Goal?

o In the US, not much.

§ A small staff of the right people could recruit, interview, assess and hire 500 corp members and we could get that done between Feb 1 and June 1, 2010—easily.

§ Cost:

· 2-4 staff on board by 2.1; 10-15 staff on board by 3.1.10; that team will get everyone hired by 6.1.10

· Summer training institutes: 500-100 teachers, housing at universities; training/supervision staff at 1:20 ratio to recruits

· 8.1.10—Teaching Corp heads to Haiti, ongoing cost of housing, stipends/salary, health care, training/supervision, etc (we could build out draft operating budget quickly, but not doing that now).

o In Haiti, less clear, but I think if we identify the right people, we'd concurrently recruit, interview, assess, hire 500 people.

§ Staffing and Cost: See notes above re: US recruitment and training. Assess current status in Haiti, and set up staffing, recruiting, hr function.

- Concurrently, we have team that is developing summer training materials, and working on curriculum/content (see below).

- Concurrently, we have team that is working on facilities (see below)

- Concurrently, we have team working on community outreach (see below).

Goal 2: Build a robust curriculum and teacher instruction program

We need to immediately tilt teaching and learning in the early grades to the skills and contents that are necessary in Haiti so that it people can enable it grow and develop economically, politically.

I am not a curriculum expert, but I think this is really doable, as well, so long as we get the right team—which in this case is likely a team of leading experts from Haiti, possibly other countries that have intentionally undergone an intensive ramp-up in the education sector, and US curriculum writers.

- US-Team:

o Similar to above, there is incredible talent in the charters, and in a few major cities where structural education reform has taken hold.

o We just need a small team to join us for 1 year to help us jump start the project.

- Haiti/Other countries:

o We need to talk w/ folks in Haiti and find current state of curriculum, standards, instructional guides, books, materials, etc.

- Backwards Mapping: This is not as hard as it seems.

o We get the right people to help us figure out what a 10-12 year old Haitian should know and we map backwards, all the way to preschool.

o Once we get an end goal in key areas – math, reading, writing, history/social studies, science...we map backwards and start to define what we will teach.

o And once we decide this, we use some of the tools we've developed in the US in the last 5-10 years to help us write curriculum, produce instructional materials.

o This will be a jumbled mess to start...but will work and sort itself out.

o We build it in clusters and in modules that can be swapped in and out, and mixed and matched. You want to give teachers tools so they can be successful with kids of different ages and abilities, particularly early on when we're likely to be operating more like one-room school houses than grade level schools we're used to here.

o We build in assessments, standards, and teach teachers how to recognize when kids are falling behind, how to build in supports and tutorials.

o The goal is to get large cohort of younger kids, I think, who start to learn and be taught to standards...all the while, we push hard in the upper grades, knowing it will be a lot less clear (and possibly much more directed towards helping current teens develop basic skills they need to be employable and contributing members of the rebuilding efforts –so this may be basic literacy, key vocational skills, etc.).

- Cost/staffing: Small US team that works with Haitian/other country team. Within a year or so, this team should be Haiti-based, w/ possible long-term support/membership from the US team. The start-up team sets up framework, establishing learning standards, builds tools and cranks out curricular materials—some of which are developed specifically for Haiti, but many of which may be translations from high quality materials from US and elsewhere.

Goal 3: Build high quality, durable schools that entice families, children into education.

In spite of current situation, this seems like another very doable goal.

- Get some schools built quickly to entice attendance.

o Once rebuilding starts up, we can build schools quickly, affordably. And once they are up, if done correctly, they will immediately be attractive to families and communities. This, ironically, will be the case if we can get schools up quickly—while much of the other infrastructure is still in poor shape. Families will want kids in schools if the schools are safe, offer food, health care and structure—much of which will be wanting in devastated, poor neighborhoods.

- I'm not facilities expert, either; this is an area where we can look to other examples in the developing world for best practices. Nonprofits and governments have worked together to build great schools in many places in Africa, South America, and even recently in the Middle East.

- To think about: Consider technology and technology infrastructure as a part of the initial construction plan so it's not add-on later.

- To think about: Keeping the schools small, functional, really basic will help us get them up; including significant health care and related services complicates planning, build-out, but increases functionality.

- Cost/staffing: I don't have enough knowledge about this, particularly in Haiti. I think it would be quite easy to find the best models and quickly develop turnkey model for design/build that would ensure functionality, safety, and cost compliance.

- Once we have this, we either develop this capacity internally, or contract out and get these built, quickly.

Goal 4: Create family, community impetus for all school age children to be in school

This is both the end-game and a necessary condition along the way.

- The simpleton in me thinks that highly engaged, spirited teachers, inside safe, modern school buildings that serve healthy meals at no charge will, for some period of time (years) be a catalyst for socio-political change. And if we can get traction for a few years, and get large cohorts of young children actively engaged in school, then it will be hard to unwind the long-term, salutary benefits.

- Clearly, if families remain in poverty, and adults have no means to earn enough money to support families, then children of all ages, but particularly as they move toward teen years, will be attracted to alternatives other than school—some legitimate, but low-wage, and others illegal and destructive.

- In short-term, while we are developing program, we should be doing extensive community outreach and in all cases, getting neighborhoods and communities engaged in the pre-planning process. Families everywhere get excited about a new school, new teachers, and a new chance. And w should play on this—this will enable us to do necessary planning around enrollment, student/family needs, etc. We shouldn't sort of move slowly from no school to some school, we should go from no school to a new school and fresh start—even if that delays opening a bit. The first day should be major community event, that everyone can reflect upon and hold to in difficult times.

Gotta run. See you shortly.

xo,

dd

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, November 10, 2010 8:24 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Can you do more calls tonight--starting w those who returned my calls?

Yes- ill get working on them now

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Wed Nov 10 20:05:21 2010
Subject: Can you do more calls tonight--starting w those who returned my calls?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 9:09 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Cuba-USG Cooperation re Haiti

I agree.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 19 20:58:28 2010
Subject: FW: Cuba-USG Cooperation re Haiti

FYI – I think we should do

From: Reynoso, Julissa
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 5:46 PM
To: Haiti DLC Distro; Merten, Kenneth H; Lindwall, David E; O'Neill, Maura (AID/A) Subject: Cuba-USG Cooperation re Haiti
Importance: High

Interesting offer to cooperate re Haiti by Cuban Govt. FYI. Julissa

From: Zuniga, Ricardo F
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 3:07 PM
To: TaskForce-1
Cc: 'Gray, Eugene'; Reynoso, Julissa; Kelly, Craig A; Webster, Christopher W; De Pirro, Velia M
Subject: FW: Haiti Note
Importance: High

Task Force – the attached diplomatic note was shared with PDAS Kelly by Cuban Interests Section Chief of Mission Jorge Bolaños today at 2:30 pm. It is an offer to cooperate in Haiti relief work, information regarding Cuban relief efforts in Haiti, and a request for info regarding USG relief operations on the ground in Haiti. WHA is following up on this matter, but pls convey this information to appropriate USAID and Task Force officials. We are prepared to offer medicine and other humanitarian supplies to Cuban relief personnel and have conveyed this to the Cuban government.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 9:25 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Border Issues Update

Ok. Anything else to discuss? Hope you get some sleep.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 19 21:00:00 2010
Subject: FW: Border Issues Update

fyi

From: Reynoso, Julissa
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 5:40 PM
To: Haiti DLC Distro; Schwartz, Eric P; Robinson, David M; Powell, Catherine
Cc: De Pirro, Velia M
Subject: FW: Border Issues Update

Border still functional and migration apparently under control. Julissa

From: Norman, Alain G
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 4:47 PM
To: Reynoso, Julissa; De Pirro, Velia M; Smith, Willard T; Schadrack, Geoffrey F
Cc: Schimmel, Mike R; Lambert, Christopher A; Fitzgibbons, Timothy T
Subject: Border Issues Update

The latest regarding border issues:

a) Per EmbOff, border at Jimani remained disorganized but functional as in recent days.

b) The flow of persons across the border is constant, but no mass influx. However, official figures under-report the numbers of people crossing, as the data reflect only those being processed correctly. Some Haitians are sneaking across the border, per USG official. Haitian media also report "tens of thousands" leaving Port-au-Prince, some for the DR border. However, police officials say they have not seen increased illegal entry attempts in the mountains around the Jimani crossing.

c) A Haitian immigration official said that as of 1pm on 1/19 he had issued approximately 600 laissez-passes to travelers without documents. Dominican authorities at the other side of the border crossing are generally turning away travelers without a valid visa or official travel document. Medical emergency cases continue being allowed in.

d) The border crossing at Jimani was closed for 45 minutes after the Haitian colonel in charge of customs on the Haitian side began demanding "manifests" from vehicles trying to bring assistance across. GODR officials managed to talk the colonel into backing down, but plan to seek his removal. (Note: It is unclear whether this was an attempt at rent-seeking by the Haitian official, but some reporting implied that. End Note).

e) As the next Market Day in Jimani will be Thursday, efforts are already underway to see if market activities that day can be organized so as not to block/hamper through-put of assistance / evacuation vehicles.

SBU

This email is UNCLASSIFIED based on the definitions provided in E.O.12958.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 9:25 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Year-end report

Thx. I'll be ready to discuss tomorrow.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 19 20:17:17 2010
Subject: Year-end report

A draft of the year-end report is coming your way with Huma. It definitely needs your magic touch. I've done my best to craft something readable (and useful) in the midst of all the craziness.

Derek has read and commented. Cheryl will give her comments tomorrow. I'd be happy to circulate it to others who you would like to have weigh in.

Look forward to discussing tomorrow.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 7:31 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: It Never Rains.....

I didn't know they were doing operations in the conference room. Can we get some details--and promise new carpet?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Jan 20 07:19:53 2010
Subject: FW: It Never Rains.....

fyi

From: Merten, Kenneth H
Sent: Tuesday, January 19, 2010 10:53 PM
To: Smith, Daniel B; Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A
Cc: 'Susan Merten'
Subject: It Never Rains.....

I just got called by the French Ambo. The [redacted] has had a cerebral haemmorage and needs to be medivaced. We're working on getting [redacted] on a plane to Miami. [redacted] was medivaced today. Army doctors tell me they just did their 100th operation in our multi-purpose (aptly named) conference room – including 4 amputations. They joked: "Sorry, but you're gonna need a new carpet sir." B6

Let's see what tomorrow brings....

Kenneth Merten

Ambassador

U.S. Embassy Port-au-Prince, Haiti

Tel: 509-2-229-8000

SBU

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, November 10, 2010 8:56 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: just a little self-promotion

Many thanks. And we're getting there, I PROMISE you. AM

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, November 10, 2010 8:55 PM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Subject: Re: just a little self-promotion

As I told you today--well-deserved kudos!

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Nov 09 09:58:12 2010
Subject: just a little self-promotion

I know I'm not supposed to lift my head from the QDDR, but just thought you would like to see this – it's for all the ideas you wanted promoted when you picked me. AM

---

The Crossroads Nation

By DAVID BROOKS
<http://topics.nytimes.com/top/opinion/editorialsandoped/oped/columnists/davidbrooks/index.html?inline=nyt-per>

Bill Clinton used to talk about building a bridge to the 21st century. President Obama talks about laying down a "new foundation." But Clinton was always vague about what the land on the other side of that bridge was going to look like, and Obama is vague about what edifice is going to go on top of that foundation.

They are vague because nobody is clear about what sort of country America is going to be in 2030 or 2050. Nobody has quite defined America's coming economic identity.

In thinking about this question, it probably helps to start at the beginning. Five hundred years ago, agriculture was the major economic activity. One hundred years ago, it was industrial production. Now, of course, we're living in an information age. Innovation and creativity are the engines of economic growth.

Howard Gardner of Harvard once put together a composite picture of the extraordinarily creative person: She comes from a little place somewhat removed from the center of power and influence. As an adolescent, she feels herself outgrowing her own small circle. She moves to a metropolis and finds a group of people who share her passions and interests. She gets involved with a team to create something amazing.

Then, at some point, she finds her own problem, which is related to and yet different from the problems that concern others in her group. She breaks off and struggles and finally emerges with some new thing. She brings it back to her circle. It is tested, refined and improved.

The main point in this composite story is that creativity is not a solitary process. It happens within networks. It happens when talented people get together, when idea systems and mentalities merge.

Now imagine you are this creative person in the year 2010, 2025 or 2050. You are living in some small town in Ukraine or Kenya or some other place, foreign or domestic. You long to break out and go to a place where people are gathering to think about the things you are thinking about, creating the things you want to create.

If you are passionate about fashion, maybe you will go to Paris. If it's engineering, maybe it'll be Germany. But if you are passionate about many other spheres, I suspect you'll want to be in America.

You'll want to be in the U.S. because English has become the global language. You'll want to come because American universities lead the world in research and draw many of the best minds from all corners of the earth.

You'll want to be there because American institutions are relatively free from corruption. Intellectual property is protected. Huge venture capital funds already exist.

Moreover, the United States is a universal nation. There are already people there with connections all over the world. A nation of immigrants is more permeable than say, Chinese society.

You also observe that America hosts the right kind of networks — ones that are flexible and intense. Study after study suggests that America is one of those societies with high social trust. Americans build large, efficient organizations that are not bound by the circles of kinship and clan. Study after study finds that Americans are not hierarchical. American children are raised to challenge their parents. American underlings are relatively free to challenge their bosses. In this country you're less likely to have to submit to authority.

From this story you can see that economic power in the 21st century is not going to look like economic power in the 20th century. The crucial fact about the new epoch is that creativity needs hubs. Information networks need junction points. The nation that can make itself the crossroads to the world will have tremendous economic and political power.

In 2009, Anne-Marie Slaughter, now director of policy planning at the State Department, wrote an essay for Foreign Affairs in which she laid out the logic of this new situation: "In a networked world, the issue is no longer relative power, but centrality in an increasingly dense global web."

Slaughter's essay was titled "America's Edge." That is apt. Americans are now in a depressed state of mind. As China and India rise, nearly two-thirds of Americans believe their nation is in decline.

In fact, the U.S. is well situated to be the crossroads nation. It is well situated to be the center of global networks and to nurture the right kinds of networks. Building that America means doing everything possible to thicken connections: finance research to attract scientists; improve infrastructure to ease travel; fix immigration to funnel talent; reform taxes to attract superstars; make study abroad a rite of passage for college students; take advantage of the millions of veterans who have served overseas.

The nation with the thickest and most expansive networks will define the age. There's no reason to be pessimistic about that.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Lauren Jiloty
Sent: Wednesday, November 10, 2010 9:17 PM
To: H
Subject: RE: Calls

ok.

> From: HDR22@clintonemail.com
> To: Laurenjiloty JilotyLC@state.gov
> Date: Wed, 10 Nov 2010 21:16:36 -0500
> Subject: Calls
>
> In addition to calls to returnees, pls try Kendrick Meek, Rory Reid, and Strickland

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, November 10, 2010 10:29 PM
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Fw: Note
Attachments: PLAN 10.11.2010.docx

Want to make sure you both got this

---

From: Catherine Sumpster [redacted] B6
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wed Nov 10 20:25:52 2010
Subject: Note

Hi,

As discussed please find attached the personal note Mr Blair sent to Secretary Clinton.

Thanks,

Catherine

---

DISCLAIMER

WARNING – This email is only intended for the person to whom or entity to which it is addressed and, together with any files transmitted with it, is confidential and may also be privileged. If you are not the intended recipient, you must not copy, forward, use or rely on any part of it or disclose its contents to any person. If you have received it in error, please notify our system manager on +44 20 7647 7782 and delete all copies immediately.

Except where this email is sent in the usual course of our business, the views expressed in this email are those of the sender and not those of The Office of Tony Blair.

The Office of Tony Blair accepts no responsibility for software viruses and you should check for viruses before opening any attachments. Internet communications are not secure and therefore The Office of Tony Blair does not provide any guarantee or warranty that this email or any attachments shall remain confidential.

The Office of Tony Blair is a trading name of Windrush Ventures Limited and Windrush Ventures No.3 LP. Windrush Ventures Limited is a limited company registered in England and Wales with registered number 06397276. Its registered office is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL.

Windrush Ventures No. 3 LP is a limited partnership registered in England and Wales with registered number LP012665. Its registered office is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL. The members of Windrush Ventures No.3 LP are BDBCO No.819 Limited and Windrush Ventures No.2 LLP and the address at which each of these can be served is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL.

This email may relate to or be sent from other members of the Windrush group.

---

This email has been scanned by the MessageLabs Email Security System.
For more information please visit http://www.messagelabs.com/email

---

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, November 10, 2010 10:32 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Steve grossman returned your call

B6

###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, November 10, 2010 11:07 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Note

Yes

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wed Nov 10 22:33:52 2010
Subject: Re: Note

I got it. Can you print for me tomorrow?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Nov 10 22:28:36 2010
Subject: Fw: Note

Want to make sure you both got this

---

From: Catherine Sumpster [redacted] B6
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wed Nov 10 20:25:52 2010
Subject: Note

Hi,

As discussed please find attached the personal note Mr Blair sent to Secretary Clinton.

Thanks,

Catherine

---

DISCLAIMER

WARNING – This email is only intended for the person to whom or entity to which it is addressed and, together with any files transmitted with it, is confidential and may also be privileged. If you are not the intended recipient, you must not copy, forward, use or rely on any part of it or disclose its contents to any person. If you have received it in error, please notify our system manager on +44 20 7647 7782 and delete all copies immediately.

Except where this email is sent in the usual course of our business, the views expressed in this email are those of the sender and not those of The Office of Tony Blair.

The Office of Tony Blair accepts no responsibility for software viruses and you should check for viruses before opening any attachments. Internet communications are not secure and therefore The Office of Tony Blair does not provide any guarantee or warranty that this email or any attachments shall remain confidential.

The Office of Tony Blair is a trading name of Windrush Ventures Limited and Windrush Ventures No.3 LP. Windrush Ventures Limited is a limited company registered in England and Wales with registered number 06397276. Its registered office is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL.

Windrush Ventures No. 3 LP is a limited partnership registered in England and Wales with registered number LP012665. Its registered office is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL. The members of Windrush Ventures No.3 LP are BDBCO No.819 Limited and Windrush Ventures No.2 LLP and the address at which each of these can be served is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL.

This email may relate to or be sent from other members of the Windrush group.

---

This email has been scanned by the MessageLabs Email Security System.
For more information please visit http://www.messagelabs.com/email

---

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 11, 2010 6:06 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: KORUS

This was bubbling in news reports...

----- Original Message -----
From: Hormats, Robert D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Nov 11 04:51:30 2010
Subject: KORUS

You may know this already but the negotiations broke down.

Plan is to reconvene in several weeks. No specific date. Will have more details shortly. Just arrived Seoul.

Regards,
Bob

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 11, 2010 6:57 AM
To: H; Lew, Jacob J
Subject: FW: House Schedule

CQ TODAY ONLINE NEWS – CONGRESSIONAL AFFAIRS
Nov. 10, 2010 – 6:25 p.m.

House Democrats Plan Schedule for Lame-Duck Session

By Alan K. Ota, CQ Staff

House Democratic leaders on Wednesday outlined a schedule for the lame-duck session that would have lawmakers in town for at least two weeks in November and into early December.

Chris Van Hollen, D-Md., assistant to Speaker Nancy Pelosi, said in an interview after a conference call among Democratic leaders that lawmakers were likely to work through next week, take a week off for the Thanksgiving recess, and return for a second — and, for now, final — week from Nov. 29 to Dec. 3.

Van Hollen, who is poised to take over next year as the top Democrat on the Budget Committee, said he was unsure how Democrats would resolve disputes over unfinished business such as tax cuts that are set to expire Dec. 31 and funding for federal programs beyond the stopgap spending measure (PL 111-242) that expires Dec. 3.

"We simply identified some of the issues that are out there," Van Hollen said of the private leadership chat. "Obviously, the big issue is how we deal with various tax issues. And then there's the issue of an omnibus [spending bill] versus a continuing resolution. There are a lot of other potential issues. We're going to try to get the nutrition bill."

He was referring to ongoing talks over a possible extension of expiring provisions of the 2001 and 2003 tax cuts (PL 107-16, PL 108-27), the debate over whether to move an omnibus spending bill for fiscal 2011 or another temporary spending measure, and a stalled child nutrition bill (HR 5504).

Van Hollen said that Pelosi, D-Calif., did not bring up the issue of the tough caucus race for minority whip — the second-ranking Democrat in the next Congress — between Steny H. Hoyer of Maryland and James E. Clyburn of South Carolina. Both men were on the telephone call, Van Hollen said, but the issue did not come up.

Democratic aides said Pelosi has encouraged both men to reach a settlement to avert the potentially bloody intraparty fight. "That wasn't part of the discussion," Van Hollen said.

RELEASE IN PART
B1,1.4(B),1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 11, 2010 8:46 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Security Talks

See below

Also, Allawi appears to be in.

From: Hof, Frederic C
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Nov 11 08:39:20 2010
Subject: Security Talks

Jake, just one small point to file away.

Fred

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 11/11/2025

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 11, 2010 1:42 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Hezbollah: We won't accept arrests

---

From: Casteel, Ezra A
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS
Sent: Thu Nov 11 13:36:48 2010
Subject: (AP) Hezbollah: We won't accept arrests

BEIRUT (AP) - The leader of Hezbollah says his militant group will "cut the hand" of anyone who tries to arrest any member of the party. Sheik Hassan Nasrallah said in a speech the group will not accept any accusation against any of its fighters or leaders in the 2005 assassination of former Prime Minister Rafik Hariri. He said the group would defend itself anyway it chooses. He did not elaborate.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 11, 2010 2:43 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Pls clear: Statement on Iraqi Government Coalition Agreement

From: Schwerin, Daniel B
To: Reines, Philippe I; Sullivan, Jacob J; Adler, Caroline E
Sent: Thu Nov 11 13:00:14 2010
Subject: Pls clear: Statement on Iraqi Government Coalition Agreement

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY CLINTON

Iraqi Government Coalition Agreement

I applaud Iraq's political leaders for working together to agree on an inclusive government that represents the will of the Iraqi people and moves their country forward. Today's coalition decision is a milestone in the emergence of the new Iraq and it is a testament to the determination of the Iraqi people to build their own democracy, a goal only they can achieve.

This agreement ensures meaningful representation for the election winners, encompassing all of Iraq's ethnic and sectarian communities. It also includes critical provisions for power-sharing and other reforms, including revisions to the to the de-Ba'athification process. In addition, Iraqi leaders have agreed to establish a National Council of Strategic Policies. This important body will serve as a steering group in the areas of defense policy, foreign affairs, economic policy, and other strategic issues.

As Iraqis continue their progress, they will have a committed and consistent partner in the United States. Our relationship is rooted in mutual respect and mutual interest. We look forward to expanding our cooperation under the Strategic Framework Agreement and together pursuing our shared goal of building a long-term, multidimensional relationship between our two nations that contributes to growing peace and prosperity in Iraq and security and stability in the Middle East.

###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 11, 2010 5:43 PM
To: H; jake.sullivan[redacted] B6
Subject: Re: Let me know when we can talk.

Will call shortly.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'jake.sullivar[redacted] Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Nov 11 17:20:11 2010
Subject: Let me know when we can talk.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 1, 2010 12:01 PM
To: 'slaughtera@state.gov'
Subject: Oh, my--and , thankfully, Happy New year!

Dear Anne-Marie,

I was just reading your two wonderful memos on S/ P accomplishments and the QDDR, [redacted] B6

I also want to thank you for a wonderful year of work, creativity, collaboration and progress. I know the start for all of us was shaky, but we have hit our stride and you are such a valuable member of the team, a generator of ideas, a conductor of talent and even a necessary nudge from time to time. Thank you for making this journey w me.

I will schedule the S/P visit and photo as soon as I can. Until we see one another next week, be well and take care (please!)

All the best, Hillary

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 1, 2010 12:09 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Subject: Happy New Year!

Thx for sending the emails about the Nigerian. We are working on all of the issues raised.

I hope you, Jackie and the boys (men??) have a happy, healthy, prosperous 2010. I will look forward to seeing more of you in the upcoming months.

All the best, H

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 1, 2010 2:53 PM
To: 'SteinbergJB@state.gov'
Subject: Happy New Year!

Dear Jim--

I hope you and your family have had time to enjoy the holidays together and that 2010 brings blessings to you all. Thanks for all your great work, support and advice this past year, and I'm looking forward to the year ahead.

All the best, Hillary

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 2, 2010 6:14 AM
To: 'verveerms@state.gov'
Subject: Re:

And, the very best new year to you, [redacted] and the Verveer tribe. Thanks for all you are doing and for working w me again. We have a lot of big challenges and many opportunities ahead of us and I'm excited to get started again. See you next week! B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 02 01:33:36 2010
Subject:

The new year is bound to bring in a continuing wave of crisis around the world. Consider this photo a momentary respite. It is evocative of the good feeling you engender everywhere. The photo is of the Director of New Life Center in Chiang Mai. They are doing incredible work there and have made exceptional progress since your visit. They remember you with great gratitude. I had one of your signed photos left after distributing the others to the Burmese women human rights leaders (who also felt that you were on their side).

Everywhere I went over the holidays, there was much favorable comment about your leadership. I'm so proud to be back working with you. Because you've created such ripples of hope, we've got so much to do!

Love to all the Clintons and best wishes for a healthy, happy, productive and rewarding New Year.

<<New Life Center Foundation 2009.jpg>>

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 2, 2010 6:08 AM
To: 'stalbott [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: message from India -- and from down the street.....

Strobe---Happy New Year! Namiste! All good wishes for 2010. Thx so much for the message from four generations of Talbotts and Ramesh--quite a combo. When I see you next (hopefully soon) I will give you the background on my re/interactions w him. [redacted] Much love to you and the clan, Hillary

P.S. Can you confirm my email address thru this--i don't want you wandering around cyberspace!

----- Original Message -----
From: Strobe Talbott <[redacted]
To: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; cheryl.mills [redacted]
<cheryl.mills [redacted]
Cc: H2; H
Sent: Fri Dec 25 09:13:20 2009
Subject: RE: message from India -- and from down the street.....

Thanks, Huma. Albest. S.

---

From: Abedin, Huma [mailto:AbedinH@state.gov]
Sent: Friday, December 25, 2009 9:11 AM
To: Strobe Talbott; Mills, Cheryl D; cheryl.mills [redacted]
Cc: hr15@att.blackberry.net; hdr22@clintonemail.com
Subject: Re: message from India -- and from down the street.....

Yes of course
Passed on to her
Hope toy are well

---

From: Strobe Talbott <[redacted]
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Cheryl Mills <cheryl.mills [redacted]>; Abedin, Huma
Cc: HRC <hr15@att.blackberry.net>; HRC Blackberry <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Fri Dec 25 06:35:42 2009
Subject: FW: message from India -- and from down the street.....

Cheryl or Huma, this message bounced back from hr15@att.blackberry.net, which is the only email address I've got for HRC. Can you please make sure she gets it? Best wishes of the holiday to you both. Strobe

---

From: Strobe Talbott
Sent: Friday, December 25, 2009 6:31 AM
To: HRC
Cc: Cheryl Mills (State); 'Cheryl Mills'
Subject: message from India -- and from down the street.....

Hi, Hillary, and Merry Christmas. Hope you and the family are getting a bit of respite from it all. I'm sending you this message because—somewhat to my surprise—Jairam Ramesh has asked me to pass along a personal message, which is pasted below. I've known him since the 70s

B6

Cheers, Strobe

Dear Madam Secretary of State:

It was wonderful catching up with you in Copenhagen. The opportunity to interact with President Obama and you at the very last minute to salvage the Copenhagen Accord at the US-BASIC Summit Meeting was fantastic and unforgettable for me personally. I am still reeling from that historic 75 minutes!!

With greetings for Xmas and best wishes for the New Year,

With warmest regards,

Jairam Ramesh

Minister of Environment and Forests

India

==========

Strobe Talbott
President, The Brookings Institution
1775 Massachusetts Avenue NW
Washington, DC 20036
202.797.6200
stalbott <mailto: > ==========

RELEASE IN PART
B1,1.4(B),1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 11, 2010 8:57 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: End of day Iraq wrap-up.

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Corbin, Michael H
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mull, Stephen D
Cc: Catalano, Elisa; Wells, Alice G; Schrepel, Dawn M; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Schlicher, Ronald L; Desrocher, John P; Bitter, Rena; Holtz, Greta C (NEA); Davis, Jason L
Sent: Thu Nov 11 19:47:59 2010
Subject: End of day Iraq wrap-up.

Today's tumultuous session of Iraq's COR culminated with the election and swearing in of Jalal Talabani as President, and the immediate nomination of Nuri al Maliki as prime minister. Of more significance was the election of leading Iraqiyya member Osama al-Nujayfi as speaker of the Council of Representatives. This represented Iraqiyya and Sunni buy-in to the new, inclusive Government. As the newly nominated Prime Minister, Maliki now has 30 days to form the Council of Ministers, which must be approved in the COR by absolute majority.

1.4(D)
B1

These developments were marred by a theatric walkout by Iraqiyya. Members of Iraqiyya had called for a motion to cancel de-Baathification proceedings for Saleh Mutlaq and two others to be added to the COR agenda in advance of voting on the presidency.

Michael Corbin
Deputy Asst Secy for Near East Affairs

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 11/11/2025

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 2, 2010 8:53 AM
To: 'kohhh@state.gov'
Subject: Blackwater case

Harold---

First, Happy New Year to you and your family and thank you for all of your great work this past year. I am looking forward to the year ahead.

Second, what can we do about Judge Urbina's ruling [redacted] For example, what is the likelihood of success on appeal? Can the US file a civil action against the company? Pay compensation to the victims? What other options do we have? B5

All the best, H

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 2, 2010 10:28 AM
To: 'kohhh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Blackwater case

Thanks, as always. [redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Koh, Harold Hongju <KohHH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 02 10:24:37 2010
Subject: RE: Blackwater case

ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE/ATTORNEY WORK-PRODUCT

And Happy New Year to you (and your family) too! I am so thrilled to be in this job and working with you. I am having a great time, and hope to have an even better 2010.

Re Blackwater. I have already put these very questions to our team, and they are working up a memo on the subject. Significantly, the press accounts are all saying that State Department lawyers appropriately warned the DOJ prosecutors, but that the DOJ lawyers chose to take a different route.

My initial reactions to your questions are as follows:

[redacted]

I will keep pressing and give you an oral report at Monday's 8:45, and we can get the promised memo to you soon thereafter.

Please let me know if you need more.
Best
Harold

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Saturday, January 02, 2010 8:53 AM
To: Koh, Harold Hongju
Subject: Blackwater case

Harold---

First, Happy New Year to you and your family and thank you for all of your great work this past year. I am looking forward to the year ahead.

Second, what can we do about Judge Urbina's ruling [redacted] For example, what is the likelihood of success on appeal? Can the US file a civil action against the company? Pay compensation to the victims? What other options do we have? B5

All the best, H

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 3, 2010 11:36 AM
To: 'Russorv@state.gov'
Cc: Huma Abedin; H
Subject: Xmas TYs

Rob--

First, Happy New Year and thank you for all of your great work this past year. It is a treat having you on our team, and I'm looking forward to an even better 2010. Also, pls let me know if you have any ideas about how we could improve our processes and products. Thanks for everything.

B6

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 3, 2010 11:42 AM
To: 'sterntd@state.gov'
Cc: Huma Abedin; H
Subject: Question

First, Happy New Year to Jen and Stern clan. Hope to talk soon about our way forward for 2010.

I received the following email from Jairem Ramesh over the holidays. I intend to respond in kind but wanted to run by you for advice.

Thx. HRC---

---

Dear Madam Secretary of State:

It was wonderful catching up with you in Copenhagen. The opportunity to interact with President Obama and you at the very last minute to salvage the Copenhagen Accord at the US-BASIC Summit Meeting was fantastic and unforgettable for me personally. I am still reeling from that historic 75 minutes!!

With greetings for Xmas and best wishes for the New Year,

With warmest regards,

Jairam Ramesh

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 3, 2010 11:42 AM
To: 'sterntd@state.gov'
Cc: Huma Abedin; H
Subject: Question

First, Happy New Year to Jen and Stern clan. Hope to talk soon about our way forward for 2010.

I received the following email from Jairem Ramesh over the holidays. I intend to respond in kind but wanted to run by you for advice.

Thx. HRC---

---

Dear Madam Secretary of State:

It was wonderful catching up with you in Copenhagen. The opportunity to interact with President Obama and you at the very last minute to salvage the Copenhagen Accord at the US-BASIC Summit Meeting was fantastic and unforgettable for me personally. I am still reeling from that historic 75 minutes!!

With greetings for Xmas and best wishes for the New Year,

With warmest regards,

Jairam Ramesh

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 3, 2010 12:00 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Happy New Year!

Jake--I hope you and the Sullivan clan had a glorious and joyous holiday and that you're revved up for 2010! Thanks for all you did to make this past year a successful launch. Now, the hard work starts as we try to deliver. But, it's no hyperbole to say you are a joy to work. Onward--and upward! H

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Crowley, Philip J <CrowleyPJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 12, 2010 9:12 AM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Reines, Philippe I
Subject: Jackson Diehl Editorial

Madame Secretary, as we understood on Wednesday, our conscious decision not to mention domestic Egyptian issues publicly was noticed at the Post editorial board. I had multiple exchanges with Jackson over the course of the day yesterday. Based on your colloquy with Aboul-Gheit and Jeff's follow-up, we are quoted in the piece which you see in the clips as having a direct and spirited exchange with the Egyptians and that there was no misunderstanding of the importance that we attach to these issues. So in the end Jackson grants some credit for the discussion, and we agree to disagree on the degree to which this discussion should be public.

PJ

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 3, 2010 4:11 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Call list and HRC Support Network

Pls add:

Marsha Lauffer [redacted]--but I think she's moved to Florida so ask KPK if she has another # B6

Stephanie Minor and Jack Mannion; she's the new mayor of Syracuse

Sen. Kit Bond to discuss his book The Next Front

Paul Farmer

Add Sec Ken Salazar--note the Arctic

Jon Bon Jovi--TY

Jo Luck

Cong. Dianne Watson

Kirsten Gillibrand--cybersecurity

Marvin Hammlisch

Martha Stewart

Robert Hunter--omit from the end and move up

Sec Sebelius

Ed Koch

Dorothy Height

---

Pls remove from list the following:

Thomases
Corzine
Engel
Kenney
Newsom

Webb
Allida Black
Chavez
Schneider
Mutombo
Loida Lewis
Winifred Greene

---

Also, we have to decide what to do w the "Fan Club" and tell Ruth Love and Rosemary. Should we invite them to lunch?
Also, whatever happened w [redacted] B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 15, 2010 3:30 PM
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: CA speech

Will do.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: Huma Abedin < > B6
Sent: Wed Sep 15 15:24:51 2010
Subject: CA speech

Pls be sure my friend, Susan Kennedy in SF gets info about my speech there in October. B6

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 3, 2010 5:06 PM
To: 'Russorv@state.gov'
Cc: Huma Abedin; H
Subject: Re: Xmas TYs

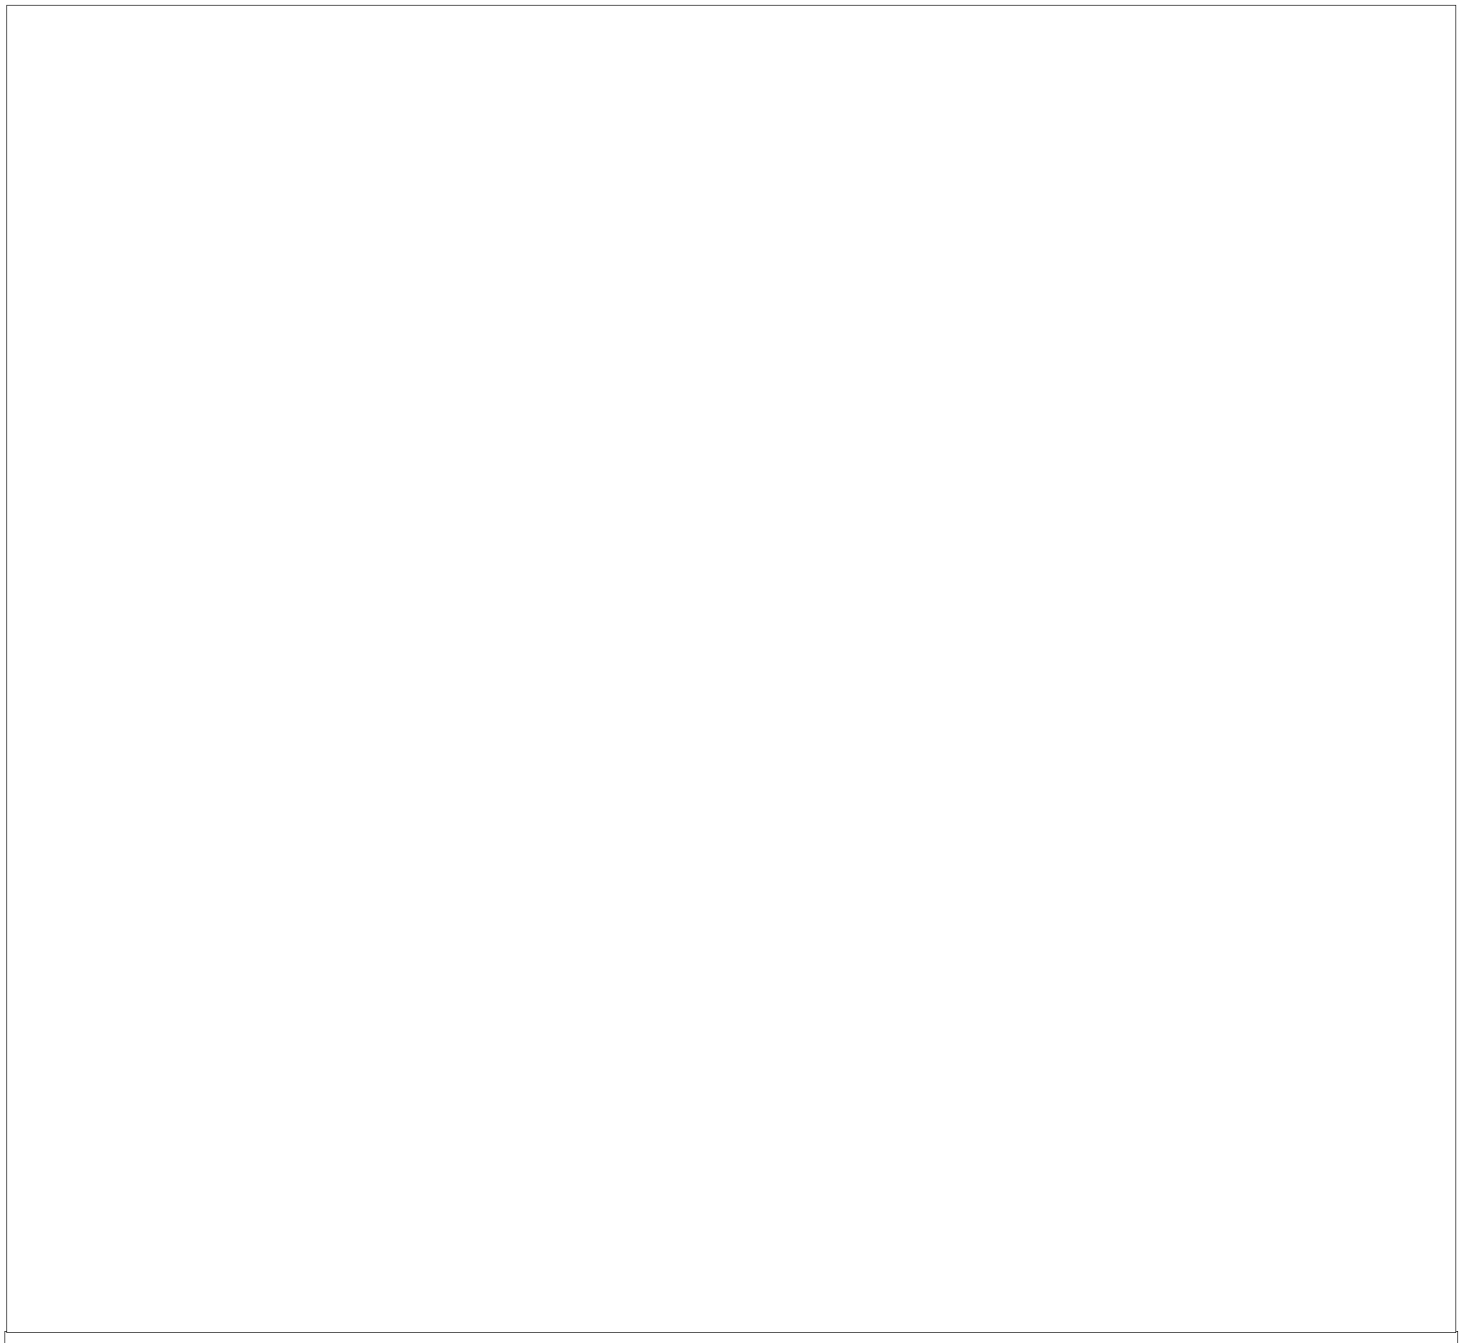
Thx. Here are a few more--

B6

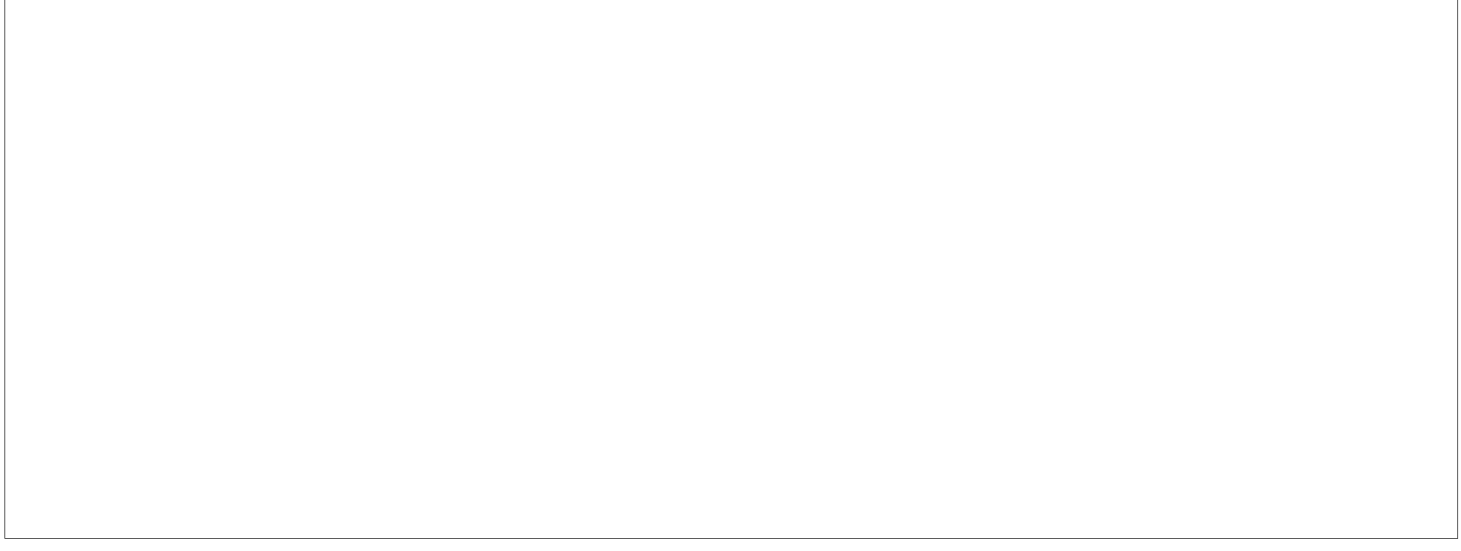
----- Original Message -----
From: Russo, Robert V <RussoRV@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Sent: Sun Jan 03 16:14:03 2010
Subject: Re: Xmas TYs

Thank you so much - it's a pleasure and an honor!

I'll get to work on these first thing tomorrow morning and I'll consult with Huma to fill in the blanks.



Have a safe trip back to DC!



----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Russo, Robert V
Cc: Huma Abedin H <HDR22@clintonemail.com> B6
Sent: Sun Jan 03 11:35:55 2010
Subject: Xmas TYs

Rob--

First, Happy New Year and thank you for all of your great work this past year. It is a treat having you on our team, and I'm looking forward to an even better 2010. Also, pls let me know if you have any ideas about how we could improve our processes and products. Thanks for everything.

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 15, 2010 4:59 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Subject: FW: Tax reform essential for rescuing Pakistan's economy
Attachments: pakistan_tax.pdf; pakistan_tax.pdf

Fyi, in case you have not seen this. Interesting piece. I've attached a copy of the full article.

jm

From: Carnegie South Asia Program [mailto:claw@ceip.org]
Sent: Wednesday, September 15, 2010 4:46 PM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: Tax reform essential for rescuing Pakistan's economy

[redacted]

CARNEGIE SOUTH ASIA PROGRAM

Tax reform essential for rescuing Pakistan's economy

S. Akbar Zaidi is a visiting scholar in the Carnegie Endowment's South Asia Program. A visiting professor at Columbia University, with a joint appointment in the School of International Public Affairs and the Department of Middle Eastern, South Asian, and African Studies, his research focuses on development, governance, and political economy in South Asia.

Zaidi taught economics at the University of Karachi from 1983 to 1996 before becoming a visiting scholar at the University of Oxford (1998) and later a research fellow at the University of Pennsylvania's Institute for the Advanced Study of India in New Delhi (2002–2003). From 2004 to 2005 he was a visiting professor at Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) and in 2008 he was a Reagan-Fascell Democracy Fellow at the National Endowment for Democracy.

Unable to sustain solid growth, Pakistan's economy is teetering on the brink of collapse, with one-third of the population living below the poverty line. S. Akbar Zaidi writes in a new brief that Pakistan's economic instability stems in large part from low government revenue due to the elite's use of tax evasions, loopholes, and exemptions. Without tax reform, Pakistan will continue to run an unsustainable debt and be forced to rely on Western donors for bailouts.

Zaidi's twelfth book, Military, Civil Society and Democratization in Pakistan, is to be published by Vanguard Press, Lahore in October 2010.

[redacted]

Policy Recommendations:

- Eliminate exemptions. Fewer than three million of Pakistan's 175 million citizens pay any income tax, and the country's tax-to-GDP ratio is just 9 percent. By eliminating tax exemptions for the rich, politicians can fund essential social services.
- Increase tax revenue. Pakistani legislators must build a consensus to tax the rich and elite if they want to match growth rates in nearby developing countries.
- Spend more on development. Pakistan has spent twice as much on defense during peacetime as it has on education and health combined—this needs to change.
- Stop the bailouts. Donor countries must put conditions on funding and should emphasize tax and economic reform to help Pakistan develop long-term economic plans for sustainable growth.

"Pakistan's lack of a proper tax and revenue regime has resulted in high rates of tax evasion, burdening the country with unsustainable debt and undermining its development priorities," writes Zaidi. "The key to the country's economic prosperity—even its survival—is a far-reaching program of tax reform."

Carnegie Resources

Browse Issues Regions Programs Experts Events Publications

Multilingual Content Русский 中文 عربي

Global Centers Washington DC Moscow Beijing Beirut Brussels

Follow Carnegie

About the Carnegie South Asia Program

The Carnegie South Asia Program informs policy debates relating to the region's security, economy, and political development. From the war in Afghanistan to Pakistan's internal dynamics to U.S. engagement with India, the Program's renowned team of experts offer in-depth analysis derived from their unique access to the people and places defining South Asia's most critical challenges.

About the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace is a private, nonprofit organization dedicated to advancing cooperation between nations and promoting active international engagement by the United States. Founded in 1910, its work is nonpartisan and dedicated to achieving practical results. The Endowment—currently pioneering the first global think tank—has operations in China, the Middle East, Russia, Europe, and the United States. These five locations include the two centers of world governance and the three places whose political evolution and international policies will most determine the near-term possibilities for international peace and economic advance.

The Carnegie Endowment does not take institutional positions on public policy issues; the views represented herein are the author's own and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Endowment, its staff, or its trustees.

If you would no longer like to receive announcements from the Carnegie Endowment, including event invitations and new publications, please click here to unsubscribe.

Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

1779 Massachusetts Ave, NW, Washington, DC 20036
Phone: 202 483 7600 | Fax: 202 483 1840 | Email: info@ceip.org

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 3, 2010 6:15 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: More about call list

Take off--

Bendheim
Destito
Latham
Suozzi
Brian Roberts

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

POLICY BRIEF

Pakistan's Roller-Coaster Economy: Tax Evasion Stifles Growth

S. AKBAR ZAIDI
Visiting Scholar, South Asia Program

SUMMARY

Over the last sixty years, Pakistan's economy has seen severe ups and downs. Once considered a model for other developing nations, Pakistan has been unable to sustain solid growth. Furthermore, a third of its population now lives below the poverty line, and its literacy rate is abysmally low.

Pakistan's economic instability stems in large part from low government revenue resulting from the elite's use of tax evasions, loopholes, and exemptions. Fewer than three million of Pakistan's 175 million citizens pay any income taxes, and the country's tax-to-GDP ratio is only 9 percent. Tax evasion means fewer resources are available for essential social services.

Pakistan spends too much on defense and too little on development: It has spent twice as much on defense during peacetime as it has on education and health combined.

The government knows how to increase its revenue through tax reform, but the rich and powerful have resisted such measures for fear of lowering their own incomes.

Without sufficient revenue the government will continue to be burdened with an unsustainable debt. It needs to end tax exemptions for the wealthy and develop broader, long-term economic plans for sustainable growth.

In the past, the United States and other Western nations have come to Pakistan's rescue by paying off debts and funding development initiatives. Pakistan's elite has no reason to support reform as long as these bailouts come with no conditions attached.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

S. Akbar Zaidi is a visiting scholar in the Carnegie Endowment's South Asia Program. Currently a visiting professor at Columbia University with a joint appointment in the School of International Public Affairs and MESAAS, the Department of Middle Eastern, South Asian, and African Studies, his research focuses on development, governance, and political economy in South Asia. Zaidi taught economics at the University of Karachi from 1983 to 1996 before becoming a visiting scholar at the University of Oxford (1998) and later a research fellow at the University of Pennsylvania's Institute for the Advanced Study of India in New Delhi (2002–2003). From 2004 to 2005 he was a visiting professor at the School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS), Johns Hopkins, and in 2008 he was a Reagan-Fascell Democracy Fellow at the National Endowment for Democracy. Zaidi's next book, Military, Civil Society and Democratization in Pakistan, is to be published by Vanguard Press, Lahore, in October 2010.

Once heralded as a beacon for other developing countries, Pakistan's economy bears little worthy of emulation today. For years now, it has fluctuated wildly between periods of impressive growth and dismal slumps. While political competition between the military and civilian politicians has been partly responsible for this instability, Pakistan's lack of a proper tax and revenue regime has resulted in high rates of tax evasion, burdening the country with unsustainable debt and undermining its development priorities. Pakistan's politics may recently have taken a turn for the better with the strengthening of democratic institutions and the judiciary, but the key to the country's economic prosperity—even its survival—is a far-reaching program of tax reform.

A TOPSY-TURVY PAST

On January 18, 1965 the New York Times wrote: "Pakistan may be on its way toward" economic success "that so far has been reached by only one other populous country, the United States." A year later the London Times struck a similar enthusiastic note, saying that "the survival and development of Pakistan is one of the most remarkable examples of state and nation building in the post-war period."

Forty years later, the press was offering a very different bouquet of sobriquets to describe Pakistan. International newspapers and magazines called it "the most dangerous place in the world," a "failed state," and a "rogue state with a nuclear arsenal," to name just a few. Only a few decades before, several far less developed countries, such as South Korea, Malaysia, China and India, were considered far less likely than Pakistan to survive, much less thrive. Today, all of those countries and others have surged ahead of Pakistan economically.

Pakistan didn't fall behind because it stood still; rather, its economic history spans six decades of roller coaster ups and downs. The first decade, 1947–1958, was one of "settling down," in which the new country comprising East and West Pakistan emerged from British India. The second period, 1958–1968, was marked by the rule of General Muhammad Ayub Khan and is now known as the Decade of Development for its high growth rates. Accompanying those high growth rates, however, were high income and regional inequality, which contributed to the

Pakistan and its Neighbors

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

Pakistan in Context

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Population | 169.7 million | Aid per capita (in USD) | 14 |
| Population growth (annual) | 2.2% | Infant mortality (per 1,000 births) | 73 |
| Life expectancy (years) | 65 | GDP growth | 3.7% |
| Adult literacy, male | 68% | GDP per capita growth | 1.5% |
| Adult literacy, female | 40% | Urban population (of total population) | 36% |

Source: World Bank, 2010

EXPORTS AND IMPORTS OF GOODS AND SERVICES (% OF GDP)

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

secession of East Pakistan and the war that gave birth to Bangladesh.

In 1971 a new Pakistan emerged under the government of the left-of-center Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. Nationalization of private businesses and public sector–led development were the norm for the new regime. Growth was relatively low compared to the decades before and after, but adequate under the dire and constrained circumstances of the time. Following Bhutto's ouster in 1977, General Muhammad Zia ul-Haq inaugurated Pakistan's fourth "era," ruling until 1988. Zia's era saw the return of high growth rates, but it also saw the role of the military increase greatly in the economy, politics, foreign policy and in society more generally. Zia's death brought a period of active civilian politics and electioneering. "Democracy" is perhaps too generous a term for this process. There were

| | |
|---|---|
| 1947 | Pakistan becomes independent nation-state |
| 1958–1968 | Ruled by General Ayub Khan; known as the Decade of Development; high growth rates; high income and regional inequality |
| 1971 | Growth is relatively low; nationalization of private businesses under Zulfikar Ali Bhutto; public sector–led development the norm |
| 1977–1988 | High growth rates under General Muhammad Zia ul Haq |
| 1988–1999 | Numerous governments; debt crisis; high dependence on international loans; economic performance nosedives |
| 1999–2008 | Pakistan ruled by its third military dictator, General Pervez Musharraf; economy grows due to debt restructuring and large doses of foreign aid and assistance following the 9/11 terrorist attacks |
| Dec. 2007 | Assassination of former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto |
| Feb. 2008 | Prime Minister Yousuf Raza Gillani elected to head a coalition government |
| Sept. 2008 | President Asif Ali Zardari replaces General Musharraf |
| Nov. 2008 | IMF lends Pakistan $7.6 billion; later increases loan amount to $11.2 billion |
| 2008–2009 | Growth rate of only 1.2%; inflation rate of 21% |
| 2009–2010 | Growth rate around 4% |
| July 2010 | Total foreign debt rose to $55 billion |

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

numerous governments between 1988 and 1999, and economic performance nosedived as it never had before. From October 1999 until to 2008, Pakistan was ruled by its third military dictator, General Pervez Musharraf. Pakistan's economy grew again during this period, thanks to debt restructuring and large doses of aid and assistance. Several factors gave rise to these benevolent circumstances, the most important of which was the international political atmosphere following 9/11. Since 2008, a democratically elected coalition government has been forced to deal with the collateral damage caused by its predecessor's politics and economics.

Despite the rise-and-fall pattern of GDP growth over the last fifty years, Pakistan's economy has grown on average by more than 5 percent per year. This is no mean achievement. While many comparable countries in the region have also grown at similar or higher rates, Pakistan has the unenviable distinction of inconsistent growth. Other countries such as Malaysia, South Korea and, of course, China have all had much higher growth rates over the same period, and they generally have been able to sustain those rates over decades. India too, which had a far slower growth rate than Pakistan's from about 1947 to the 1980s, has not only improved its performance fundamentally over the last twenty years, but has also grown consistently for the past two decades, leaving Pakistan far behind. Even Bangladesh, once dismissed as a "basket case" by arrogant Pakistani economists and planners, has recently had several years of stable growth despite political uncertainty. What distinguishes Pakistan from these other countries is its inability to sustain good performance for more than five or six years. While India, China, Malaysia, Vietnam, and numerous other countries east of Pakistan have now emerged as regional and global economic and political powerhouses, Pakistan has barely stumbled along.

EXPLAINING THE UP-AND-DOWN PATTERN

Is Pakistan and its economy forever doomed to instability and stuttering growth? Why has Pakistan's economy been so troubled? Does it have deep rooted structural features that make it peculiarly susceptible to crises?

A major explanation of Pakistan's volatile economic history is the state's poor revenue generation. Low tax revenues are in turn caused by tax evasion and a legal structure that allows for too many exemptions and loopholes. Pakistan's tax-to-GDP ratio is just 9 percent. This figure puts Pakistan in the 155th position out of 179 nations on the Heritage Foundation's Index of Economic Freedom. Only oil-rich countries that impose few taxes perform worse. Fewer than three million of Pakistan's population of 175 million pay any income tax. A huge and buoyant informal (underground) economy, estimated to be anywhere from 30 to 80 percent of the real economy, goes untaxed and unrecorded. These are the attributes of a rentier state, except that Pakistan lacks the wealth-producing oil and gas reserves normally associated with such states.

The key to Pakistan's economic prosperity—even its survival—is a far-reaching program of tax reform.

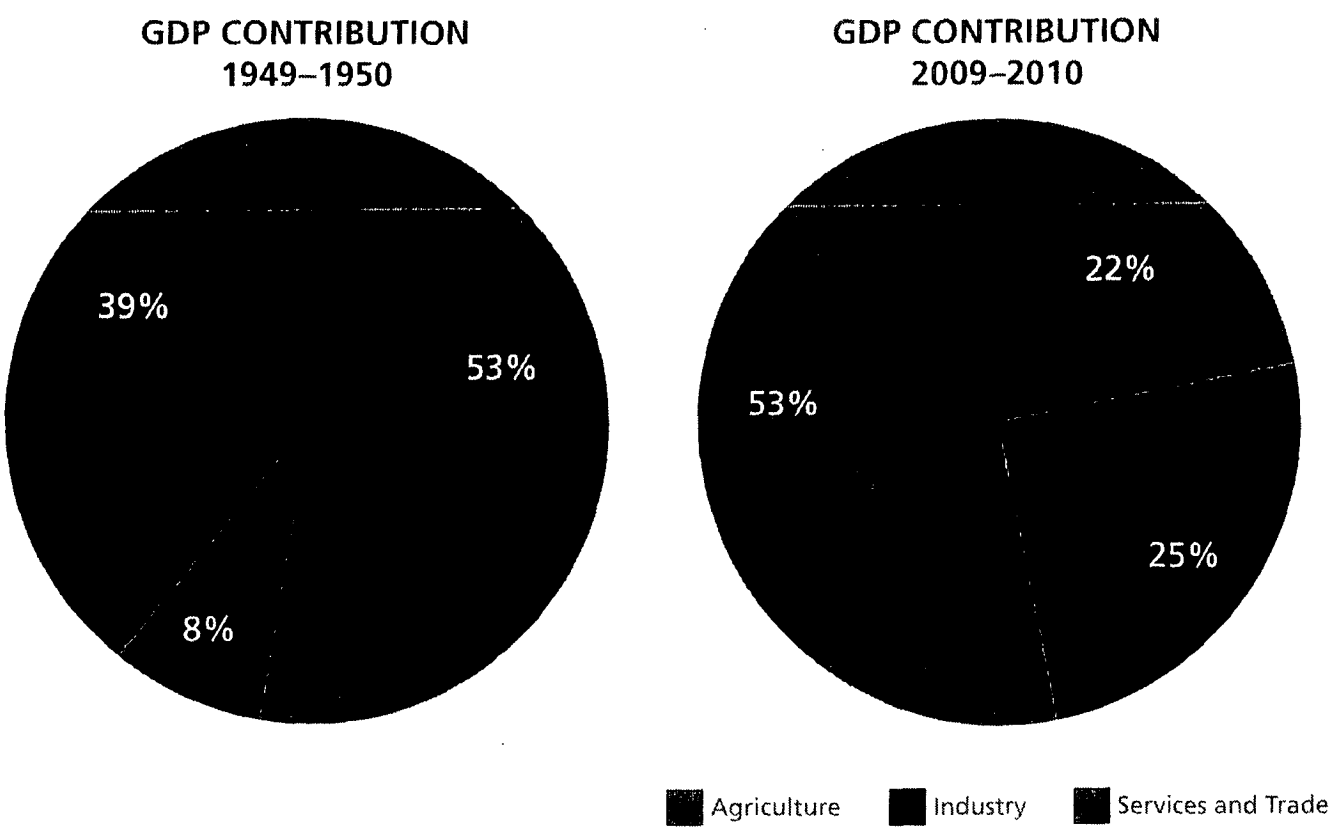
Clearly, tax evasion and the inability of the regime to tax the informal sector mean that it has fewer resources for education, health, infrastructure and development. A perennial debt crisis has affected Pakistan's economy largely because its expenditures, many of which are justified, are well in excess of revenue, forcing the country to go to foreign (and domestic) borrowers. This indebtedness affects issues of political economy at the domestic and international level.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015



UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

For example, the severe debt burden had been the single most important attribute of Pakistan's economy through the 1990s. Overall outstanding debt was equal to GDP, and foreign debt servicing alone in 2001–2002 was as much as 10 percent of GDP. Excessive tax evasion was the primary cause of this.

After 9/11, however, the Musharraf regime was able to sign agreements with bilateral and multinational donors to write off or reschedule huge amounts of this debt, giving them unprecedented fiscal space. This fiscal freedom was the main reason the economy turned around so sharply. Growth rose to 7.5 percent in 2003–2004 until maxing out the following year at 9 percent, the highest level in two decades. The fiscal deficit was near its lowest level in almost two decades, remittances were at historic highs, and exports crossed the $17 billion mark for the first time and showed signs of further growth. By 2006–2007, domestic debt had fallen to 30 percent of GDP, and foreign debt servicing was less than 5 percent of GDP. The government claimed that the economy had rebounded, that there had been a "turnaround," and that good times of high growth and high human development had returned. Even the stock market soared to unprecedented levels, shattering records weekly.

Moreover, at some point between 2002 and 2004, Pakistan joined those ninety or so countries that the United Nations Development Programme's (UNDP) Human Development Report (HDR) puts in the category of "Medium Human Development." From the time of the first annual HDR in 1990, Pakistan had consistently been classified as one of the forty or so countries in the "Low Human Development" category. (By comparison, both India and Bangladesh both moved from the low to the medium category in the late 1990s, well before Pakistan.) Many thought that, after years of being considered a "middle income country with low human development," Pakistan had at last moved into a category that better reflected its economic and social characteristics.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

Following the 2002–2007 period, Pakistan seemed set on a course for sustained economic improvement. Yet despite exceptional and unanimous support from the international donor community, little political opposition at home, and uninterrupted political stability and control of government (in sharp contrast to the eleven changes of government between 1985–1999), these few years of remarkable growth quickly unraveled.

REASONS FOR UNRAVELING GROWTH

ABSENCE OF LONG-TERM PLANNING AND INVESTMENT

The boom of the Musharraf years unraveled so quickly because it was built on false foundations: largely, consumer-led growth and investments in the speculative sector (real estate and the stock market) fueled by remittances and foreign aid. What was missing was a longer-term strategy to guide the money being sent to Pakistan into more productive sectors. Banks awash with excess liquidity were all too eager to feed the growing middle class with cheap loans to finance their consumption. This consumer-led boom did prompt the manufacturing sector to ramp up production to meet increasing demand for cars, motorcycles and other items, but it also helped create a bubble, which eventually burst.

The budgetary maneuvering space created by aid and debt write-offs did enable the government to spend money on much needed infrastructure. The resulting new roads and communication networks helped Pakistan, although they couldn't keep up with the increase in demand. The extent of the consumer boom had caught the government off guard, leaving them unable to provide the resources that the growing middle class required. The government's inability to meet the huge spurt in demand for electric power, for example, resulted in extensive power shortages which have hurt manufacturing and industry.

While India, China, Malaysia, Vietnam, and numerous other countries east of Pakistan have now emerged as regional and global economic and political powerhouses, Pakistan has barely stumbled along.

THE ROUNDABOUT OF POLITICS

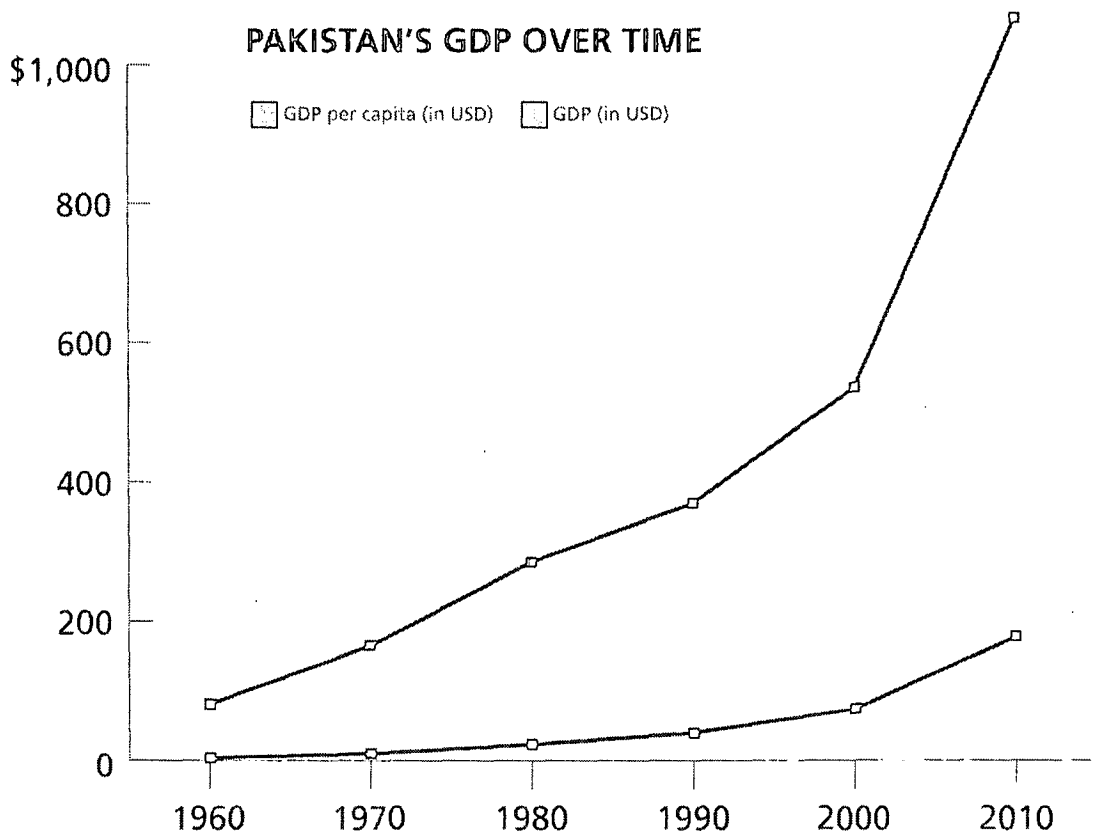
The governments of Generals Ayub (1958–1968), Zia (1977–1988), and Musharraf (1999–2008) were all, by definition, authoritarian military dictatorships, though each had its own particular hue. Western powers supported all three of them, but for very different reasons. All three were relatively benign compared to the ruthless Latin American dictatorships of the 1960s, 1970s and early 1980s. One could, moreover, say that Musharraf's rule was "softer" than the first two military dictatorships, with the former even being forced to follow the Constitution on numerous occasions. Nevertheless, the absence of political participation by the major parties marked all three regimes.

A key factor separating Pakistan's military dictatorships from those of Africa or Latin America is their relatively short life spans. None of them managed to successfully pass off the baton to a military successor. Once political pressure began to emerge, the Ayub and Musharraf regimes crumbled (Zia was killed in a plane crash) because they excluded key civilian political actors.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015



When civilians regained power, they tended to blame the military for Pakistan's problems, regardless of whether such blame was justified. The threat of yet another military coup hung over these civilian governments, weakening them and thus creating the rationale for the military to intervene. The extremely short tenures of Pakistan's elected governments left them no opportunities to craft long-term strategies.

Pakistani policy makers and politicians need to understand that they cannot go on living on borrowed money forever.

The experiences of Pakistan's neighbor India provide an important point of comparison here. The Indian electorate rejected the "India shining" slogans of the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP)–led government of 1999–2004 in favor of a Congress-led government. Yet despite the intense antagonism between the Congress Party and the BJP, the political transition was a smooth one. Of course, India is a mature democracy whereas Pakistan's has had little opportunity to grow, but the example nevertheless shows that smooth political transitions and high growth rates are not entirely foreign to the region.

Pakistan's frequent regime changes aren't the only reason that the country has never been able to engage in long-term planning. It is also possible that the system itself, regardless of whether civilians or the military are at the helm, encourages the rentier mentality. Recent events related to profiteers hoarding wheat and sugar, for example, suggest that corruption continues to enjoy support from key elements of Pakistan's society. Such systemic corruption severely distorts the signaling functions of markets, and thus efficient development as well.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

LOW EMPHASIS ON HUMAN CAPITAL

One of the paradoxes of Pakistan's economy is its periodic achievement of high rates of growth despite being burdened with poor social indicators. Pakistan's economic and social profile from 1993 to 2003 looked more like that of an African country, combining an abysmally low literacy rate with a skyrocketing population, poor treatment of women, and endemic poverty. Economic growth has done little to ameliorate Pakistan's social problems.

One reason why investment in human capital has been so low is that defense expenditure has been so high. In peacetime, military expenditure has exceeded 7 percent of GDP, twice the amount allocated to education and health combined. With debt service and defense taking up as much as 75 percent of the government's annual budget throughout the 1980s and 1990s, very little remained for development.

In the age of globalization, such failure to invest in human capital bodes ill for Pakistan's future. While Pakistan's neighbor India, by contrast, has successfully diversified into services such as information technology, Pakistan has failed to do so, despite sharing one of India's biggest advantages: a large English-speaking population.

One of the fundamental reasons Pakistan's elite has failed to invest in human capital is its lack of appreciation for the idea of the public good. Short-term, narrow and selfish interests, whether class-, institution- or ethnic-based, override the common good. It's hard to understand why this behavior persists, and hence even more difficult to "solve" the problems it creates, but at least recognizing it is the first step toward a solution.

TAX EVASION—THE CORE ISSUE?

There are at least two sides to Pakistan's overinvestment in defense (and thus its underinvestment in development). On the demand side, defense overinvestment derives from the perception that "national insecurity" is a defining feature of the Pakistani state. This is both a cause and an effect of the military's dominance of the country's political economy. But there is a supply side to this issue, too. Essentially, if government revenues were higher, Pakistan might be able to fund both defense and development at a level more conducive to national well-being. The question remains: Why aren't government revenues higher?

Pakistan's lack of a proper tax and revenue regime has resulted in high rates of tax evasion, burdening the country with unsustainable debt and undermining its development priorities.

The main culprit is tax evasion. Pakistan's tax evasion problem is caused by three things: poor legal frameworks and bureaucratic capabilities with regard to revenue extraction; corruption in the form of a predatory class that privileges certain sectors and vested interests with unjustified tax "exemptions"; and elites who cut deals with the state to avoid taxation, made possible by an anemic agriculture income tax (agriculture makes up 22 percent of Pakistan's GDP, but only 1 percent of its tax revenue). Research suggests that with a more extensive, transparent, progressive and equitable tax structure, government revenue could easily double, thus closing the huge gap between defense and development expenditures.

The fact that Pakistan—the world's 26th richest country in purchasing power parity—

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

does so poorly when it comes to revenue generation suggests that deep structural factors are at work. A small elite comprised of the military, land owners, and the rising urban upper and middle classes, is loath to give up any of its wealth (some of which is illegally accumulated). Even the apparently forward-looking, enlightened, and modernist military regime headed by General Pervez Musharraf failed to restructure Pakistan's tax regime, and backed down in the face of a massive popular revolt to his proposal to register traders and shop owners. It's unlikely that an elected government will do any better. Given their typically short political tenures, elected governments are too fearful of daggers in the night to propose bold, politically unpopular solutions. And despite their loud protestations to the contrary, opposition parties would be no more likely to champion reform if they came into power.

Pakistan spends too much on defense and too little on development: It has spent twice as much on defense during peacetime as it has on education and health combined.

Thus it isn't that the military and civilian elite of Pakistan don't know how to fix the problem; it's that their short-sightedness and penchant for self-preservation make them not want to. Their certain knowledge that "the West will never let Pakistan fail" also gives the elite tremendous confidence in the status quo.

CONCLUSIONS

Is there anything that can be done? Is Pakistan's economy fated to hover perpetually near the edge of crisis? Perhaps not. Some positive trends suggest that some of Pakistan's liabilities may be receding. One must keep in mind, of course, that predicting Pakistan's economic and political future is a game whose rules are extremely uncertain.

Despite the uncertainties, two observations about the post-Musharraf period stand out. First, while Pakistan's economic growth rate dipped considerably in 2008–2009 to 1.2 percent, it rebounded to about 4 percent the following year. This figure, although still low compared to earlier years, is respectable in a time of increasing internal terrorism and global slowdown, and it suggests that even in difficult times, economic growth is possible in Pakistan. It may also suggest that the underlying structures in the economy have shifted much as they did two decades ago. In sharp contrast to its dismal performance in the 1990s and the period after Pakistan's nuclear tests in 1998, Pakistan's economy may have ascended to a higher, more stable plane. If Pakistan can perform so well when the rest of the world is reeling from a global recession, then a more forceful economic policy might produce truly exceptional results.

The second observation concerns the maturing of the political process, which suggests the possibility of greater continuity, a key requirement for economic stability. Despite numerous attacks, challenges and tensions from within, Pakistan's democracy has managed to weather the past two-and-a-half years fairly comfortably—so far. An assertive judiciary, a supportive civilian opposition and a reticent, contemplative military have all helped to strengthen and deepen the political process of democracy.

Ever mindful of uncertainties, and keeping these two observations in mind, it is clear that the government will have to make several decisions to break out of the high-low cycle and place the economy on a more stable footing. First, it must undertake a comprehensive revision of the tax regime if it is ever to seriously tackle development, particularly in the social sectors. This can only happen if there is a political consensus to tax the rich. Given that many of the rich are elected policy makers, this means that the elite will have to look past their strong, vested interests in the status quo. Forging such a consensus will require not just technocratic innovations but political settlements in which members of the civilian, political and military elites come to some form of agreement on a long-term strategy for Pakistan's political and economic future. The international community has a role to play, too. Multilateral agencies, the United States, and other countries must carefully reconsider their aid and loan packages to avoid creating a moral hazard. If large amounts of foreign assistance are always at hand when Pakistan nears a crisis, then Pakistan's elite will have no incentive to look past the short term.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

POLICY RECOMMENDATIONS

- Pakistani policy makers and politicians need to understand that they cannot go on living on borrowed money forever. They must build a partisan consensus to tax the rich and the elite (mostly themselves) if they wish to bring Pakistan up to speed with other developing countries in the region.
- They must eliminate unjustifiable tax exemptions and preferences given to sectors or individuals, and institute in its place a broader policy that taxes earnings and wealth, not activities.
- Pakistan must improve documentation of the economy in order to better estimate taxable income and increase government revenue.
- Pakistan's leadership needs to rise above party politics and, with the advice and consent of a supportive opposition, implement a broader economic framework.
- Donor countries need to recognize that they have bailed out Pakistan too often. They should instead pursue a "do more" approach, emphasizing tax and economic policies that can harness Pakistan's huge underreported revenue potential. □

The Carnegie Endowment does not take institutional positions on public policy issues; the views represented here are the author's own and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Endowment, its staff, or its trustees.

© 2010 Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. All rights reserved.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

www.CarnegieEndowment.org

The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace is a private, nonprofit organization dedicated to advancing cooperation between nations and promoting active international engagement by the United States. Founded in 1910, its work is nonpartisan and dedicated to achieving practical results. The Endowment—currently pioneering the first global think tank—has operations in China, the Middle East, Russia, Europe, and the United States. These five locations include the two centers of world governance and the three places whose political evolution and international policies will most determine the near-term possibilities for international peace and economic advance.

FURTHER READING

Visit www.CarnegieEndowment.org/pubs for these and other publications.

Issues in Pakistan's Economy, S. Akbar Zaidi (Karachi: Oxford University Press, 2005).

The Political Economy of Military Rule in Pakistan: The Musharraf Years, S. Akbar Zaidi, Institute of South Asian Studies, National University of Singapore, Working Paper no. 31, January 2008.

Pakistan's Economy at the Crossroads: Past Policies and Present Imperatives, Parvez Hasan (Karachi: Oxford University Press, 1998).

Final Report of the Panel of Economists, Medium-Term Development Imperatives and Strategy for Pakistan, Planning Commission, Government of Pakistan, April 2010.

Military, Civil Society and Democratization in Pakistan, S. Akbar Zaidi (Lahore: Vanguard Press, 2010).

CARNEGIE ENDOWMENT
FOR INTERNATIONAL PEACE

WASHINGTON DC • MOSCOW • BEIJING • BEIRUT • BRUSSELS

1779 Massachusetts Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20036

FSC

PAKISTAN'S ROLLER COASTER ECONOMY: TAX EVASION STIFLES GROWTH

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773013 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: pverveer
Sent: Friday, November 12, 2010 11:33 AM
To: H
Subject: Fwd: for Hillary

from your friend, DVF

-----Original Message-----
From: DVF
To: pverveer
Sent: Fri, Nov 12, 2010 1:29 am
Subject: for Hillary

Dearest Madame Secretary,
I am in Abu Dhabi, watching you on television with Prime Minister Natanyaou. You are looking so well ! You are more and more impressive…I am so proud of you !
We are planning our Women of the World Conference again for next March. On Saturday night, March 12th, I will be having the 2nd DVF Award at a dinner at the UN. 2 of the recipients will be women from Vital Voices, one will be voted by people on line and the fourth one is the special one give to formidable example of courage and leadership. Last year it was given to Ingrid Betancourt by Meryll Streep.
More than anything, I would love if you would be willing to accept that award. YOU are such an example of strength. leadership and spirit to all of us women.
Am I dreaming or would you be willing to accept it ?
Lots of love
Diane

Diane von Furstenberg
DVF Studio L.P.
440 West 14th Street
New York, NY 10014
Tel: 212-741-6607

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Balderston, Kris M <BalderstonKM@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, September 15, 2010 7:09 PM
To: H; Fuchs, Michael H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: RE: Cookstoves

We spoke to the Norway's Ambassador to the UN and they are joining the Alliance for Clean Cookstoves for $600,000 the first year. They noted that this is a down payment and would contribute a "substantial amount for this endeavor" in the future. They wanted to move quickly for the CGI announcement and ant to see a business plan before they commit more.

Thnx for making this important call. Other countries including France and Finland were waiting for the Norway signal.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, September 12, 2010 7:49 AM
To: Balderston, Kris M; Fuchs, Michael H
Subject: Cookstoves

The Norwegian FM told me Norway would join the Alliance and we should coordinate w his UN Rep. Will you pls follow up? Thx.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Jake Sullivan
Sent: Thursday, September 16, 2010 2:13 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Jordan 123

Yes.

On Thu, Sep 16, 2010 at 8:02 AM, H <HDR22@clintonemail.com> wrote:
Can you find out what the status is of Jim S's efforts on this? You may not be able to do so before my mtg w the King. But I need to know what to say to him and in the press statement about it.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 3, 2010 6:20 PM
To: 'vermarr@state.gov'
Cc: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Happy New Year and onto 2010!

Rich---Thanks for all you did to make the past year a successful one, I hope you and your family will have a happy and healthy new year. I'm looking forward to 2010!

Here's some questions and I'm copying Jake so he can help w the followup--

Right before I left, Kirsten Gillibrand called to discuss her cybersecurity bill. She wants to draft it so it favors State. I told her we would connect her up w the right person who would call her to discuss in the new year. Who should that be in your shop or elsewhere? Pls let me know so I can call and tell her.

When I was in Kabul, the Aga Khan told me he had given a "roadmap" to stability in Afghanistan and wanted me to see it. That's all I know; can you track it down?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 3, 2010 6:20 PM
To: 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Happy New Year!

Monica--I hope you had a wonderful holiday season and thank you for all of your help this past year. You've been a life saver. I'm looking forward to 2010 being even better.

Here are a few things as we start the year--

I'd like to work w you to prepare a menu for Jason. Also does he give me a monthly bill for the food he buys and prepares for me?
Could you or he buy skim milk for me to have for my tea? Also, pls remind me to bring more tea cups from home.

Also, pls try to get me a copy of the Human Rights Watch report titled "We Have the Promises of the World: Women's Rights in Afghanistan."

Can you give me times for two TV shows: Parks and Recreation and The Good Wife?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Thursday, September 16, 2010 8:46 AM
To: H
Subject: fyi, more later on campaign... Sid

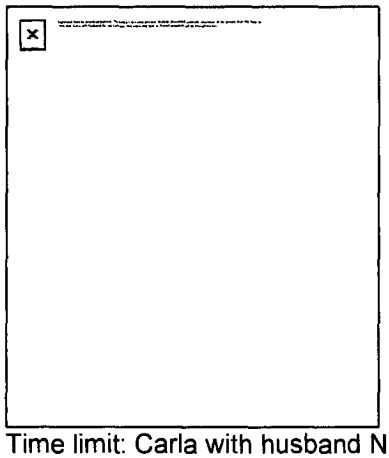
The Daily Mail

Catty Carla Bruni lifts lid on Michelle Obama's 'hellish' job



By Peter Allen and Michael Seamark
Last updated at 1:26 AM on 16th September 2010
Michelle Obama thinks being America's First Lady is 'hell', Carla Bruni reveals today in a wildly indiscreet new book.
Miss Bruni reveals that Mrs Obama replied when asked about her position as the U.S. president's wife: 'Don't ask! It's hell. I can't stand it!'
Details of the private conversation, which took place at the White House during an official visit by Nicolas Sarkozy last March, emerged in Carla And The Ambitious, a book written in collaboration with Miss Bruni.

No secrets: Michelle Obama, left, and Carla Bruni last year. Bruni made the revelations about the U.S. First Lady's feelings in a wildly indiscreet new book
In it, she says one term as French president 'will be enough' for her husband and suggests he might take tips from his friend Tony Blair: 'Why not start making money?'

More...

- France hits back at EU after accusations Sarkozy government acted 'like Nazis' in treatment of Roma

According to a friend quoted in the book, the Sarkozys have been 'impressed and inspired' by Mr Blair's fortune built up since he left Downing Street.
Miss Bruni also takes a thinly veiled swipe at Princess Diana when talking about a visit to an African hospital full of Aids victims earlier this year.
She says she refused requests by French cameramen for a photograph of her carrying a baby in her arms 'like Lady Di', adding: 'There's something obscene in promoting yourself when you are giving of yourself.'

Time limit: Carla with husband Nicolas Sarkozy. She claims one term as French president will be enough for him

Disagreements: Sarkozy with former wife Cecilia in 2006. Carla recounts a telephone row with her in her new book

In the book, the Italian model 42, accuses French government officials of trying to 'kill' her husband with too much work, and claims Mr Sarkozy lets himself be 'bullied' into complying.

Comparing herself to other leaders' wives, Miss Bruni says: 'I'm so different. I was a model. I sing, and I want to continue to sing. And on top of that you expect me to be subtle?' And she admits: 'I am a femme fatale, my dear.'

She also recounts a telephone row with Mr Sarkozy's ex-wife Cecilia, who warned her that Mr Sarkozy had 'not yet turned a new page' after their marriage.

Miss Bruni replied: 'Not only has he turned a page but he's changed books altogether. And you are the only person on earth not to have noticed it.'

Read more: http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/worldnews/article-1312462/Michelle-Obama-thinks-First-Lady-hell-says-Carla-Bruni.html#ixzz0zf4aSfQi

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 3, 2010 6:21 PM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'; Huma Abedin
Subject: Schedule

There will be an inauguration in Uruguay in Feb or March. Pls find out exact date.

Also I told FM Sikorsky I would attend Community of Democracies mtg in Poland this summer. He said we could pick date. Do you have any more info?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Friday, September 17, 2010 10:30 AM
To: H
Subject: max's new preface. sid

http://www.opendemocracy.net/max-blumenthal/days-of-rage-tea-party-and-american-conservatism

Days of rage: the Tea Party & America's right

Max Blumenthal begin_of_the_skype_highlighting end_of_the_skype_highlighting, 17 September 2010

About the author
Max Blumenthal begin_of_the_skype_highlighting end_of_the_skype_highlighting is a journalist whose work is published in the New York Times, the Daily Beast, the Nation, the Huffington Post, Salon, and other publications. He is author of Republican Gomorrah: Inside the Movement that Shattered the Party (Basic/Nation Books, 2009). His website is here

Subjects:

- Democracy and government
- International politics
- United States
- democracy & power
- american power & the world
- rise of the new right

The rise of the Tea Party movement in the United States in the first twenty months of Barack Obama's presidency is shaking the political establishment, a trend reinforced by the victories of its candidates in Republican Party primaries. But where has the movement come from, and what is its inner life? Max Blumenthal begin_of_the_skype_highlighting end_of_the_skype_highlighting, author of "Republican Gomorrah", enters the heady world of the Tea Party to unravel the mix of driven personalities, feverish rhetoric, toxic hatreds, and flirtation with violence that fuel its sub-culture's insurgent activism.

"He will tell you that he wants a strong authority to take from him the crushing responsibility of thinking for himself. Since the Republic is weak, he is led to break the law out of love for obedience. But is it really strong authority that he wishes? In reality he demands rigorous order for others, and for himself disorder without responsibility" - Jean-Paul Sartre, Anti-Semite and Jew

I am not sure when I first detected the noxious fumes that would envelop the conservative movement in the Barack Obama era. It might have been in April 2009, when I visited a series of gun shows in rural California and Nevada. Perusing tables piled high with high-calibre semi-automatic weapons and chatting with anyone in my vicinity, I heard urgent warnings of mass roundups, concentration-camps, and a socialist government in Washington. "These people that are purchasing these guns are people that are worried about what's going on in this country", a gun dealer told me outside a show in Reno. "Good luck Obama", a young gun enthusiast remarked to me. "We outnumber him 100 to 1." At this time, the Tea Party movement had not even registered on the national media's radar.

In September 2009, I led a panel discussion at the University of California-Riverside about my book Republic Gomorrah (Basic/Nation Books, 2009). Inside an auditorium filled with nearly 100 students and faculty, I sat alongside Jonathan Walton, an African-American professor of religious studies and prolific writer, and Mark Takano, an erudite, openly gay former Democratic congressional candidate and local community-college trustee. In the middle of our discussion, a dozen college Republicans stormed the front of the stage with signs denouncing me as a "left-wing hack" while a hysterical young man leaped from the crowd, blowing kisses mockingly at Takano while heckling Walton as a "racist". Afterward, university police-officers insisted on escorting me to my ride after the right-wing heckler attempted to follow me as he shouted threats.

Who was this stalker? Just a concerned citizen worried about taxes? His name was Ryan Sorba and he was an operative of a heavily funded national conservative youth outfit, the Intercollegiate Studies Institute. Besides founding dozens of Republican youth groups across the country, Sorba has devoted an exceptional amount of energy to his interest in homosexuals. His intellectual output consists of a tract titled The Born Gay Hoax, arguing that homosexuality is at once a curable disease and a bogus trend manufactured by academic leftists. Adding to his credentials, Sorba has a history of run-ins with the law, he explained when I called him about the order.

My encounter with this aggressive right-wing cadre seemed a strange, isolated event. But the hostility turned out to be symptomatic of the intensifying campaign to delegitimise President Obama and his allies in Congress. The right's days of rage were only beginning.

The constellation

Through his first year in office, Obama seemed oblivious to the threat of the far right. He campaigned against partisanship, declaring that there were "no red states" and no "conservative America". Apparently, he thought it was merely a contrivance or myth that there were people who rejected science, demonised gays, assailed minority and women's rights - not that they genuinely believed in what they said. Speaking of changing Washington, Obama seemed to think that the entire history of politics since the rise of Ronald Reagan and the right and their strategies of polarisation was not deeply rooted but a superficial problem attributable to certain "divisive" personalities, easily wiped away with gestures toward bipartisanship. His view of the parties was that they were simply mirror images sharing fundamental beliefs but separated by "partisans". The skilled and devoted community organiser could bring them together.

Many of his supporters in the media, often partisans of political wars over the years, reinforced and amplified his innocence, proclaiming he was the one at last who could "bridge the partisan divide". Andrew Sullivan, a disaffected conservative who once called critics of George W Bush policies "fifth columnists" but now fervently supported Obama, wrote that the new president was destined to become "a liberal Reagan who can reunite America". This optimism pervaded the White House as the new president and his aides sought out Republicans willing to vote for his programmes. After all, why couldn't we all just get along?

In his autobiographical book The Audacity of Hope, Obama highlighted a key component of his political strategy: "I serve as a blank screen on which people of vastly different political stripes project their own views." Once he was elected, conservatives concluded that they could reverse Obama's strength by transforming him into a human tableau for the most fearsome images they could conjure (see "Barack Obama, the fallen messiah", 23 December 2009).

Obama's multiracial background was crucial in cultivating resentment among the shock-troops. Those who rejected Obama's legitimacy to serve as president on the basis of his background gave birth to the "Birther" movement that sought to challenge his citizenship. The movement's most visible figure, and therefore the most eccentric, was Orly Taitz, a dentist and self-trained lawyer who had immigrated from the former Soviet republican of Moldova to Israel before settling in the conservative bastion of Orange County, California. Convinced by claims on the far-right website WorldNetDaily that Obama planned to create a "civilian national security force", Taitz told me she "realised that Obama was another Stalin - it's a cross between Stalinist USSR and Hitler's Germany."

After becoming transfixed by online conspiracy theories claiming Obama's family had forged his birth-certificate in Hawaii, Taitz snapped into action. She filed a lawsuit in November 2008 with California's secretary of state Debra Bowen demanding an investigation into Obama's eligibility to serve as president. Taitz's plaintiff in the case was Wiley Drake, an Orange County radio-preacher and former second vice-president of the Southern Baptist Convention who once publicly prayed for Obama's death. While her lawsuit went nowhere, and subsequent suits earned her angry rebukes from judges, Taitz became an instant media sensation, delivering heavily accented screeds against Obama before friendly interviewers from Sean Hannity to CNN's Lou Dobbs (the latter, described by Taitz as her "greatest supporter", was eventually fired as an indirect result of his hosting of her).

In March 2009, the Texas Representative Randy Neugebauer signed on to a Birther bill proposing that future presidential candidates must prove their citizenship before becoming eligible to campaign. The Birther movement had found its voice in government and made an indelible impact on the Republican grassroots. By June 2009, 28% of Republican respondents to a Kos/Research 2000 poll said they thought Obama wasn't born in the United States, while 30% "weren't sure". "Obama should be in the Big House", Taitz shrieked to me, "not the White House!"

When Obama announced healthcare reform as the first major initiative of his administration, the conservative movement activated a campaign of demonisation - transformational politics - designed to turn Obama into the "Other", making him seem as unfamiliar, and therefore as threatening, as possible. When the president urged the Congress to deliver a healthcare-reform bill in 2009, the right staged a living theatre of political hatred which turned Obama's dream of bipartisanship into a nightmarish version of Peter Weiss's Marat/Sade. On 12 September 2009, tens of thousands of far-right activists belonging to a loose confederation of anti-government groups called the Tea Party Patriots converged on Washington's National Mall for a giant protest against the Obama healthcare plan. The date was significant: Fox News's top-ranked talk-show host Glenn Beck had declared the birth of the "9-12 Project" to restore the sense of unity (and siege mentality) that Americans experienced on 11 September 2001. But this time, Obama - not Osama - was the enemy.

While covering the rally, I witnessed sign after sign declaring Obama a greater danger to America's security than al-Qaida; demonstrators held images that juxtaposed Obama's face with images of evildoers from Hitler to Pol Pot to Bin Laden; others carried signs questioning Obama's status as a United States citizen. "We can fight al-Qaida, we can't kill Obama", said an aging demonstrator. Another told me, "Obama is the biggest Nazi in the world", pointing to placards he had fashioned depicting Obama and House of Representatives' majority leader Nancy Pelosi in SS outfits. According to another activist, Obama's agenda was similar to Hitler's: "Hitler took over the banking industry, did he not? And Hitler had his own personal secret service police. [The community-organising group] Acorn is an extension of that."

The seemingly incongruous Tea Party propaganda recalled signs waved by right-wing Jewish settlers during rallies against Israeli prime minister Yitzhak Rabin and his support of the peace process, portraying him as an SS officer and as the French collaborator Marshall Pétain. In 1995, amid this provocative atmosphere, a young right-wing Jewish zealot assassinated Rabin. The Israeli tragedy was a cautionary example of targeted hatred leading to violence.

Members of the Tea Party "Patriots" did not seem to care that their rhetoric was irrational, or that comparing Obama to Hitler and Stalin was contradictory and obviously hyperbolic. Their motives were entirely negative. By purging government of the multicultural evil that had seized power through illicit means (several activists told me they believed Acorn helped Obama steal the election), they were convinced that a mythical golden American yesteryear would return. They had no interest in building anything new or even articulating an agenda, much less discussing the merits of policies. The Tea Party's primary concern was cultural purification - freedom from, not freedom to. Against the dark image of the president and his liberal allies, Tea Party activists defined themselves as the children of light. The racial subtext was always transparent.

The Tea Party's strategy rested on a guerrilla campaign of chaos and sabotage designed not only to intimidate Democrats but also to disorient independent voters who might have supported healthcare reform. The Tea Partiers were convinced this would be an easy feat, since they believed the majority of the country was on their side - that they represented the "real America". At the 9-12 rally Matt Kibbe, one of the march organisers, told the crowd that ABC News was reporting that 1 million to 1.5 million people were in attendance; ABC denied this, saying "ABCNews.com reported an approximate figure of 60,000 to 70,000 protesters." Then one Dick Armey led the crowd in a chant of "Freedom works! Freedom works!" Unknown to most of the Tea Partiers, they were intoning the name of a corporate-funded Beltway advocacy-group, not the battle-cry of Mel Gibson's version of William Wallace in Braveheart.

Indeed, contrary to its image as a grassroots movement mobilised to stifle the machinations of Washington elites, the Tea Party movement was the creation of a constellation of industry-funded conservative groups with close Republican ties. The movement's leading puppet-master was the same Dick Armey, who directed resources and talking-points to the Tea Party "Patriots" from his Washington-based advocacy group, FreedomWorks. Among the corporate clients of Armey's lobbying firm, which he was forced to leave as a result of his involvement in the Tea Parties, was the pharmaceutical giant Bristol Myers Squibb, a company with a clear interest in defeating healthcare reform. (Armey's other "real American" clients included the Marxist terror-cult, the People's Mojahedin of Iran, which received funding and assistance from Saddam Hussein in order to launch terrorist strikes throughout the 1990s against Iranian civilian targets.) Armey collected a consulting fee of $250,000 directly from FreedomWorks and $300,000 from allied astroturf front groups. FreedomWorks paid out much of its money to an assortment of Republican political consultants.

The rumour

If Dick Armey was the Tea Party king, Sarah Palin was eager to be crowned the Tea Party queen. Just days after Obama's inauguration, Palin abruptly quit her job as Alaskan governor to vie for the honour. Palin's motives for quitting became clear when she inked a lucrative deal to write her political memoir Going Rogue, signed on as a regular contributor to Fox News, and received $1 million an episode for a reality-show on cable television, "Sarah Palin's Alaska". Palin's book-tour, which sent her through Middle America in a luxuriously outfitted bus, resembled both a presidential campaign and a travelling carnival.

Whether or not Palin intends to run for president, her growing media presence has magnified her influence within the Republican Party. Yet the ever-expanding Palin phenomenon was greeted with hostility by Republican politicos desperately seeking to expand the party's base after the drubbing in 2008. Steve Schmidt, formerly John McCain's campaign manager in the doomed presidential campaign of 2008, warned that Palin's nomination in 2012 would be "catastrophic" for the GOP. His doomsday prediction was backed by an Gallup poll in October 2009 revealing her as one of the most polarising and unpopular political figures in the country with a disapproval rating of over 50%. Unfortunately for Schmidt and other party pragmatists, those who approve of Palin represent the heartbeat of the Republican Party, its most fervent activists, and cannot be dissuaded from following her, even if she is leading the party off a cliff.

A special congressional election in New York's heavily Republican 23rd district in November 2009 was the first major test of Palin's power. Along with a parade of nationally recognised conservatives, Palin endorsed Doug Hoffman, an unknown far-right third-party candidate closely allied with the Tea Party - in the process helping to force a popular moderate Republican politician, Dede Scozzafava, from the race. In the end, Palin's ideological purge in upstate New York led to an improbable Democratic victory, the first in that district in more than 100 years. After the disaster Palin and her allies claimed victory, insisting they had at least hastened the purge of ideologically impure Republicans from the party. She went on to endorse Rand Paul, the son of right-wing libertarian Representative Ron Paul and a candidate in Kentucky's GOP senatorial primary; meanwhile George W Bush's vice-president Dick Cheney went out of his way to endorse Rand's regular Republican opponent, Trey Grayson, the Kentucky secretary of state.

The self-described "hardcore pro-lifer" Palin followed the Tea Party script of avoiding social issues like abortion and gay marriage in order to obscure the large presence of the Christian right within the movement's ranks, recasting herself accordingly as a libertarian concerned primarily with issues of "economic freedom". She claimed the Democratic "cap-and-trade" plan to limit carbon-emissions would harm the livelihood of blue-collar workers, and she assailed healthcare reform as a Trojan horse for "socialism" (though she admitted her family "used to hustle over the border" to take advantage of Canada's single-payer healthcare system). But no Palin attack had as much effect as the one she blasted out on her Facebook page claiming the Obama healthcare plan included a provision for "death panels" that would recommend euthanasia for severely ill patients like her Down syndrome-afflicted son, Trig. With the click of a button, Palin transformed the tone of the healthcare debate from rancorous to poisonous.

The source of Palin's "death panels" smear was a practiced propagandist, former New York's lieutenant governor Betsy McCaughey. When Bill Clinton introduced healthcare reform during his first term as president, McCaughey falsely claimed in an article published in the New Republic that the plan would force consumers to drop their private plans and buy into the government's programme (the article, widely circulated by Republicans, would go on to win a National Magazine Award, only to be retracted years later by the New Republic's editors). Now she was back in the spotlight, pushing a rumour that would be voted by the non-partisan fact-checking website Politifact.com as "the lie of 2009". McCaughey's latest innuendo was boosted by the cult of political crank Lyndon LaRouche, which mobilised to push the rumour into the mainstream.

In June 2009, one of LaRouche's top lieutenants publicly confronted Ezekiel Emanuel, the National Institute of Health's chief bioethicist and brother of White House chief of staff Rahm Emanuel, accusing him of seeking to reintroduce Hitler's T-4 programme to kill the handicapped through healthcare reform. "President Obama has put in place a reform apparatus reviving the euthanasia of Hitler Germany in 1939, that began the genocide there", LaRouche staffer Anton Chaitkin charged. Soon, LaRouche's followers were on street corners around the country with posters depicting Obama with a Hitler moustache. At a townhall forum on healthcare reform hosted by Barney Frank, a Democratic Representative, a LaRouche follower waved one of the Obama-as-Hitler posters and demanded: "Why do you continue to support a Nazi policy, as Obama has expressly supported this policy?"

Two months later, after Palin whispered the rumour on Facebook, prominent conservatives from former House speaker Newt Gingrich to ranking Senate finance-committee member Charles Grassley, parroted her claims before audiences of indignant Tea Partiers. Not to be outdone, Glenn Beck devoted an extended rant on his show to the reality of death panels. Beck, echoing the LaRouche cultists, accused Ezekiel Emanuel of "the devaluing of human life, putting a price on each individual." He thundered, "The death panel is not a firing-squad. Rationing is inevitable and they know it!"

The death-panel rumour served a variety of functions, all useful to the movement, but not necessarily to the Republican Party. Most importantly, the rumour resonated both with hard-core libertarians who resented the very existence of the federal government and Christian right activists who viewed the legalisation of abortion as a slippery-slope to government-sponsored euthanasia. The hysteria it engendered helped repair the rift exposed by the Terri Schiavo charade in 2005, when the evangelical conservative James Dobson publicly clashed with Armey, the libertarian leader, over the right of the government to interfere in a private family matter of life and death.

The enemy

The slurring of Obama as a sort of sleeper-agent crypto-Muslim helped bring the neo-conservatives back into the fray. The new neocon generation was led by Dick Cheney's daughter, Liz, who founded an anti-Obama advocacy group, Keep America Safe, by leveraging donations from pro-Israel sources. Asked by CNN's Larry King about the Birther movement that was challenging Obama's status as an American citizen, Liz Cheney remarked: "One of the reasons you see people so concerned about this is people are uncomfortable with having for the first time ever, I think, a president who seems so reluctant to defend the nation overseas." With the libertarians, Christian right, and the neocons seated around the same table, united in resentment of the alien president, the conservative movement was whole again.

The experiments in "terror-management theory" developed by three professors of psychology (Sheldon Solomon of Skidmore College, Jeff Greenberg of the University of Arizona, and Tom Pyszczynski of the University of Colorado) have demonstrated the connection between fear of death and intensification of conservative attitudes. The findings help explain the effectiveness of the death-panel rumour and insinuations by conservative figures that Obama was not truly American and somehow sympathetic to Islamic terrorists. Indeed, these seemingly irrational smears were guided by tactical reasoning, calculated to agitate voters with constant reminders of their own mortality. Whether or not independent voters responded, the rhetoric of death kept the Tea Party crowd in a persistent state of panic and rage, ensuring a standing army ready to fan out to rallies and town halls at the first sign of liberal malfeasance.

Obama's first year in office was marked by more than raucous protests; there were several disturbing murders committed by far-right extremists. In April 2009, a 22-year-old neo-Nazi wannabe named Richard Poplawsi mowed down a Swat team of Pittsburgh cops, killing three. Poplawski's best friend told reporters the young killer "grew angry recently over fears Obama would outlaw guns." Later it was discovered that Poplawski had posted a video-clip to a neo-Nazi website portraying Fox's Glenn Beck contemplating the existence of concentration-camps. (After a characteristically thorough investigation, Beck conceded they were not real.) On another occasion, the killer posted a video promoting Tea Party rallies. A month after the Pittsburgh bloodbath, Scott Roeder, a supporter of the militant anti-abortion group Operation Rescue, shot Dr George Tiller to death while he prayed at his church in Wichita, Kansas. Tiller was declared fair game by the anti-abortion movement because of his role as Kansas's only late-term abortion provider. During at least twenty-eight episodes of Bill O'Reilly's "O'Reilly Factor," O'Reilly had referred to Tiller as "Tiller the baby killer", a criminal guilty of "Nazi stuff." "I wouldn't want to be [Tiller] if there is a Judgment Day", O'Reilly proclaimed.

In August 2009, a middle-aged professional named George Sodini walked into a health club in suburban Pittsburgh and gunned down three women. The major media outlets explained Sodini's motives away by homing in on passages in his online diaries describing his loneliness, inability to convince women to have sex with him, and descent into chronic masturbation. Nearly every publication omitted or ignored a long deranged entry in which Sodini projected his sexual frustration onto Obama, whom he seemed to view as a symbol of black male virility and predation.

The day after Obama's election victory, Sodini wrote: "Good luck to Obama! He will be successful. The liberal media LOVES him. Amerika has chosen The Black Man. Good! In light of this I got ideas outside of Obama's plans for the economy and such. Here it is: Every black man should get a young white girl ... Kinda a reverse indentured servitude thing. Every daddy know when he sends his little girl to college, she be ... real good. I saw it. 'Not my little girl', daddy says! (Yeah right!!) Black dudes have thier [sic] choice of best white?? [ellipses in original]."

In another posting to an anti-Clinton forum in 1994, during the height of the Republicans' Whitewater investigation, Sodini revealed that he had purchased a bumper-sticker reading, "Stop Socialism, Impeach Clinton," from a National Review ad. A year later, Sodini ranted on an anti-government militia site: "I am convinced that more drastic action is required to bring the country back to the Constitutional order that it was 200 years ago. I don't think any group of political leaders will achieve this for us." Whether or not Sodini's murder-spree was motivated by his political passions, he was pathologically death-driven and fixated on the phantasmagoria of right-wing imagery. In his final diary entry, Sodini proclaimed: "Death lives!"

The bible

More than any other media figure of the Obama era, Glenn Beck encouraged the campaign of racial demonisation and conspiracy that consumed the Tea Party "Patriots". During a broadcast of "Fox and Friends", Beck opined that Obama "has exposed himself over and over and over again as a guy who has a deep-seated hatred for white people, or the white culture." As evidence, Beck pointed to White House green-jobs czar Van Jones, an African-American former community organiser who was eventually forced to resign as a direct result of Beck's crusade. From there, Beck targeted another black Obama adviser, Valerie Jarrett, highlighting her ties to Acorn while upholding her and Jones as evidence of Obama's "socialist" agenda. In another broadcast, Beck played an audio clip of unidentified African-Americans referring to "Obama money" as they collected welfare-cheques in Detroit. Then he showed footage of members of a Kansas City-based youth group practicing a step show, a traditional African-American group dance apparently unfamiliar enough to Beck and his transfixed audience that he felt at liberty to claim the footage as evidence that "Obama's SS" was being trained across inner-city America.

In September 2009, Beck relentlessly targeted Acorn, the right's new favourite hobgoblin, admitting that he intended to use the poor people's advocacy group to distract his viewers from the healthcare debate. "Trust me", Beck said, "Everybody now says they're going to be talking about healthcare. I don't think so." (His statement was reminiscent of Rush Limbaugh's scandal-mongering remark during the early Clinton administration: "Whitewater is about healthcare.")

Beck promptly cued up a series of hidden-camera videos shot by conservative youth activists James O'Keefe and Hannah Giles inside Acorn field offices.
In the videos, O'Keefe baited African-American staffers into making statements explaining that Giles, who claimed she was a prostitute, could obtain low-income housing. O'Keefe edited in images of himself clad in an outlandish pimp costume to create the impression that he was dressed that way during the meetings with Acorn; however, Giles later admitted her partner had lied about wearing his costume to further incriminate Acorn. In the end, Acorn was exonerated of all criminal wrongdoing.

In a separate incident O'Keefe was arrested and charged with a federal crime after he and several conservative pals disguised themselves as telephone repairmen and attempted to wiretap phone-lines in the office of Senator Mary Landrieu of Louisiana. Like Ryan Sorba, O'Keefe and his posse were movement cadres paid and directed by well-funded conservative outfits; O'Keefe had been trained by the Leadership Institute, the right-wing youth group that nurtured leading lights like Jack Abramoff, Karl Rove, Ralph Reed, and Jeff Gannon.

While O'Keefe and his buddies plea-bargained with prosecutors, Beck basked in his formula for success. His show earned the highest ratings at Fox News, topping network franchises like O'Reilly and Sean Hannity. In the process, Beck's opinions became firmly implanted in the nervous systems of Tea Party activists. "Glenn Beck has taught us everything we know", a demonstrator at the 9-12 rally told me. "He's opened our eyes to so much."

But unlike the right-wing radio warhorses who helped usher in Newt Gingrich's Republican counter-revolution of 1994, Beck was not an authentic product of the movement. When Rush Limbaugh first began dominating the AM airwaves, Beck was mired in the world of mid-level commercial radio, delivering corny yarns about lesbians and celebrity trash in hopes of becoming the next Howard Stern. By night, as he has tirelessly recounted, he medicated his anxiety with cocaine and alcohol, destroying his first marriage in the process. "We remember Glenn from the womanising, the drinking, the drugs. Everybody who knew him at the time saw what a complete mess he was", a shock- jock from Tampa, Florida, who called himself Bubba the Love Sponge remarked to me during a broadcast of his nationally syndicated show.

Like Dusty Rhodes, the pseudo-populist demagogue of Elia Kazan's 1957 film, A Face in the Crowd, Beck was a self-destructive drifter who might have been crumpled up with a bottle of Mad Dog 20/20 in an alleyway or been locked away in a prison cell had fame not found him first. Beck was only able to stabilise his life when he made his escape from freedom, marrying a conservative Mormon, converting to her religion, and transmuting his urge to abuse drugs into conservative radio diatribes.
When Beck first broke into television on CNN's Headline News Channel, he struggled to articulate a coherent political worldview. If he distinguished himself from other big-time conservative hosts in any way, he did so through strained and often snide attempts at humour, remnants of his failed radio career. Nevertheless, with help from his liberal agent, Matthew Hiltzik, Beck snagged a primetime slot at Fox News in early 2009. Around this same time, Beck began promoting the work of an arcane Mormon conspiracy-peddler named W Cleon Skousen, whom he described as his political lodestar. Suddenly, Beck had something more to offer than irritable mental gestures.

Thanks to Beck's designation of Skousen's pseudo-historical tract The 5000 Year Leap as "required reading" on the website of his 9-12 Project, and his promotion of the book on his show, the previously obscure Skousen became the Hidden Imam of the Tea Party movement. By summer 2009, Skousen's Leap was among the top ten books on Amazon and a fixture on literature tables at Tea Party gatherings. It went from selling a puny couple of thousand copies in 2007 to selling over 200,000 copies in 2009. Just why the book generated such an instant appeal is difficult to understand. It is little more than a slapdash of quotes from the Founding Fathers, often taken out of context and deliberately oversimplified, to explain why America is the greatest nation in history. In the process, Skousen claims that church and state separation is un-American, that "coercive taxation" is communist, and that marriage is the underpinning of a free society. Benjamin Franklin, who wrote at length on the merits of "amours" with "old women," and who famously solicited prostitutes and fathered a son of out of wedlock, was the ultimate authority Skousen quoted on the importance of marriage.

Though Skousen claims the Founders as the world's foremost source of eternal wisdom, he buttressed his points with fringe sources like the conspiracist Norman Dodd's screeds about the Illuminati. According to Skousen, Dodd claimed that "powerful influences congregating in the United States" like the Rockefellers and the Rothschilds had forced the United States into the first world war. Skousen published Dodd's manifestoes in his obscure journal Freemen's Digest, which he founded for the express purpose of propagating conspiracies.

Skousen's paranoid politics were an outgrowth of his participation in extreme anti-communist groups during the 1950s. He boasted of a close friendship with then-FBI director J Edgar Hoover and said he provided him with research on communist plots, claims disputed by FBI historians. (During a recent interview, Skousen's son, Paul, told me that contrary to rumours of Hoover's cross-dressing and homosexual dalliances, he would set the top cop up on blind dates with live women.) Skousen was fired from his job as Salt Lake City's police chief for, in the words of the city's conservative Mormon mayor, "conduct[ing] his office as chief of police in exactly the same manner in which the communists operate their government." From there, Skousen sailed off to the far shores of the right-peddling conspiracy tracts like The Naked Communist, and earning condemnation from his beloved FBI, which accused him in an internal memo of "promoting [his] own anti-communism for obvious financial purposes."

Skousen's vocal support for the far-right John Birch Society's claim that communists controlled President Dwight Eisenhower cost him the support of the corporate backers who had paid for his Red-bashing lecture tours. He went off the radar for several years, returning during the late 1960s to accuse the Jewish Rothschild family of secretly bankrolling everyone from Ho Chi Minh to the civil-rights movement. By the late 1970s, even the Church of Latter-Day Saints distanced itself from Skousen and his conspiracy theories. His work fell through the margins and might have disappeared entirely had Beck not revived it, turning The 5000 Year Leap into the bible of the Tea Party movement. Alexander Zaitchik observed in his authoritative profile of Skousen on Salon that Skousen's renewed influence through Beck and the Tea Party "suggests that the modern base of the Republican Party is headed to a very strange place."

The descent

Besides influencing Beck, Skousen's teachings inspired one of the Tea Party movement's most visible grassroots celebrities, retired sheriff Richard Mack. I met Mack in February at a far-right rally just outside of Montgomery, Alabama. On a makeshift stage towed into the middle of a rodeo arena by a pickup truck, Mack recalled with reverence his mentorship by Skousen, who he said taught him everything he needed to know about the constitution. Mack urged his spellbound audience to stockpile ammo and store food. "If you control the food supply", Mack warned, "you control the people. And that's the first step to slavery."

Already a hero to conservatives for successfully suing the Clinton administration over the provision in the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act requiring law enforcement to conduct criminal-background checks of gun purchasers, Mack reemerged in the Obama era as the archetypal local lawman who vowed to resist the tyrannical federal government. Along with a few dozen former and active military and law-enforcement personnel, Mack helped form a self-styled Tea Party militia called the Oathkeepers. Galvanised by their fear of creeping socialism, the Oathkeepers solemnly swore to refuse tyrannical federal orders such as cooperating with foreign troops and forcing Americans into concentration-camps. Because the group's members trained for combat, the vow came with suggestion of armed resistance.

Besides Mack, the Oathkeepers attracted a coterie of militia-movement retreads into its ranks. The most well-established figure was Mike Vanderboegh, a longtime militia fanatic who published a booklet in the mid-1990s entitled Strategy and Tactics for a Militia Civil War, calling for sniper attacks on "war criminals, secret policemen, rats." With Obama in office, Vandeboegh churned out anti-government screeds on right-wing blogs with renewed passion and supported his efforts by cashing in the $1,300 in federal disability compensation he received each month.

For all the energy the far right exerted in its campaign to strangle Obama's agenda, it was a Democrat who posed the greatest threat to the passage of healthcare reform. Representative Bart Stupak of Michigan had been in office since 1993, placing him among the senior leadership of the so-called centrist Blue Dog Democrats. When healthcare reform was introduced in Congress, Stupak became the leader of an informal caucus of anti-abortion Democrats, making him the de facto swing vote on the House version of the bill. By extension, Stupak was the point man in the campaign to ensure that the bill would not allow federal funding for abortion for low-income women.

But after close consultation with leaders of the US Conference of Catholic Bishops, Stupak went a step further. He introduced a draconian amendment to block women from paying for abortions from even their own private insurance plans. The amendment, which passed the House but was shut down in the Senate, became a key sticking point in healthcare negotiations. "He's a big hero now in the pro-life community", Deal Hudson - former Catholic issues adviser to George W Bush - told me in November 2009. "Thanks to him, this is the first time I can remember the pro-life Democrats having any power."

To the chagrin of the Republicans, Stupak entertained offers of compromise from the Democratic leadership. According to Hudson, the Catholic bishops were keen to see healthcare reform pass, but only if the bill contained a clear provision forbidding patients from spending federal money on abortion. Finally, in March 2010, after pressure from Nancy Pelosi, Obama agreed to sign an executive order forbidding the federal funding of abortion. Stupak had been mollified. Now he and his anti-abortion caucus pledged to deliver the swing votes the Democrats needed to pass the bill. As soon as reports seeped out declaring the imminent passage of healthcare reform, major right-wing blogs like RedState.org churned out virulent denunciations of Stupak, calling him a traitor and sellout. The blog comment sections filled up with dozens of diatribes referring to Stupak in language previously reserved for Dr George Tiller: "Bart the Baby-Killer."

On 20 March 2010, thousands of Tea Party activists surrounded the Capitol's Longworth Building in expectation of Obama's pep talk to the House Democrats and the healthcare vote. Democratic Representative John Lewis, a hero of the civil-rights movement, and Representative Barney Frank, the first openly gay member of Congress, passed through the crowd on their way inside the Capitol. "Nigger!" a demonstrator barked at Lewis. Another called Frank a "faggot", eliciting laughter and cheers from nearby protesters. Meanwhile, as another African-American Democrat, Representative Emanuel Cleaver, ascended the Capitol steps, a protester who had been screaming at Lewis and Frank spat on his face.

With the demonstration carried on into the night, cries of "Kill the bill!" drifted into calls for violence. "I would gladly stand with any of you men here and take these fascists down", a man in camouflage battle-dress uniform proclaimed in front of an amateur videographer, pointing toward the Capitol. "You haven't heard the last of me!"

The next day, Republican members of Congress emerged from the Longworth Building to salute the Tea Partiers. The demonstrators cheered wildly for their proxies on the inside. Finally, after hours of impassioned speeches on the House floor, the bill passed. But the drama was hardly over.

Republican Representative Joe Pitts, an anti-abortion Catholic who co-authored Stupak's original amendment, demanded a motion to bring it back to the floor for a vote, a transparent exercise in grandstanding that was certain to fail. In response, Stupak rushed to the podium with a stinging rebuke to Pitts and the Republicans. "The motion to commit does not support life", Stupak declared. "It is the Democrats who have stood up...." Heckling from the Republican side interrupted his statement. As Stupak looked around the House chamber, Representative Randy Neugebauer, a right-wing Republican from Texas who openly supported the Birther movement, began shouting at him from the backbench, "Baby killer!" Other Republicans joined in, parroting base insults.

While the Republicans sank their heads in defeat, some more militant devotees of the Tea Party movement called for a right-wing Kristallnacht. "If you wish to send a message that Pelosi and her party cannot fail to hear, break their windows", Vanderboegh of the Oathkeepers wrote on a far-right blog hours after the bill passed. "Break them NOW. Break them and run to break again." Within three days, windows and doors at Democratic Party headquarters in New York, Kansas and Arizona had been shattered.

Meanwhile, at least ten Democratic members of Congress reported receiving death threats. Images of nooses were faxed to the offices of Stupak and James Clyburn, an African-American congressman from South Carolina. Representative Anthony Weiner, an especially vocal proponent of healthcare reform, received a menacing letter filled with white powder. The brother of Representative Tom Perriello, another healthcare supporter, had his home gas line deliberately sabotaged after a local Tea Party organiser posted his address online (he had meant to post the congressman's) and encouraged activists to "drop by" to express their anger about Perriello's recent vote. In Tucson, Arizona, the windows of Democratic Representative Gabrielle Giffords' office were shattered by shots from a pellet gun. And a brick was thrown through the window of Representative Louise Slaughter's office in New York as her voicemail filled with threats of impending sniper attacks.

After the passage of the healthcare bill, the Tea Party floated into a grey zone between authoritarianism and anarchy. Crusading to restore a holy social order, they promoted disorder. Claiming to protect democracy, they smashed windows of elected representatives. Warning of death panels, they called in death threats. With the atmosphere of violence thickening, Palin took to her Twitter account to issue a battle-cry: "Don't Retreat, Instead-RELOAD!" Thus concluded the first phase of the Obama era that was to usher in a peaceable kingdom of bipartisanship.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 12, 2010 2:17 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Fri Nov 12 14:08:14 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

RIYADH (Reuters) - Saudi Arabia's King Abdullah has been told by doctors he had to rest because he had a slipped disc, the state-news agency SPA reported on November 12. SPA quoted a royal court statement as saying doctors had ordered the king, who is in his 80s, to rest under a treatment plan.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 16, 2010 12:01 PM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: Jordan compact signing

I am currently out of the office traveling overseas with limited access to email. If you need immediate assistance, please contact Joanne Laszczych at 202-647-5548.

If this is an emergency, please call the Operations Center and have them reach out to me.

thank you.

cdm

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 16, 2010 1:14 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Crowley, Philip J; Burns, William J; Steinberg, James B
Subject: Final vote on START

14 to 4

All dems + lugar, corker and isakson voted yes.

Wicker, baraso, risch and inhoffe voted no.

Demint not voting.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 12, 2010 5:59 PM
To: H
Subject: Latest

Daniel teed up for tomorrow.

You'll see Bibi call sheet but call timing is in flux as we discussed.

Letter still being worked.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 1, 2010 8:49 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: FYI... David Crane... Fw: Catch up

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Burns Strider [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 15:12:30 2010
Subject: FYI... David Crane... Fw: Catch up

Wanted you to see both requests/comments from David Crane...

Burns Strider

---

From: "Crane, David" [redacted]
Date: Thu, 21 Jan 2010 15:07:44 -0500
To: BStrider [redacted]
Cc: O'Brien, John [redacted] gailfritzinger [redacted]>
Subject: Catch up

Dear Burns:

It has been some time since we spoke so I wanted to start by wishing you a happy new year and thanking you for your assistance in placing our corporate contribution for Haiti Relief through the Clinton Foundation.

My hope is that you can further help me with two very different requests related to the Haitian tragedy:

1. After the tsunami devastated parts of Indonesia in 2004, I felt strongly that the CEOs of American corporations involved in the planning, construction and operation of civil, energy, water and telecommunication infrastructure should lead a charitable effort involving human as well as financial resources to develop an implementation plan for the rebuilding of the country once the Red Cross, the Military and the other "first responders" had stabilized the situation. I think the concept is even more relevant in 2010 with respect to Haiti which obviously is much closer to the United States and has much less indigenous skills and resources of its own to apply to the rebuilding effort. Given President Clinton's normal powers of persuasion and his passion for improving Haiti even before the earthquake (it was the only thing he wanted to talk about when Isabella and I met with him in November), he would have little difficulty recruiting a group of appropriate CEOs to form an "advisory council on Haitian infrastructure" (which then could springboard to greater things and deeper commitments). If you could reach out to the appropriate person on President Clinton's staff, we of course would be available to assist in giving shape to the concept, compiling a list of names of infrastructure CEOs, etc.

2. On a much more personal note, two friends of Isabella and mine, [redacted] were in the final stages of adopting two infants out of a Haitian orphanage when the earthquake struck. Since that time, the process has obviously stopped and they have had no word on the fate of these two babies, their welfare or the prospects for getting them out of their earthquake-ravaged environment into their new home and family in the United States. I have attached a significant amount of detail about the babies, the orphanage, etc. B6

Burns, I know President Clinton is devoting all of his herculean energy to humanitarian relief for Haiti at the macro level, but knowing his humanistic approach, there must be someone on his staff who can help with these type of individual situations. Is it possible for you to find that person so that I can make the request and so our friends [redacted] can provide him/her with any additional information that they might need?

I really appreciate your assistance with respect to both of these matters. Please do not hesitate to contact me night or day on my cell phone [redacted]

Come visit us in Princeton.

Best regards,

David Crane

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 1, 2010 8:50 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Haiti

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Tina Flournoy, Office of the President [redacted] B6
To: H
Cc: 'millscd@state.gov' <millscd@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Jan 21 18:25:17 2010
Subject: Haiti

Hi -- you guys are doing great work.

Wanted to let you know that we've sent a dozen members -- nurses, paramedics and trauma specialists to Haiti. They are working with Paul Farmer's Partners in Health. This is the first deployment of 74 members who have volunteered in Vermont. The work and being helpful is so important to them and to us. A number of people on our staff worked throughout the weekend to make all the necessary arrangements, but the impetus came directly from our members.

As you know the challenges are enormous, but we have a long-term commitment to the reconstruction of the health and education sectors in Haiti. Please let us know how we can be helpful.

Hope you're well.

This e-mail and any attachments are confidential and are intended solely for the named addressee(s). If you are not a named addressee, you should not copy, alter, post, forward, distribute or disseminate the contents of the e-mail or attachments. Any views or opinions expressed are solely those of the individual and do not necessarily represent those of the American Federation of Teachers (AFT).

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 1, 2010 8:50 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Haiti

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Zachary Iscol [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 17:24:21 2010
Subject: Haiti

Madam Secretary-

It looks like the 24 MEU is headed ashore this weekend after all. Col Petronzio asked me to join him and I'm flying down tomorrow to link-up with them and should be on the ground in Haiti by Sunday. Radha is coming with me and I have no idea what we will be doing, I just hope that we are able to make ourselves as useful as possible.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 1, 2010 8:50 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: H: early review. Sid

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 22:19:34 2010
Subject: H: early review. Sid

H: Jim Fallows told me he was at your speech and thrilled by it. He's just returned from three years in China. He didn't expect you would be so frank. Here's his post on The Atlantic website. Sid

http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/a_momentous_40_hours.php#more

<http://ad.doubleclick.net/click%3Bh=v8/392a/3/0/%2a/d%3B220891182%3B0-0%3B0%3B44073402%3B3454-728/90%3B33541978/33559856/1%3B%3B%7Efdr%3D220121663%3B0-0%3B1%3B17654873%3B3454-728/90%3B34945512/34963342/1%3B%3B%7Esscs%3D%3fhttp://www.adobe.com/opengov/?sdid=FCFPP>

<http://ad.doubleclick.net/jump/TheAtlanticOnline/james_fallows;pos=topleader;tile=1;sz=728x90,468x60;ord=352212445?>

James Fallows <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/>
« Hillary Clinton's "Internet freedom" speech
<http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/hillary_clintons_internet_free.php> | Main
<http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/>

A momentous 40 hours, leading to Clinton/China/Internet

21 Jan 2010 04:12 pm
Apart from two obvious pieces of momentous news in the past day-and-a-half -- the new junior Senator from Massachusetts, and the new Buckley v. Valeo <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Buckley_v._Valeo> (by which I mean today's lamentable, straight-party-line Supreme Court ruling <http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703699204575016942930090152.html> that removes limits from direct corporate underwriting of political campaigns) -- there is one other event today that will have big ripple effects. I mean SecState Hillary Clinton's speech this morning about "Internet Freedom," mentioned here <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/hillary_clintons_internet_free.php> and with a prelude discussion here <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/interesting_chinagoogle_discus.php> .

I'm not going to take time for a thorough gloss of the speech. Instead I highly recommend reading the full text, here <http://www.state.gov/secretary/rm/2010/01/135519.htm> , or watching the official video, here <http://link.brightcove.com/services/player/bcpid1705667530?bctid=62730021001> . And for now some of the main points while listening (and noting main points down in real time with the handy LiveScribe <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2009/07/my_new_favorite_gadget_li.php> pen.)

- In contrast to the dreamy Internet optimism of a decade or so ago -- I'm not naming names, but I remember! -- when many people imagined that info technology, by itself, would undermine oppression and bring the world together, Clinton started off with a very astringent reminder that this technology, like others, was neither good or bad in itself and is already being used in both helpful and destructive ways:

"Amid this unprecedented surge in connectivity, we must also recognize that these technologies are not an unmitigated blessing. These tools are also being exploited to undermine human progress and political rights. Just as steel can be used to build hospitals or machine guns, or nuclear power can either energize a city or destroy it, modern information networks and the technologies they support can be harnessed for good or for ill. The same networks that help organize movements for freedom also enable al-Qaida to spew hatred and incite violence against the innocent. And technologies with the potential to open up access to government and promote transparency can also be hijacked by governments to crush dissent and deny human rights."

And a very nice pivot out of this section, effective because it's so blunt and plain:

"On their own, new technologies do not take sides in the struggle for freedom and progress, but the United States does."

- Underscoring the "this is a big deal" tone of the speech, she enumerated the "Four Freedoms <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Four_Freedoms> " that FDR proclaimed in 1941, as part of the struggle for the world's future, and said there were a comparable set of Four Freedoms for the Internet age. Check out the speech yourself for details.

- The China surprise: the speech was a more frontal challenge to Chinese internet and overall censorship policy than I expected, and than I recall in other US-China interactions in a very long time. For instance, early in the speech, an itemization of the places where suppression is getting worse:

"In the last year, we've seen a spike in threats to the free flow of information. China, Tunisia, and Uzbekistan have stepped up their censorship of the internet. In Vietnam, access to popular social networking sites has suddenly disappeared. And last Friday in Egypt, 30 bloggers and activists were detained."

Tunisia, Uzbekistan, Vietnam, Egypt -- this is not the grouping of countries that the Chinese government, in its recent sense of rise to superpower status, is used to being lumped with. Compared to the US as a financial power, OK; overtaking Japan in economic size, yes; being a crucial player in environmental negotiations... all that is one thing. Bracketed in the same sentence with Tunisia and Uzbekistan is different. Sentences like this don't appear in formal, big-deal SecState addresses by accident.

Other passages to the same effect:

"As I speak to you today, government censors somewhere are working furiously to erase my words from the records of history. But history itself has already condemned these tactics....

"Those who disrupt the free flow of information in our society or any other pose a threat to our economy, our government, and our civil society. Countries or individuals that engage in cyber attacks should face consequences and international condemnation...."

And then the Google section itself.
I had wondered whether the speech would mention Google by name -- and had reason to think it might not. (Main argument for leaving it implicit rather than referring directly to the Google case: in the company's ongoing efforts to find a "win-win-win <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/behind_on_google-china-ology.php> " acceptable way to remain in China, rather than a lose-lose-lose permanent split, it's not necessarily a help to have the U.S. government standing officially by its side. ) But the way Sec. Clinton introduced the point was significant: as a proxy for China's own ability to fulfill its potential <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/about_the_stakes_for_china_in.php> and sustain its economic rise:

"To use market terminology, a publicly listed company in Tunisia or Vietnam that operates in an environment of censorship will always trade at a discount relative to an identical firm in a free society. If corporate decision makers don't have access to global sources of news and information, investors will have less confidence in their decisions over the long term. Countries that censor news and information must recognize that from an economic standpoint, there is no distinction between censoring political speech and commercial speech. If businesses in your nations are denied access to either type of information, it will inevitably impact on growth.

"Increasingly, U.S. companies are making the issue of internet and information freedom a greater consideration in their business decisions. I hope that their competitors and foreign governments will pay close attention to this trend. The most recent situation involving Google has attracted a great deal of interest. And we look to the Chinese authorities to conduct a thorough review of the cyber intrusions that led Google to make its announcement. And we also look for that investigation and its results to be transparent.

"The internet has already been a source of tremendous progress in China, and it is fabulous. There are so many people in China now online. But countries that restrict free access to information or violate the basic rights of internet users risk walling themselves off from the progress of the next century. Now, the United States and China have different views on this issue, and we intend to address those differences candidly and consistently in the context of our positive, cooperative, and comprehensive relationship."

There's a lot more in the speech, including about terrorism, disaster relief, religion, etc -- but it's there for the reading.
Back to the to-do list for me now.
Permalink <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/a_momentous_40_hours.php> ::
Share This <http://www.addthis.com/bookmark.php>

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 1, 2010 8:51 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Thank you

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Dr. Mark Hyman [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 19 22:19:05 2010
Subject: Thank you

Dear Hillary
Wanted to take a minute to thank you for what you have down. I am sure preident Clinton and Chelsea told you what is happening at the hospital.
It was deserted when we arrived except for 1500 patients and a few administrators. Now it is starting to function. We have done over 100 operations and each day is better. The military is working with is now to provide food water supplies support. They are amazing. Thank you thank you thank you. Blessings on you and your family. Will share more when I get real Internet access. To learn more see my posts on Huffington post.

Mark Hyman, MD
Sent from my iPhone

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 12, 2010 7:41 PM
To: H; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Been a pretty slow day. Can u reply all on this email?
- dennis ross asking to do secure call at 9:30 instead of 10. Is that ok?
- bill burns wants to give you trip download in person so he will come see you monday.
- I just got a call sheet for netanyahu which I'm told you may do over weekend.
- I sent draft remarks for dorothy height service for your review.
- geoff morell just reported that wash post is going to run your/gates start oped on monday.
- also a new call list coming your way. Only new call is ted deutch returned your call. The rest of the outstanding foreign calls are in your folder but we haven't done anything with them.
- I connected with [redacted] today who said [redacted] offered to keep her job for 2 more years. [redacted] still seems inclined to want to come to you but I encouraged her to stay
- we got our allotment for wh holiday tour tickets so we have been offering to people B6
- I saw jen hanley today who is doing very very well and sends her best to you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 15:44:41 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Anything else going on?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Nov 12 14:16:54 2010
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

---

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Fri Nov 12 14:08:14 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

RIYADH (Reuters) - Saudi Arabia's King Abdullah has been told by doctors he had to rest because he had a slipped disc, the state-news agency SPA reported on November 12. SPA quoted a royal court statement as saying doctors had ordered the king, who is in his 80s, to rest under a treatment plan.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 5, 2010 7:23 PM
To: 'muscatinel@state.gov'; 'rooneym@state.gov'; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Cc: 'slaughtera@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Development Speech

AMS mentioned Maria's edits. Here's email from her w specifics.

----- Original Message -----
From: Otero, Maria <OteroM2@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 05 17:56:59 2010
Subject: Development Speech

Dear Secretary:

I was pleased to learn about your development speech this week, and offered the insights below to Anne-Marie earlier today. Overall, it's a very good speech, and I look forward to hearing you deliver it tomorrow.

B5

4. Mike, through Dan Baer, and I provided language to ensure consistency with the Human Rights Speech.

Thank you,

Maria

Under Secretary of State for Democracy and Global Affairs

Department of State

2201 C St. NW Room 7261

Washington DC 20520

202 - 647-6240

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 12, 2010 9:12 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Call confirmed for 930
Bill wants to do in person
Netanyahu letter still isn't done, just checked. Will get to u when it is.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 20:24:54 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

I'll talk to Dennis at 9:30am tomorrow.

I'd be willing to talk by phone w Bill Burns either by phone over the weekend or on Monday whichever he wants.

And I will decide tomorrow about what, if any, of the foreign calls I'll make.

I'm supposed to get faxed to me tonight a letter for Netanyahu from the specials. Can you find out when it's coming?

I hope you were convincing w [redacted] and am happy Jen is doing well. B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H; Huma Abedin
Sent: Fri Nov 12 19:41:20 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Been a pretty slow day. Can u reply all on this email?
- dennis ross asking to do secure call at 9:30 instead of 10. Is that ok?
- bill burns wants to give you trip download in person so he will come see you monday.
- I just got a call sheet for netanyahu which I'm told you may do over weekend.
- I sent draft remarks for dorothy height service for your review.
- geoff morell just reported that wash post is going to run your/gates start oped on monday.
- also a new call list coming your way. Only new call is ted deutch returned your call. The rest of the outstanding foreign calls are in your folder but we haven't done anything with them.
- I connected with [redacted] today who said [redacted] offered to keep her job for 2 more years. [redacted] still seems inclined to want to come to you but I encouraged her to stay
- we got our allotment for wh holiday tour tickets so we have been offering to people
- I saw jen hanley today who is doing very very well and sends her best to you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 15:44:41 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Anything else going on?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Nov 12 14:16:54 2010
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

---

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Fri Nov 12 14:08:14 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

RIYADH (Reuters) - Saudi Arabia's King Abdullah has been told by doctors he had to rest because he had a slipped disc, the state-news agency SPA reported on November 12. SPA quoted a royal court statement as saying doctors had ordered the king, who is in his 80s, to rest under a treatment plan.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 5, 2010 9:31 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Daniel Yohannes

Ok. Can you call me?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 05 21:13:26 2010
Subject: FW: Daniel Yohannes

fyi

From: Steve Radelet [redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, January 05, 2010 6:32 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Muscatine, Lissa; Rooney, Megan; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Laszczych, Joanne
Subject: Daniel Yohannes

Just a heads up -- can someone let the Secretary know that Daniel Yohannes will be there tomorrow at the speech, so she may want to recognize him (presumably along with Raj) in her opening comments.

Thanks,

Steve

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, February 2, 2010 10:28 AM
To: 'preines[redacted] B6
Subject: What is this meeting about?

I did not know I was going out there today and I'm not sure why I'm going. What is it for?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 3, 2010 5:34 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Final: International Family Planning Budget Statement

Can I call you?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 03 05:25:48 2010
Subject: Fw: Final: International Family Planning Budget Statement

---

From: Rubiner, Laurie
To: jenklein. pverveer ; Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma; Reines, Philippe I
Sent: Tue Feb 02 17:35:11 2010
Subject: Fw: Final: International Family Planning Budget Statement

B6

You guys are totally great. Please thank Secy Clinton for us - we know it wouldn't have happened without her and all of you. We are also posting a video from Cecile on our website about this. Best, Laurie

---

From: Jordan, Brannon
To: Natl Communications Division; McHugh, Lorrie; Rubiner, Laurie; Meer, Jeff; Chaney, Joi; Taylor, Amy
Sent: Tue Feb 02 16:05:36 2010
Subject: Final: International Family Planning Budget Statement

Statement below and attached just sent to reporters.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE CONTACT: PPFA Media Relations 202-973-4882

February 2, 2010

Statement from Cecile Richards on International

Family Planning in the Obama Administration Budget

WASHINGTON, DC —The women of the world have true friends in Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton and the Obama administration. After years of inadequate funding during the previous administration, yesterday's Fiscal Year 2011 budget request for an increase in international family planning is a critical step forward in demonstrating our nation's renewed commitment to ensuring that women worldwide have access to safe and effective reproductive health care.

The Obama administration has sent a strong signal that the status quo is unacceptable. Every year more than half a million women — nearly all of whom live in developing countries — die of pregnancy-related causes. Moreover, one in three deaths related to pregnancy and childbirth could be avoided if women who wanted effective contraception had access to it.

To strengthen our working relationships with partners around the world, as well as our image, the United States must increase access to family planning. By ensuring that women have increased access to the family planning they need, our nation is working to make good on its commitment to promote the health of all women and their families.

An investment in family planning is an investment that reaps significant dividends. By providing education, counseling and contraceptives to women and couples, we are working to strengthen families worldwide. We also will help achieve major reductions in infant and maternal mortality, HIV infections and global poverty. As Secretary Clinton has said, "There's a direct connection between a woman's ability to plan her family, space her pregnancies, and give birth safely, and her ability to get an education, work outside the home, support her family, and participate fully in the life of her community."

Planned Parenthood works with partners across the globe to eliminate barriers to basic reproductive health care that is essential to the health and well-being of women, men and children everywhere. Limited access to health care, lack of political will, legal and regulatory restrictions, cultural taboos, and harsh gender inequality all put women at risk of unintended pregnancy, unsafe abortion and childbirth, and HIV and other sexually transmitted infections. The commitment of Secretary Clinton and the Obama administration to international family planning will further the efforts of Planned Parenthood and others to help women overcome barriers to accessing needed reproductive health care.

As the Fiscal Year 2011 budget and appropriations process moves forward, we look forward to working with Congress to build on this request so that we may adequately address the global health challenges facing women worldwide.

###

Planned Parenthood Federation of America is the nation's leading sexual and reproductive health care provider and advocate. We believe that everyone has the right to choose when or whether to have a child, and that every child should be wanted and loved. Planned Parenthood affiliates operate more than 840 health centers nationwide, providing medical services and sexuality education for millions of women, men, and teenagers each year. We also work with allies worldwide to ensure that all women and men have the right and the means to meet their sexual and reproductive health care needs.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 5, 2010 9:32 PM
To: 'muscatinel@state.gov'
Subject: Re: New top for development

Good. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Jan 05 21:26:20 2010
Subject: New top for development

Here is a new top. We will add the point about how much we actually spend on foreign aid (vs what people think we spend) a little later in the speech. Wanted to get this to you to see if it is going in the right direction. Am also faxing to you.

Development / New Top

B5

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, November 12, 2010 9:51 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Aiming to send monday for tues delivery.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 21:29:51 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Do you know when the Oscar jackets will be ready?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Nov 12 21:12:11 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Call confirmed for 930
Bill wants to do in person
Netanyahu letter still isn't done, just checked. Will get to u when it is.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 20:24:54 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

I'll talk to Dennis at 9:30am tomorrow.

I'd be willing to talk by phone w Bill Burns either by phone over the weekend or on Monday whichever he wants.

And I will decide tomorrow about what, if any, of the foreign calls I'll make.

I'm supposed to get faxed to me tonight a letter for Netanyahu from the specials. Can you find out when it's coming?

I hope you were convincing w [redacted] and am happy Jen is doing well. B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H; Huma Abedin
Sent: Fri Nov 12 19:41:20 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Been a pretty slow day. Can u reply all on this email?
- dennis ross asking to do secure call at 9:30 instead of 10. Is that ok?

- bill burns wants to give you trip download in person so he will come see you monday.
- I just got a call sheet for netanyahu which I'm told you may do over weekend.
- I sent draft remarks for dorothy height service for your review.
- geoff morell just reported that wash post is going to run your/gates start oped on monday.
- also a new call list coming your way. Only new call is ted deutch returned your call. The rest of the outstanding foreign calls are in your folder but we haven't done anything with them.
- I connected with [redacted] today who said [redacted] offered to keep her job for 2 more years. [redacted] still seems inclined to want to come to you but I encouraged her to stay B6
- we got our allotment for wh holiday tour tickets so we have been offering to people
- I saw jen hanley today who is doing very very well and sends her best to you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 15:44:41 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Anything else going on?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Nov 12 14:16:54 2010
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

---

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Fri Nov 12 14:08:14 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

RIYADH (Reuters) - Saudi Arabia's King Abdullah has been told by doctors he had to rest because he had a slipped disc, the state-news agency SPA reported on November 12. SPA quoted a royal court statement as saying doctors had ordered the king, who is in his 80s, to rest under a treatment plan.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 5, 2010 9:33 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Daniel Yohannes

Ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 05 21:31:31 2010
Subject: RE: Daniel Yohannes

Getting on a 9:30pm call - can I call you after?

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, January 05, 2010 9:31 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: Daniel Yohannes

Ok. Can you call me?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 05 21:13:26 2010
Subject: FW: Daniel Yohannes

fyi

From: Steve Radelet [redacted] B6
Sent: Tuesday, January 05, 2010 6:32 PM
To: Valmoro, Lona J; Muscatine, Lissa; Rooney, Megan; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Laszczych, Joanne
Subject: Daniel Yohannes

Just a heads up -- can someone let the Secretary know that Daniel Yohannes will be there tomorrow at the speech, so she may want to recognize him (presumably along with Raj) in her opening comments.

Thanks,

Steve

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Schwerin, Daniel B <SchwerinDB@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 8:11 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Reines, Philippe I; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Statement on Aung San Suu Kyi

Madame Secretary, passing along a statement on Aung San Suu Kyi for your review.
Thanks
Dan

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY CLINTON

Release of Aung San Suu Kyi

Today I join with billions of people around the world to welcome the long-overdue release of Burmese democracy leader and Nobel Peace Prize Laureate Aung San Suu Kyi from house arrest.

Aung San Suu Kyi has endured enormous personal sacrifice in her peaceful struggle to bring democracy and human rights to Burma, including unjustified detention for most of the past twenty years. The Burmese regime has repeatedly rejected her offers to engage in dialogue and work together, trying instead to silence and isolate her. Through it all, Aung San Suu Kyi's commitment to the Burmese people has not wavered.

The United States calls on Burma's leaders to ensure that Aung San Suu Kyi's release is unconditional so that she may travel, associate with her fellow citizens, express her views, and participate in political activities without restriction. They should also immediately and unconditionally release all of Burma's 2,100 political prisoners.

We urge Burma's leaders to break from their repressive policies and begin an inclusive dialogue with Aung San Suu Kyi and other democratic and ethnic leaders towards national reconciliation and a more peaceful, prosperous, and democratic future.

###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 6, 2010 6:14 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: sorry - just getting off calls and leaving the building - are you still up?

Sorry. But I'm up now if you want to call.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 05 22:56:20 2010
Subject: sorry - just getting off calls and leaving the building - are you still up?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 6, 2010 7:19 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Speech

When will I get it? Can it be faxed to house?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 8:59 AM
To: H
Subject: Letter

Have you read the letter? Will it work?

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 6, 2010 7:18 AM
To: 'muscatinel@state.gov'
Subject: Re: New top for development

Will I get speech soon? Can yo fax it to house?

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Jan 05 21:26:20 2010
Subject: New top for development

Here is a new top. We will add the point about how much we actually spend on foreign aid (vs what people think we spend) a little later in the speech. Wanted to get this to you to see if it is going in the right direction. Am also faxing to you.

Development / New Top

B5

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 7, 2010 6:51 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: From coco

Pls print.
------Original Message------
From: Chelsea Clinton
To: Hillary Clinton
Subject: From coco
Sent: Jan 6, 2010 7:06 AM

Interesting re; Iran. Coco counsels that Maziar Bahari thinks [redacted] s a bit emotional - but admits that for those of us confined to English we take what we can get. B6

----- Original Message -----
From: coco.ferguson[redacted]
To: Diane Reynolds
Sent: Mon Jan 04 17:29:33 2010
Subject: Re: Maris Africa Fund launch

Quite an interesting reply to my fanmail to [redacted] the blogger I've been copying to you.

Hello Coco,Thank you for your kind words and sorry for the late reply -- I've been busy with the holiday season (also why there's been a drop-off in posts lately).I wouldn't place an extra emphasis on Haji's arrest (or on anyone at Baran, for that matter). I think those arrests were geared at intimidating Khatami more than anything. Although he's been more quiet than either Mousavi or Karoubi, he has "international clout," if you will, so I believe the regime is less willing to attack him head-on. (Though what we witnessed on Tasooa was admittedly shocking). Actually, with a few exceptions, I think a threshold has been passed where arrests aren't even strategic anymore. It seems that the vast majority are for the sake of intimidation. The regime is looking increasingly desperate.Rafsanjani, I'm sure, is up to something. He's a good ally, but I think the pro-democracy movement should always be wary of his intentions. Ultimately, Rafsanjani is looking out for Rafsanjani. Having said that, I think his interests and those of the Greens have and will continue to coalesce. Before the election, this was him funding Mousavi's campaign (in hopes that Mousavi's presidency would bring him back into the fold after the rise of the "new right"). Now (and going forward), he's probably more concerned about his legacy in Iran. We should remember he was the driving force that ascended Khamenei to the Supreme Leadership, and that there were also accusations that the 2005 election (where he lost to Ahmadinejad) was fixed. Not to simplify things, but I'm sure there is some resentment. Regardless, sooner or later he's going to have to be more bold and give the opposition something (namely momentum, as he did with his July sermon) if he wants to get something back (clout, legacy, etc.).Things are continuing to heat up! God-willing, change will come in 2010. Whether such a change is ultimately 'regime change' should be up to the Iranian people inside Iran.Best [redacted] Sent using BlackBerry® from Orange

-----Original Message-----
From: Diane Reynolds [redacted]
Date: Mon, 4 Jan 2010 13:03:57
To: 'coco.ferguson[redacted]
Subject: Re: Maris Africa Fund launch

I've always wanted to go to Qom, and Iran too admittedly, as you know, more for the far history than recent I confess. I can't sort out whether I want to go more or less now though because of recent turmoil/promise/discontent; maybe want and sense are merely opposing forces! If only I could find an approproate Jane Austen quote...
I'm still very sad we missed your 30th and will miss your official fund launch. Hopefully we can celebrate with you soon, soon. Coming back to fundraise in NY anytime soon?

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Coco Ferguson <
To: Diane Reynolds
Sent: Mon Jan 04 08:28:50 2010
Subject: Re: Maris Africa Fund launch

A bit of arcana = but important.

http://www.payvand.com/news/10/jan/1008.html

The Society of Qom Seminary Teachers has disqualified Ayatollah Sanei as a Marja-e Taqhlid (source of emulation - high clerical rank). Ayatollah Sanei, second to Montazeri, was the most outspoken critic of the election and subsequent repression in Qom - he's also a very popular cleric in Iran and many of Montazeri's supporters were shifting to him. Iran suppresses any figures about the support these clerics have, but we're talking millions.

The Society's power to disqualify Sanei is pretty questionable and it's a provocative act - all you need in Shiism to become a Marja-e Taghlid is the faith of followers and confirmation of "two fair and knowledgeable individuals" and this move is the latest in a decade long move by Khamenei to shift the clergy's power and authority away from their constituency of followers and towards the government (increasing the clergy's dependence on the state for funds has been the primary tool of reform.) Since Ashura the silence from Qom has been notable and this disqualification will split the clergy further into those who side with the government and those who bet on popular support for their long term influence. This last group are increasingly being forced to show their hand and incur punishment/risk assassination of themselves or family members (cf Mousavi's nephew.)

Predictably, harder line clerics like Ayatollah Hussein Nouri Hamedani and former Judiciary Chief Ayatollah Mohammad Yazdi have sided with Khamenei and the Rev Guard, as has Larijani (a key move by a smart betting man), but the majority remain on the fence - and the next few weeks that include the mourning rituals for Ayatollah Montazeri, the Ashura Martyrs, Arbein (40 days after Ashura) and the Anniversary of the Revolution on 2nd February will be events to watch. Each of them are mass public rituals that have underpinned the Islamic Revolution for 30 years, and canceling them would indicate extraordinary weakness by the government. They are obvious opportunities for the Green Movement to mobilize, risk death and continue the cycle; the government knows it doesn't have the training or self control to contain them peacefully and must be scratching their heads over how to stop this cycle. Forcing Revolutionary Guard officers to shoot civilians is also a very risky move.

The ultimate fence sitter, and key figure behind Mousavi and Karroubi is of course Rafsanjani - who came out in veiled support of the government, and it's supporters on Saturday, 2nd Jan. This support either cost Khamenei something, or the Revolutionary Guard and he found leverage with the Shark. All a bit murky. Rafsanjani's clearly hedging his bets and may feel that he would do best out of a negotiated National Unity Plan.

(NB [redacted]'s pretty emotional - and clearly skewed, but useful info). http://www.thenewestdeal.org/2009/10/national-unity-plan.html B6

http://www.presstv.ir/detail.aspx?id=115190&sectionid=351020101

I still think the Western Press is optimistic about Khamenei and the Revolutionary Guard's weakness - but moves like that against Montazeri and Sanei, and inflation running unofficially at 25% (confirmed by furious down town Tehran friends quoting tomato prices) may finally push a broader tranche of society to join what has been a middle class protest until now. The big problem with the 'protest' is that it doesn't have a credible leader, or stated ideals, but it's certainly terrified those in power.

Predictions are for nutters in this situation, but I would doubt that Khamenei has the stomach for civil war, and there must be some deals cooking. It's a tricky one for the West over who to support - because no deal will be clean.

To be continued...

All love,

Coco

Maris Capital

20 Conduit Street

London

W1S 2XW

---

Tel: +44 (0)207 499 0368

Fax: +44 (0)207 629 0995

UK Roaming mobile: [redacted]

[redacted]

This message and any attachment to it might contain confidential information and/or may be privileged or otherwise protected from disclosure. If you are not the intended recipient, please notify the sender immediately, delete this message and do not disclose, distribute or copy it to any third party or otherwise use this message. Neither Maris Capital Advisors LLP nor Maris Capital Limited accept liability for any corruption, interception, amendment, tampering or viruses occurring to this message in transit or for any inappropriate or unacceptable use of their e-mail systems and services by their employees. Messages may be subject to delays, non-delivery and unauthorised alteration. Any communication between us may be subject to such lawful supervision as we deem necessary.

Maris Capital Advisors LLP (Partnership No.OC342305) is a company registered in England and Wales with registered offices at 20 Conduit Street, London, W1S 2XW, United Kingdom. Maris Capital Advisors LLP is in the process of applying to be authorised by the Financial Services Authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000.

On Jan 4, 2010, at 12:35 PM, Diane Reynolds wrote:

Hmm...how much of his commentay to you will make it on the news (ie part. the part abt the"wrong man")?

----- Original Message -----
From: Coco Ferguson
To: Diane Reynolds
Sent: Mon Jan 04 03:01:07 2010
Subject: Fwd: Maris Africa Fund launch

fyi from Channel 4's Jon Snow.

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Snow, Jon"
Date: January 4, 2010 5:42:28 AM BST
To: Coco Ferguson
Subject: RE: Maris Africa Fund launch

B6

Yes Iran..i emerged from Preident A interview very downcast..and suspecting i had most certainly ebeen talking to the wrong man. the Supreme Leader is in the frame and unlikely to survive it..in my humble opinion. Tehran a frighetning and eery place..but officials and minders much more talkative 'behind the hand'..

x Jon

JON SNOW
NEWSCASTER, CHANNEL 4 NEWS
Jon Snow blogs at http://www.channel4.com/snowblog

200 GRAY'S INN ROAD
LONDON
WC1X 8XZ
UNITED KINGDOM
T +44 (0)20 7430 4237
F
M
E
http://www.channel4.com/news
P Please consider the environment. Do you really need to print this email?

---

From: Coco Ferguson
Sent: Wednesday, December 30, 2009 12:07 PM

B6

To: Snow, Jon
Subject: Maris Africa Fund launch

Dear Jon,

[redacted] B6

Very best wishes,

Coco

Please Note:

Any views or opinions are solely those of the author and do not necessarily represent those of Independent Television News Limited unless specifically stated.
This email and any files attached are confidential and intended solely for the use of the individual or entity to which they are addressed.
If you have received this email in error, please notify postmaster@itn.co.uk

Please note that to ensure regulatory compliance and for the protection of our clients and business, we may monitor and read messages sent to and from our systems.

Thank You.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 7, 2010 6:52 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: 2009-12-31 Lewis Work Plan
Attachments: 2009-12-31 Lewis Department Notice.docx; 2009-12-31 Lewis Work Plan.docx; 2009-12-31 Lewis Department Notice.docx; 2009-12-31 Lewis Work Plan.docx

Importance: High

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 03 13:53:16 2010
Subject: FW: 2009-12-31 Lewis Work Plan

HRC:

Per our conversation, she advised I could forward this – it will also come through channels.

cdm

From: Lewis, Reta Jo
Sent: Thursday, December 31, 2009 5:18 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Laszczych, Joanne
Subject: 2009-12-31 Lewis Work Plan
Importance: High

Hi Cheryl:

Today, I was able to have good preliminary conversations with Jean Bonilla and Lorraine Hariton in EEB. Both Jean and Lorraine are very excited about the opportunity to partner on this new area for the Secretary and provided me with some very valuable insight and discussion on how we can partner and collaborate on programming and initiatives together.

I also included the information from ECA – that we discussed in the document. The INR meeting was cancelled today and will be scheduled for early next week. As I move around the Department and talk with other officials in the coming week, I believe we will be able to build out a more robust Work Plan and garner some great collaborations on this effort.

Additionally, in a recent conversation that I had with Governor O'Malley from Maryland, I shared with him that the Secretary was launching a new effort that would assist state and local leaders with respect to their global affairs portfolios. The Governor was extremely excited and remarked that he has some great idea for the Secretary about how the Department can be a major value-add to local governments. He told me that he wants to be very engaged in what we do in the Department in this area. I will be scheduling a time to meet with him and his economic team once my position has been announced. He wanted me to let her know that he had been thinking about her and wanted to reach out and did not know how and then I walked in and we began to have this discussion and he said – what a way to start his year for 2010 – something coming to reality that he had been thinking about.

Also, Maura Pally in ECA forwarded me a meeting that I took with the Deputy Director of the National Lieutenant Governor's Association. They were in town working on their upcoming Washington meeting. They too are very excited about what we are planning and want to work very closely with us in the coming months as we launch this effort. Lt. Governor Bill Bolling in VA is the current Chair.

Please let me know if you need to make any additional changes. Thanks so much for all of your assistance and support!!!

Have a great New Years!!

Best,

Reta

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 7, 2010 7:24 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Kibaki doesn't want to lose call. Is trying to do it at 7:30 so ops may call.

Ok. Is Raj coming tonight?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 07 07:21:54 2010
Subject: Kibaki doesn't want to lose call. Is trying to do it at 7:30 so ops may call.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 7, 2010 7:34 AM
To: 'vermarr@state.gov'; 'muscatinel@state.gov'
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Development speech

I want to send the development speech as delivered w a note from me to the appropriate Members of Congress (authorizing, appropriating, leadership, others?). I can sign the letters anytime before I leave for Asia/Pacific on Monday am. Thx so much.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 7, 2010 7:51 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Robinson

We should try to reschedule call. The press statements explain a lot.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 7, 2010 8:22 AM
To: 'muscatinel@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Development speech

We should try.

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
To: H; Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Cc: Huma Abedin
Sent: Thu Jan 07 08:19:55 2010
Subject: Re: Development speech

Great idea. I wonder if we should also try to get it published in Foreign Affairs or something equivalent.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Verma, Richard R; Muscatine, Lissa
Cc: Huma Abedin [redacted] B6
Sent: Thu Jan 07 07:33:45 2010
Subject: Development speech

I want to send the development speech as delivered w a note from me to the appropriate Members of Congress (authorizing, appropriating, leadership, others?). I can sign the letters anytime before I leave for Asia/Pacific on Monday am. Thx so much.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773090 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

OFFICE OF THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

United Nations Children's Fund
Three United Nations Plaza
New York, New York, 10017

Telephone 212 326 7035
Facsimile 212 326 7758
www.unicef.org

11 October 2010

Excellency,

I would be grateful if you would kindly forward the enclosed letter from Mr. Anthony Lake, Executive Director of UNICEF, to The Honorable Hillary Rodham Clinton, Secretary of State, Washington, DC.

A copy of the letter is attached for your information.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Maria Calivis
Director and Chief of Staff

Her Excellency
Ms. Susan E. Rice
Permanent Representative of the United States to the United Nations
140 East 45th Street
New York, N.Y. 10017

unite for children

unicef

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773090 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 12:19 PM
To: 'mchaleja@state.gov'; 'crowleypj@state.gov'
Subject: US radio

Can you also put people on domestic radio, including talk shows getting out info and answering questions?

RELEASE IN FULL

Anthony Lake
Executive Director

Dear Hillary,

A short note to thank you and your colleagues for organizing such a good event on nutrition and for making it so useful. We look forward to further collaboration with the U.S.G.

And I enjoyed seeing you, if only briefly.

No need to reply - I suspect you are rather busy. unicef

Best wishes,
Tony

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 7:26 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Call followup

Sen. Tester--Pls ask someone on Michele Bond's team to call Jamie Wise on Sen. Tester's staff to explain our orphan procedures. The Senator said he had about 15 families who had gone thru the adoption process.

Pls add Stephanie Miner and Jack Mannion to a guest list for a future event at State.

Also, Jack Rosen still wants a mtg sometime in the future. So ask Lona just to add him to a list but not schedule it.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 9:12 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Looks like both of them can do monday night. Krystal confirming. Sunday might be better for her.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 22:45:50 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Did we get Kristy and Krystal (for color) scheduled for Sunday or Monday night?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Nov 12 21:51:19 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Aiming to send monday for tues delivery.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 21:29:51 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Do you know when the Oscar jackets will be ready?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Nov 12 21:12:11 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Call confirmed for 930
Bill wants to do in person
Netanyahu letter still isn't done, just checked. Will get to u when it is.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 20:24:54 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

I'll talk to Dennis at 9:30am tomorrow.

I'd be willing to talk by phone w Bill Burns either by phone over the weekend or on Monday whichever he wants.

And I will decide tomorrow about what, if any, of the foreign calls I'll make.

I'm supposed to get faxed to me tonight a letter for Netanyahu from the specials. Can you find out when it's coming?

I hope you were convincing w[ ] and am happy Jen is doing well. B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H; Huma Abedin
Sent: Fri Nov 12 19:41:20 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Been a pretty slow day. Can u reply all on this email?
- dennis ross asking to do secure call at 9:30 instead of 10. Is that ok?
- bill burns wants to give you trip download in person so he will come see you monday.
- I just got a call sheet for netanyahu which I'm told you may do over weekend.
- I sent draft remarks for dorothy height service for your review.
- geoff morell just reported that wash post is going to run your/gates start oped on monday.
- also a new call list coming your way. Only new call is ted deutch returned your call. The rest of the outstanding foreign calls are in your folder but we haven't done anything with them.
- I connected with[ ] today who said[ ] offered to keep her job for 2 more years. [ ] still seems inclined to want to come to you but I encouraged her to stay
- we got our allotment for wh holiday tour tickets so we have been offering to people
- I saw jen hanley today who is doing very very well and sends her best to you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 15:44:41 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Anything else going on?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Nov 12 14:16:54 2010
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

---

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Fri Nov 12 14:08:14 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

RIYADH (Reuters) - Saudi Arabia's King Abdullah has been told by doctors he had to rest because he had a slipped disc, the state-news agency SPA reported on November 12. SPA quoted a royal court statement as saying doctors had ordered the king, who is in his 80s, to rest under a treatment plan.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 10:13 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Ill offer
Also, did u see statement from dan schwerin on aung san suu kyi? Are u ok with it?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Nov 13 09:13:11 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

I could do Sunday night w Krystal--what about 8pm?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Nov 13 09:11:57 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Looks like both of them can do monday night. Krystal confirming. Sunday might be better for her.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 22:45:50 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Did we get Kristy and Krystal (for color) scheduled for Sunday or Monday night?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Nov 12 21:51:19 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Aiming to send monday for tues delivery.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 21:29:51 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Do you know when the Oscar jackets will be ready?

----- Original Message -----

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Nov 12 21:12:11 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Call confirmed for 930
Bill wants to do in person
Netanyahu letter still isn't done, just checked. Will get to u when it is.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 20:24:54 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

I'll talk to Dennis at 9:30am tomorrow.

I'd be willing to talk by phone w Bill Burns either by phone over the weekend or on Monday whichever he wants.

And I will decide tomorrow about what, if any, of the foreign calls I'll make.

I'm supposed to get faxed to me tonight a letter for Netanyahu from the specials. Can you find out when it's coming?

I hope you were convincing w [redacted] and am happy Jen is doing well. B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H; Huma Abedin
Sent: Fri Nov 12 19:41:20 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Been a pretty slow day. Can u reply all on this email?
- dennis ross asking to do secure call at 9:30 instead of 10. Is that ok?
- bill burns wants to give you trip download in person so he will come see you monday.
- I just got a call sheet for netanyahu which I'm told you may do over weekend.
- I sent draft remarks for dorothy height service for your review.
- geoff morell just reported that wash post is going to run your/gates start oped on monday.
- also a new call list coming your way. Only new call is ted deutch returned your call. The rest of the outstanding foreign calls are in your folder but we haven't done anything with them.
- I connected with [redacted] today who said [redacted] offered to keep her job for 2 more years. [redacted] still seems inclined to want to come to you but I encouraged her to stay
- we got our allotment for wh holiday tour tickets so we have been offering to people
- I saw jen hanley today who is doing very very well and sends her best to you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Fri Nov 12 15:44:41 2010
Subject: Re: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

Anything else going on?

----- Original Message -----

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Nov 12 14:16:54 2010
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

---

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Fri Nov 12 14:08:14 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Saudi king told to rest over slipped disc

RIYADH (Reuters) - Saudi Arabia's King Abdullah has been told by doctors he had to rest because he had a slipped disc, the state-news agency SPA reported on November 12. SPA quoted a royal court statement as saying doctors had ordered the king, who is in his 80s, to rest under a treatment plan.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 8:36 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Morales

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Jan 20 20:28:29 2010
Subject: Morales

Morales blasted the U.S. efforts in Haiti today. See below. Craig Kelly and I agree that you should consider a call to Morales. Perhaps we could discuss tomorrow.

From: Rocha, Barbara
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 1:26 PM
To: Roberts, Asel K
Subject: FW: Garcia Linera on Haiti

Rough translation of the points below:

- Evo Morales announced today that his government will ask for an emergency meeting at the UN to "reject the U.S. military occupation" in Haiti, according to Spanish news agency EFE.

- "It is not possible that the U.S. is using a natural disaster to invade and occupy Haiti," said Morales, who qualified as "inhumane, savage, and opportunist" the deployment of troops in the Caribbean island.

- "We'll ask the UN, via our Foreign Ministry, for an emergency meeting to reject this military occupation of the U.S. in Haiti," announced Morales.

- Morales recalled that President Obama has guaranteed in international fora that he wants partners and respectful diplomatic relations with other countries. "You don't achieve this (partners, diplomatic relations) with military occupation, or troops, or bases," he said and expects "a pronouncement by the peoples of the world and social forces rejecting this intervention and military occupation in Haiti."

- Morales also asked "how much money, food and water" will be destined to the 12,000 soldiers the U.S. sent to Haiti and noted that this money "should be spend on the victims."

- He trusted that the American people will reject "the abusive use" of their economic resources for what he insisted on qualifying as "military intervention."

- "The times of empire have ended: these are times of the people."

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Rocha, Barbara
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 1:09 PM
To: Roberts, Asel K
Subject: FW: Garcia Linera on Haiti

Following up on this, President Morales has now said he will call for an emergency meeting at the UN to "reject the U.S. military occupation of Haiti." I've alerted IO. I'll reach out to Labor and G staff to offer a briefing, will keep you looped in.

EVO MORALES PIDE REUNION DE EMERGENCIA PARA REPUDIAR Y RECHAZAR A EEUU EN HAITI, INFORMA EFE

- Evo Morales anunció hoy que su Gobierno pedirá a Naciones Unidas una reunión de emergencia para "repudiar y rechazar la ocupación militar de Estados Unidos" en Haití, informa la agencia española EFE.

- "No es posible que Estados Unidos use una desgracia natural para invadir y ocupar militarmente Haití", dijo Morales, quien calificó de "inhumano, salvaje y oportunista" el despliegue de las fuerzas armadas estadounidenses en la isla caribeña.

- "Vamos a pedir mediante la cancillería a las Naciones Unidas una reunión de emergencia para repudiar y rechazar esta ocupación militar de Estados Unidos hacia Haití", anunció Morales.

- Morales recordó que el mandatario de Estados Unidos, Barack Obama, ha garantizado en foros internacionales que desea tener socios y relaciones diplomáticas de respeto mutuo con el resto de países. "Ser socios o tener relaciones diplomáticas no se hace con ocupación militar, ni con tropas militares, ni con bases militares", dijo y espera "un pronunciamiento de todos los pueblos del mundo y de las fuerzas sociales rechazando esta intervención y ocupación militar en Haití".

- Morales se preguntó también "cuánta plata, cuántos alimentos o cuánta agua" se van a destinar para abastecer a los 12.000 soldados que Estados Unidos ha mandado a Haití y consideró que ese dinero "debería gastarse en los damnificados" por el terremoto y no en los militares.

- Confió en que el propio pueblo estadounidense rechace "el uso abusivo" de sus recursos económicos para lo que insistió en calificar como "intervención militar".

"Los tiempos de imperio se terminan: son tiempos de pueblos", sentenció.

SBU

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 11:01 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Mon Oct 18 22:33:26 2010
Subject: Fw: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

Pls try to find the h/w letter for me.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Oct 18 22:24:32 2010
Subject: Fw: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

----- Original Message -----
From: Huang, Cindy Y
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Haslach, Patricia M
Sent: Mon Oct 18 18:39:51 2010
Subject: FW: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

Handwritten note of thanks from Tony Lake to S. Glad that he notes the meeting was "useful" -- maybe a sign that we managed to make it more than just talking heads? Thx!

-----Original Message-----
From: Sabar, Aisha (USUN)
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 6:38 PM
To: Nagy, Eleanor; Huang, Cindy Y
Subject: FW: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

Nice note from Tony Lake to the Secretary regarding the nutrition event in case you didn't already see it..

Aisha I. Sabar
Economic and Social Affairs Adviser
U.S. Mission to the United Nations

799 United Nations Plaza

New York, NY 10017
Tel: 212-415-4229
Email: sabara2@state.gov

This email is UNCLASSIFIED

This email is UNCLASSIFIED-----Original Message-----
From: Sammis, John F (USUN)
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 12:39 PM
To: Nemroff, Courtney R (USUN); Glucksman, Tobias H (USUN)
Subject: FW: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

Who had the lead on the nutrition event for us?

This email is UNCLASSIFIED

-----Original Message-----
From: Myers, Honora L (USUN)
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 12:38 PM
To: DiCarlo, Rosemary A (USUN); Anderson, Brooke D (USUN); Barton, Rick (USUN); Ahmed, Salman (USUN); Sammis, John F (USUN); Nemroff, Courtney R (USUN)
Subject: FW: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

-----Original Message-----
From: EXECUTIVE [mailto:EXECGRP@STATE.GOV]
Sent: Monday, October 18, 2010 12:35 PM
To: Myers, Honora L (USUN)
Subject: Letter to Secty Clinton from Tony Lake

This email is UNCLASSIFIED

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:23 PM
To: Huma Abedin; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Speech ETA?

Do you know when it will arrive?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: jake.sullivan
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 10:44 AM
To: H; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'; 'feltmanjd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Did I do an interview w Lebanon's paper An-Nahar?

This was the written interview where you met the journalist and took the photo.

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
To: 'jake.sullivan
To: 'feltmanjd@state.gov'
Subject: Did I do an interview w Lebanon's paper An-Nahar?
Sent: Nov 13, 2010 10:38 AM

That's what my clips say. Was this taken from public statements?

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:38 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Speech being faxed right now.

Ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Jan 20 21:37:05 2010
Subject: Speech being faxed right now.

Book will be there in 10 minutes.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Feltman, Jeffrey D <FeltmanJD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 11:04 AM
To: jake.sullivan[redacted]H; Sullivan, Jacob J B6
Subject: Re: Did I do an interview w Lebanon's paper An-Nahar?

It has gotten incredibly positive coverage in the region. HbJ just called to praise it, and Hossam Zaki said that Aboul-Gheit thought it was "perfect.". The timing was serendipitous -- the day after the latest Nasrallah screed (where you and I were mentioned by name), thus pushing Nasrallah aside in the media. Maura Connelly reports that Hariri was pleased. We got big bang out of this.
Jeffrey Feltman

----- Original Message -----
From: jake.sullivan[redacted]
To: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Sullivan, Jacob J; Feltman, Jeffrey D
Sent: Sat Nov 13 10:44:19 2010
Subject: Re: Did I do an interview w Lebanon's paper An-Nahar?

This was the written interview where you met the journalist and took the photo.

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
To: 'jake.sullivar[redacted]
To: 'feltmanjd@state.gov'
Subject: Did I do an interview w Lebanon's paper An-Nahar?
Sent: Nov 13, 2010 10:38 AM

That's what my clips say. Was this taken from public statements?

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 8:27 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Russia will go to NATO meeting, eyes missile - source

---

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Tue Oct 19 05:53:47 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Russia will go to NATO meeting, eyes missile - source

DEAUVILLE (Reuters) - Russia wants to take part in a NATO-backed missile defense shield and will go to next month's NATO summit, softening its stance after reassurances from France and Germany, a source close to participants said on October 19.

Security is a major stumbling block in Russia's relationship with the West and has dominated talks between Presidents Sarkozy and Medvedev and Chancellor Merkel in the northern French seaside town of Deauville.

The source said that Medvedev himself would attend the NATO summit, which is due to unveil a new strategic plan for the 28-country alliance on November 19-20 in Lisbon.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 10:30 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'; 'tillemnants@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Speech ETA?

Thank you TT for a very good speech. I have a few questions:

B5

Also, pls be sure the text is carefully proofread since there are a number of typos and missing words.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H; Huma Abedin
Sent: Wed Jan 20 21:26:43 2010
Subject: RE: Speech ETA?

It's on its way with the book but someone will fax now.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 9:23 PM
To: Huma Abedin; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Speech ETA?

Do you know when it will arrive?

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 10:32 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: The speech

Jake--[redacted] B5

What's your take on the impact of this version?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 8:27 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Indian report: Pakistan spies tied to Mumbai siege

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-SCA; NEWS-SCT
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-I; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Tue Oct 19 03:55:17 2010
Subject: (AP) Indian report: Pakistan spies tied to Mumbai siege

NEW DELHI (AP) - A U.S. citizen convicted of scouting locations for the 2008 Mumbai attack said Pakistan's spy agency was deeply involved in the planning of the assault.

David Headley told Indian interrogators that officers from Pakistan's Inter-Services Intelligence agency gave him $25,000 to fund his scouting missions to Mumbai ahead of the attack.

He said he debriefed his ISI handler every time he returned to Pakistan from Mumbai. He said his handler also made suggestions about how best to carry out the attack.

The revelations were contained in the Indian government's report on its June interrogation of Headley. The report, marked secret, was obtained by The Associated Press.

The Mumbai attacks killed 166 people.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 10:33 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Tomicah

Do you have his email address? The email I sent to you both came back undelivered.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 8:27 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Chavez in Iran for talks on boosting oil, gas ties

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA; NEWS-WHA
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Tue Oct 19 02:55:18 2010
Subject: (AP) Chavez in Iran for talks on boosting oil, gas ties

TEHRAN (AP) - Venezuelan President Chavez has arrived in Tehran for talks with Iranian leaders expected to focus on efforts to boost cooperation between the allies' oil, gas and petrochemical industries.

Iranian state television says Chavez was greeted by Industry Minister Ali Akbar Mehrabian at Tehran's Mehrabad airport upon arrival early October 19.

State TV says Chavez will hold talks with President Ahmadinejad, during his two-day visit.

The Venezuelan leader backed Iran in its confrontation with the West over Tehran's disputed nuclear program. The U.S. accuses Iran of seeking to develop an atomic bomb. Iran says its nuclear program is for peaceful purposes.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 20, 2010 11:06 PM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'; Huma Abedin
Subject: Ashton meeting

I'd like to invite two EUR staffers--Jeremy Shapiro and Siddharth Mohandas-- who wrote a good memo about US-EU to come by and meet Lady Ashton tomorrow. Or even sit in on the mtg if ok w Phil Gordon.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 2:22 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) French government resigns ahead of reshuffle

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sat Nov 13 14:17:33 2010
Subject: (Reuters) French government resigns ahead of reshuffle

PARIS (Reuters) - French Prime Minister Francois Fillon and his government resigned on November 13 before a long-awaited ministerial reshuffle, according to a statement from President Nicolas Sarkozy's office.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 12:37 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Very cool article about S tech/empowerment for women

See below

---

From: Ross, Alec J
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 9:27 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Stock, Ann; Dowd, Katie W; Reines, Philippe I; Chitre, Nanda S; Crowley, Philip J; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: RE: Very cool article about S tech/empowerment for women

Yes, Sarah Granger blogging on Blogher which is the largest community of women who blog, 23+ million unique visitors per month according to their site

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 9:24 AM
To: Ross, Alec J; Stock, Ann; Dowd, Katie W; Reines, Philippe I; Chitre, Nanda S; Crowley, Philip J; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: RE: Very cool article about S tech/empowerment for women

Where is this from? A blogger

---

From: Ross, Alec J
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 9:19 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Stock, Ann; Dowd, Katie W; Reines, Philippe I; Chitre, Nanda S; Crowley, Philip J; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Very cool article about S tech/empowerment for women

Very, very cool article.

http://www.blogher.com/hillary-clinton-calls-techwomen-and-green-girls

Hillary Clinton Calls on TechWomen and Green Girls for Global Change

Friday night, I waited at the San Francisco Marriott Marquis, surrounded by Bomb Squad vehicles and black bulletproof SUVS, for Hillary Clinton to speak to an audience of 1,400, only her third appearance in the United States since she took office as Secretary of State in early 2009. Upon entering the room, she grinned widely and received a standing ovation, welcomed with open arms by the loyal crowd. After a brief introduction, she cut straight to the point. The government needs innovation to solve our problems and the world's problems. And she meant it.

I live tweeted much of the event, including a lengthy Q&A that brought up issues all over the world, starting with Afghanistan, leading to our neighbors, Canada and Mexico. E.B. Boyd of FastCompany described the call for tech innovators quite well in her article, and the full transcript of the event was published on the State.gov website. So while I could regurgitate many quotes from the two hour Commonwealth Club event again here, I won't. Instead, I'll focus on the fine points affecting women, girls and bloggers -- our community here at BlogHer.

The world is broken in so many ways. We're reminded of it every day with photos of flooded villages, exploding cities, and starving children. Rather than taking the "glass half empty" approach and leaving it for other people to deal with, Secretary Clinton holds onto optimism. Slowly, over generations, she believes we can solve these problems through collaboration across governments and cultures, paired with innovative thinking and an entrepreneurial spirit. Included in this, not just as an afterthought, comes the role of women and girls.

It's no secret Clinton is an advocate for women's rights, but she has also become a champion of global education for all, based not only on her personal conviction but on numerous data sources showing how educating girls can change entire communities. The State Department understands that this is a complex undertaking. But these communities also need protection. In order to help them, Clinton explains, we must equip their governments and their people with the knowhow and a multitude of resources and tools to continue developing on their own. Afghanistan is only one example of this, and the mWomen global initiative puts cell phones directly in the hands of women who need them for basic communications and commerce.

Meanwhile, in more developed regions, we can provide mentorship opportunities. That's where State's new TechWomen initiative comes in. Implemented by the Institute of International Education and the Anita Borg Institute for Women and Technology, TechWomen will bring 38 women from Algeria, Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, Morocco, the West Bank and Gaza for five weeks of mentorship by leaders in Silicon Valley companies, including Google, Twitter, HP Labs, Facebook, Symantec along with Bay Area based Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory and Sandia National Laboratories.

TechWomen provides just one way of opening up dialogues between women on how to innovate to solve global problems. It's part of her view on "21st Century Statecraft." The State Department has also, over the past 20 months, taken extraordinary leaps in terms of new media, for those who haven't noticed. Just look at their website now vs. two years ago (courtesy Archive.org), view their Twitter feed, or observe their Facebook page. They're not just giving the Gov 2.0 movement lip service; they're full partners.

Which brings me back to girls. The final question from the Q&A on Friday night was from a young girl. She asked, "I am 10 years old and I'm worried about my future environment. What can people do to help?" Clinton's soft spot couldn't have been more obvious. She beamed at the young girl and told her "there is a lot that you can do."

Clinton continued to explain that in her experience, "young people are much more environmentally conscious and committed to protecting the world you're growing up in than some of us older people are." (Earlier in the Q&A, she emphasized her extreme displeasure at the lack of strong environmental legislation coming out of the Senate.) She then provided a disclaimer that she can't comment on politics as Secretary of State, but noted, "speaking as a private citizen, I think people running for office should be asked to explain their positions on what they're going to do." In other words, improve transparency about what candidates plan to do for the environment and other important issues when they're elected, and hold them accountable.

After another standing ovation, Clinton stepped off the ballroom stage and departed the hotel, along with the Secret Service, Bomb Squad trucks and darkened motorcade. But she left behind a room full of proactive thinkers, dreamers and doers, the majority of whom were women, who will take her words to heart and make them happen. I implore the BlogHer community to join in this worthy endeavor.

Sarah Granger blogs here and there. She is curating BlogHer's political content through Election 2010.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:45 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: speech

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 00:10:57 2010
Subject: speech

You'll have a new draft when you wake up. I think it's getting close but can use one more pass from you.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 2:41 PM
To: H
Subject: Need to talk

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 8:19 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: speech

Ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 07:51:35 2010
Subject: Re: speech

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Jan 21 07:44:59 2010
Subject: Re: speech

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 00:10:57 2010
Subject: speech

You'll have a new draft when you wake up. I think it's getting close but can use one more pass from you. [redacted]

[redacted]

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 8:30 AM
To: 'toivnf@state.gov'
Cc: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Round table in my outer office

When I get my new table in place, pls arrange for the round table to be moved into Cheryl's office; just the table, not the chairs. She and I discussed what else could come out of her space. Thx.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:25 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: great job

And well-deserved. You're a rock star!

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 19:21:57 2010
Subject: FW: great job

nice

From: Ann O'Leary [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 6:57 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: great job

Dearest Cheryl -

You are so good at what you do. I was reminded of it this morning when I heard you on NPR. You're the perfect person to be on the ground dealing with the operation and also translating for the public what is going on. I know you don't enjoy doing press, but you are very good at it and I think it is important for the American public to understand the mission of the U.S. government and the high respect and deference you are giving to the Haitian government. You really got that across this morning.

Sending you lots of love and good luck in your incredibly important mission.

xo,
Ann

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 8:01 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: A potential climate call tomorrow

Let me know what you find out. Probably need to talk w Bader and Froman too.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 19:46:34 2010
Subject: FW: A potential climate call tomorrow

FYI. I'm following up with Kurt to get his thoughts.

---

From: Stern, Todd D (S/SECC)
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:09 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J; Abedin, Huma; Stern, Todd D (S/SECC)
Subject: A potential climate call tomorrow

Jake – it would be useful if HRC could call Wen Jiabao [redacted] B5

B5

<<S points for Wen call 1-21-10 v3.docx>>

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 6:14 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: H: early review. Sid

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 22:19:34 2010
Subject: H: early review. Sid

B6

H: Jim Fallows told me he was at your speech and thrilled by it. He's just returned from three years in China. He didn't expect you would be so frank. Here's his post on The Atlantic website. Sid

http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/a_momentous_40_hours.php#more

<http://ad.doubleclick.net/click%3Bh=v8/392a/3/0/%2a/d%3B220891182%3B0-0%3B0%3B44073402%3B3454-728/90%3B33541978/33559856/1%3B%3B%7Efdr%3D220121663%3B0-0%3B1%3B17654873%3B3454-728/90%3B34945512/34963342/1%3B%3B%7Esscs%3D%3fhttp://www.adobe.com/opengov/?sdid=FCFPP>

<http://ad.doubleclick.net/jump/TheAtlanticOnline/james_fallows;pos=topleader;tile=1;sz=728x90,468x60;ord=352212445?>

James Fallows <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/>
« Hillary Clinton's "Internet freedom" speech
<http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/hillary_clintons_internet_free.php> | Main
<http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/>

A momentous 40 hours, leading to Clinton/China/Internet

21 Jan 2010 04:12 pm
Apart from two obvious pieces of momentous news in the past day-and-a-half -- the new junior Senator from Massachusetts, and the new Buckley v. Valeo <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Buckley_v._Valeo> (by which I mean today's lamentable, straight-party-line Supreme Court ruling <http://online.wsj.com/article/SB10001424052748703699204575016942930090152.html> that removes limits from direct corporate underwriting of political campaigns) -- there is one other event today that will have big ripple effects. I mean SecState Hillary Clinton's speech this morning about "Internet Freedom," mentioned here <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/hillary_clintons_internet_free.php> and with a prelude discussion here <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/interesting_chinagoogle_discus.php> .

I'm not going to take time for a thorough gloss of the speech. Instead I highly recommend reading the full text, here <http://www.state.gov/secretary/rm/2010/01/135519.htm> , or watching the official video, here <http://link.brightcove.com/services/player/bcpid1705667530?bctid=62730021001> . And for now some of the main points while listening (and noting main points down in real time with the handy LiveScribe <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2009/07/my_new_favorite_gadget_li.php> pen.)

- In contrast to the dreamy Internet optimism of a decade or so ago -- I'm not naming names, but I remember! -- when many people imagined that info technology, by itself, would undermine oppression and bring the world together, Clinton started off with a very astringent reminder that this technology, like others, was neither good or bad in itself and is already being used in both helpful and destructive ways:

"Amid this unprecedented surge in connectivity, we must also recognize that these technologies are not an unmitigated blessing. These tools are also being exploited to undermine human progress and political rights. Just as steel can be used to build hospitals or machine guns, or nuclear power can either energize a city or destroy it, modern information networks and the technologies they support can be harnessed for good or for ill. The same networks that help organize movements for freedom also enable al-Qaida to spew hatred and incite violence against the innocent. And technologies with the potential to open up access to government and promote transparency can also be hijacked by governments to crush dissent and deny human rights."

And a very nice pivot out of this section, effective because it's so blunt and plain:

"On their own, new technologies do not take sides in the struggle for freedom and progress, but the United States does."

- Underscoring the "this is a big deal" tone of the speech, she enumerated the "Four Freedoms <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Four_Freedoms> " that FDR proclaimed in 1941, as part of the struggle for the world's future, and said there were a comparable set of Four Freedoms for the Internet age. Check out the speech yourself for details.

- The China surprise: the speech was a more frontal challenge to Chinese internet and overall censorship policy than I expected, and than I recall in other US-China interactions in a very long time. For instance, early in the speech, an itemization of the places where suppression is getting worse:

"In the last year, we've seen a spike in threats to the free flow of information. China, Tunisia, and Uzbekistan have stepped up their censorship of the internet. In Vietnam, access to popular social networking sites has suddenly disappeared. And last Friday in Egypt, 30 bloggers and activists were detained."

Tunisia, Uzbekistan, Vietnam, Egypt -- this is not the grouping of countries that the Chinese government, in its recent sense of rise to superpower status, is used to being lumped with. Compared to the US as a financial power, OK; overtaking Japan in economic size, yes; being a crucial player in environmental negotiations... all that is one thing. Bracketed in the same sentence with Tunisia and Uzbekistan is different. Sentences like this don't appear in formal, big-deal SecState addresses by accident.

Other passages to the same effect:

"As I speak to you today, government censors somewhere are working furiously to erase my words from the records of history. But history itself has already condemned these tactics....

"Those who disrupt the free flow of information in our society or any other pose a threat to our economy, our government, and our civil society. Countries or individuals that engage in cyber attacks should face consequences and international condemnation...."

And then the Google section itself.
I had wondered whether the speech would mention Google by name -- and had reason to think it might not. (Main argument for leaving it implicit rather than referring directly to the Google case: in the company's ongoing efforts to find a "win-win-win <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/behind_on_google-china-ology.php> " acceptable way to remain in China, rather than a lose-lose-lose permanent split, it's not necessarily a help to have the U.S. government standing officially by its side. ) But the way Sec. Clinton introduced the point was significant: as a proxy for China's own ability to fulfill its potential <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/about_the_stakes_for_china_in.php> and sustain its economic rise:

"To use market terminology, a publicly listed company in Tunisia or Vietnam that operates in an environment of censorship will always trade at a discount relative to an identical firm in a free society. If corporate decision makers don't have access to global sources of news and information, investors will have less confidence in their decisions over the long term. Countries that censor news and information must recognize that from an economic standpoint, there is no distinction between censoring political speech and commercial speech. If businesses in your nations are denied access to either type of information, it will inevitably impact on growth.

"Increasingly, U.S. companies are making the issue of internet and information freedom a greater consideration in their business decisions. I hope that their competitors and foreign governments will pay close attention to this trend. The most recent situation involving Google has attracted a great deal of interest. And we look to the Chinese authorities to conduct a thorough review of the cyber intrusions that led Google to make its announcement. And we also look for that investigation and its results to be transparent.

"The internet has already been a source of tremendous progress in China, and it is fabulous. There are so many people in China now online. But countries that restrict free access to information or violate the basic rights of internet users risk walling themselves off from the progress of the next century. Now, the United States and China have different views on this issue, and we intend to address those differences candidly and consistently in the context of our positive, cooperative, and comprehensive relationship."

There's a lot more in the speech, including about terrorism, disaster relief, religion, etc -- but it's there for the reading. Back to the to-do list for me now.
Permalink <http://jamesfallows.theatlantic.com/archives/2010/01/a_momentous_40_hours.php> ::
Share This <http://www.addthis.com/bookmark.php>

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 3:24 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Tom vilsack has a call into you.

Ill add to grid. His cell is [redacted] ### B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 6:14 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Griot education project in Haiti - anothter idea -- much quicker ramp-up Another good idea.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 21:57:11 2010
Subject: FW: Griot education project in Haiti - anothter idea -- much quicker ramp-up

fyi

From: David Domenici [mailto [redacted] B6
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 8:54 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Griot education project in Haiti - anothter idea -- much quicker ramp-up

Cheryl:

After watching scenes on TV, talking w/ you and others, here is idea for nearly immediate way to get kids back 'in school' or into school for the first time. It would be very cheap, could get started very soon—say mid-February, could be linked to other distribution networks (food/medical supplies), and would be quite organic and grassroots. I'll call it the Griot education project (in the west African tradition of a streetside storytellers).

Context/Understanding:

Looks like there are a few hundred thousand kids in Port-au-Prince who pretty soon will be (already are) sitting around day-to-day w/ more or less nothing to do. Their schools got destroyed, their neighborhoods in rough shape. These are young kids who would be best served if they could get out of the house for a few hours a day (possibly even freeing up parents to do rebuilding or other work), and not spend their time getting caught up in crime, or desperately searching through rubble for a mal to eat...and get back to school, and engage their naturally curious brains.

The goal of this program is to immediately give them a place to go, a chance to interface with an energetic educator, and at least expose them to relevant, skill-enhancing academic work that engages them while we rebuild education infrastructure. It also would likely get them 1 meal each day, and if needed a way to get referred for immediate medical attention.

Griot Educators:

We recruit and equip a cadre of teachers who will go out into communities with a set of portable materials each morning—educators who after a few days will find a place to teach, and will have attracted class of students. This is modeled off the street artist/storyteller.

We flyer the neighborhoods, advertising teaching positions. We work w/ whoever we can find who can help us identify people who were good teachers prior to the earthquake and/or people who have the abilty to attract kids (appropriately).

We select teachers. We agree to pay them a daily/weekly stipend. We want people who know their communities, who don't need a lot of direction, who will take a cart full of educational materials, find a corner, or abandoned building and start teaching to whoever shows up. People who will do anything to get some young kids to try to read or do some math problems or sing songs and write poetry...

Education Supply Centers

We set up education supply centers and a distribution system. Each center is staffed by small team—1 lead person is an education-leader, others are admin and support. Griots come the center in the morning, they get a day's worth of educational materials (we select it, we photocopy it, we give them 50 pencils, etc.). We agree to send over 50 meals two hours later. Each Griot wheels his portable classroom to his/her spot and sets up shop...Kids come, and he/she teaches. It builds momentum and kids get off the streets, out of their homes and come to the morning 'school' site. Kids who come get a meal. Maybe we end up w/ 3 tiers of Griots—1 who works w/ 4, 5, 6 year olds, 1 with 7, 8, 9 year olds, 1 with 10, 11, 12 year olds. Each one picks up a packet of material that is more or less appropriate for that age group. All this is incredibly flexible and fluid. Maybe one morning session and then an after lunch session.

The education supply centers are warehouses we set up. They have copiers, lots of paper, basic school supplies, some art supplies, etc. (Over time, maybe people donate a bunch of books or magazines, etc—they become ways for artists, volunteers, entertainers to connect w/ kids, as well.) Each morning a group of Griots go to their supply centers and pick up materials, and fill up their cart...and roll down the block, or blocks and set up their 'school' for the day. Maybe someone wants to donate a bunch of art supplies, or harmonicas—who knows—whatever it takes to get kids to show up and do some academic and enrichment activities. These education supply centers likely get linked to other distribution hubs. This way they can get linked w/ food or other supplies.

Longer-term/setting the stage for longer-term ramp up

Over time, some of the Griots will end up running little schools that start to feel permanent. Kids will bring in chairs and stools...maybe some of the teaching material ends up staying at the school sites, and the end up as likely places for folks to build/rebuild schools. But in the near term, the 'school' is whatever spot the Griot goes to where he/she can attract a cadre of kids—and the good news is that can be almost anywhere.

This program is cheap -- as costly as it is to pay stipends to the Griots, plus the cost of supplies, delivery, and some human capital to man the supply centers, develop/acquire high interest, high educational value material. I think quite cheap, and could easily be costed out once we knew about how much we need to pay a Griot for a day of teaching.

It also gets some folks working, immediately.

Some Griots would take stipend and not teach; some wouldn't do it well; some would pawn off the food/biscuits...But we could weed much of that out and w/ this sort of approach, you don't let a few bad apples spoil the larger program (or fear of them stop it from getting started). This program is about planting the seeds for the future schools to come, about getting young kids off streets and stoops and into a fun/learning environment, about empowering talented teacher-artists to go out into their communities armed w/ some basic materials, their good will, their creativity (and a paycheck)—together the kids and the Griots will find local places to call and claim as their schools.

And while this is going on, we have time to build out infrastructure (human capital, facilities, instructional/curricular materials) for more robust ramp-up over time.

Per usual, feel free to ignore or pass on.

dd

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 6:15 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: A potential climate call tomorrow

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 19:46:34 2010
Subject: FW: A potential climate call tomorrow

FYI. I'm following up with Kurt to get his thoughts.

---

From: Stern, Todd D (S/SECC)
Sent: Thursday, January 21, 2010 7:09 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J; Abedin, Huma; Stern, Todd D (S/SECC)
Subject: A potential climate call tomorrow

Jake – it would be useful if HRC could call Wen Jiabao [redacted] B5

[redacted]

B5

<<S points for Wen call 1-21-10 v3.docx>>

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 6:18 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: FYI... David Crane... Fw: Catch up
Attachments: Details of [redacted] Details of [redacted] doc

Importance: High

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Burns Strider [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 15:12:30 2010
Subject: FYI... David Crane... Fw: Catch up

Wanted you to see both requests/comments from David Crane...

Burns Strider

---

From: "Crane, David" [redacted] B6
Date: Thu, 21 Jan 2010 15:07:44 -0500
To: BStrider [redacted]
Cc: O'Brien, John [redacted]; gailfritzinger [redacted]
Subject: Catch up

Dear Burns:

It has been some time since we spoke so I wanted to start by wishing you a happy new year and thanking you for your assistance in placing our corporate contribution for Haiti Relief through the Clinton Foundation.

My hope is that you can further help me with two very different requests related to the Haitian tragedy:

1. After the tsunami devastated parts of Indonesia in 2004, I felt strongly that the CEOs of American corporations involved in the planning, construction and operation of civil, energy, water and telecommunication infrastructure should lead a charitable effort involving human as well as financial resources to develop an implementation plan for the rebuilding of the country once the Red Cross, the Military and the other "first responders" had stabilized the situation. I think the concept is even more relevant in 2010 with respect to Haiti which obviously is much closer to the United States and has much less indigenous skills and resources of its own to apply to the rebuilding effort. Given President Clinton's normal powers of persuasion and his passion for improving Haiti even before the earthquake (it was the only thing he wanted to talk about when Isabella and I met with him in November), he would have little difficulty recruiting a group of appropriate CEOs to form an "advisory council on Haitian infrastructure" (which then could springboard to greater things and deeper commitments). If you could reach out to the appropriate person on President Clinton's staff, we of course would be available to assist in giving shape to the concept, compiling a list of names of infrastructure CEOs, etc.

2. On a much more personal note, [redacted] B6

[redacted]

Burns, I know President Clinton is devoting all of his herculean energy to humanitarian relief for Haiti at the macro level, but knowing his humanistic approach, there must be someone on his staff who can help with these type of individual situations. [redacted]

[redacted]

I really appreciate your assistance with respect to both of these matters. Please do not hesitate to contact me night or day on my cell phone [redacted]

Come visit us in Princeton.

Best regards,

David Crane

RELEASE IN PART
B6

We are

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 6:00 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Tom vilsack has a call into you.

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Sat Nov 13 15:57:32 2010
Subject: Re: Tom vilsack has a call into you.

I called him so no need to add to list.

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Nov 13 15:23:36 2010
Subject: Tom vilsack has a call into you.

Ill add to grid. His cell is [redacted] ### B6

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 7:30 AM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'; Huma Abedin
Subject: Commencements

Shall we wait until we make decisions [redacted] B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 6:08 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) U.S. offered incentives for freeze of settlement building

From: Abdalla, Alyce N
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sat Nov 13 17:22:50 2010
Subject: (AP) U.S. offered incentives for freeze of settlement building

JERUSALEM (AP) - Diplomatic sources said the United States offered Israel an incentive package to reinstate a moratorium on West Bank settlement building in an effort to revive stalled peace talks with the Palestinians. Under the deal, Israel would stop settlement construction for 90 days in the West Bank, but not in east Jerusalem. Among the incentives, the United States would fight resolutions critical of Israel at the United Nations.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 8:00 AM
To: 'gordonph@state.gov'; 'kohhh@state.gov'
Cc: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Turkey/Armenia

I want to debrief you on my call w Davutogla and discuss strategy. Pls try to read the memcon before we meet. Thx.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PVerveer
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 9:59 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: for Hillary

It's a very New York crowd and very Diane style event (i.e. unconventional) Last year, it was held in one of the big delegates' lounges at the UN and she redid all the chairs, etc in her patterns. The awards are all serious and DVF is the moderator. Each awardee receives 50K for her ongoing work. The event bears no resemblance to a typical foreign policy event, but if you were in NY, you could arrive for the awards and leave. I have no doubt you would be very warmly embraced and DVF and Barry are so fond of you. I would only do it if could be easily done.

In a message dated 11/13/2010 8:51:10 P.M. Eastern Standard Time, HDR22@clintonemail.com writes:

Do you think I should do this?

----- Original Message -----
From: pverveer
To: H
Sent: Fri Nov 12 11:32:48 2010
Subject: Fwd: for Hillary

from your friend, DVF

-----Original Message-----
From: DVF
To: pverveer
Sent: Fri, Nov 12, 2010 1:29 am
Subject: for Hillary

Dearest Madame Secretary,
I am in Abu Dhabi, watching you on television with Prime Minister Natanyaou. You are looking so well ! You are more and more impressive...I am so proud of you !
We are planning our Women of the World Conference again for next March. On Saturday night, March 12th, I will be having the 2nd DVF Award at a dinner at the UN. 2 of the recipients will be women from Vital Voices, one will be voted by people on line and the fourth one is the special one give to formidable example of courage and leadership. Last year it was given to Ingrid Betancourt by Meryll Streep.
More than anything, I would love if you would be willing to accept that award. YOU are such an example of strength, leadership and spirit to all of us women.
Am I dreaming or would you be willing to accept it ?
Lots of love
Diane von Furstenberg
DVF Studio L.P.
440 West 14th Street
New York, NY 10014
Tel: 212-741-6607

---

01:29:41 Fri 12 Nov 2010 Diane von Furstenberg L.P.

---

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:26 PM
To: 'cheryl.mills[redacted] B6
Subject: Fw: news report on missing kids in Haiti
Attachments: image001.png; image002.png; image003.jpg; image001.png; image002.png; image003.jpg

As predicted.

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jan 22 14:55:39 2010
Subject: news report on missing kids in Haiti

This is an AFP report from today.

Also, GTIP is working on a memo for you and Cheryl about child trafficking dangers in Haiti.

Trafficking fears as Haiti children go missing

Posted 5 hours 47 minutes ago
Updated 5 hours 46 minutes ago

<javascript:slideshowPrev();> <javascript:slideshowNext();> Slideshow: Photo 1 of 2

<http://www.abc.net.au/reslib/201001/r498072_2617306.jpg>

The UN has warned countries not to step up adoptions from Haiti in the wake of the disaster. (AFP: Matthew Marek

United Nations officials say children have gone missing from hospitals in Haiti since the devastating January 12 earthquake, raising fears of trafficking for adoption abroad.

"We have documented around 15 cases of children disappearing from hospitals and not with their own family at the time," said UNICEF adviser Jean Luc Legrand.

"UNICEF has been working in Haiti for many years and we knew the problem with the trade of children in Haiti that existed already beforehand.

"Unfortunately, many of these trade networks have links with the international adoption market."

The agency said it had warned countries during the past week not to step up adoptions from Haiti in the immediate wake of the quake.

However several are fast-tracking adoption procedures already under way, including Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, the Netherlands, Spain and the United States.

Mr Legrand said the situation was similar to the aftermath of the tsunami in Asia five years ago.

Trafficking networks were springing into action immediately after the disaster and taking advantage of the weakness of local authorities and relief coordination "to kidnap children and get them out of the country".

Rupert Colville, a spokesman for the office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, said child enslavement and trafficking in Haiti was "an existing problem and could easily emerge as a serious issue over the coming weeks and months".

The UN mission in Haiti has stepped up surveillance of roads, UNICEF officials said.

Mr Legrand said there was separate but only anecdotal evidence of people taking children by road to the neighbouring Dominican Republic and loading children on to planes.

"We have seen over the past years many children being taken out of the country without any legal procedure," he said.

"This is going on. This is happening now. We are starting to have the first evidence of that, this is unquestionable."

He was unable to give details on the 15 missing children or their condition or clearly connect the anecdotal observations in Haiti's chaos with trafficking.

The cases were documented by social workers and by partner non-governmental organisations working for UNICEF in hospitals.

- AFP

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:27 PM
To: 'muscatinel@state.gov'
Subject: Re: internet freedom

I did once before speech and will do again. Thx to all.

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jan 22 14:59:34 2010
Subject: internet freedom

If you have the time or inclination, it would be really nice if you could send an email to Tomicah, or phone him. He went for almost 100 hours without sleep to get the speech done, under unusually trying circumstances. He deserves some recognition for grace under pressure and a job well done.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:28 PM
To: 'toivnf@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: news report on missing kids in Haiti
Attachments: image001.png; image002.png; image003.jpg; image001.png; image002.png; image003.jpg

Pls show to Cheryl.

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jan 22 14:55:39 2010
Subject: news report on missing kids in Haiti

This is an AFP report from today.

Also, GTIP is working on a memo for you and Cheryl about child trafficking dangers in Haiti.

Trafficking fears as Haiti children go missing

Posted 5 hours 47 minutes ago
Updated 5 hours 46 minutes ago

<javascript:slideshowPrev();> <javascript:slideshowNext();> Slideshow: Photo 1 of 2

<http://www.abc.net.au/reslib/201001/r498072_2617306.jpg>

The UN has warned countries not to step up adoptions from Haiti in the wake of the disaster. (AFP: Matthew Marek

United Nations officials say children have gone missing from hospitals in Haiti since the devastating January 12 earthquake, raising fears of trafficking for adoption abroad.

"We have documented around 15 cases of children disappearing from hospitals and not with their own family at the time," said UNICEF adviser Jean Luc Legrand.

"UNICEF has been working in Haiti for many years and we knew the problem with the trade of children in Haiti that existed already beforehand.

"Unfortunately, many of these trade networks have links with the international adoption market."

The agency said it had warned countries during the past week not to step up adoptions from Haiti in the immediate wake of the quake.

However several are fast-tracking adoption procedures already under way, including Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, the Netherlands, Spain and the United States.

Mr Legrand said the situation was similar to the aftermath of the tsunami in Asia five years ago.

Trafficking networks were springing into action immediately after the disaster and taking advantage of the weakness of local authorities and relief coordination "to kidnap children and get them out of the country".

Rupert Colville, a spokesman for the office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, said child enslavement and trafficking in Haiti was "an existing problem and could easily emerge as a serious issue over the coming weeks and months".

The UN mission in Haiti has stepped up surveillance of roads, UNICEF officials said.

Mr Legrand said there was separate but only anecdotal evidence of people taking children by road to the neighbouring Dominican Republic and loading children on to planes.

"We have seen over the past years many children being taken out of the country without any legal procedure," he said.

"This is going on. This is happening now. We are starting to have the first evidence of that, this is unquestionable."

He was unable to give details on the 15 missing children or their condition or clearly connect the anecdotal observations in Haiti's chaos with trafficking.

The cases were documented by social workers and by partner non-governmental organisations working for UNICEF in hospitals.

- AFP

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:29 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: news report on missing kids in Haiti
Attachments: image001.png; image002.png; image003.jpg; image001.png; image002.png; image003.jpg

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'cheryl.mills com' <cheryl.mills B6
Sent: Fri Jan 22 17:26:15 2010
Subject: Fw: news report on missing kids in Haiti

As predicted.

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine, Lissa <MuscatineL@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jan 22 14:55:39 2010
Subject: news report on missing kids in Haiti

This is an AFP report from today.

Also, GTIP is working on a memo for you and Cheryl about child trafficking dangers in Haiti.

Trafficking fears as Haiti children go missing

Posted 5 hours 47 minutes ago
Updated 5 hours 46 minutes ago

<javascript:slideshowPrev();> <javascript:slideshowNext();> Slideshow: Photo 1 of 2

<http://www.abc.net.au/reslib/201001/r498072_2617306.jpg>

The UN has warned countries not to step up adoptions from Haiti in the wake of the disaster. (AFP: Matthew Marek

United Nations officials say children have gone missing from hospitals in Haiti since the devastating January 12 earthquake, raising fears of trafficking for adoption abroad.

"We have documented around 15 cases of children disappearing from hospitals and not with their own family at the time," said UNICEF adviser Jean Luc Legrand.

"UNICEF has been working in Haiti for many years and we knew the problem with the trade of children in Haiti that existed already beforehand.

"Unfortunately, many of these trade networks have links with the international adoption market."

The agency said it had warned countries during the past week not to step up adoptions from Haiti in the immediate wake of the quake.

However several are fast-tracking adoption procedures already under way, including Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, the Netherlands, Spain and the United States.

Mr Legrand said the situation was similar to the aftermath of the tsunami in Asia five years ago.

Trafficking networks were springing into action immediately after the disaster and taking advantage of the weakness of local authorities and relief coordination "to kidnap children and get them out of the country".

Rupert Colville, a spokesman for the office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, said child enslavement and trafficking in Haiti was "an existing problem and could easily emerge as a serious issue over the coming weeks and months".

The UN mission in Haiti has stepped up surveillance of roads, UNICEF officials said.

Mr Legrand said there was separate but only anecdotal evidence of people taking children by road to the neighbouring Dominican Republic and loading children on to planes.

"We have seen over the past years many children being taken out of the country without any legal procedure," he said.

"This is going on. This is happening now. We are starting to have the first evidence of that, this is unquestionable."

He was unable to give details on the 15 missing children or their condition or clearly connect the anecdotal observations in Haiti's chaos with trafficking.

The cases were documented by social workers and by partner non-governmental organisations working for UNICEF in hospitals.

- AFP

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:31 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Haiti American Deaths/Confidential

The idea of a statement as requested below is a good one.

----- Original Message -----
From: Brian Greenspun [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Fri Jan 22 17:17:12 2010
Subject: Fw: Haiti American Deaths/Confidential

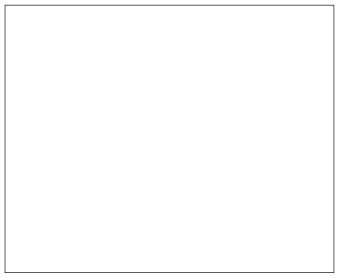
Hi hillary,

[redacted] Below is a message from my friend kevin thanking me for your efforts and alerting me to the letter that has or will find its way to you from the university president. I forward it to you in case you haven't seen it, want to get out in front of it, or whatever. The fact that you were instinctively sensitive to this situation should always be enough but, of course, with this type of loss, it never is. I hope all else is well, there has to be some good news somewhere. Right? All the best, brian

---

From: kevin stuessi [redacted]
To: Brian Greenspun
Sent: Fri Jan 22 14:04:07 2010
Subject: Fw: Haiti American Deaths/Confidential

Dear Brian,



I wanted to thank you again for [redacted]

I read with interest today's article in the NY Times on how well the Obama Administration-State Dept is managing the crisis and associated PR. I know this would be a wonderful opportunity to serve two causes and get some great PR as well as put the minds of many families at ease if the Sate Department were to make a statement of support for "leaving no stone unturned until all Americans lost in Haiti can be returned to their families". I have already reached out to Senator Reid as well who had a liaison of his following up on search efforts. You will notice below the University is making a plea to Secretary Clinton directly, she may or may not be aware. Again, thank you for your time and if this can be put in the proper hands it would so be appreciated. You have already done more than I would have expected; and, I did not want anyone to be surprised if they had not heard of the University and the families making the plea to Secretary Clinton.

Kind Regards,

K

Kevin A. Stuessi

B6

----- Forwarded Message ----
From: "froggylala <froggylala
To: kevinstuessi
Sent: Thu, January 21, 2010 5:41:31 PM
Subject: Lynn University Update: MEDIA ALERT:

hi kev...please take note and see if anything else can be done...

President Kevin M. Ross remarks from 5 p.m. press briefing

As we all know, the world suffered one of the greatest natural disasters in history last Tuesday. The 7.0 earthquake that was centered just outside Port-au-Prince imperiled the lives of all those in Haiti, including 14 members of our Lynn University family who were there on a mission trip. All 14 were on site at the Hotel Montana when the quake struck, and we have reason to believe that our four missing students and two faculty may be there still.

In the nine days since that tragedy, we have all been captivated by the stories of heroism, triumph, anguish and loss that have followed in the wake of this earthquake. And every day, we rejoice for what good news has been broadcast out of the country: the elderly woman rescued from beneath a crumbled cathedral; the child pulled alive and almost completely well from a wrecked home. As the family members of our missing students and employees have said in recent days, we have taken comfort in these reports, and celebrated them almost as if they were our own good news.

And for good reason. It is our good news. This tragedy is not a Lynn University tragedy alone. It does not affect just us, our community members, and their families. It affects us all. It affects people from around the world. It affects those that survived, and those that did not. And it impacts most severely those in Haiti itself – the people who call that country home.

Our "Journey of Hope" students went to Haiti to deliver hope. Eight have returned. And six remain missing. We still have hope– hope that a miracle is in the making. Hope that our six are found safe and sound. And hope that many others too will be freed and reunited with loved ones around the world. That remains our most ardent wish here at Lynn University.

But there is another hope we have. A different kind of hope. And it is that hope that I wish to express tonight. We have hope that whatever the days ahead may bring, that we have the United States government's assurance that every person lost in this tragedy will be returned to their loved ones.

I want this personally. I want this for the families of our missing students and faculty, and our more than three dozen employees and eight students with family missing in the country. And I want it for the campus community I serve– a community that will need to grieve as well.

This is needed for every grieving father, son, mother, daughter, friend and neighbor who is aching at this very moment for a phone call. Whenever that phone call comes, I join the families of our missing six in demanding that such a call contain news of the whereabouts of the missing. A missing family member, whether alive or dead, must be returned to his or her loved ones.

Forces are mounting in defense against such a call. From the outset of this crisis my office has been served in immeasurable ways by Senator George S. LeMieux and Congressman Ron Klein and their staffs in Florida and D.C. The two have helped however they could to aid us in our search efforts. And tonight they are standing with us to ask Secretary Clinton and others to ensure that all Americans missing and unaccounted for in Haiti be returned home.

This is the assurance our campus community – and the families of these missing loved ones – will require in the days ahead. And many other American families will appreciate the same.. Tonight I have a letter already signed by Senator LeMieux urging the Secretary of State, Secretary of Defense Robert Gates and the U.S. Agency for International Development to continue "search and rescue efforts until the possibility of survival no longer exists" and to do "everything within (their) power to ensure that every American known to be missing in Haiti is located and returned home."

I am so thankful for the senator's support, and the support of Congressman Klein, who has also pledged to back us in this push. We hope all of our elected officials will join us – including those in Massachusetts, Georgia, New Jersey and New York, the home states of our four missing students. So many have already shown their support and concern. But now, we need assurances. We need a commitment to returning the missing to their families. Only this will give the families of the victims the peace they need to carry on.

We have been saying from the beginning how thankful we are for the prayers and support we have received here at Lynn University. The outpouring of support has been incredible. Please continue to offer those prayers and cross those fingers. We still believe in miracles. And we wish those same miracles upon all of you who are still uncertain at this hour.

Thank you all. And God bless.

<http://www1.lynn.edu/index.php?cid=1254451&forward=img>
To be removed from the Lynn University e-mail list, please click here.
<http://www1.lynn.edu/index.php?cid=1254451&src=broadcastemail&optoutall=3180&key=bb1ea2fb>

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 3, 2010 5:46 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Final: International Family Planning Budget Statement

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 03 05:36:29 2010
Subject: Re: Final: International Family Planning Budget Statement

Will call at six - still doing email [redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Wed Feb 03 05:33:44 2010
Subject: Re: Final: International Family Planning Budget Statement

Can I call you?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 03 05:25:48 2010
Subject: Fw: Final: International Family Planning Budget Statement

---

From: Rubiner, Laurie [redacted]
To: jenklein [redacted] pverveer [redacted]; Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma; Reines, Philippe I
Sent: Tue Feb 02 17:35:11 2010
Subject: Fw: Final: International Family Planning Budget Statement

You guys are totally great. Please thank Secy Clinton for us - we know it wouldn't have happened without her and all of you. We are also posting a video from Cecile on our website about this. Best, Laurie

---

From: Jordan, Brannon
To: Natl Communications Division; McHugh, Lorrie; Rubiner, Laurie; Meer, Jeff; Chaney, Joi; Taylor, Amy
Sent: Tue Feb 02 16:05:36 2010
Subject: Final: International Family Planning Budget Statement

Statement below and attached just sent to reporters.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE CONTACT: PPFA Media Relations 202-973-4882

February 2, 2010

Statement from Cecile Richards on International

Family Planning in the Obama Administration Budget

WASHINGTON, DC —The women of the world have true friends in Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton and the Obama administration. After years of inadequate funding during the previous administration, yesterday's Fiscal Year 2011 budget request for an increase in international family planning is a critical step forward in demonstrating our nation's renewed commitment to ensuring that women worldwide have access to safe and effective reproductive health care.

The Obama administration has sent a strong signal that the status quo is unacceptable. Every year more than half a million women — nearly all of whom live in developing countries — die of pregnancy-related causes. Moreover, one in three deaths related to pregnancy and childbirth could be avoided if women who wanted effective contraception had access to it.

To strengthen our working relationships with partners around the world, as well as our image, the United States must increase access to family planning. By ensuring that women have increased access to the family planning they need, our nation is working to make good on its commitment to promote the health of all women and their families.

An investment in family planning is an investment that reaps significant dividends. By providing education, counseling and contraceptives to women and couples, we are working to strengthen families worldwide. We also will help achieve major reductions in infant and maternal mortality, HIV infections and global poverty. As Secretary Clinton has said, "There's a direct connection between a woman's ability to plan her family, space her pregnancies, and give birth safely, and her ability to get an education, work outside the home, support her family, and participate fully in the life of her community."

Planned Parenthood works with partners across the globe to eliminate barriers to basic reproductive health care that is essential to the health and well-being of women, men and children everywhere. Limited access to health care, lack of political will, legal and regulatory restrictions, cultural taboos, and harsh gender inequality all put women at risk of unintended pregnancy, unsafe abortion and childbirth, and HIV and other sexually transmitted infections. The commitment of Secretary Clinton and the Obama administration to international family planning will further the efforts of Planned Parenthood and others to help women overcome barriers to accessing needed reproductive health care.

As the Fiscal Year 2011 budget and appropriations process moves forward, we look forward to working with Congress to build on this request so that we may adequately address the global health challenges facing women worldwide.

###

Planned Parenthood Federation of America is the nation's leading sexual and reproductive health care provider and advocate. We believe that everyone has the right to choose when or whether to have a child, and that every child should be wanted and loved. Planned Parenthood affiliates operate more than 840 health centers nationwide, providing medical services and sexuality education for millions of women, men, and teenagers each year. We also work with allies worldwide to ensure that all women and men have the right and the means to meet their sexual and reproductive health care needs.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 3, 2010 7:24 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Cdm trying to reach you.

I just tried calling but couldn't find her. I'm on way home.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 03 19:14:59 2010
Subject: Cdm trying to reach you.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 22, 2010 5:36 PM
To: 'TillemannTS@state.gov'
Cc: 'muscatinel@state.gov'
Subject: Thank you!

TT (As prepared)--Thank you for all you did to make the speech yesterday so effective and powerful. We've gotten many positive comments and laid a solid foundation for future action.
Please get caught up on sleep! All the best, Hillary

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PVerveer
Sent: Saturday, November 13, 2010 10:42 PM
To: H
Subject: The Hamburgs

I had a longtime postponed lunch with Betty and David. He was remembering his briefing with you at Blair House before you were to officially become FL. He said after all the talk about what could be done for kids, he remembers telling you as he was leaving that you could you make a real contribution on the international stage and he hoped that you would consider doing so.

He would like to be helpful. He's done a lot of work on preventive diplomacy which he feels is too often overlooked and extremely essential.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 8:59 AM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'; Huma Abedin
Subject: London

I have to find time to meet w Rasmussen while I'm there. Maybe 20 minutes but I will give him whatever time he wants.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 10:17 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Honduras

I prefer (1) and they can all stay the next day for meetings if possible.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 10:14:04 2010
Subject: Honduras

I spoke with Arturo this morning about the delegation to Honduras. [redacted] B5

They are proposing one of two alternatives: (1) Arturo, Jose F, Craig, and Dan R. or [redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 3, 2010 11:17 PM
To: 'crowleypj@state.gov'
Cc: 'preines [redacted] 'sullivanjj@state.gov' B6
Subject: Re: Feedback on Middle East Comments Today

P.J.---Thanks for the headsup about [redacted] question. I was not saying anything new and believe I have said this before B6 and am copying both Philippe and Jake so all three of you can help me remember when, where and whether. Also, I believe the POTUS has also said this. Let's discuss tomorrow.

----- Original Message -----
From: Crowley, Philip J <CrowleyPJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Feltman, Jeffrey D <FeltmanJD@state.gov>; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Reines, Philippe I <reinesp@state.gov>; Prince, Jonathan M (PACE) <PrinceJM@state.gov>; Burns, William J <BurnsWJ@state.gov>; Mitchell, George J <MitchellG@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Feb 03 22:49:58 2010
Subject: Feedback on Middle East Comments Today

Madam Secretary, good evening. I just received a question [redacted] B5

PJ

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 3, 2010 7:30 PM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Sunday

When am I scheduled to fly back?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 3:51 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted]
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

This is unbelievable. Or maybe totally so given the forces at work.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 09:26:25 2010
Subject: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

B6

http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election

Hugo Chavez's state-owned Petroleos Corp set to spend on your U.S. election
<http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election>

Digg <http://digg.com/submit?url=http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election&title=Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election&bodytext=Blogging+on+the+Citizens+United+Supreme+Court+ruling+is+more+of+what+we+love+about+the+web.+It%26%238217%3Bs+the+kind+of+typical+collective+dissection+we+have+now+come+to+expect+but+that+never+really+existed+before%3A+serious%2C+speculative%2C+arcane%2C+funny%2C+brilliant%2C+baked%2C+etc.+The+Sunlight+Foundation+blogging+is+predictably+good.+Paul+Blumenthal+dips+into+the+%5B...%5D&media=news&topic=politics> Tweet <http://twitter.com/home?status=RT%20@COindependent%20-%20Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election%C2%A0%20http://bit.ly/7duhoY> By John Tomasic <http://coloradoindependent.com/author/johntomasic/> 1/22/10 3:58 PM Blogging on the Citizens United Supreme Court ruling is more of what we love about the web. It's the kind of typical collective dissection we have now come to expect but that never really existed before: serious, speculative, arcane, funny, brilliant, baked, etc. The Sunlight Foundation blogging <http://blog.sunlightfoundation.com/2010/01/22/wait-can-foreign-companies-now-spend-on-us-political-elections/> is predictably good. Paul Blumenthal dips into the multinational dimension of the new "corporation as full citizen-person" framework, drawing on blogging going on at Newsweek <http://biog.newsweek.com/blogs/thegaggle/archive/2010/01/22/should-foreign-corporations-spend-money-on-u-s-political-candidates.aspx> and the Center for Public Integrity <http://www.publicintegrity.org/articles/entry/1913/> . "Looks like [the Court] might support allowing foreign companies to spend freely in elections in the United States. I guess this would be the corporate globalization of the U.S. electoral system." So you gotta ask yourself: Who does Hugo Chavez want for President?
Blumenthal excerpting the Center for Public Integrity:

<http://coloradoindependent.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/01/Picture-142.png>
The Center for Public Integrity looks at this closer and shows what kind of foreign influence we are looking at:

One prominent examples is CITGO Petroleum Company — once the American-born Cities Services Company, but purchased in 1990 by the Venezuelan government-owned Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. The Citizens

United ruling could conceivably allow Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, who has sharply criticized both of the past two U.S. presidents, to spend government funds to defeat an American political candidate, just by having CITGO buy TV ads bashing his target.

And it's not just Chavez. The Saudi government owns Houston's Saudi Refining Company and half of Motiva Enterprises. Lenovo, which bought IBM's PC assets in 2004, is partially owned by the Chinese government's Chinese Academy of Sciences. And Singapore's APL Limited operates several U.S. port operations. A weakening of the limit on corporate giving could mean China, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, and any other country that owns companies that operate in the U.S. could also have significant sway in American electioneering.

I really can't see Americans being too happy about this.

Dahlia Lithwick reported for Slate <http://www.slate.com/id/2242208/> from the Supreme Court as the opinions were being read. She offered this aside:

While Stevens is reading the portion of his concurrence about the "cautious view of corporate power" held by the framers, I see Justice Thomas chuckle softly.

Was it a disdainful chuckle at the impotence of his colleague? Was it merely a chuckle of disagreement, of good-natured exasperation? Was it a chuckle at an anachronistic vision of the framers set beside today's modern corporate silicon and steel behemoths? I doubt he was thinking about Hugo Chavez.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2010 5:47 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: National Prayer Breakfast

What is evidence that this group sponsored it?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 04 05:42:26 2010
Subject: Fw: National Prayer Breakfast

See b/l - perhaps [redacted] was prescient - see b/l B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Crowley, Philip J
To: Muscatine, Lissa; Mills, Cheryl D; Verma, Richard R; Reines, Philippe I; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Schwerin, Daniel B
Sent: Thu Feb 04 05:38:03 2010
Subject: National Prayer Breakfast

Just heard NPR report criticizing President for attending NPB sponsored by same group that promoted anti-homosexuality law in Uganda. Have not seen her remarks, but do we take it head on and criticize that action in her remarks? Would seem like obvious solution. PJ

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 3:17 PM
To: H
Cc: Fuchs, Michael H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: FW: FYI Fwd: Clinton's Moment to Act on Congo

FYI

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Enough Project <enoughproject@enoughproject.org>
Date: Tue, Oct 19, 2010 at 1:48 PM
Subject: Clinton's Moment to Act on Congo
To: caitlin.klevorick [redacted] B6

View on mobile. View in web browser.

Congo's Enough Moment:
The Case for Conflict Minerals Certification and Army Reform

As a growing consumer movement demands cell phones and gadgets that are guaranteed not to fuel atrocities in eastern Congo, there is an opportunity to end the exploitation of Congo's people and the pillaging of its resources.

In a new report, "Congo's Enough Moment: The Case for Conflict Minerals Certification and Army Reform," Enough Project Co-founder John Prendergast argues that growing international attention to Congo and widespread interest in conflict minerals has shined a spotlight on eastern Congo, opening a significant window for policy reform.

"The new U.S. law on conflict minerals and the growing global campaign have shaken up the supply chain, and all those that are profiting say they are willing to change," says Prendergast. "It is time for the U.S. government and Secretary of State Hillary Clinton to help leverage the end of the war in eastern Congo through leadership on two of the issues that will catalyze a broader solution to the cycles of violence there: minerals certification and comprehensive army reform."

Read the full paper: "Congo's Enough Moment"

Support Enough Project | Privacy Policy | Unsubscribe

Enough Project
1225 Eye St NW | Washington, DC 20005

RELEASE
IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, December 19, 2010 5:10 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Corker

Is apparently in a good place. I don't think you need to speak with him.

Reid, with Lugar's support, will file cloture on the treaty tonight setting up a tuesday cloture vote.

Senate will go into closed session monday at 2 to discuss verification. Bond and Kyl will lead the charge. Kerry and Feinstein are prepared to push back. Clapper will be here in the capitol if needed.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2010 6:14 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: DUP

Pls do.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 04 18:00:31 2010
Subject: DUP

DUP has gone behind closed doors at Stormont and the smart money is on them emerging at some point supporting the deal.

There was movement today on the ancillary issue of government support for the Presbyterian Mutual Society, a savings and loan that lost a lot of money and whose investors didn't get the same financial crisis protections as those in other institutions. DUP members are pointing to that as enough of a carrot to change their posture on the policing and justice deal.

Brown and Cowen are poised to go to NI tomorrow. Will keep you posted.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2010 6:14 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Subject: Re: H: Robinson has just entered decisive DUP meeting. Shaun will call me when it's over. Sid

Let me know. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 04 17:58:26 2010
Subject: H: Robinson has just entered decisive DUP meeting. Shaun will call me when it's over. Sid

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 9:41 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Thank You--It Gets Better

Scroll down

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D
To: McGlothlin, Kevin (USAID/MEXICO/DEG)
Sent: Tue Oct 19 21:41:05 2010
Subject: Re: Thank You--It Gets Better

Many thanks to you - sending her this message now.

Best

Cdm

----- Original Message -----
From: McGlothlin, Kevin (USAID/MEXICO/DEG) [redacted] B6
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tue Oct 19 20:20:18 2010
Subject: Thank You--It Gets Better

Dear Counselor Mills:

Please convey to the Secretary my most profound thanks for her contribution to the 'It Gets Better' video series. [redacted] appreciated deeply her actions on behalf of the LGBT community within the Department and USAID, and this latest statement--that gay youth can count the Secretary of State among their supporters-- is a moving and powerful message for our country.

Again, my thanks,

Kevin McGlothlin
Team Lead, Economic Growth and Environment USAID/Mexico

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2010 7:06 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: URGENT GOOD NEWs ON NI!!!! Sid

Fyi. So I need to do press early starting by 9.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 04 19:02:28 2010
Subject: URGENT GOOD NEWs ON NI!!!! Sid

Shaun just called (7 pm EST) to report 100 percent unanimous support in DUP for Peter Robinson's recommendation to complete devolution. The deal will be agreed with the two PMs at Hillsborough tomorrow morning, 8:15 am (London time). If you wish you may call Shaun. You can reach him through No. 10 Downing St switchboard. Gordon will mention your role tomorrow at the event. Hooray! Sid

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2010 7:09 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: URGENT GOOD NEWs ON NI!!!! Sid

B6

That is wonderful! Kudos to Gordon and Shaun.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 04 19:02:28 2010
Subject: URGENT GOOD NEWs ON NI!!!! Sid

Shaun just called (7 pm EST) to report 100 percent unanimous support in DUP for Peter Robinson's recommendation to complete devolution. The deal will be agreed with the two PMs at Hillsborough tomorrow morning, 8:15 am (London time). If you wish you may call Shaun. You can reach him through No. 10 Downing St switchboard. Gordon will mention your role tomorrow at the event. Hooray! Sid

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2010 8:22 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
Cc: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: URGENT GOOD NEWs ON NI!!!! Sid

How would you frame the relevance? I'm copying Jake Sullivan who works w me on this.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 04 19:55:26 2010
Subject: Re: URGENT GOOD NEWs ON NI!!!! Sid

You should prepare a statement for tomorrow, noting the relevance for other places ------Original Message------
From: Hillary Clinton
To: 'sbwhoeop [redacted]
Sent: Feb 4, 2010 7:09 PM
Subject: Re: URGENT GOOD NEWs ON NI!!!! Sid

That is wonderful! Kudos to Gordon and Shaun.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 04 19:02:28 2010
Subject: URGENT GOOD NEWs ON NI!!!! Sid

Shaun just called (7 pm EST) to report 100 percent unanimous support in DUP for Peter Robinson's recommendation to complete devolution. The deal will be agreed with the two PMs at Hillsborough tomorrow morning, 8:15 am (London time). If you wish you may call Shaun. You can reach him through No. 10 Downing St switchboard. Gordon will mention your role tomorrow at the event. Hooray! Sid

Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 4:09 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

Good for him. I wish he were 50 instead 90!

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop@[redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 16:06:22 2010
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

This is from Justice Stevens' dissent in the Citizens United case:

If taken seriously, our colleagues' assumption that the identity of a speaker has no relevance to the Government's ability to regulate political speech would lead to some remarkable conclusions. Such an assumption would have accorded the propaganda broadcasts to our troops by "Tokyo Rose" during World War II the same protection as speech by Allied commanders. More pertinently, it would appear to afford the same protection to multinational corporations controlled by foreigners as to individual Americans: To do otherwise, after all, could " 'enhance the relative voice' " of some ( i.e. , humans) over others ( i.e. , nonhumans). Ante , at 33 (quoting Buckley , 424 U. S., at 49). 51 <http://www.law.cornell.edu/supct/html/08-205.ZX.html#51> Under the majority's view, I suppose it may be a First Amendment <http://www.law.cornell.edu/supct-cgi/get-const?amendmenti> problem that corporations are not permitted to vote, given that voting is, among other things, a form of speech.

http://www.law.cornell.edu/supct/html/08-205.ZX.html

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Sat, Jan 23, 2010 3:51 pm
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

This is unbelievable. Or maybe totally so given the forces at work.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted]

To: H

Sent: Sat Jan 23 09:26:25 2010

Subject: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a

"person" under US law. S

http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election

Hugo Chavez's state-owned Petroleos Corp set to spend on your U.S. election

<http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election>

Digg <http://digg.com/submit?url=http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election&title=Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election&bodytext=Blogging+on+the+Citizens+United+Supreme+Court+ruling+is+more+of+what+we+love+about+the+web.+It%26%238217%3Bs+the+kind+of+typical+collective+dissection+we+have+now+come+to+expect+but+that+never+really+existed+before%3A+serious%2C+speculative%2C+arcane%2C+funny%2C+brilliant%2C+baked%2C+etc.+The+Sunlight+Foundation+blogging+is+predictably+good.+Paul+Blumenthal+dips+into+the+%5B...%5D&media=news&topic=politics>

Tweet <http://twitter.com/home?status=RT%20@COindependent%20-%20Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election%C2%A0%20http://bit.ly/7duhoY>

By John Tomasic <http://coloradoindependent.com/author/johntomasic/> 1/22/10

3:58 PM

Blogging on the Citizens United Supreme Court ruling is more of what we love about the web. It's the kind of typical collective dissection we have now come to expect but that never really existed before: serious, speculative, arcane, funny, brilliant, baked, etc. The Sunlight Foundation blogging

<http://blog.sunlightfoundation.com/2010/01/22/wait-can-foreign-companies-now-spend-on-us-political-elections/>

is predictably good. Paul Blumenthal dips into the multinational dimension of the new "corporation as full citizen-person" framework, drawing on blogging

going on at Newsweek <http://blog.newsweek.com/blogs/thegaggle/archive/2010/01/22/should-foreign-corporations-spend-money-on-u-s-political-candidates.aspx>

and the Center for Public Integrity <http://www.publicintegrity.org/articles/entry/1913/>

"Looks like [the Court] might support allowing foreign companies to spend freely in elections in the United States. I guess this would be the corporate globalization of the U.S. electoral system." So you gotta ask yourself: Who does Hugo Chavez want for President?

Blumenthal excerpting the Center for Public Integrity:

<http://coloradoindependent.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/01/Picture-142.png>

The Center for Public Integrity looks at this closer and shows what kind of foreign influence we are looking at:

One prominent examples is CITGO Petroleum Company — once the American-born Cities Services Company, but purchased in 1990 by the Venezuelan government-owned Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. The Citizens United ruling could conceivably allow Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, who has sharply criticized both of the past two U.S. presidents, to spend government funds to defeat an American political candidate, just by having CITGO buy TV ads bashing his target.

And it's not just Chavez. The Saudi government owns Houston's Saudi Refining Company and half of Motiva Enterprises. Lenovo, which bought IBM's PC assets in 2004, is partially owned by the Chinese government's Chinese Academy of Sciences. And Singapore's APL Limited operates several U.S. port operations.

A weakening of the limit on corporate giving could mean China, Saudi Arabia,

Singapore, and any other country that owns companies that operate in the U.S. could also have significant sway in American electioneering.

I really can't see Americans being too happy about this.

Dahlia Lithwick reported for Slate <http://www.slate.com/id/2242208/> from the Supreme Court as the opinions were being read. She offered this aside:

While Stevens is reading the portion of his concurrence about the "cautious view of corporate power" held by the framers, I see Justice Thomas chuckle softly.

Was it a disdainful chuckle at the impotence of his colleague? Was it merely a chuckle of disagreement, of good-natured exasperation? Was it a chuckle at an anachronistic vision of the framers set beside today's modern corporate silicon and steel behemoths? I doubt he was thinking about Hugo Chavez.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 9:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: The Pasters

Fyi

Howard fell ill overseas in egypt

They got him help, hospital care and other support

---

From: Toiv, Nora F
To: Perry, Mark D; Kirby, Michael D; Grandfield, Mary E
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Tue Oct 19 18:05:41 2010
Subject: The Pasters

Team CA-

Huge thanks for taking care of Howard and [redacted] and making sure they got their flight. You guys are amazing. B6

Nora

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2010 8:44 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Ops may be connecting sean Woodward soon

They did.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 04 20:36:52 2010
Subject: Ops may be connecting sean Woodward soon

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2010 9:23 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Ops may be connecting sean Woodward soon

Yes.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 04 20:47:26 2010
Subject: Re: Ops may be connecting sean Woodward soon

Will aim for robinson and Mccue for 745 one after the other. Ok?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Thu Feb 04 20:43:43 2010
Subject: Re: Ops may be connecting sean Woodward soon

They did.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 04 20:36:52 2010
Subject: Ops may be connecting sean Woodward soon

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 4:15 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

Not sure there is a legislative fix. Haven't read the opinion yet. May require constitutional amendment.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop B6
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 16:08:34 2010
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

Getting a legislative fix might be a good initiative for SOTU. Let the Republicans try to oppose it. S

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop
Sent: Sat, Jan 23, 2010 3:51 pm
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

This is unbelievable. Or maybe totally so given the forces at work.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop B6

To: H

Sent: Sat Jan 23 09:26:25 2010

Subject: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a

"person" under US law. S

http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election

Hugo Chavez's state-owned Petroleos Corp set to spend on your U.S. election

<http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election>

Digg <http://digg.com/submit?url=http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election&title=Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election&bodytext=Blogging+on+the+Citizens+United+Supreme+Court+ruling+is+more+of+what+we+love+about+the+web.+It%26%238217%3Bs+the+kind+of+typical+collective+dissection+we+have+now+come+to+expect+but+that+never+really+existed+before%3A+serious%2C+speculative%2C+arcane%2C+funny%2C+brilliant%2C+baked%2C+etc.+The+Sunlight+Foundation+blogging+is+predictably+good.+Paul+Blumenthal+dips+into+the+%5B...%5D&media=news&topic=politics>

Tweet <http://twitter.com/home?status=RT%20@COindependent%20-%20Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election%C2%A0%20http://bit.ly/7duhoY>

By John Tomasic <http://coloradoindependent.com/author/johntomasic/> 1/22/10

3:58 PM

Blogging on the Citizens United Supreme Court ruling is more of what we love

about the web. It's the kind of typical collective dissection we have now come to expect but that never really existed before: serious, speculative, arcane,

funny, brilliant, baked, etc. The Sunlight Foundation blogging

<http://blog.sunlightfoundation.com/2010/01/22/wait-can-foreign-companies-now-spend-on-us-political-elections/>

is predictably good. Paul Blumenthal dips into the multinational dimension of the new "corporation as full citizen-person" framework, drawing on blogging

going on at Newsweek <http://blog.newsweek.com/blogs/thegaggle/archive/2010/01/22/should-foreign-corporations-spend-money-on-u-s-political-candidates.aspx>

and the Center for Public Integrity <http://www.publicintegrity.org/articles/entry/1913/>

"Looks like [the Court] might support allowing foreign companies to spend freely in elections in the United States. I guess this would be the corporate globalization of the U.S. electoral system." So you gotta ask yourself: Who does Hugo Chavez want for President?

Blumenthal excerpting the Center for Public Integrity:

<http://coloradoindependent.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/01/Picture-142.png>

The Center for Public Integrity looks at this closer and shows what kind of foreign influence we are looking at:

One prominent examples is CITGO Petroleum Company — once the American-born Cities Services Company, but purchased in 1990 by the Venezuelan government-owned Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. The Citizens United ruling could conceivably allow Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, who has sharply criticized both of the past two U.S. presidents, to spend government funds to defeat an American political candidate, just by having CITGO buy TV ads bashing his target.

And it's not just Chavez. The Saudi government owns Houston's Saudi Refining Company and half of Motiva Enterprises. Lenovo, which bought IBM's PC assets in 2004, is partially owned by the Chinese government's Chinese Academy of Sciences. And Singapore's APL Limited operates several U.S. port operations. A weakening of the limit on corporate giving could mean China, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, and any other country that owns companies that operate in the U.S. could also have significant sway in American electioneering.

I really can't see Americans being too happy about this.

Dahlia Lithwick reported for Slate <http://www.slate.com/id/2242208/> from the Supreme Court as the opinions were being read. She offered this aside:

While Stevens is reading the portion of his concurrence about the "cautious view of corporate power" held by the framers, I see Justice Thomas chuckle softly.

Was it a disdainful chuckle at the impotence of his colleague? Was it merely a chuckle of disagreement, of good-natured exasperation? Was it a chuckle at an anachronistic vision of the framers set beside today's modern corporate silicon and steel behemoths? I doubt he was thinking about Hugo Chavez.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 23, 2010 4:27 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front companybecomes a "person" under US law. S

Agreed.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 16:23:28 2010
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front companybecomes a "person" under US law. S

Some groups going for amendment but foreign corps may be low hanging fruit. Don't know, an idea to investigate Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Sat, 23 Jan 2010 16:15:21
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted]'<sbwhoeop[redacted]
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

Not sure there is a legislative fix. Haven't read the opinion yet. May require constitutional amendment.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 16:08:34 2010
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

Getting a legislative fix might be a good initiative for SOTU. Let the Republicans try to oppose it. S

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted] <sbwhoeop[redacted]
Sent: Sat, Jan 23, 2010 3:51 pm
Subject: Re: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a "person" under US law. S

This is unbelievable. Or maybe totally so given the forces at work.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop[redacted]<sbwhoeop[redacted]

To: H

Sent: Sat Jan 23 09:26:25 2010

Subject: H: FYI: Any foreign nation or leader with a front company becomes a

"person" under US law. S

http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election

Hugo Chavez's state-owned Petroleos Corp set to spend on your U.S. election

<http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election>

Digg <http://digg.com/submit?url=http://coloradoindependent.com/46462/hugo-chavezs-state-owned-petroleos-corp-set-to-spend-on-your-u-s-election&title=Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election&bodytext=Blogging+on+the+Citizens+United+Supreme+Court+ruling+is+more+of+what+we+love+about+the+web.+It%26%238217%3Bs+the+kind+of+typical+collective+dissection+we+have+now+come+to+expect+but+that+never+really+existed+before%3A+serious%2C+speculative%2C+arcane%2C+funny%2C+brilliant%2C+baked%2C+etc.+The+Sunlight+Foundation+blogging+is+predictably+good.+Paul+Blumenthal+dips+into+the+%5B...%5D&media=news&topic=politics>

Tweet <http://twitter.com/home?status=RT%20@COindependent%20-%20Hugo%20Chavez%E2%80%99s%20state-owned%20Petroleos%20Corp%20set%20to%20spend%20on%20your%20U.S.%20election%C2%A0%20http://bit.ly/7duhoY>

By John Tomasic <http://coloradoindependent.com/author/johntomasic/> 1/22/10

3:58 PM

Blogging on the Citizens United Supreme Court ruling is more of what we love

about the web. It's the kind of typical collective dissection we have now come to expect but that never really existed before: serious, speculative, arcane,

funny, brilliant, baked, etc. The Sunlight Foundation blogging

<http://blog.sunlightfoundation.com/2010/01/22/wait-can-foreign-companies-now-spend-on-us-political-elections/>

is predictably good. Paul Blumenthal dips into the multinational dimension of the new "corporation as full citizen-person" framework, drawing on blogging going on at Newsweek <http://blog.newsweek.com/blogs/thegaggle/archive/2010/01/22/should-foreign-corporations-spend-money-on-u-s-political-candidates.aspx> and the Center for Public Integrity <http://www.publicintegrity.org/articles/entry/1913/>

"Looks like [the Court] might support allowing foreign companies to spend freely in elections in the United States. I guess this would be the corporate globalization of the U.S. electoral system." So you gotta ask yourself: Who does Hugo Chavez want for President?

Blumenthal excerpting the Center for Public Integrity:

<http://coloradoindependent.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/01/Picture-142.png>

The Center for Public Integrity looks at this closer and shows what kind of foreign influence we are looking at:

One prominent examples is CITGO Petroleum Company — once the American-born Cities Services Company, but purchased in 1990 by the Venezuelan government-owned Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. The Citizens United ruling could conceivably allow Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, who has sharply criticized both of the past two U.S. presidents, to spend government funds to defeat an American political candidate, just by having CITGO buy TV ads bashing his target.

And it's not just Chavez. The Saudi government owns Houston's Saudi Refining Company and half of Motiva Enterprises. Lenovo, which bought IBM's PC assets in 2004, is partially owned by the Chinese government's Chinese Academy of Sciences. And Singapore's APL Limited operates several U.S. port operations. A weakening of the limit on corporate giving could mean China, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, and any other country that owns companies that operate in the U.S. could also have significant sway in American electioneering.

I really can't see Americans being too happy about this.

Dahlia Lithwick reported for Slate <http://www.slate.com/id/2242208/> from the Supreme Court as the opinions were being read. She offered this aside:

While Stevens is reading the portion of his concurrence about the "cautious view of corporate power" held by the framers, I see Justice Thomas chuckle softly.

Was it a disdainful chuckle at the impotence of his colleague? Was it merely a chuckle of disagreement, of good-natured exasperation? Was it a chuckle at an anachronistic vision of the framers set beside today's modern corporate silicon and steel behemoths? I doubt he was thinking about Hugo Chavez.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 10:01 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Thank you

Context

From: Toiv, Nora F
To: 'Mike Berman' [redacted]; Laszczych, Joanne; Mills, Cheryl D B6
Sent: Tue Oct 19 15:56:39 2010
Subject: RE: Thank you

Your welcome. Glad to hear Howard's feeling a little better.

From: Mike Berman [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 3:34 PM
To: Toiv, Nora F; Laszczych, Joanne; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Thank you

I am sure you all know but Howard is better. He is on his feet and getting ready to leave Egypt. Thanks for all you did to ease his way home.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 7:07 AM
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

B6

I will be doing a press event at 8:30. Do you know if Gordon mentioned me? Can you find out? Is Shaun still coming Monday? If so, I want to take you both out to dinner!

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Cc: MillsCD@state.gov <MillsCD@state.gov>; SullivanJJ@state.gov <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Feb 05 06:58:04 2010
Subject: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Northern Ireland agrees power-sharing deal

Gordon Brown hails historic deal which will see justice and policing powers be devolved to Stormont from 12 April

* Henry McDonald <http://www.guardian.co.uk/profile/henrymcdonald>
* guardian.co.uk <http://www.guardian.co.uk/> , Friday 5 February 2010 11.42 GMT
*

<http://www.guardian.co.uk/help/accessibility>

Gordon Brown, Peter Robinson and Martin McGuinness <http://static.guim.co.uk/sys-images/Guardian/Pix/pictures/2010/2/5/1265368562294/Gordon-Brown-Peter-Robins-001.jpg>
Gordon Brown, the DUP leader, Peter Robinson, and Sinn Fein's Martin McGuinness (l to r) talk to the press after the Northern Ireland power-sharing deal was announced. Photograph: Julien Behal/PA

Justice and policing powers will be devolved to Northern Ireland <http://www.guardian.co.uk/uk/northernireland> 's power-sharing government from 12 April in a historic deal agreed by the main parties that "opens a new chapter" after decades of violence, Gordon Brown said today.
Standing alongside his Irish counterpart, Brian Cowen, at a press conference at Hillsborough Castle outside Belfast, the prime minister said the "inspirational" agreement between Sinn Féin <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/sinn-fein> and the Democratic Unionist party (DUP) <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/dup> was a foundation for lasting peace.
The deal – finally agreed to by the DUP <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/2010/feb/05/northern-ireland-dup-ulster-deal> last night and described as a final piece in the jigsaw after a long search for peace – comes after two weeks of round-the-clock negotiations and brings an end to fears that the power-sharing government might collapse.
It will see policing and justice powers devolved from Westminster to the assembly within weeks and includes new plans on overseeing parades.
Brown, who travelled to Belfast this morning, said the agreement had been possible because of "a new spirit of mutual co-operation and respect".
The deal meets a key Sinn Féin demand and prevents the republican party from walking out of the power-sharing executive. In return, the DUP has secured reforms to the way loyalist marches are handled in Northern Ireland, including the abolition of the Parades Commission, a body most unionists regard as biased in favour of nationalists.

A cross-community vote will now be held in the Stormont assembly on 9 March before the policing and justice powers are devolved from London on 12 April.

Brown told reporters: "The achievements have been as great as they are inspirational. This moment and this agreement belongs to the people of Northern Ireland, all of the people, and now more than ever before so does their future ... This is the last chapter of a long and troubled story and the beginning of a new chapter after decades of violence, years of talks, weeks of stalemate."

Cowen praised both unionists and nationalists for making "fair and balanced compromises" to bridge the divisions and said the quality of the negotiations meant that the "devolved institutions can and will work".

The Northern Ireland secretary, Shaun Woodward, said the deal would further isolate republican dissidents who have launched three separate gun and bomb attacks against police stations in the province over the last 10 days. The deal would "absolutely" make Northern Ireland a safer place, he said.

The DUP leader, Peter Robinson, said the agreement "will be more enduring because of the time spent" in forming it.

Referring back to the Belfast Agreement of 1998 <http://www.nio.gov.uk/the-agreement> when negotiations bore fruit at the 11th hour, the Sinn Féin president, Gerry Adams, described the current deal and the rescue of power-sharing as "yet another very good Friday".

Jeffrey Donaldson told the Guardian the DUP's 36-strong assembly team was now unanimously in favour of the deal.

But the Ulster Unionist party (UUP) has yet to officially back the package which will allow the assembly to set up legislation to change the way parades are judged.

A UUP spokeswoman said members wanted to see the proposed agreement before giving their response to the two governments. "We have not had sight of this agreement and until we do we will not be signing up to it," she said.

The talks, which centred on Hillsborough Castle, outside Belfast, are the longest set of continuous negotiations held in the near 20-year peace process. Sinn Féin had accused the DUP of stalling on the transfer of policing powers for the last three years and it was feared that failure to find agreement could see the collapse of the power-sharing government led by the two parties.

The agreement finally came near midnight at Stormont's parliament building. Earlier in the evening Sinn Féin had said the basis of a deal was on the table and it was giving the DUP leadership the time to persuade its party to accept it.

Robinson emerged from a meeting of party colleagues to confirm that he had secured unanimous support for the proposals. Earlier in the week up to 14 DUP assembly members had opposed a proposed deal because it did not give unionists enough concessions.

Robinson said he would now look to gain the support of the community and the smaller assembly parties for the deal.

"We have a basis upon which we can go forward and recommend it [the deal] to our party, to the other parties in Northern Ireland and to the community.

"An essential element of the Democratic Unionist Party's manifesto is the requirement for community confidence; we believe this can be the basis for gaining that confidence."

However the leader of the hardline Traditional Unionist Voice (TUV), Jim Allister, questioned why the 14 DUP rebels had changed their minds.

"The deal hasn't changed, only the snowmen of the DUP, who melted once the heat came on," Allister said.

The DUP now faces a struggle to ward off the TUV threat in the forthcoming general election. Allister will portray the deal as a sell-out of unionist principles and a sop to republicanism.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 7:12 AM
To: Huma Abedin
Cc: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Fyi - robinson/mcguiness haven't confirmed yet.

And I doubt they will. Too much else going on. Also, we should put out the statement now to get into stories before anyone else. I can still do press event.

----- Original Message -----
From: Huma Abedin
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 05 07:09:36 2010
Subject: Fyi - robinson/mcguiness haven't confirmed yet.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, December 19, 2010 6:39 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: News Ticker: (Reuters) ROK to carry out live-fire drills December 20-TV

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-Korea; NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_CMS; SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sun Dec 19 18:20:51 2010
Subject: News Ticker: (Reuters) ROK to carry out live-fire drills December 20-TV

SEOUL (Reuters) - The ROK plans to carry out a planned firing drill from an island near the border with the DPRK early December 20, domestic media quoted military officials as saying. Officials at Seoul's defence ministry could not immediately confirm the reports by Yonhap news agency and YTN cable news channel that cited unnamed officials.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 7:13 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Reaction?

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 05 07:10:49 2010
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

B6

Will find out. Why not invite uk and irish ambassadors to State to brief press with you today?
Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Fri, 5 Feb 2010 07:06:39
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

I will be doing a press event at 8:30. Do you know if Gordon mentioned me? Can you find out? Is Shaun still coming Monday? If so, I want to take you both out to dinner!

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Cc: MillsCD@state.gov <MillsCD@state.gov>; SullivanJJ@state.gov <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Feb 05 06:58:04 2010
Subject: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Northern Ireland agrees power-sharing deal

Gordon Brown hails historic deal which will see justice and policing powers be devolved to Stormont from 12 April

* Henry McDonald <http://www.guardian.co.uk/profile/henrymcdonald>
* guardian.co.uk <http://www.guardian.co.uk/> , Friday 5 February 2010 11.42 GMT
*

<http://www.guardian.co.uk/help/accessibility>

Gordon Brown, Peter Robinson and Martin McGuinness <http://static.guim.co.uk/sys-images/Guardian/Pix/pictures/2010/2/5/1265368562294/Gordon-Brown-Peter-Robins-001.jpg>
Gordon Brown, the DUP leader, Peter Robinson, and Sinn Fein's Martin McGuinness (l to r) talk to the press after the Northern Ireland power-sharing deal was announced. Photograph: Julien Behal/PA

Justice and policing powers will be devolved to Northern Ireland <http://www.guardian.co.uk/uk/northernireland> 's power-sharing government from 12 April in a historic deal agreed by the main parties that "opens a new chapter" after decades of violence, Gordon Brown said today.

Standing alongside his Irish counterpart, Brian Cowen, at a press conference at Hillsborough Castle outside Belfast, the prime minister said the "inspirational" agreement between Sinn Féin <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/sinn-fein> and the Democratic Unionist party (DUP) <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/dup> was a foundation for lasting peace.

The deal – finally agreed to by the DUP <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/2010/feb/05/northern-ireland-dup-ulster-deal> last night and described as a final piece in the jigsaw after a long search for peace – comes after two weeks of round-the-clock negotiations and brings an end to fears that the power-sharing government might collapse.

It will see policing and justice powers devolved from Westminster to the assembly within weeks and includes new plans on overseeing parades.

Brown, who travelled to Belfast this morning, said the agreement had been possible because of "a new spirit of mutual co-operation and respect".

The deal meets a key Sinn Féin demand and prevents the republican party from walking out of the power-sharing executive. In return, the DUP has secured reforms to the way loyalist marches are handled in Northern Ireland, including the abolition of the Parades Commission, a body most unionists regard as biased in favour of nationalists.

A cross-community vote will now be held in the Stormont assembly on 9 March before the policing and justice powers are devolved from London on 12 April.

Brown told reporters: "The achievements have been as great as they are inspirational. This moment and this agreement belongs to the people of Northern Ireland, all of the people, and now more than ever before so does their future ... This is the last chapter of a long and troubled story and the beginning of a new chapter after decades of violence, years of talks, weeks of stalemate."

Cowen praised both unionists and nationalists for making "fair and balanced compromises" to bridge the divisions and said the quality of the negotiations meant that the "devolved institutions can and will work".

The Northern Ireland secretary, Shaun Woodward, said the deal would further isolate republican dissidents who have launched three separate gun and bomb attacks against police stations in the province over the last 10 days. The deal would "absolutely" make Northern Ireland a safer place, he said.

The DUP leader, Peter Robinson, said the agreement "will be more enduring because of the time spent" in forming it.

Referring back to the Belfast Agreement of 1998 <http://www.nio.gov.uk/the-agreement> when negotiations bore fruit at the 11th hour, the Sinn Féin president, Gerry Adams, described the current deal and the rescue of power-sharing as "yet another very good Friday".

Jeffrey Donaldson told the Guardian the DUP's 36-strong assembly team was now unanimously in favour of the deal.

But the Ulster Unionist party (UUP) has yet to officially back the package which will allow the assembly to set up legislation to change the way parades are judged.

A UUP spokeswoman said members wanted to see the proposed agreement before giving their response to the two governments. "We have not had sight of this agreement and until we do we will not be signing up to it," she said.

The talks, which centred on Hillsborough Castle, outside Belfast, are the longest set of continuous negotiations held in the near 20-year peace process. Sinn Féin had accused the DUP of stalling on the transfer of policing powers for the last three years and it was feared that failure to find agreement could see the collapse of the power-sharing government led by the two parties.

The agreement finally came near midnight at Stormont's parliament building. Earlier in the evening Sinn Féin had said the basis of a deal was on the table and it was giving the DUP leadership the time to persuade its party to accept it.

Robinson emerged from a meeting of party colleagues to confirm that he had secured unanimous support for the proposals. Earlier in the week up to 14 DUP assembly members had opposed a proposed deal because it did not give unionists enough concessions.

Robinson said he would now look to gain the support of the community and the smaller assembly parties for the deal.

"We have a basis upon which we can go forward and recommend it [the deal] to our party, to the other parties in Northern Ireland and to the community.

"An essential element of the Democratic Unionist Party's manifesto is the requirement for community confidence; we believe this can be the basis for gaining that confidence."

However the leader of the hardline Traditional Unionist Voice (TUV), Jim Allister, questioned why the 14 DUP rebels had changed their minds.

"The deal hasn't changed, only the snowmen of the DUP, who melted once the heat came on," Allister said.
The DUP now faces a struggle to ward off the TUV threat in the forthcoming general election. Allister will portray the deal as a sell-out of unionist principles and a sop to republicanism.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: PVerveer
Sent: Wednesday, October 20, 2010 12:33 AM
To: H
Subject:

I met with this afternoon.

Maybe you can think of a place for her.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 7:15 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'; 'preines [redacted]'; Huma Abedin B6
Subject: Witten statement now?

I'd like to be first w statement on behalf of USG. Can we do asap and then repeat on camera?

RELEASE IN PART B5, B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 7:27 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 05 07:10:49 2010
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

B6

Will find out. Why not invite uk and irish ambassadors to State to brief press with you today?
Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Fri, 5 Feb 2010 07:06:39
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

I will be doing a press event at 8:30. Do you know if Gordon mentioned me? Can you find out? Is Shaun still coming Monday? If so, I want to take you both out to dinner!

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Cc: MillsCD@state.gov <MillsCD@state.gov>; SullivanJJ@state.gov <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Feb 05 06:58:04 2010
Subject: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Northern Ireland agrees power-sharing deal

Gordon Brown hails historic deal which will see justice and policing powers be devolved to Stormont from 12 April

* Henry McDonald <http://www.guardian.co.uk/profile/henrymcdonald>
* guardian.co.uk <http://www.guardian.co.uk/> , Friday 5 February 2010 11.42 GMT
*

<http://www.guardian.co.uk/help/accessibility>

Gordon Brown, Peter Robinson and Martin McGuinness <http://static.guim.co.uk/sys-images/Guardian/Pix/pictures/2010/2/5/1265368562294/Gordon-Brown-Peter-Robins-001.jpg>
Gordon Brown, the DUP leader, Peter Robinson, and Sinn Fein's Martin McGuinness (l to r) talk to the press after the Northern Ireland power-sharing deal was announced. Photograph: Julien Behal/PA

Justice and policing powers will be devolved to Northern Ireland <http://www.guardian.co.uk/uk/northernireland> 's power-sharing government from 12 April in a historic deal agreed by the main parties that "opens a new chapter" after decades of violence, Gordon Brown said today.

Standing alongside his Irish counterpart, Brian Cowen, at a press conference at Hillsborough Castle outside Belfast, the prime minister said the "inspirational" agreement between Sinn Féin <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/sinn-fein> and the Democratic Unionist party (DUP) <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/dup> was a foundation for lasting peace.

The deal – finally agreed to by the DUP <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/2010/feb/05/northern-ireland-dup-ulster-deal> last night and described as a final piece in the jigsaw after a long search for peace – comes after two weeks of round-the-clock negotiations and brings an end to fears that the power-sharing government might collapse.

It will see policing and justice powers devolved from Westminster to the assembly within weeks and includes new plans on overseeing parades.

Brown, who travelled to Belfast this morning, said the agreement had been possible because of "a new spirit of mutual co-operation and respect".

The deal meets a key Sinn Féin demand and prevents the republican party from walking out of the power-sharing executive. In return, the DUP has secured reforms to the way loyalist marches are handled in Northern Ireland, including the abolition of the Parades Commission, a body most unionists regard as biased in favour of nationalists.

A cross-community vote will now be held in the Stormont assembly on 9 March before the policing and justice powers are devolved from London on 12 April.

Brown told reporters: "The achievements have been as great as they are inspirational. This moment and this agreement belongs to the people of Northern Ireland, all of the people, and now more than ever before so does their future ... This is the last chapter of a long and troubled story and the beginning of a new chapter after decades of violence, years of talks, weeks of stalemate."

Cowen praised both unionists and nationalists for making "fair and balanced compromises" to bridge the divisions and said the quality of the negotiations meant that the "devolved institutions can and will work".

The Northern Ireland secretary, Shaun Woodward, said the deal would further isolate republican dissidents who have launched three separate gun and bomb attacks against police stations in the province over the last 10 days. The deal would "absolutely" make Northern Ireland a safer place, he said.

The DUP leader, Peter Robinson, said the agreement "will be more enduring because of the time spent" in forming it.

Referring back to the Belfast Agreement of 1998 <http://www.nio.gov.uk/the-agreement> when negotiations bore fruit at the 11th hour, the Sinn Féin president, Gerry Adams, described the current deal and the rescue of power-sharing as "yet another very good Friday".

Jeffrey Donaldson told the Guardian the DUP's 36-strong assembly team was now unanimously in favour of the deal.

But the Ulster Unionist party (UUP) has yet to officially back the package which will allow the assembly to set up legislation to change the way parades are judged.

A UUP spokeswoman said members wanted to see the proposed agreement before giving their response to the two governments. "We have not had sight of this agreement and until we do we will not be signing up to it," she said.

The talks, which centred on Hillsborough Castle, outside Belfast, are the longest set of continuous negotiations held in the near 20-year peace process. Sinn Féin had accused the DUP of stalling on the transfer of policing powers for the last three years and it was feared that failure to find agreement could see the collapse of the power-sharing government led by the two parties.

The agreement finally came near midnight at Stormont's parliament building. Earlier in the evening Sinn Féin had said the basis of a deal was on the table and it was giving the DUP leadership the time to persuade its party to accept it.

Robinson emerged from a meeting of party colleagues to confirm that he had secured unanimous support for the proposals. Earlier in the week up to 14 DUP assembly members had opposed a proposed deal because it did not give unionists enough concessions.

Robinson said he would now look to gain the support of the community and the smaller assembly parties for the deal.

"We have a basis upon which we can go forward and recommend it [the deal] to our party, to the other parties in Northern Ireland and to the community.

"An essential element of the Democratic Unionist Party's manifesto is the requirement for community confidence; we believe this can be the basis for gaining that confidence."

However the leader of the hardline Traditional Unionist Voice (TUV), Jim Allister, questioned why the 14 DUP rebels had changed their minds.

"The deal hasn't changed, only the snowmen of the DUP, who melted once the heat came on," Allister said.
The DUP now faces a struggle to ward off the TUV threat in the forthcoming general election. Allister will portray the deal as a sell-out of unionist principles and a sop to republicanism.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 7:27 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 05 07:24:17 2010
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

B6

Ambos at event would praise your role
Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Fri, 5 Feb 2010 07:06:39
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

I will be doing a press event at 8:30. Do you know if Gordon mentioned me? Can you find out? Is Shaun still coming Monday? If so, I want to take you both out to dinner!

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Cc: MillsCD@state.gov <MillsCD@state.gov>; SullivanJJ@state.gov <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Feb 05 06:58:04 2010
Subject: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Northern Ireland agrees power-sharing deal

Gordon Brown hails historic deal which will see justice and policing powers be devolved to Stormont from 12 April

* Henry McDonald <http://www.guardian.co.uk/profile/henrymcdonald>
* guardian.co.uk <http://www.guardian.co.uk/> , Friday 5 February 2010 11.42 GMT
*
<http://www.guardian.co.uk/help/accessibility>

Gordon Brown, Peter Robinson and Martin McGuinness <http://static.guim.co.uk/sys-images/Guardian/Pix/pictures/2010/2/5/1265368562294/Gordon-Brown-Peter-Robins-001.jpg>
Gordon Brown, the DUP leader, Peter Robinson, and Sinn Fein's Martin McGuinness (l to r) talk to the press after the Northern Ireland power-sharing deal was announced. Photograph: Julien Behal/PA

Justice and policing powers will be devolved to Northern Ireland <http://www.guardian.co.uk/uk/northernireland> 's power-sharing government from 12 April in a historic deal agreed by the main parties that "opens a new chapter" after decades of violence, Gordon Brown said today.

Standing alongside his Irish counterpart, Brian Cowen, at a press conference at Hillsborough Castle outside Belfast, the prime minister said the "inspirational" agreement between Sinn Féin <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/sinn-fein> and the Democratic Unionist party (DUP) <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/dup> was a foundation for lasting peace.

The deal – finally agreed to by the DUP <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/2010/feb/05/northern-ireland-dup-ulster-deal> last night and described as a final piece in the jigsaw after a long search for peace – comes after two weeks of round-the-clock negotiations and brings an end to fears that the power-sharing government might collapse.

It will see policing and justice powers devolved from Westminster to the assembly within weeks and includes new plans on overseeing parades.

Brown, who travelled to Belfast this morning, said the agreement had been possible because of "a new spirit of mutual co-operation and respect".

The deal meets a key Sinn Féin demand and prevents the republican party from walking out of the power-sharing executive. In return, the DUP has secured reforms to the way loyalist marches are handled in Northern Ireland, including the abolition of the Parades Commission, a body most unionists regard as biased in favour of nationalists.

A cross-community vote will now be held in the Stormont assembly on 9 March before the policing and justice powers are devolved from London on 12 April.

Brown told reporters: "The achievements have been as great as they are inspirational. This moment and this agreement belongs to the people of Northern Ireland, all of the people, and now more than ever before so does their future ... This is the last chapter of a long and troubled story and the beginning of a new chapter after decades of violence, years of talks, weeks of stalemate."

Cowen praised both unionists and nationalists for making "fair and balanced compromises" to bridge the divisions and said the quality of the negotiations meant that the "devolved institutions can and will work".

The Northern Ireland secretary, Shaun Woodward, said the deal would further isolate republican dissidents who have launched three separate gun and bomb attacks against police stations in the province over the last 10 days. The deal would "absolutely" make Northern Ireland a safer place, he said.

The DUP leader, Peter Robinson, said the agreement "will be more enduring because of the time spent" in forming it.

Referring back to the Belfast Agreement of 1998 <http://www.nio.gov.uk/the-agreement> when negotiations bore fruit at the 11th hour, the Sinn Féin president, Gerry Adams, described the current deal and the rescue of power-sharing as "yet another very good Friday".

Jeffrey Donaldson told the Guardian the DUP's 36-strong assembly team was now unanimously in favour of the deal.

But the Ulster Unionist party (UUP) has yet to officially back the package which will allow the assembly to set up legislation to change the way parades are judged.

A UUP spokeswoman said members wanted to see the proposed agreement before giving their response to the two governments. "We have not had sight of this agreement and until we do we will not be signing up to it," she said.

The talks, which centred on Hillsborough Castle, outside Belfast, are the longest set of continuous negotiations held in the near 20-year peace process. Sinn Féin had accused the DUP of stalling on the transfer of policing powers for the last three years and it was feared that failure to find agreement could see the collapse of the power-sharing government led by the two parties.

The agreement finally came near midnight at Stormont's parliament building. Earlier in the evening Sinn Féin had said the basis of a deal was on the table and it was giving the DUP leadership the time to persuade its party to accept it.

Robinson emerged from a meeting of party colleagues to confirm that he had secured unanimous support for the proposals. Earlier in the week up to 14 DUP assembly members had opposed a proposed deal because it did not give unionists enough concessions.

Robinson said he would now look to gain the support of the community and the smaller assembly parties for the deal.

"We have a basis upon which we can go forward and recommend it [the deal] to our party, to the other parties in Northern Ireland and to the community.

"An essential element of the Democratic Unionist Party's manifesto is the requirement for community confidence; we believe this can be the basis for gaining that confidence."

However the leader of the hardline Traditional Unionist Voice (TUV), Jim Allister, questioned why the 14 DUP rebels had changed their minds.

"The deal hasn't changed, only the snowmen of the DUP, who melted once the heat came on," Allister said.
The DUP now faces a struggle to ward off the TUV threat in the forthcoming general election. Allister will portray the deal as a sell-out of unionist principles and a sop to republicanism.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Madeleine Albright [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, December 19, 2010 8:17 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Where can I reach you?

I will be home at [redacted] about 8:45. Would love to talk leave for aspen tomorrow. B6

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Madeleine Albright
Sent: Sun Dec 19 18:02:22 2010
Subject: Where can I reach you?

M--I tried calling you back w/out luck. Where can I call you tonight? H

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 7:40 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Agreed.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 05 07:38:57 2010
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Declan thinks bad idea because sends wrong message to NI and because this is your moment.
Philippe thinks practically impossible to do.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Feb 05 07:27:21 2010
Subject: Fw: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 05 07:24:17 2010
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Ambos at event would praise your role
Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Fri, 5 Feb 2010 07:06:39
To: 'sbwhoeop [redacted]
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

I will be doing a press event at 8:30. Do you know if Gordon mentioned me? Can you find out? Is Shaun still coming Monday? If so, I want to take you both out to dinner!

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted]
To: H
Cc: MillsCD@state.gov <MillsCD@state.gov>; SullivanJJ@state.gov <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Feb 05 06:58:04 2010
Subject: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Northern Ireland agrees power-sharing deal

Gordon Brown hails historic deal which will see justice and policing powers be devolved to Stormont from 12 April

* Henry McDonald <http://www.guardian.co.uk/profile/henrymcdonald>
* guardian.co.uk <http://www.guardian.co.uk/> , Friday 5 February 2010 11.42 GMT
*

<http://www.guardian.co.uk/help/accessibility>

Gordon Brown, Peter Robinson and Martin McGuinness <http://static.guim.co.uk/sys-images/Guardian/Pix/pictures/2010/2/5/1265368562294/Gordon-Brown-Peter-Robins-001.jpg>
Gordon Brown, the DUP leader, Peter Robinson, and Sinn Fein's Martin McGuinness (l to r) talk to the press after the Northern Ireland power-sharing deal was announced. Photograph: Julien Behal/PA

Justice and policing powers will be devolved to Northern Ireland <http://www.guardian.co.uk/uk/northernireland> 's power-sharing government from 12 April in a historic deal agreed by the main parties that "opens a new chapter" after decades of violence, Gordon Brown said today.

Standing alongside his Irish counterpart, Brian Cowen, at a press conference at Hillsborough Castle outside Belfast, the prime minister said the "inspirational" agreement between Sinn Féin <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/sinn-fein> and the Democratic Unionist party (DUP) <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/dup> was a foundation for lasting peace.

The deal – finally agreed to by the DUP <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/2010/feb/05/northern-ireland-dup-ulster-deal> last night and described as a final piece in the jigsaw after a long search for peace – comes after two weeks of round-the-clock negotiations and brings an end to fears that the power-sharing government might collapse.

It will see policing and justice powers devolved from Westminster to the assembly within weeks and includes new plans on overseeing parades.

Brown, who travelled to Belfast this morning, said the agreement had been possible because of "a new spirit of mutual co-operation and respect".

The deal meets a key Sinn Féin demand and prevents the republican party from walking out of the power-sharing executive. In return, the DUP has secured reforms to the way loyalist marches are handled in Northern Ireland, including the abolition of the Parades Commission, a body most unionists regard as biased in favour of nationalists.

A cross-community vote will now be held in the Stormont assembly on 9 March before the policing and justice powers are devolved from London on 12 April.

Brown told reporters: "The achievements have been as great as they are inspirational. This moment and this agreement belongs to the people of Northern Ireland, all of the people, and now more than ever before so does their future ... This is the last chapter of a long and troubled story and the beginning of a new chapter after decades of violence, years of talks, weeks of stalemate."

Cowen praised both unionists and nationalists for making "fair and balanced compromises" to bridge the divisions and said the quality of the negotiations meant that the "devolved institutions can and will work".

The Northern Ireland secretary, Shaun Woodward, said the deal would further isolate republican dissidents who have launched three separate gun and bomb attacks against police stations in the province over the last 10 days. The deal would "absolutely" make Northern Ireland a safer place, he said.

The DUP leader, Peter Robinson, said the agreement "will be more enduring because of the time spent" in forming it.

Referring back to the Belfast Agreement of 1998 <http://www.nio.gov.uk/the-agreement> when negotiations bore fruit at the 11th hour, the Sinn Féin president, Gerry Adams, described the current deal and the rescue of power-sharing as "yet another very good Friday".

Jeffrey Donaldson told the Guardian the DUP's 36-strong assembly team was now unanimously in favour of the deal.

But the Ulster Unionist party (UUP) has yet to officially back the package which will allow the assembly to set up legislation to change the way parades are judged.

A UUP spokeswoman said members wanted to see the proposed agreement before giving their response to the two governments. "We have not had sight of this agreement and until we do we will not be signing up to it," she said.
The talks, which centred on Hillsborough Castle, outside Belfast, are the longest set of continuous negotiations held in the near 20-year peace process. Sinn Féin had accused the DUP of stalling on the transfer of policing powers for the last three years and it was feared that failure to find agreement could see the collapse of the power-sharing government led by the two parties.
The agreement finally came near midnight at Stormont's parliament building. Earlier in the evening Sinn Féin had said the basis of a deal was on the table and it was giving the DUP leadership the time to persuade its party to accept it.
Robinson emerged from a meeting of party colleagues to confirm that he had secured unanimous support for the proposals. Earlier in the week up to 14 DUP assembly members had opposed a proposed deal because it did not give unionists enough concessions.
Robinson said he would now look to gain the support of the community and the smaller assembly parties for the deal.
"We have a basis upon which we can go forward and recommend it [the deal] to our party, to the other parties in Northern Ireland and to the community.
"An essential element of the Democratic Unionist Party's manifesto is the requirement for community confidence; we believe this can be the basis for gaining that confidence."
However the leader of the hardline Traditional Unionist Voice (TUV), Jim Allister, questioned why the 14 DUP rebels had changed their minds.
"The deal hasn't changed, only the snowmen of the DUP, who melted once the heat came on," Allister said.
The DUP now faces a struggle to ward off the TUV threat in the forthcoming general election. Allister will portray the deal as a sell-out of unionist principles and a sop to republicanism.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 7:59 AM
To: 'reinesp@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

On another matter--I'd like to w you. Pls remind me.

----- Original Message -----
From: Reines, Philippe I <reinesp@state.gov>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>; H
Sent: Fri Feb 05 07:44:29 2010
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

And your statement is out

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: 'HDR22@clintonemail.com' <HDR22@clintonemail.com>; Reines, Philippe I
Sent: Fri Feb 05 07:41:36 2010
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Here is what Brown said:

Let me thank the American Government for their unstinting support -- especially Secretary of State Clinton, her efforts over these last few weeks. And Presidents Obama, Bush and Clinton. And we particularly welcome Secretary of State Clinton's initiative today that she will host a Northern Ireland Investment Conference this spring.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Feb 05 07:27:21 2010
Subject: Fw: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 05 07:24:17 2010
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

B6

Ambos at event would praise your role
Sent via Cingular Xpress Mail with Blackberry

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>

Date: Fri, 5 Feb 2010 07:06:39
To: 'sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

I will be doing a press event at 8:30. Do you know if Gordon mentioned me? Can you find out? Is Shaun still coming Monday? If so, I want to take you both out to dinner!

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted]
To: H
Cc: MillsCD@state.gov <MillsCD@state.gov>; SullivanJJ@state.gov <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Feb 05 06:58:04 2010
Subject: Bravo! Brava! Issue your statement! Sid

Northern Ireland agrees power-sharing deal

Gordon Brown hails historic deal which will see justice and policing powers be devolved to Stormont from 12 April

* Henry McDonald <http://www.guardian.co.uk/profile/henrymcdonald>
* guardian.co.uk <http://www.guardian.co.uk/> , Friday 5 February 2010 11.42 GMT
*
<http://www.guardian.co.uk/help/accessibility>

Gordon Brown, Peter Robinson and Martin McGuinness <http://static.guim.co.uk/sys-images/Guardian/Pix/pictures/2010/2/5/1265368562294/Gordon-Brown-Peter-Robins-001.jpg>
Gordon Brown, the DUP leader, Peter Robinson, and Sinn Fein's Martin McGuinness (l to r) talk to the press after the Northern Ireland power-sharing deal was announced. Photograph: Julien Behal/PA

Justice and policing powers will be devolved to Northern Ireland <http://www.guardian.co.uk/uk/northernireland> 's power-sharing government from 12 April in a historic deal agreed by the main parties that "opens a new chapter" after decades of violence, Gordon Brown said today.
Standing alongside his Irish counterpart, Brian Cowen, at a press conference at Hillsborough Castle outside Belfast, the prime minister said the "inspirational" agreement between Sinn Féin <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/sinn-fein> and the Democratic Unionist party (DUP) <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/dup> was a foundation for lasting peace.
The deal – finally agreed to by the DUP <http://www.guardian.co.uk/politics/2010/feb/05/northern-ireland-dup-ulster-deal> last night and described as a final piece in the jigsaw after a long search for peace – comes after two weeks of round-the-clock negotiations and brings an end to fears that the power-sharing government might collapse.
It will see policing and justice powers devolved from Westminster to the assembly within weeks and includes new plans on overseeing parades.
Brown, who travelled to Belfast this morning, said the agreement had been possible because of "a new spirit of mutual co-operation and respect".
The deal meets a key Sinn Féin demand and prevents the republican party from walking out of the power-sharing executive. In return, the DUP has secured reforms to the way loyalist marches are handled in Northern Ireland, including the abolition of the Parades Commission, a body most unionists regard as biased in favour of nationalists.
A cross-community vote will now be held in the Stormont assembly on 9 March before the policing and justice powers are devolved from London on 12 April.
Brown told reporters: "The achievements have been as great as they are inspirational. This moment and this agreement belongs to the people of Northern Ireland, all of the people, and now more than ever before so does their future ... This is the last chapter of a long and troubled story and the beginning of a new chapter after decades of violence, years of talks, weeks of stalemate."

Cowen praised both unionists and nationalists for making "fair and balanced compromises" to bridge the divisions and said the quality of the negotiations meant that the "devolved institutions can and will work".

The Northern Ireland secretary, Shaun Woodward, said the deal would further isolate republican dissidents who have launched three separate gun and bomb attacks against police stations in the province over the last 10 days. The deal would "absolutely" make Northern Ireland a safer place, he said.

The DUP leader, Peter Robinson, said the agreement "will be more enduring because of the time spent" in forming it.

Referring back to the Belfast Agreement of 1998 <http://www.nio.gov.uk/the-agreement> when negotiations bore fruit at the 11th hour, the Sinn Féin president, Gerry Adams, described the current deal and the rescue of power-sharing as "yet another very good Friday".

Jeffrey Donaldson told the Guardian the DUP's 36-strong assembly team was now unanimously in favour of the deal.

But the Ulster Unionist party (UUP) has yet to officially back the package which will allow the assembly to set up legislation to change the way parades are judged.

A UUP spokeswoman said members wanted to see the proposed agreement before giving their response to the two governments. "We have not had sight of this agreement and until we do we will not be signing up to it," she said.

The talks, which centred on Hillsborough Castle, outside Belfast, are the longest set of continuous negotiations held in the near 20-year peace process. Sinn Féin had accused the DUP of stalling on the transfer of policing powers for the last three years and it was feared that failure to find agreement could see the collapse of the power-sharing government led by the two parties.

The agreement finally came near midnight at Stormont's parliament building. Earlier in the evening Sinn Féin had said the basis of a deal was on the table and it was giving the DUP leadership the time to persuade its party to accept it.

Robinson emerged from a meeting of party colleagues to confirm that he had secured unanimous support for the proposals. Earlier in the week up to 14 DUP assembly members had opposed a proposed deal because it did not give unionists enough concessions.

Robinson said he would now look to gain the support of the community and the smaller assembly parties for the deal.

"We have a basis upon which we can go forward and recommend it [the deal] to our party, to the other parties in Northern Ireland and to the community.

"An essential element of the Democratic Unionist Party's manifesto is the requirement for community confidence; we believe this can be the basis for gaining that confidence."

However the leader of the hardline Traditional Unionist Voice (TUV), Jim Allister, questioned why the 14 DUP rebels had changed their minds.

"The deal hasn't changed, only the snowmen of the DUP, who melted once the heat came on," Allister said.

The DUP now faces a struggle to ward off the TUV threat in the forthcoming general election. Allister will portray the deal as a sell-out of unionist principles and a sop to republicanism.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 20, 2010 8:11 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: tomorrow gets better

---

From: Baer, Daniel B
Sent: Wednesday, October 20, 2010 7:20 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: tomorrow gets better

Fyi—good feedback.
Mike guest wrote sep email to say it was great

---

From: Mark Bromley [mailto B6
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 9:39 PM
To: Baer, Daniel B; 'Julie Dorf'
Cc: 'Michael Guest'
Subject: RE: tomorrow gets better

Thanks, Dan. This is great. Everyone was talking about it tonight at the Human Rights First reception at HRC. (And your A/S was great, as always.) These things really do make a difference, and maybe we (meaning CGE, not you) could challenge other foreign ministries to do it?! We have a meeting in a week with other national LGBT groups that work with/lobby their foreign ministries, and maybe this could be an agenda item?

---

From: Baer, Daniel B [mailto:BaerDB@state.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 8:34 PM
To: Julie Dorf
Cc: Mark Bromley; Michael Guest
Subject: RE: tomorrow gets better

Agree—
There's movement afoot to have folks in the dept—glifaa members—do a series of vids too...
Willkeep you posted

---

From: On Behalf Of Julie Dorf B6
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 2010 6:06 PM
To: Baer, Daniel B
Cc: Mark Bromley; Michael Guest
Subject: Re: tomorrow gets better

Thanks for sharing. We'll put on our blog now. Her saying you matter "to your country" is particularly powerful.

On Tue, Oct 19, 2010 at 2:45 PM, Baer, Daniel B <BaerDB@state.gov> wrote:

http://www.youtube.com/user/statevideo#p/a/u/0/zXBpW8GCDtY

--
Julie Dorf, Senior Advisor
Council for Global Equality
Advancing an American Foreign Policy Inclusive of Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity
[redacted] B6
www.globalequality.org
and our blog: www.globalequality.wordpress.com

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 8:28 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Attached Letter of Appreciation
Attachments: Secretary Clinton 1-29-10.pdf; Secretary Clinton 1-29-10.pdf

Pls print

----- Original Message -----
From: williamsbarrett
To: H; Cheryl D Mills <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Feb 05 08:22:59 2010
Subject: Fw: Attached Letter of Appreciation

B6

Sent from my Verizon Wireless BlackBerry

---

From: George Rupp
Date: Mon, 1 Feb 2010 17:30:02 -0500
To: williamsbarrett
Subject: Attached Letter of Appreciation

Dear Ms. Williams,

I would appreciate your forwarding the attached letter to Secretary Clinton.

The original letter is being sent to Secretary Clinton's attention via FedEx today.

Sincerely,

George Rupp

President

International Rescue Committee

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 8:32 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Contact Message from HR Ashton

Pls give her Huma's state email.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 01 05:20:48 2010
Subject: Fw: Contact Message from HR Ashton

[redacted] - see b/l B5

Cdm

---

From: Steven.EVERTS[redacted] B6
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Beverley.Tempest[redacted] B6
Sent: Mon Feb 01 05:04:37 2010
Subject: Contact Message from HR Ashton

Dear Ms Mills,

My name is Steven Everts and I am responsible in the Private Office of HR/VP Ashton for EU-US relations (I was the one handlig the very successful meeting in Washington that the Secretary had with the HR/VP on 21 Jan).

I now have a more personal issue: apparently the Secretary and the HR/VP spoke briefly in London [redacted] B6
The HR asked me whether there is a more personal, direct email she could use for transmitting this type of messages?

From our side, the email to use would be [redacted] B6

I would be very grateful if you could send us an email which is similarly private.

Many thanks for your help.

Kind regards

Steven Everts

Private Office of HR/VP Catherine Ashton

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 9:59 AM
To: 'vermarr@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Confirmations Update

What can we do?

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
To: H; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Feb 05 09:45:48 2010
Subject: FW: Confirmations Update

FYI --

Reid: Shelby Has Hold On All Nominees

Friday, Feb. 5, 2010

Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., has placed a blanket hold on all executive nominations on the Senate calendar in an effort to win concessions from the Obama administration and Pentagon on a variety of fronts affecting his home state, according to aides to Senate Majority Leader Reid.

Reid spokeswoman Regan Lachapelle said Shelby is blocking more than 70 pending nominations. Reid can force a vote on any nomination by filing cloture.

Because of the time required to vote on multiple nominations, the Senate processes most nominations by unanimous consent. Any one senator can block any of those nominations by objecting to a unanimous consent request to take it up. The nominations will remain stalled unless Reid files cloture.

While holds are frequent, Senate aides said a blanket hold represents a far more aggressive use of the power than is normal.

"He should not be holding up 70-plus nominees for a parochial issue," a Democratic aide said. "They're qualified and they should be moving forward."

Disclosure of the blanket hold came after two days in which top Democrats voiced mounting frustration with Republican holds on executive nominees.

"We've got a huge backlog of folks who are unanimously viewed as well qualified -- nobody has a specific objection to them -- but end up having a hold on them because of some completely unrelated piece of business," President Obama said Wednesday in a televised meeting with Senate Democrats.

On the Senate floor Thursday, Reid, Senate Majority Whip Durbin, Senate Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy and Senate Armed Services Chairman Carl Levin ripped Republicans for holds on national security nominees and judges.

Reid, who kept the Senate in pro forma session over recent holidays to prevent former President George W. Bush from making recess appointments, said he has grown so frustrated he might advocate such appointments, which the president can make when the Senate is out of session.

"What alternatives do we have?" Reid said on the floor Thursday. "What alternative do we have?"

Earlier in the day, a spokesman for Shelby said the senator has placed holds on "several pending nominees due to unaddressed national security concerns," including frustrations with the Air Force's handling of the competition for an aerial refueling tanker. The spokesman did not respond to later requests for comment about the blanket hold.

Northrop Grumman Corp. and EADS, the European consortium behind Airbus, and Boeing Co. are vying for the high-stakes contract, potentially worth $40 billion. The Northrop/EADS team would build the planes in Mobile, Ala., but has threatened to pull out of the competition unless the Air Force makes changes to a draft request for proposals.

"Nearly 10 years after the U.S. Air Force announced plans to replace the aging tanker fleet, we still do not have a transparent and fair acquisition process to move forward," the spokesman said. "The Department of Defense must recognize that the draft request for proposal needs to be significantly and substantively changed."

Defense Secretary Gates Wednesday told House lawmakers the Pentagon plans to issue the final request for proposals soon, and will proceed with the program whether or not there is a competition.

"Obviously we would like to have a competition for it, and we hope that both companies will agree to participate, but we will move forward," Gates said. "We have to have new tankers."

In addition to the tanker issue, Shelby's spokesman said he is frustrated that the Obama administration won't build an Alabama-based FBI center to analyze improvised explosive devices.

Shelby secured a $45 million earmark in the FY08 omnibus appropriations bill for a Terrorist Explosive Device Analytical Center to be set up at the Army's Redstone Arsenal.

"Sen. Shelby will continue to work with the FBI to give them the capability to coordinate intelligence as well as forensic and technical exploitation related to IEDs, but this administration's coddling of terrorists makes this an uphill effort," the spokesman said. "He has made the administration aware of these concerns and is willing to discuss them at any time."

Also Thursday, Vice President Biden said he was so frustrated by Republican foot-dragging that he was considering whether Senate rules should be changed.

"There's a little disappointment in that it seems like the only way to do business up here anymore is with a supermajority on almost everything," Biden said moments after swearing in Sen. Scott Brown, R-Mass., who gives Republicans 41 votes, enough to filibuster on any issue.

"What I have been doing is spending a lot of time having my staff go back and scrub this, you know, the use of the filibuster and how it's worked," Biden said. "This is not a constitutional requirement."

Biden defended the 60-vote requirement, calling it "a useful tool. It's legitimate, but from my perspective having served here, having been elected seven times, I've never seen a time when it's become sort of standard operating procedure. ... Requiring a supermajority is just not a good way to do business."

by Dan Friedman and Megan Scully

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 1:38 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Geithner

Ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 05 13:36:02 2010
Subject: Geithner

They may seek Geithner's co-signature on the letter, if they can get him while he's in Canada snow-boarding. You can't make this stuff up.

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 20, 2010 8:47 AM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Subject: New

B5
B6

I have given this a great deal of thought.

AM

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 3:08 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Good meeting

Are you getting ready to leave? [redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 05 15:02:32 2010
Subject: Good meeting

I just spent an extra hour explaining the architecture of the IHRC/HDA.

They had misconstrued it to be something that wjc now could not do b/c of his new un role.

We can discuss.

Will fill wjc in on the plane.

I hear it's snowing - won't likely make it back to dc until sun or mon

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 5, 2010 3:12 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Good meeting

I know! So are you there or leaving now? I'd love to talk w you and Bill.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 05 15:09:24 2010
Subject: Re: Good meeting

You are sooo lucky!!!

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Feb 05 15:08:25 2010
Subject: Re: Good meeting

Are you getting ready to leave? B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 05 15:02:32 2010
Subject: Good meeting

I just spent an extra hour explaining the architecture of the IHRC/HDA.

They had misconstrued it to be something that wjc now could not do b/c of his new un role.

We can discuss.

Will fill wjc in on the plane.

I hear it's snowing - won't likely make it back to dc until sun or mon

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 20, 2010 1:55 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Thank You

From: Tollefson, Jon T
Sent: Wednesday, October 20, 2010 1:39 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Cheng, Dennis W; Patel, Mira D
Subject: Thank You

Ma'am,

Thank you so much for your support for this project and for how quickly you made it move. Please convey our thanks to the Secretary for her leadership on this issue. It has truly touched our members. As you may have seen, it received wide attention within LGBT media, youth media (MTV and VHI), and the wider media. The video has over 110,000 views on youtube already, and she is likely to touch many more people as it spreads.

Many thanks,

Jon

Jon Tollefson
President
Gays and Lesbians in Foreign Affairs Agencies (GLIFAA)
U.S. Department of State
(202) 670-5428

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 20, 2010 2:03 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: LGBT rights

Fyi

---

From: Sicade, Lynn M (DRL)
Sent: Wednesday, October 20, 2010 1:18 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: LGBT rights

Jake

You may remember that I called on you early in the Administration on the UN statement on sexual orientation. You were tremendous as was the Secretary. This request is not in keeping with the regular hierarchy, but I had to send it. The video the Secretary did is extraordinarily powerful. Can you let her know that individual employees in the building appreciate what she has been doing on LGBT rights? I know GLIFFA will do so, but it's kind of their job to advocate. But if you could just tell her in a minute how deeply her work is touching us in the trenches, well, it's something I think she deserves to hear.

http://www.youtube.com/user/statevideo#p/a/u/0/zXBpW8GCDtY

Lynn M. Sicade
Senior Policy Advisor
U.S. Department of State
DRL/MLGA
202-647-2362

"Every difference of opinion is not a difference of principle." --Thomas Jefferson: 1st Inaugural, 1801.
"With the same honest views, the most honest men often form different conclusions." --Thomas Jefferson to Robert Livingston, 1801.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 8:09 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Mubarak is available for a call between 10:30 and 12 this morning. Will that work for you?

Ok at 10:30.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 07:25:26 2010
Subject: Mubarak is available for a call between 10:30 and 12 this morning. Will that work for you?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 8:09 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Mubarak is available for a call between 10:30 and 12 this morning. Will that work for you?

Is there a call sheet?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 07:25:26 2010
Subject: Mubarak is available for a call between 10:30 and 12 this morning. Will that work for you?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 9:03 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Ok I'm done w Strobe. Also let's go on our trip. I think it's worth it. And we can always add Israel as we did before!

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: Oscar Flores
Cc: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:42:38 2010
Subject: Fw: Mubarak Call Sheet

Oscar, can u print this asap for hrc. Its for her 9:30am call. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Johnson, Andrew Kim
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: S_SpecialAssistants; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:25:57 2010
Subject: Mubarak Call Sheet

<<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> <<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> Hi Huma,

Per our conversation earlier this morning, here's the call sheet for President Mubarak. We are standing by to begin the secure fax as well.

Best regards,

Andrew Kim Johnson
Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center S/ES-O
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 9:18 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

I don't have call sheets for Lobo or Equadoran. Can you send on my email.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:12:10 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Ok great! We'll do ecuador now cause otherwise we lose him.
So pinato, mubarak, lobo.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:03:18 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Ok I'm done w Strobe. Also let's go on our trip. I think it's worth it. And we can always add Israel as we did before!

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: Oscar Flores
Cc: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:42:38 2010
Subject: Fw: Mubarak Call Sheet

Oscar, can u print this asap for hrc. Its for her 9:30am call. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Johnson, Andrew Kim
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: S_SpecialAssistants; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:25:57 2010
Subject: Mubarak Call Sheet

<<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> <<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> Hi Huma,

Per our conversation earlier this morning, here's the call sheet for President Mubarak. We are standing by to begin the secure fax as well.

Best regards,

Andrew Kim Johnson

Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center S/ES-O
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 9:22 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Secure fax coming now followed by pdb

Getting it.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: Oscar Flores
Cc: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:13:24 2010
Subject: Secure fax coming now followed by pdb

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 9:22 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

If we can stop in Bahrain, I'd like to but what would schedule be?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:14:04 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

So qatar and saudi?
Yes or no to bahrain?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:03:18 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Ok I'm done w Strobe. Also let's go on our trip. I think it's worth it. And we can always add Israel as we did before!

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: Oscar Flores
Cc: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:42:38 2010
Subject: Fw: Mubarak Call Sheet

Oscar, can u print this asap for hrc. Its for her 9:30am call. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Johnson, Andrew Kim
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: S_SpecialAssistants; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:25:57 2010
Subject: Mubarak Call Sheet

<<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> <<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> Hi Huma,

Per our conversation earlier this morning, here's the call sheet for President Mubarak. We are standing by to begin the secure fax as well.

Best regards,

Andrew Kim Johnson

Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center S/ES-O
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 9:23 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Pls send me call sheet for Equadoran--i don't have a clue!

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:14:04 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

So qatar and saudi?
Yes or no to bahrain?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:03:18 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Ok I'm done w Strobe. Also let's go on our trip. I think it's worth it. And we can always add Israel as we did before!

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: Oscar Flores
Cc: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:42:38 2010
Subject: Fw: Mubarak Call Sheet

Oscar, can u print this asap for hrc. Its for her 9:30am call. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Johnson, Andrew Kim
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: S_SpecialAssistants; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:25:57 2010
Subject: Mubarak Call Sheet

<<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> <<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> Hi Huma,

Per our conversation earlier this morning, here's the call sheet for President Mubarak. We are standing by to begin the secure fax as well.

Best regards,

Andrew Kim Johnson

Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center S/ES-O
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 9:37 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

I talked w Lobo already but Equdoran not available.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:27:39 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

You are congratulating him on becoming foreign minister, and purpose is to establish a personal relationship with him.
Trying to get u call sheet, its classified....
Lobo call not happening today.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:23:13 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Pls send me call sheet for Equadoran--i don't have a clue!

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:14:04 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

So qatar and saudi?
Yes or no to bahrain?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:03:18 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Ok I'm done w Strobe. Also let's go on our trip. I think it's worth it. And we can always add Israel as we did before!

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: Oscar Flores
Cc: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:42:38 2010
Subject: Fw: Mubarak Call Sheet

Oscar, can u print this asap for hrc. Its for her 9:30am call. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Johnson, Andrew Kim
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: S_SpecialAssistants; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:25:57 2010
Subject: Mubarak Call Sheet

<<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> <<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> Hi Huma,

Per our conversation earlier this morning, here's the call sheet for President Mubarak. We are standing by to begin the secure fax as well.

Best regards,

Andrew Kim Johnson
Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center S/ES-O
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 9:38 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Yes I did. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:28:18 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Sorry I mean pinato
He's not available
Heard u got lobo.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:27:39 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

You are congratulating him on becoming foreign minister, and purpose is to establish a personal relationship with him.
Trying to get u call sheet, its classified....
Lobo call not happening today.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:23:13 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Pls send me call sheet for Equadoran--i don't have a clue!

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:14:04 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

So qatar and saudi?
Yes or no to bahrain?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:03:18 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Ok I'm done w Strobe. Also let's go on our trip. I think it's worth it. And we can always add Israel as we did before!

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: Oscar Flores
Cc: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:42:38 2010
Subject: Fw: Mubarak Call Sheet

Oscar, can u print this asap for hrc. Its for her 9:30am call. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Johnson, Andrew Kim
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: S_SpecialAssistants; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:25:57 2010
Subject: Mubarak Call Sheet

<<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> <<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> Hi Huma,

Per our conversation earlier this morning, here's the call sheet for President Mubarak. We are standing by to begin the secure fax as well.

Best regards,

Andrew Kim Johnson
Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center S/ES-O
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 10:00 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re:

Ok. Can we do now?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:54:28 2010
Subject:

Aboul gheit just called to follow up on mubarak call. Do you want to take it?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 10:34 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

They were earlier but somewhere along the way disappeared!

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:28:28 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Call sheets should have been in your call sheet folder. Not sure what happened.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:17:46 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

I don't have call sheets for Lobo or Equadoran. Can you send on my email.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:12:10 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Ok great! We'll do ecuador now cause otherwise we lose him.
So pinato, mubarak, lobo.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Feb 06 09:03:18 2010
Subject: Re: Mubarak Call Sheet

Ok I'm done w Strobe. Also let's go on our trip. I think it's worth it. And we can always add Israel as we did before!

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: Oscar Flores
Cc: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:42:38 2010
Subject: Fw: Mubarak Call Sheet

Oscar, can u print this asap for hrc. Its for her 9:30am call. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Johnson, Andrew Kim
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: S_SpecialAssistants; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sat Feb 06 08:25:57 2010
Subject: Mubarak Call Sheet

<<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> <<020510 S-Mubarak Talking Points.doc>> Hi Huma,

Per our conversation earlier this morning, here's the call sheet for President Mubarak. We are standing by to begin the secure fax as well.

Best regards,

Andrew Kim Johnson
Watch Officer
State Department Operations Center S/ES-O
202-647-1512

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 5:08 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: H: NEW developments NI. Sid
Attachments: hrc memo NEW NI developments 020610.docx; hrc memo NEW NI developments 020610.docx

Fyi. Can you determine when Shaun wants to talk?

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 15:59:24 2010
Subject: H: NEW developments NI. Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

February 6, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: New developments on NI

Shaun regrets he cannot come here tomorrow. Here's the problem and the plan: Cameron is still quietly giving encouragement to the Ulster Unionists, which, led by Reg Empey, are trying to scuttle the agreement somehow. So the plan is for Shaunn to announce he will deliver a speech on Monday in the House of Commons presenting the agreement—except that at the last second Gordon will step in on the floor for Shaun, requiring Cameron to respond, theoretically forcing him to support the agreement. In his speech, Gordon will explicitly cite your role and support of the US—among other things further cornering Cameron (and Empey). Shaun would like to speak with you soon depending on how things are working out there, perhaps tomorrow (Sunday) or perhaps Monday (perhaps after Commons). Dinner will be on a rain-check.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773332 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

February 6, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: New developments on NI

Shaun regrets he cannot come here tomorrow. Here's the problem and the plan: Cameron is still quietly giving encouragement to the Ulster Unionists, which, led by Reg Empey, are trying to scuttle the agreement somehow. So the plan is for Shaunn to announce he will deliver a speech on Monday in the House of Commons presenting the agreement—except that at the last second Gordon will step in on the floor for Shaun, requiring Cameron to respond, theoretically forcing him to support the agreement. In his speech, Gordon will explicitly cite your role and support of the US—among other things further cornering Cameron (and Empey). Shaun would like to speak with you soon depending on how things are working out there, perhaps tomorrow (Sunday) or perhaps Monday (perhaps after Commons). Dinner will be on a rain-check.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773332 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 5:09 PM
To: 'cheryl.mills 'millscd@state.gov' B6
Subject: Did you get home in the blizzard?

Hope all is well. Let me know if and when you can talk yonight or tomorrow.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 6:17 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: US-EU Statement on Iran's Human Rights Situation

Of course I will do. Is the text set?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Feb 06 18:14:15 2010
Subject: Fw: US-EU Statement on Iran's Human Rights Situation

FYI. The latest thinking is that this would be a Clinton-Ashton statement. We'll make sure you have a chance to see/approve final, and we can work to incorporate any changes you have now.

---

From: Mull, Stephen D
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Cc: Burns, William J; Rana, Gautam A; Gordon, Philip H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 17:46:41 2010
Subject: US-EU Statement on Iran's Human Rights Situation

Hi Jake/Huma:

Hope you're not too snowed in wherever you are.

B5

Here is the draft statement that we're trying to put out with the EU:

B5

Please let me know if you have any concerns, or need further information.

Thanks!

Steve

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 6:18 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Did you get home in the blizzard?

Can we do in morning? What time works for you?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H; cheryl.mills [redacted] B6
Sent: Sat Feb 06 18:14:08 2010
Subject: Re: Did you get home in the blizzard?

It took 19 hours but I got home at noon today.

I can talk at 830pm tonight if that works for you? I cam also do tomorrow am.
Cdm

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'cheryl.mills [redacted] Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sat Feb 06 17:08:57 2010
Subject: Did you get home in the blizzard?

Hope all is well. Let me know if and when you can talk yonight or tomorrow.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 8:41 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Did you get home in the blizzard?

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 20:13:35 2010
Subject: Re: Did you get home in the blizzard?

How about 830am?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sat Feb 06 18:17:42 2010
Subject: Re: Did you get home in the blizzard?

Can we do in morning? What time works for you?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H; cheryl.mills <cheryl.mills B6
Sent: Sat Feb 06 18:14:08 2010
Subject: Re: Did you get home in the blizzard?

It took 19 hours but I got home at noon today.

I can talk at 830pm tonight if that works for you? I cam also do tomorrow am.
Cdm

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'cheryl.mills <cheryl.mills( Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sat Feb 06 17:08:57 2010
Subject: Did you get home in the blizzard?

Hope all is well. Let me know if and when you can talk yonight or tomorrow.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 6, 2010 10:13 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: H: NEW developments NI: Sid

B6

I'm happy to talk w Shaun anytime.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 06 15:59:24 2010
Subject: H: NEW developments NI. Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

February 6, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: New developments on NI

Shaun regrets he cannot come here tomorrow. Here's the problem and the plan: Cameron is still quietly giving encouragement to the Ulster Unionists, which, led by Reg Empey, are trying to scuttle the agreement somehow. So the plan is for Shaunn to announce he will deliver a speech on Monday in the House of Commons presenting the agreement—except that at the last second Gordon will step in on the floor for Shaun, requiring Cameron to respond, theoretically forcing him to support the agreement. In his speech, Gordon will explicitly cite your role and support of the US—among other things further cornering Cameron (and Empey). Shaun would like to speak with you soon depending on how things are working out there, perhaps tomorrow (Sunday) or perhaps Monday (perhaps after Commons). Dinner will be on a rain-check.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773349 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Sent: Monday, December 20, 2010 2:40 PM
Subject: Latest: Max Blumenthal, The Great Fear: Inside the Bizarre Cabal

Tomgram: Max Blumenthal, The Great Fear

By Max Blumenthal
Posted on December 19, 2010, Printed on December 20, 2010
http://www.tomdispatch.com/blog/175334/

Moments of imperial and economic decline -- according to a recent poll, 65% of Americans now believe this country to be "in a state of decline" -- can also be periods of cultishness, even of madness incarnate. Such a mood now seems to be spreading through the United States. It's not so surprising, really. Since the attacks of September 11, 2001, fear has been injected into this "homeland" like a drug and a penumbra of official secrecy has settled over the land in a way that makes the secrecy of the Cold War years (when this country faced a superpower, not a ragtag set of jihadis, guerrillas, and terrorists) seem like an era of sunshine. In an atmosphere of swirling fears and hysteria amid declining living conditions, "explanations" that at other times might have remained confined to tiny crews of conspiracy-mongers can suddenly gain a patina of plausibility and so traction. No wonder then that, as hard times hit, as the financial system seemed on the verge of collapse, as unemployment soared and a massive wave of home foreclosures swept into view, increasing numbers of Americans became prey to any wacky explanation for our troubles, none more so than the idea that Islam was somehow responsible, that mosques and Islamic centers meant for a sliver of a minority here were capable of imposing anything, no less a way of life on this country, or that Sharia law (of all things) might somehow worm its way into state legal systems, or that YouTube was a hotbed of terrorism worthy of suppression, or... well, you name it. Max Blumenthal, author of the bestselling book Republican Gomorrah: Inside the Movement That Shattered the Party, has done the necessary legwork to take us deep into one of those crews of conspiracy-mongers who, at another time, just about no one would have paid much attention to, but in twenty-first-century America have gained a remarkable audience. They are a chilling barometer of the changing weather in America. Tom

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773349 Date: 08/31/2015

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773349 Date: 08/31/2015

The Great Islamophobic Crusade

Inside the Bizarre Cabal of Secretive Donors, Demagogic Bloggers, Pseudo-Scholars, European Neo-Fascists, Violent Israeli Settlers, and Republican Presidential Hopefuls Behind the Crusade

By Max Blumenthal

Nine years after 9/11, hysteria about Muslims in American life has gripped the country. With it has gone an outburst of arson attacks on mosques, campaigns to stop their construction, and the branding of the Muslim-American community, overwhelmingly moderate, as a hotbed of potential terrorist recruits. The frenzy has raged from rural

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773349 Date: 08/31/2015

Tennessee to New York City, while in Oklahoma, voters even overwhelmingly approved a ballot measure banning the implementation of Sharia law in American courts (not that such a prospect existed). This campaign of Islamophobia wounded President Obama politically, as one out of five Americans have bought into a sustained chorus of false rumors about his secret Muslim faith. And it may have tainted views of Muslims in general; an August 2010 Pew Research Center poll revealed that, among Americans, the favorability rating of Muslims had dropped by 11 points since 2005.

Erupting so many years after the September 11th trauma, this spasm of anti-Muslim bigotry might seem oddly timed and unexpectedly spontaneous. But think again: it's the fruit of an organized, long-term campaign by a tight confederation of right-wing activists and operatives who first focused on Islamophobia soon after the September 11th attacks, but only attained critical mass during the Obama era. It was then that embittered conservative forces, voted out of power in 2008, sought with remarkable success to leverage cultural resentment into political and partisan gain.

This network is obsessively fixated on the supposed spread of Muslim influence in America. Its apparatus spans continents, extending from Tea Party activists here to the European far right. It brings together in common cause right-wing ultra-Zionists, Christian evangelicals, and racist British soccer hooligans. It reflects an aggressively pro-Israel sensibility, with its key figures venerating the Jewish state as a Middle Eastern Fort Apache on the front lines of the Global War on Terror and urging the U.S. and various European powers to emulate its heavy-handed methods.

Little of recent American Islamophobia (with a strong emphasis on the "phobia") is sheer happenstance. Years before Tea Party shock troops massed for angry protests outside the proposed site of an Islamic community center in lower Manhattan, representatives of the Israel lobby and the Jewish-American establishment launched a campaign against pro-Palestinian campus activism that would prove a seedbed for everything to come. That campaign quickly -- and perhaps predictably -- morphed into a series of crusades against mosques and Islamic schools which, in turn, attracted an assortment of shady but exceptionally energetic militants into the network's ranks.

Besides providing the initial energy for the Islamophobic crusade, conservative elements from within the pro-Israel lobby bankrolled the network's apparatus, enabling it to influence the national debate. One philanthropist in particular has provided the beneficence to propel the campaign ahead. He is a little-known Los Angeles-area software security entrepreneur named Aubrey Chernick, who operates out of a security consulting firm blandly named the National Center for Crisis and Continuity Coordination. A former trustee of the Washington Institute for Near East Policy, which has served as a think tank for the American Israeli Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC), a frontline lobbying group for Israel, Chernick is said to be worth $750 million.

Chernick's fortune is puny compared to that of the billionaire Koch Brothers, extraction industry titans who fund Tea Party-related groups like Americans for Prosperity, and it is dwarfed by the financial empire of Haim Saban, the Israeli-American media baron who is one of the largest private donors to the Democratic party and recently matched $9 million raised for the Friends of the Israeli Defense Forces in a single night. However, by injecting his money into a small but influential constellation of groups and individuals with a narrow agenda, Chernick has had a considerable impact.

Through the Fairbrook Foundation, a private entity he and his wife Joyce control, Chernick has provided funding to groups ranging from the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) and CAMERA, a right-wing, pro-Israel, media-watchdog outfit, to violent Israeli settlers living on Palestinian lands and figures like the pseudo-academic author Robert Spencer, who is largely responsible for popularizing conspiracy theories about the coming conquest of the West by Muslim fanatics seeking to establish a worldwide caliphate. Together, these groups spread hysteria about Muslims into Middle American communities where immigrants from the Middle East have recently settled, and they watched with glee as likely Republican presidential frontrunners from Mike Huckabee to Sarah Palin promoted their cause and parroted their tropes. Perhaps the only thing more surprising than the increasingly widespread appeal of Islamophobia is that, just a few years ago, the phenomenon was confined to a few college campuses and an inner city neighborhood, and that it seemed like a fleeting fad that would soon pass from the American political landscape.

Birth of a Network

The Islamophobic crusade was launched in earnest at the peak of George W. Bush's prestige when the neoconservatives and their allies were riding high. In 2003, three years after the collapse of President Bill Clinton's attempt to resolve the Israeli-Palestinian issue and in the immediate wake of the invasion of Iraq, a network of Jewish groups, ranging from ADL and the American Jewish Committee to AIPAC, gathered to address what they saw as a sudden rise in pro-Palestinian activism on college campuses nationwide. That meeting gave birth to the David Project, a campus advocacy group led by Charles Peters, who had co-founded CAMERA, one of the many outfits bankrolled by Chernick. With the help of public relations professionals, Peters conceived a plan to "take back the campus by influencing public opinion through lectures, the Internet, and coalitions," as a memo produced at the time by the consulting firm McKinsey and Company stated.

In 2004, after conferring with Martin Kramer, a fellow at the Washington Institute for Near East Policy, the pro-Israel think tank where Chernoff had served as a trustee, Peters produced a documentary film that he called Columbia Unbecoming. It was filled with claims from Jewish students at Columbia University claiming they had endured intimidation and insults from Arab professors. The film portrayed that New York City school's Department of Middle East and Asian Languages and Cultures as a hothouse of anti-Semitism.

In their complaints, the students focused on one figure in particular: Joseph Massad, a Palestinian professor of Middle East studies. He was known for his passionate advocacy of the formation of a binational state between Israel and Palestine, as well as for his strident criticism of what he termed "the racist character of Israel." The film identified him as "one of the most dangerous intellectuals on campus," while he was featured as a crucial villain in The Professors: The 101 Most Dangerous Academics in America, a book by the (Chernick-funded) neoconservative activist David Horowitz. As Massad was seeking tenure at the time, he was especially vulnerable to this sort of wholesale assault. When the controversy over Massad's views intensified, Congressman Anthony Weiner, a liberal New York Democrat who once described himself as a representative of "the ZOA [Zionist Organization of America] wing of the Democratic Party," demanded that Columbia President Lee Bollinger, a renowned First Amendment scholar, fire the professor. Bollinger responded by issuing uncharacteristically defensive statements about the "limited" nature of academic freedom.
In the end, however, none of the charges stuck. Indeed, the testimonies in the David Project film were eventually either discredited or never corroborated. In 2009, Massad earned tenure after winning Columbia's prestigious Lionel Trilling Award for excellence in scholarship.

Having demonstrated its ability to intimidate faculty members and even powerful university administrators, however, Kramer claimed a moral victory in the name of his project, boasting to the press that "this is a turning point." While the David Project subsequently fostered chapters on campuses nationwide, its director set out on a different path -- initially, into the streets of Boston in 2004 to oppose the construction of the Islamic Society of Boston Cultural Center.

For nearly 15 years, the Islamic Society of Boston had sought to build the center in the heart of Roxbury, the city's largest black neighborhood, to serve its sizable Muslim population. With endorsements from Mayor Thomas Menino and leading Massachusetts lawmakers, the mosque's construction seemed like a fait accompli -- until, that is, the Rupert Murdoch-owned Boston Herald and his local Fox News affiliate snapped into action. Boston Globe columnist Jeff Jacoby also chimed in with a series of reports claiming the center's plans were evidence of a Saudi Arabian plot to bolster the influence of radical Islam in the United States, and possibly even to train underground terror cells.

It was at this point that the David Project entered the fray, convening elements of the local pro-Israel community in the Boston area to seek strategies to torpedo the project.
According to emails obtained by the Islamic Society's lawyers in a lawsuit against the David Project, the organizers settled on a campaign of years of nuisance lawsuits, along with accusations that the center had received foreign funding from "the Wahhabi movement in Saudi Arabia or... the Moslem Brotherhood."
In response, a grassroots coalition of liberal Jews initiated inter-faith efforts aimed at ending a controversy that had essentially been manufactured out of thin air and was corroding relations between the Jewish and Muslim communities in the city. Peters would not, however, relent. "We are more concerned now than we have ever been about a Saudi influence of local mosques," he announced at a suburban Boston synagogue in 2007.
After paying out millions of dollars in legal bills and enduring countless smears, the Islamic Society of Boston completed the construction of its community center in 2008.
Meanwhile, not surprisingly, nothing came of the David Project's dark warnings. As Boston-area National Public Radio reporter Philip Martin reflected in September 2010, "The horror stories that preceded [the center's] development seem shrill and histrionic in retrospect."

The Network Expands

This second failed campaign was, in the end, more about movement building than success, no less national security. The local crusade established an effective blueprint for generating hysteria against the establishment of Islamic centers and mosques across the country, while galvanizing a cast of characters who would form an anti-Muslim network which would gain attention and success in the years to come.

In 2007, these figures coalesced into a proto-movement that launched a new crusade, this time targeting the Khalil Gibran International Academy, a secular Arabic-English elementary school in Brooklyn, New York. Calling their ad hoc pressure group, Stop the Madrassah -- madrassah being simply the Arab word for "school" -- the coalition's activists included an array of previously unknown zealots who made no attempt to disguise their extreme views when it came to Islam as a religion, as well as Muslims in America. Their stated goal was to challenge the school's establishment on the basis of its violation of the church-state separation in the U.S. Constitution. The true aim of the coalition, however, was transparent: to pressure the city's leadership to adopt an antagonistic posture towards the local Muslim community.

The activists zeroed in on the school's principal, Debbie Almontaser, a veteran educator of Yemeni descent, and baselessly branded her "a jihadist" as well as a 9/11 denier. They also accused her of -- as Pamela Geller, a far-right blogger just then gaining prominence put it, "whitewash[ing] the genocide against the Jews." Daniel Pipes, a neoconservative academic previously active in the campaigns against Joseph Massad and the Boston Islamic center (and whose pro-Likud think tank, Middle East Forum, has received $150,000 from Chernick) claimed the school should not go ahead because "Arabic-language instruction is inevitably laden with Pan-Arabist and Islamist baggage." As the campaign reached a fever pitch, Almontaser reported that members of the coalition were actually stalking her wherever she went.

Given what Columbia Journalism School professor and former New York Times reporter Samuel Freedman called "her clear, public record of interfaith activism and outreach," including work with the New York Police Department and the Anti-Defamation League after the September 11th attacks, the assault on Almontaser seemed little short of bizarre -- until her assailants discovered a photograph of a T-shirt produced by AWAAM, a local Arab feminist organization, that read "Intifada NYC." As it turned out, AWAAM sometimes shared office space with a Yemeni-American association on which Almontaser served as a board member. Though the connection seemed like a stretch, it promoted the line of attack the Stop the Madrassah coalition had been seeking.

Having found a way to wedge the emotional issue of the Israel-Palestine conflict into a previously New York-centered campaign, the school's opponents next gained a platform at the Murdoch-owned New York Post, where reporters Chuck Bennett and Jana Winter claimed her T-shirt was "apparently a call for a Gaza-style uprising in the Big Apple." While Almontaser attempted to explain to the Post's reporters that she rejected terrorism, the Anti-Defamation League chimed in on cue. ADL spokesman Oren Segal told the Post: "The T-shirt is a reflection of a movement that increasingly lauds violence against Israelis instead of rejecting it. That is disturbing."

Before any Qassam rockets could be launched from Almontaser's school, her former ally New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg caved to the growing pressure and threatened to shut down the school, prompting her to resign. A Jewish principal who spoke no Arabic replaced Almontaser, who later filed a lawsuit against the city for breaching her free speech rights. In 2010, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission ruled that New York's Department of Education had "succumbed to the very bias that the creation of the school was intended to dispel" by firing Almontaser and urged it pay her $300,000 in damages. The commission also concluded that the Post had quoted her misleadingly. Though it failed to stop the establishment of the Khalil Gibran Academy, the burgeoning anti-Muslim movement succeeded in forcing city leaders to bend to its will, and having learned just how to do that, then moved on in search of more high-profile targets. As the New York Times [illegible] at the time, "The fight against the school... was only an early skirmish in a broader, national struggle."

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773349 Date: 08/31/2015

"It's a battle that has really just begun," Pipes told the Times.

From Scam to Publicity Coup

Pipes couldn't have been more on the mark. In late 2009, the Islamophobes sprang into action again when the Cordoba Initiative, a non-profit Muslim group headed by Feisal Abdul Rauf, an exceedingly moderate Sufi Muslim imam who regularly [illegible] representing the United States at the behest of the State Department, announced that it was going to build a community center in downtown New York City. With the help of investors, Rauf's Cordoba Initiative purchased space two blocks from Ground Zero in Manhattan. The space was to contain a prayer area as part of a large community center that would be open to everyone in the neighborhood.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773349 Date: 08/31/2015

None of these facts mattered to Pamela Geller. Thanks to constant prodding at her blog, Atlas Shrugged, Geller made Cordoba's construction plans a national issue, provoking fervent calls from conservatives to protect the "hallowed ground" of 9/11 from creeping Sharia. (That the "mosque" would have been out of sight of Ground Zero and that the neighborhood was, in fact, [illegible] everything from strip clubs to fast-food joints didn't matter.) Geller's activism against Cordoba House earned the 52-year-old full-time blogger the attention she apparently craved, including a [illegible] in the New York Times and frequent cable news spots, especially, of course, on Fox News.

Mainstream reporters tended to focus on Geller's bizarre stunts. She posted a video of herself [illegible] in a string bikini on a Fort Lauderdale beach, for instance, while ranting about "left-tards" and "Nazi Hezbollah." Her call for boycotting Campbell's Soup because the company offered halal -- approved under Islamic law (as kosher food is under Jewish law) -- versions of its products got her much attention, as did her promotion of a screed claiming that President Barack Obama was the illegitimate lovechild of Malcolm X.

Geller had never earned a living as a journalist. She supported herself with millions of dollars in a divorce settlement and life insurance money from her ex-husband. He died in 2008, a year after being indicted for an alleged $1.3 million scam he was accused of running out of a car dealership he co-owned with Geller. Independently wealthy and with time on her hands, Geller proved able indeed when it came to exploiting her strange media stardom to incite the already organized political network of Islamophobes to intensify their crusade.

She also benefited from close alliances with leading Islamophobes from Europe. Among Geller's allies was Andrew Gravers, a Danish activist who formed the group Stop the Islamicization of Europe, and gave it the unusually blunt motto: "Racism is the lowest form of human stupidity, but Islamophobia is the height of common sense." Gravers' group inspired Geller's own U.S.-based outfit, Stop the Islamicization of America, which she formed with her friend Robert Spencer, a pseudo-scholar whose bestselling books, including The Truth About Muhammad, Founder of the World's Most Intolerant Religion, prompted former advisor to President Richard Nixon and Muslim activist Robert Crane to call him, "the principal leader... in the new academic field of Muslim bashing." (According to the website Politico, almost $1 million in donations from Chernick has been steered to Spencer's Jihad Watch group through David Horowitz's Freedom Center.)

Perfect sources for Republican political figures in search of the next hot-button cause, their rhetoric found its way into the talking points of Newt Gingrich and Sarah Palin as they propelled the crusade against Cordoba House into the national spotlight. Gingrich soon compared the community center to a Nazi sign next to the Holocaust Memorial Museum, while Palin called it "a stab in the heart" of "the Heartland." Meanwhile, Tea Party candidates like Republican Ilario Pantano, an Iraq war veteran who killed two unarmed Iraqi civilians, shooting them 60 times -- he even stopped to reload -- made their opposition to Cordoba House the centerpiece of midterm congressional campaigns conducted hundreds of miles from Ground Zero. Geller's campaign against "the mosque at Ground Zero" gained an unexpected assist and a veneer of legitimacy from established Jewish leaders like Anti-Defamation League National Director Abraham Foxman. "Survivors of the Holocaust are entitled to feelings that are irrational," he remarked to the New York Times. Comparing the bereaved family members of 9-11 victims to Holocaust survivors, Foxman insisted, "Their anguish entitles them to positions that others would categorize as irrational or bigoted." Soon enough, David Harris, director of the (Chernick-funded) American Jewish Committee, was demanding that Cordoba's leaders be compelled to reveal their "true attitudes" about Palestinian militant groups before construction on the center was initiated. Rabbi Marvin Hier of the Simon Wiesenthal Center of Los Angeles, another major Jewish group, insisted it would be "insensitive" for Cordoba to build near "a cemetery," though his organization had recently been granted permission from the municipality of Jerusalem to build a "museum of tolerance" to be called The Center for Human Dignity directly on top of the Mamilla Cemetery, a Muslim graveyard that contained thousands of gravesites dating back 1,200 years.

Inspiration from Israel

It was evident from the involvement of figures like Gravers that the Islamophobic network in the United States represented a trans-Atlantic expansion of simmering resentment in Europe. There, the far-right was storming to victories in parliamentary elections across the continent in part by appealing to the simmering anti-Muslim sentiments of voters in rural and working-class communities. The extent of the collaboration between European and American Islamophobes has only continued to grow with Geller, Spencer, and even Gingrich standing beside Europe's most prominent anti-Muslim figure, Dutch parliamentarian Geert Wilders, at a rally against Cordoba House. In the meantime, Geller was issuing statements of support for the English Defense League, a band of unreconstructed neo-Nazis and former members of the whites-only British National Party who intimidate Muslims in the streets of cities like Birmingham and London.

In addition, the trans-Atlantic Islamophobic crusade has stretched into Israel, a country that has come to symbolize the network's fight against the Muslim menace. As Geller told the New York Times' Alan Feuer, Israel is "a very good guide because, like I said, in the war between the civilized man and the savage, you side with the civilized man."

EDL members regularly wave Israeli flags at their rallies, while Wilders claims to have formed his views about Muslims during the time he worked on an Israeli cooperative farm in the 1980s. He has, he says, visited the country more than 40 times since to meet with rightist political allies like Aryeh Eldad, a member of the Israeli Knesset and leader of the far right Hatikvah faction of the National Union Party. He has called for forcibly "transferring" the Palestinians living in Israel and the occupied West Bank to Jordan and Egypt. On December 5th, for example, Wilders traveled to Israel for a "friendly" meeting with Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman, then declared at a press conference that Israel should annex the West Bank and set up a Palestinian state in Jordan.

In the apocalyptic clash of civilizations the global anti-Muslim network has sought to incite, tiny armed Jewish settlements like Yitzar, located on the hills above the occupied Palestinian city of Nablus, represent front-line fortresses. Inside Yitzar's state-funded yeshiva, a rabbi named Yitzhak Shapira has instructed students in what rules must be applied when considering killing non-Jews. Shapira summarized his opinions in a widely publicized book, Torat HaMelech, or The King's Torah. Claiming that non-Jews are "uncompassionate by nature," Shapira cited rabbinical texts to declare that gentiles could be killed in order to "curb their evil inclinations." "There is justification," the rabbi proclaimed, "for killing babies if it is clear that they will grow up to harm us, and in such a situation they may be harmed deliberately, and not only during combat with adults."

In 2006, the rabbi was briefly held by Israeli police for urging his supporters to murder all Palestinians over the age of 13. Two years later, according to the Israeli newspaper Haaretz, he signed a rabbinical letter in support of Israeli Jews who had brutally assaulted two Arab youths on the country's Holocaust Remembrance Day. That same year, Shapira was arrested as a suspect in helping orchestrate a rocket attack against a Palestinian village near Nablus.

Though he was not charged, his name came up again in connection with another act of terror when, in January 2010, the Israeli police raided his settlement seeking vandals who had set fire to a nearby mosque. One of Shapira's followers, an American immigrant, Jack Teitel, has confessed to murdering two innocent Palestinians and attempting to the kill the liberal Israeli historian Ze'ev Sternhell with a mail bomb.

What does all this have to do with Islamophobic campaigns in the United States? A great deal, actually. Through New York-based tax-exempt non-profits like the Central Fund of Israel and Ateret Cohenim, for instance, the omnipresent Aubrey Chernick has sent tens of thousands of dollars to support the Yitzar settlement, as well as to the messianic settlers dedicated to "Judaizing" East Jerusalem. The settlement movement's leading online news magazine, Arutz Sheva, has featured Geller as a columnist. A friend of Geller's, Beth Gilinsky, a right-wing activist with a group called the Coalition to Honor Ground Zero and the founder of the Jewish Action Alliance (apparently run out of a Manhattan real estate office), organized a large rally in New York City in April 2010 to protest the Obama administration's call for a settlement freeze. Among Chernick's major funding recipients is a supposedly "apolitical" group called Aish Hatorah that claims to educate Jews about their heritage. Based in New York and active in the fever swamps of northern West Bank settlements near Yitzar, Aish Hatorah shares an address and staff with a shadowy foreign non-profit called the Clarion Fund. During the 2008 U.S. election campaign, the Clarion Fund distributed 28 million DVDs of a propaganda film called Obsession as newspaper inserts to residents of swing states around the country. The film featured a who's who of anti-Muslim activists, including Walid Shoebat, a self-proclaimed "former PLO terrorist." Among Shoebat's more striking statements: "A secular dogma like Nazism is less dangerous than is Islamofascism today." At a Christian gathering in 2007, this "former Islamic terrorist" told the crowd that Islam was a "satanic cult" and that he had been born again as an evangelical Christian. In 2008, however, the Jerusalem Post, a right-leaning newspaper, exposed him as a fraud, whose claims to terrorism were fictional.

Islamophobic groups registered only a minimal impact during the 2008 election campaign. Two years later, however, after the Republicans regained control of the House of Representatives in midterm elections, the network appears to have reached critical mass. Of course, the deciding factor in the election was the economy, and in two years, Americans will likely vote their pocketbooks again. But that the construction of a single Islamic community center or the imaginary threat of Sharia law were issues at all reflected the influence of a small band of locally oriented activists, and suggested that when a certain presidential candidate who has already been demonized as a crypto-Muslim runs for reelection, the country's most vocal Islamophobes could once again find a national platform amid the frenzied atmosphere of the campaign. By now, the Islamophobic crusade has gone beyond the right-wing pro-Israel activists, cyber-bigots, and ambitious hucksters who conceived it. It now belongs to leading Republican presidential candidates, top-rated cable news hosts, and crowds of Tea Party activists. As the fervor spreads, the crusaders are basking in the glory of what they accomplished. "I didn't choose this moment," Geller mused to the New York Times, "this moment chose me."

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773349 Date: 08/31/2015

Max Blumenthal is an award-winning journalist whose work has appeared in the New York Times, the Los Angeles Times, the Daily Beast, the Nation, the Huffington Post, the Independent Film Channel, Salon.com, Al Jazeera English, and other publications. He is a writing fellow for the Nation Institute and author of the bestselling book Republican Gomorrah: Inside the Movement That Shattered the Party (Nation Books).

Copyright 2010 Max Blumenthal

© 2010 TomDispatch. All rights reserved.
View this story online at:
http://www.tomdispatch.com/blog/175334/

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773349 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, February 7, 2010 5:58 PM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'; Huma Abedin
Subject: Fw: Oscar/Navy

Pls note on calendar. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Oscar Flores
To: Doug Band; 'AbedinH@state.gov' <AbedinH@state.gov>; Justin Cooper; H; Hannah Richert
Sent: Wed Feb 03 08:17:10 2010
Subject: Oscar/Navy

FYI
I will not be around Feb 10-14
Have to drill in Syracuse four days cause I did not drill in Jan.

In March I'm scheduled for my 2 week AT (annual training) in Norfolk I'm away March 22-April 5th

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Strobe Talbott
Sent: Wednesday, December 29, 2010 3:21 PM
To: H
Cc: Jake Sullivan (DOS); Cheryl Mills (State); Cheryl Mills ; Dan Feldman
Subject: PERSONAL

Importance: High

I'm involved in preparations for the Holbrooke memorial service at the Kennedy Center on Jan. 14, and I need to get your guidance/decision on your own role. I'm reachable through Ops, or on my cell although I'll be out-of-pocket between 5 and 7 this afternoon/evening. Regards, Strobe

==========

Strobe Talbott
President, The Brookings Institution
1775 Massachusetts Avenue NW
Washington, DC 20036
202.797.6200

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, February 7, 2010 5:59 PM
To: 'slaughtera@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Praise from DFID

When the snow melts, I'd love to hear what he had to say!

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Feb 04 06:50:35 2010
Subject: Praise from DFID

I thought you both should hear the words of Andrew Stear, DG of policy at DFID, who told me yesterday that "throughout the development community around the world there is great relief that the US is back, and leading particularly in health and food security/agriculture. He said that we were once again the acknowledge "go to people" in both these areas. He also had lots to say that will b v useful in QDDR re relationship b/w development and diplomacy.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, February 7, 2010 6:05 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Followup

Pls be sure Bill and I do a letter to [redacted] for his marriage in June. B6

And pls put the following on my call list:

Alston Johnson
Francis Collins
Derek Harvey (he came into see me in the Senate) Paul Charron Lisa Caputo Marty Edelman

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, February 7, 2010 7:59 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Costa Rican presidential election

Good on all counts! Are you at a Super Bowl party?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Feb 07 19:57:06 2010
Subject: Fw: Costa Rican presidential election

----- Original Message -----
From: Kelly, Craig A
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sun Feb 07 18:53:12 2010
Subject: Costa Rican presidential election

Ruling party private exit polling shows Laura Chinchilla ahead with 44 percent. Two opponents in the 20s. If that holds (she has to get over 40 percent to avoid a runoff), we will have our fifth elected woman president in recent Latin American history. Chinchilla is same party as Arias. Will keep you posted. ck

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, December 20, 2010 4:42 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Lockerbie report tomorrow

FYI

From: Crowley, Philip J
Sent: Monday, December 20, 2010 3:03 PM
To: Verma, Richard R; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Gordon, Philip H; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: Lockerbie report tomorrow

First of all, heads up on Menendez tomorrow. We could punt today and simply say we look forward to receiving the committee's recommendations without commenting further. Regarding the Brits, all we need to say is that the British government, like the U.S. government, believe that the release was a mistake. I do not see a need to feed this, but we will be asked about it tomorrow.

PJ

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Isikoff, Michael (NBC Universal) [mailto [redacted] B6
Sent: Monday, December 20, 2010 2:56 PM
To: Crowley, Philip J
Subject: Lockerbie report tomorrow

PJ-- Senator Menendez and company are released their report on Lockerbie/Megrahi release timed for tomorrow, the 22nd anniversary of the bombing. One of their recommendations that is that the State Department "launch its own inquiry into al-Megrahi's release" to "exhaustively identify and interview sources" to determine how and why Megrahi was released.
Looking for comment...
Im also led to believe that the British govt. inquiry promised by Cameron has in fact uncovered additional documents showing there may have additional communcations by the Brits to the Scots about the importance of releasing Megrahi. Im assuming that State Department has been informed about some of this and you might be able to shed some light...
Mike Isikoff

[redacted] B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 8:26 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: US-EU statement on human rights in Iran

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 08:06:48 2010
Subject: Fw: US-EU statement on human rights in Iran

FYI. They want to issue as USG. Are you comfortable with that?

---

From: Gordon, Philip H
To: Burns, William J; Mull, Stephen D; Sullivan, Jacob J; McEldowney, Nancy E; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Steinberg, James B
Sent: Mon Feb 08 07:35:44 2010
Subject: US-EU statement on human rights in Iran

The EU has agreed to issue the joint statement on human rights situation in Iran with support of all 27 member states. Text they approved is below. They will issue as European Union. Can we issue as "The USG" or "the United States"? (Had been discussion of HRC-Ashton but they want to put in names of EU and US.) Hope is to get it out today.

JOINT STATEMENT

BY THE EUROPEAN UNION AND THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

CALLING ON THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT

TO FULFIL ITS HUMAN RIGHTS OBLIGATIONS

The United States and the European Union condemn the continuing human rights violations in Iran since the June 12 election. The large scale detentions and mass trials, the threatened execution of protestors, the intimidation of family members of those detained and the continuing denial to its citizens of the right to peaceful expression are contrary to human rights norms.

Our concerns are based on our commitment to universal respect for human rights. We are particularly concerned by the potential for further violence and repression during the coming days, especially around the anniversary of the Islamic Republic's founding on 11 February. We call on the Government of Iran to live up to its international human rights obligations, to end its abuses against its own people, to hold accountable those who have committed the abuses and to release those who are exercising their rights.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, December 20, 2010 7:31 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Israeli air strikes target Gaza after rocket fire (Reuters)

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-NEA; NEWS-Mahogany; SES-O_Shift-III; SES-O_OS
Sent: Mon Dec 20 19:23:40 2010
Subject: Israeli air strikes target Gaza after rocket fire (Reuters)

GAZA (Reuters) - Israel carried out a series of air strikes in the Gaza Strip, Palestinian Authority officials and witnesses said, after militants from the Hamas-ruled territory fired rockets into southern Israel. No one was reported killed in any of the attacks. The Israeli strikes targeted a Hamas training camp, where two gunmen were wounded, smuggling tunnels along Gaza's border with Egypt, and other, unpopulated areas, Hamas officials and witnesses said. An Israeli military spokeswoman, who was checking that report, said 13 rockets were fired from Gaza into Israel in the past two days. None of the attacks caused any injuries. Hamas leaders have tried to curb rocket fire at Israel, but smaller groups continue to carry out such attacks. Israel's military said more than 200 cross-border missiles, rockets and mortars have been fired from Gaza this year. An air strike in Gaza on December 18 killed five militants from a rocket launching squad.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 8:38 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: From Embassy London

Not a surprising assessment from Embassy.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 08:05:36 2010
Subject: From Embassy London

This is from the political officer in London:

David Cameron will be given the right of reply after the PM's statement this afternoon -- followed by Q&A. UUP MP Sylvia Hermon is likely to be "unhelpful" during the Q&A.

The Conservatives are becoming exasperated by the rumors that appear in the press and elsewhere that they are unsupportive of the agreement. Our contacts say the Tories have been completely consistent in supporting the government on devolution, though they don't believe HMG handled the issue well (i.e. allowing the exclusion of the UUP and SDLP).

Reg Empey is scheduled to meet his MLAs tonight to review the document and prepare for the working group with SDLP's Margaret Ritchie.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 1:53 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: National security strategy

Ok. I can also talk after the Lavrov call.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 13:49:03 2010
Subject: National security strategy

We should get you together with Jim, Jack, and Anne-Marie on the early side tomorrow, so that your guidance can be reflected in the BCL that Anne-Marie's shop is preparing for Jim and Jack for the 5:30 DC.

For what it's worth, my overall take on the document [redacted] B5

[redacted]

My other concern [redacted]

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 1:55 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: National security strategy

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 13:54:16 2010
Subject: RE: National security strategy

Jim appears to be largely out-of-pocket, and it's critical that he be part of the conversation. So tomorrow might be most productive.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Monday, February 08, 2010 1:53 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Re: National security strategy

Ok. I can also talk after the Lavrov call.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 13:49:03 2010
Subject: National security strategy

We should get you together with Jim, Jack, and Anne-Marie on the early side tomorrow, so that your guidance can be reflected in the BCL that Anne-Marie's shop is preparing for Jim and Jack for the 5:30 DC.

For what it's worth, my overall take on the document [redacted] B5

[redacted]

My other concern [redacted]

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, December 20, 2010 10:46 PM
To: H
Subject: Update

The Senate goes back in at 930 tues am. The Cloture vote on the cr will be at 1015. Alexander will also be recognized for a 10 minute statement - most believe so he can announce his support for START.

Brown also announced his support for the Treaty this evening. With Alexander, that should put us at the 9 needed Republicans (Alexander, Bennett, Brown, Collins, Gregg, Isakson, Lugar, Snowe and Voinovich). There are several others in play (Corker, Chamblis, Cochran, McCain and Murkowski). Moreover, there are bound to be some "sleepers" as the vp called them. This could be Roberts, Crapo, Kirk or others.

We have a meeting in the morning with Kerry, Lugar and Kyl to discuss the remaining amendments. Reid is encouraging Kerry to offer to vote on a handful of R amendments post cloture, but then move fairly deliberately to a vote on ratification.

The end is in sight....

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 8:16 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 12/21/10 Tuesday

8:15 am DEPART Private Residence
En route State Department

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:30 am MEETING w/FRANK WISNER
9:30 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:30 am OFFICE TIME
10:00 am Secretary's Office

10:00 am PHOTOS (2)
10:05 am Secretary's Outer Office

10:05 am BRIEFING ON DASHBOARD
10:15 am Cheryl's Office

10:15 am BUDGET TEAM MEETING
11:15 am Secretary's Conference Room

11:45am PHONE CALL w/ANGOLAN FM JORGE REBELO CHICOTY
Secretary's Office

12:00pm PHONE CALL w/GERMAN FM GUIDO WESTERWELLE
Secretary's Office

12:30pm PHONE CALL w/IAEA DIR. GEN. YUKIYA AMANO
Secretary's Office

1:00pm PHONE CALL w/EU HIGH REP CATHERINE ASHTON
Secretary's Office

1:30pm OFFICE TIME
Secretary's Office

2:30pm PHONE CALL w/ITALIAN FM FRANCO FRATTINI
Secretary's office

3:00pm OFFICE TIME
6:00(t) Secretary's Office

6:00 pm (t)DEPART State Department
En route Private Residence

6:10 pm (t)ARRIVE Private Residence

###

Claire L. Coleman
Office Manager to the Secretary of State
U.S. Department of State
Tel: 202-647-7098

E-Mail: ColemanCL@state.gov

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 8:44 AM
To: H; Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Cloture and final passage on START

Will let you know about timing on each. Apparently the VP may come up for the cloture vote but that hasn't been decided yet.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 8:45 AM
To: Verma, Richard R; H; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: RE: Cloture and final passage on START

Thank rich
Passing to hrc

-----Original Message-----
From: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 8:44 AM
To: 'HDR22@clintonemail.com'; Abedin, Huma; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Cloture and final passage on START

Will let you know about timing on each. Apparently the VP may come up for the cloture vote but that hasn't been decided yet.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 9:41 AM
To: H
Subject: Alexander

Is speaking now. Saying he supports and releasing the letter.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Russo, Robert V <RussoRV@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 3:21 PM
To: H; Hanley, Monica R
Subject: RE: Wyden

Will start work on it right now.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 3:18 PM
To: Russo, Robert V; Hanley, Monica R
Subject: Fw: Wyden

Pls do letter asap.

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Dec 16 19:41:20 2010
Subject: Fw: Wyden

---

From: Terrell, Louisa [redacted] B6
To: McKeon, Brian P. [redacted] Verma, Richard R; Turk, David M
Sent: Thu Dec 16 17:42:46 2010
Subject: FW: Wyden

- Sen. Ron Wyden Has Early Stage Prostate Cancer, Will Miss Votes

Posted Thursday, December 16, 2010 5:06 PM | By David Weigel
<http://www.slate.com/blogs/search/searchresults.aspx?u=2539>

Here is the statement -- Wyden caught the cancer early, but will have to miss votes tomorrow and next week.

After my annual physical in late November, I was diagnosed with early stage prostate cancer. After reviewing all the options with multiple physicians, I decided to take a proactive approach and have surgery, which will be performed December 20 at Johns Hopkins Hospital by Dr. Alan Partin.

Thanks to routine screening, this was diagnosed very early and I expect a full and speedy recovery.

I scheduled the surgery for the Monday before Christmas anticipating that the Senate would have recessed by that time and that there would be no disruption to my work in Oregon or Washington. However, it now appears that I will be missing votes tomorrow and possibly next week while I prepare and undergo this procedure. I expect to be back to work full-time when the Senate reconvenes in January.

If anything is taken away from my experience, I hope it is the importance of getting routine physicals. One in six men will be diagnosed with prostate cancer during their lifetimes. Early detection is critical to catching this disease when treatment is most effective.

Wyden's vote is one Democrats are counting on for tough votes; he's needed to pass the START treaty, the omnibus, and possibly the DREAM Act. According to current vote counts, it would be possible for the Senate to repeal DADT without Wyden's vote -- with the support of key Republicans, vote counters say they're at 61 or 62.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Russo, Robert V <RussoRV@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 3:21 PM
To: H; Hanley, Monica R
Subject: RE: From [redacted] B6

Will do

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 3:19 PM
To: Russo, Robert V; Hanley, Monica R
Subject: Fw: From [redacted]

Pls draft letter to [redacted] w/cc to Melanne.

----- Original Message -----
From: PVerveer [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Fri Dec 17 00:11:44 2010
Subject: From [redacted]

---

From: [redacted]
To: PVerveer [redacted]
CC: alysenelson [redacted]
Sent: 12/14/2010 4:04:15 P.M. Eastern Standard Time
Subj: Hello

Hi dear Melanne and Alyse,
Hope this email reaches you at good time. [redacted] Please let me know if I can be of any help to your department and will happy to do and please thank Mrs. Hillary Clinton on behalf of me [redacted] and supporting Afghan women.

Thank you,

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 3:21 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Latest: Max Blumenthal, The Great Fear: Inside the Bizarre Cabal

I'm at the post office but Huma has this printed for you.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Hanley, Monica R
Sent: Tue Dec 21 14:17:28 2010
Subject: Fw: Latest: Max Blumenthal, The Great Fear: Inside the Bizarre Cabal

Pls print for me.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop <sbwhoeop B6
Sent: Mon Dec 20 14:39:32 2010
Subject: Latest: Max Blumenthal, The Great Fear: Inside the Bizarre Cabal

TomDispatch <http://www.tomdispatch.com/application/images/site/logo_print.gif>

Tomgram: Max Blumenthal, The Great Fear

By Max Blumenthal
Posted on December 19, 2010, Printed on December 20, 2010 http://www.tomdispatch.com/blog/175334/

Moments of imperial and economic decline -- according to a recent poll, 65% of Americans now believe <http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/38996574/ns/politics/> this country to be "in a state of decline" -- can also be periods of cultishness, even of madness incarnate. Such a mood now seems to be spreading through the United States. It's not so surprising, really. Since the attacks of September 11, 2001, fear <http://www.tomdispatch.com/blog/175325/tomgram%3A_engelhardt,_the_united_states_of_fear/> has been injected <http://www.tomdispatch.com/post/175206/tomgram:_engelhardt,_fear_inc.> into this "homeland" like a drug and a penumbra <http://projects.washingtonpost.com/top-secret-america/> of official secrecy has settled over the land in a way that makes the secrecy of the Cold War years (when this country faced a superpower, not a ragtag set of jihadis, guerrillas, and terrorists) seem like an era of sunshine.
In an atmosphere of swirling fears and hysteria amid declining living conditions, "explanations" that at other times might have remained confined to tiny crews of conspiracy-mongers can suddenly gain a patina of plausibility and so traction. No wonder then that, as hard times hit, as the financial system seemed on the verge of collapse, as unemployment soared and a massive wave of home foreclosures swept into view, increasing numbers of Americans became prey to any wacky explanation for our troubles, none more so than the idea that Islam was somehow responsible, that mosques and Islamic centers <http://www.tomdispatch.com/archive/175283/stephan_salisbury_extremism_at_ground_zero> meant for a sliver of a minority here were capable of imposing anything, no less a way of life on this country, or that Sharia law (of all things) might somehow worm its way into state legal systems <http://abcnews.go.com/Politics/shariah-law-ban-oklahoma-renews-debate-draws-legal/story?id=12112985> , or that YouTube was a hotbed of terrorism <http://www.wnd.com/index.php?fa=PAGE.view&pageId=239393> worthy of suppression, or... well, you name it.

Max Blumenthal, author of the bestselling book Republican Gomorrah: Inside the Movement That Shattered the Party <http://www.amazon.com/dp/1568584172/ref=nosim/?tag=tomdispatch-20> , has done the necessary legwork to take us deep into one of those crews of conspiracy-mongers who, at another time, just about no one would have paid much attention to, but in twenty-first-century America have gained a remarkable audience. They are a chilling barometer of the changing weather in America. Tom

The Great Islamophobic Crusade

Inside the Bizarre Cabal of Secretive Donors, Demagogic Bloggers, Pseudo-Scholars, European Neo-Fascists, Violent Israeli Settlers, and Republican Presidential Hopefuls Behind the Crusade

By Max Blumenthal <http://www.tomdispatch.com/authors/maxblumenthal>

Nine years after 9/11, hysteria about Muslims in American life has gripped the country. With it has gone an outburst <http://www.tomdispatch.com/archive/175283/stephan_salisbury_extremism_at_ground_zero> of arson attacks on mosques, campaigns to stop their construction, and the branding of the Muslim-American community, overwhelmingly moderate, as a hotbed of potential terrorist recruits. The frenzy has raged from rural Tennessee to New York City, while in Oklahoma, voters even overwhelmingly approved <http://thinkprogress.org/2010/11/11/oklahoma-sharia-native-americans/> a ballot measure banning the implementation of Sharia law in American courts (not that such a prospect existed). This campaign of Islamophobia wounded President Obama politically, as one out of five Americans have bought into <http://pewresearch.org/pubs/1701/poll-obama-muslim-christian-church-out-of-politics-political-leaders-religious> a sustained chorus of false rumors about his secret Muslim faith. And it may have tainted views of Muslims in general; an August 2010 Pew Research Center poll revealed <http://pewresearch.org/pubs/1706/poll-americans-views-of-muslims-object-to-new-york-islamic-center-islam-violence> that, among Americans, the favorability rating of Muslims had dropped by 11 points since 2005.

Erupting so many years after the September 11th trauma, this spasm of anti-Muslim bigotry might seem oddly timed and unexpectedly spontaneous. But think again: it's the fruit of an organized, long-term campaign by a tight confederation of right-wing activists and operatives who first focused on Islamophobia soon after the September 11th attacks, but only attained critical mass during the Obama era. It was then that embittered conservative forces, voted out of power in 2008, sought with remarkable success to leverage cultural resentment into political and partisan gain.

This network is obsessively fixated on the supposed spread of Muslim influence in America. Its apparatus spans continents, extending from Tea Party activists here to the European far right. It brings together in common cause right-wing ultra-Zionists, Christian evangelicals, and racist British soccer hooligans. It reflects an aggressively pro-Israel sensibility, with its key figures venerating the Jewish state as a Middle Eastern Fort Apache on the front lines of the Global War on Terror and urging the U.S. and various European powers to emulate its heavy-handed methods.

Little of recent American Islamophobia (with a strong emphasis on the "phobia") is sheer happenstance. Years before Tea Party shock troops massed for angry protests outside the proposed site of an Islamic community center in lower Manhattan, representatives of the Israel lobby and the Jewish-American establishment launched a campaign against pro-Palestinian campus activism that would prove a seedbed for everything to come. That campaign quickly -- and perhaps predictably -- morphed into a series of crusades against mosques and Islamic schools which, in turn, attracted an assortment of shady but exceptionally energetic militants into the network's ranks.

Besides providing the initial energy for the Islamophobic crusade, conservative elements from within the pro-Israel lobby bankrolled the network's apparatus, enabling it to influence the national debate. One philanthropist in particular has provided the beneficence to propel the campaign ahead. He is a little-known Los Angeles-area software security entrepreneur named Aubrey Chernick, who operates out of a security consulting firm blandly named the National Center for Crisis and Continuity Coordination. A former trustee of the Washington Institute for Near East Policy, which has served as a think tank for the American Israeli Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC), a frontline lobbying group for Israel, Chernick is said to be worth $750 million.

Chernick's fortune is puny compared to that of the billionaire Koch Brothers <http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/08/30/100830fa_fact_mayer> , extraction industry titans who fund Tea Party-related groups like Americans for Prosperity, and it is dwarfed by the financial empire of Haim Saban, the Israeli-American media baron who is one of the largest private donors <http://www.newyorker.com/reporting/2010/05/10/100510fa_fact_bruck> to the Democratic party and recently matched <http://www.jewishjournal.com/hollywoodjew/item/haim_saban_andrea_bocelli_add_up_to_9_million-dollar-night_for_fidf_2010121/> $9 million raised for the Friends of the Israeli Defense Forces in a single night.

However, by injecting his money into a small but influential constellation of groups and individuals with a narrow agenda, Chernick has had a considerable impact.

Through the Fairbrook Foundation <http://www.politico.com/blogs/laurarozen/0910/The_Park51_money_trail.html?showall> , a private entity he and his wife Joyce control, Chernick has provided funding to groups ranging from the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) and CAMERA, a right-wing, pro-Israel, media-watchdog outfit, to violent Israeli settlers living on Palestinian lands and figures like the pseudo-academic author Robert Spencer, who is largely responsible for popularizing conspiracy theories about the coming conquest of the West by Muslim fanatics seeking to establish a worldwide caliphate. Together, these groups spread hysteria about Muslims into Middle American communities where immigrants from the Middle East have recently settled, and they watched with glee as likely Republican presidential frontrunners from Mike Huckabee to Sarah Palin promoted <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bbUxcgrgUnE&feature=related> their cause and parroted <http://www.politicsdaily.com/2010/07/18/sarah-palin-to-muslims-reject-ground-zero-mosque/> their tropes. Perhaps the only thing more surprising than the increasingly widespread appeal of Islamophobia is that, just a few years ago, the phenomenon was confined to a few college campuses and an inner city neighborhood, and that it seemed like a fleeting fad that would soon pass from the American political landscape.

Birth of a Network

The Islamophobic crusade was launched in earnest at the peak of George W. Bush's prestige when the neoconservatives and their allies were riding high. In 2003, three years after the collapse of President Bill Clinton's attempt to resolve the Israeli-Palestinian issue and in the immediate wake of the invasion of Iraq, a network of Jewish groups, ranging from ADL and the American Jewish Committee to AIPAC, gathered to address what they saw as a sudden rise in pro-Palestinian activism on college campuses nationwide. That meeting gave birth to the David Project, a campus advocacy group led by Charles Peters, who had co-founded CAMERA, one of the many outfits bankrolled by Chernick. With the help of public relations professionals, Peters conceived <http://www.thenation.com/article/mideast-comes-columbia> a plan to "take back the campus by influencing public opinion through lectures, the Internet, and coalitions," as a memo produced at the time by the consulting firm McKinsey and Company stated.

In 2004, after conferring with Martin Kramer, a fellow at the Washington Institute for Near East Policy, the pro-Israel think tank where Chernoff had served as a trustee, Peters produced a documentary film that he called Columbia Unbecoming <http://nymag.com/nymetro/urban/education/features/10868/> . It was filled with claims from Jewish students at Columbia University claiming they had endured intimidation and insults from Arab professors. The film portrayed that New York City school's Department of Middle East and Asian Languages and Cultures as a hothouse of anti-Semitism.

In their complaints, the students focused on one figure in particular: Joseph Massad <http://www.columbia.edu/cu/mealac/faculty/massad/> , a Palestinian professor of Middle East studies. He was known for his passionate advocacy of the formation of a binational state between Israel and Palestine, as well as for his strident criticism of what he termed "the racist character of Israel." The film identified him as "one of the most dangerous intellectuals on campus," while he was featured as a crucial villain in The Professors: The 101 Most Dangerous Academics in America, a book by the (Chernick-funded) neoconservative activist David Horowitz. As Massad was seeking tenure at the time, he was especially vulnerable to this sort of wholesale assault.

When the controversy over Massad's views intensified, Congressman Anthony Weiner, a liberal New York Democrat who once described himself <http://www.zoa.org/sitedocuments/pressrelease_view.asp?pressreleaseID=228> as a representative of "the ZOA [Zionist Organization of America] wing of the Democratic Party," demanded that Columbia President Lee Bollinger, a renowned First Amendment scholar, fire the professor. Bollinger responded by issuing uncharacteristically defensive statements about the "limited" nature of academic freedom.

In the end, however, none of the charges stuck. Indeed, the testimonies in the David Project film were eventually either discredited or never corroborated. In 2009, Massad earned tenure after winning <http://www.college.columbia.edu/cct/jul_aug08/around_the_quads10> Columbia's prestigious Lionel Trilling Award for excellence in scholarship.

<http://www.amazon.com/dp/1568584172/ref=nosim/?tag=tomdispatch-20> Having demonstrated its ability to intimidate faculty members and even powerful university administrators, however, Kramer claimed a moral victory in the name of his project, boasting to the press that "this is a turning point." While the David Project subsequently fostered chapters on campuses nationwide, its director set out on a different path -- initially, into the streets of Boston in 2004 to oppose the construction of the Islamic Society of Boston Cultural Center.

For nearly 15 years, the Islamic Society of Boston had sought to build the center in the heart of Roxbury, the city's largest black neighborhood, to serve its sizable Muslim population. With endorsements from Mayor Thomas Menino and leading Massachusetts lawmakers, the mosque's construction seemed like a fait accompli -- until, that is, the Rupert Murdoch-owned Boston Herald and his local Fox News affiliate snapped into action. Boston Globe columnist Jeff Jacoby also chimed in with a series of reports <http://www.boston.com/news/globe/editorial_opinion/oped/articles/2007/01/10/the_boston_mosques_saudi_connection/> claiming the center's plans were evidence of a Saudi Arabian plot to bolster the influence of radical Islam in the United States, and possibly even to train underground terror cells.

It was at this point that the David Project entered the fray, convening elements of the local pro-Israel community in the Boston area to seek strategies to torpedo the project. According to emails <http://www.scoop.co.nz/stories/WO0705/S00149.htm> obtained by the Islamic Society's lawyers in a lawsuit against the David Project, the organizers settled on a campaign of years of nuisance lawsuits, along with accusations that the center had received foreign funding from "the Wahhabi movement in Saudi Arabia or... the Moslem Brotherhood."

In response, a grassroots coalition of liberal Jews initiated <http://www.boston.com/bostonglobe/editorial_opinion/oped/articles/2009/07/05/trustworthy_community/> interfaith efforts aimed at ending a controversy that had essentially been manufactured out of thin air and was corroding relations between the Jewish and Muslim communities in the city. Peters would not, however, relent. "We are more concerned now than we have ever been about a Saudi influence of local mosques," he announced <http://www.forward.com/articles/11052/> at a suburban Boston synagogue in 2007.

After paying out millions of dollars in legal bills and enduring countless smears, the Islamic Society of Boston completed the construction of its community center in 2008. Meanwhile, not surprisingly, nothing came of the David Project's dark warnings. As Boston-area National Public Radio reporter Philip Martin reflected <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/phillip-martin/the-mosque-next-door-what_b_720914.html> in September 2010, "The horror stories that preceded [the center's] development seem shrill and histrionic in retrospect."

The Network Expands

This second failed campaign was, in the end, more about movement building than success, no less national security. The local crusade established an effective blueprint for generating hysteria against the establishment of Islamic centers and mosques across the country, while galvanizing a cast of characters who would form an anti-Muslim network which would gain attention and success in the years to come.

In 2007, these figures coalesced into a proto-movement that launched a new crusade, this time targeting the Khalil Gibran International Academy, a secular Arabic-English elementary school in Brooklyn, New York. Calling their ad hoc pressure group, Stop the Madrassah <http://stopthemadrassa.wordpress.com/> -- madrassah being simply the Arab word for "school" -- the coalition's activists included an array of previously unknown zealots who made no attempt to disguise their extreme views when it came to Islam as a religion, as well as Muslims in America. Their stated goal was to challenge the school's establishment on the basis of its violation of the church-state separation in the U.S. Constitution. The true aim of the coalition, however, was transparent: to pressure the city's leadership to adopt an antagonistic posture towards the local Muslim community.

The activists zeroed in on the school's principal, Debbie Almontaser, a veteran educator of Yemeni descent, and baselessly branded <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/03/13/nyregion/13principal.html> her "a jihadist" as well as a 9/11 denier. They also accused her of -- as Pamela Geller, a far-right blogger just then gaining prominence put it <http://atlasshrugs2000.typepad.com/atlas_shrugs/khalil_gibran_international_academy/> , "whitewash[ing] the genocide against the Jews." Daniel Pipes, a neoconservative academic previously active in the campaigns against Joseph Massad and the Boston Islamic center (and whose pro-Likud think tank, Middle East Forum, has received $150,000 from Chernick) claimed <http://www.danielpipes.org/4441/a-madrasa-grows-in-brooklyn> the school should not go ahead because "Arabic-language instruction is inevitably laden with Pan-Arabist and Islamist baggage." As the campaign reached a fever pitch, Almontaser reported that members of the coalition were actually stalking <http://cityroom.blogs.nytimes.com/2008/05/16/former-arabic-school-principal-faces-defamation-suit/> her wherever she went.

Given what Columbia Journalism School professor and former New York Times reporter Samuel Freedman called <http://www.nytimes.com/2007/08/29/education/29education.html> "her clear, public record of interfaith activism and outreach," including work with the New York Police Department and the Anti-Defamation League after the September 11th attacks, the assault on Almontaser seemed little short of bizarre -- until her assailants discovered a photograph of a T-shirt produced by AWAAM, a local Arab feminist organization, that read "Intifada NYC." As it turned out, AWAAM sometimes shared office space with a Yemeni-American association on which Almontaser served as a board member. Though the connection seemed like a stretch, it promoted the line of attack the Stop the Madrassah coalition had been seeking.

Having found a way to wedge the emotional issue of the Israel-Palestine conflict into a previously New York-centered campaign, the school's opponents next gained a platform at the Murdoch-owned New York Post, where reporters Chuck Bennett and Jana Winter claimed <http://www.nypost.com/p/news/regional/item_UerzwvF7fcSQY8YOP1ln4K> her T-shirt was "apparently a call for a Gaza-style uprising in the Big Apple." While Almontaser attempted to explain to the Post's reporters that she rejected terrorism, the Anti-Defamation League chimed in on cue. ADL spokesman Oren Segal told the Post: "The T-shirt is a reflection of a movement that increasingly lauds violence against Israelis instead of rejecting it. That is disturbing."

Before any Qassam rockets could be launched from Almontaser's school, her former ally New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg caved to the growing pressure and threatened to shut down the school, prompting her to resign. A Jewish principal who spoke no Arabic replaced Almontaser, who later filed a lawsuit against the city for breaching her free speech rights. In 2010, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission ruled <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/05/26/nyregion/26principal.html?emc=eta1> that New York's Department of Education had "succumbed to the very bias that the creation of the school was intended to dispel" by firing Almontaser and urged it pay her $300,000 in damages. The commission also concluded that the Post had quoted her misleadingly.

Though it failed to stop the establishment of the Khalil Gibran Academy, the burgeoning anti-Muslim movement succeeded in forcing city leaders to bend to its will, and having learned just how to do that, then moved on in search of more high-profile targets. As the New York Times reported <http://www.nytimes.com/2008/04/28/nyregion/28school.html> at the time, "The fight against the school... was only an early skirmish in a broader, national struggle."

"It's a battle that has really just begun," Pipes told the Times.

From Scam to Publicity Coup

Pipes couldn't have been more on the mark. In late 2009, the Islamophobes sprang into action again when the Cordoba Initiative, a non-profit Muslim group headed by Feisal Abdul Rauf, an exceedingly moderate Sufi Muslim imam who regularly traveled abroad <http://www.washingtonmonthly.com/archives/individual/2010_08/025164.php> representing the United States at the behest of the State Department, announced that it was going to build a community center in downtown New York City. With the help of investors, Rauf's Cordoba Initiative purchased space two blocks from Ground Zero in Manhattan. The space was to contain a prayer area as part of a large community center that would be open to everyone in the neighborhood.

None of these facts mattered to Pamela Geller. Thanks to constant prodding at her blog, Atlas Shrugged, Geller made Cordoba's construction plans a national issue, provoking fervent calls from conservatives to protect the "hallowed ground" of 9/11 from creeping Sharia. (That the "mosque" would have been out of sight of Ground Zero and that the neighborhood was, in fact, filled with <http://www.nydailynews.com/ny_local/2010/08/16/2010-08-16_a_sea_of_filth_near_ground_zer0_mosque_gets_all_the_press_but_porns_around_corne.html> everything from strip clubs to fast-food joints didn't matter.) Geller's activism against Cordoba House earned the 52-year-old full-time blogger the attention she apparently craved, including a long profile <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/10/10/nyregion/10geller.html> in the New York Times and frequent cable news spots, especially, of course, on Fox News.

Mainstream reporters tended to focus on Geller's bizarre stunts. She posted a video of herself splashing around <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7TG7DTOkU-s> in a string bikini on a Fort Lauderdale beach, for instance, while ranting about "left-tards" and "Nazi Hezbollah." Her call <http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/10/17/AR2010101702840.html> for boycotting Campbell's Soup because the company offered halal -- approved under Islamic law (as kosher food is under Jewish law) -- versions of its products got her much attention, as did her promotion <http://atlasshrugs2000.typepad.com/atlas_shrugs/2008/10/how-could-stanl.html> of a screed claiming that President Barack Obama was the illegitimate lovechild of Malcolm X.

Geller had never earned a living as a journalist. She supported herself with millions of dollars in a divorce settlement and life insurance money from her ex-husband. He died in 2008, a year after being indicted <http://www.nypost.com/p/news/regional/item_ufV1Zj9XnA9Qn0Ukjs8QJM> for an alleged $1.3 million scam he was accused of running out of a car dealership he co-owned with Geller. Independently wealthy and with time on her hands, Geller proved able indeed when it came to exploiting her strange media stardom to incite the already organized political network of Islamophobes to intensify their crusade.

She also benefited from close alliances with leading Islamophobes from Europe. Among Geller's allies was Andrew Gravers, a Danish activist who formed the group Stop the Islamicization of Europe, and gave it <http://www.loonwatch.com/2010/07/sioa-is-an-anti-muslim-hate-group/> the unusually blunt motto: "Racism is the lowest form of human stupidity, but Islamophobia is the height of common sense." Gravers' group inspired Geller's own U.S.-based outfit, Stop the Islamicization of America <http://sioaonline.com/> , which she formed with her friend Robert Spencer, a pseudo-scholar whose bestselling books, including The Truth About Muhammad, Founder of the World's Most Intolerant Religion, prompted former advisor to President Richard Nixon and Muslim activist Robert Crane to call him <http://smearcasting.com/smear_spencer.html> , "the principal leader... in the new academic field of Muslim bashing." (According to the website Politico <http://dyn.politico.com/printstory.cfm?uuid=D979BED4-18FE-70B2-A8314DD53412ADF8> , almost $1 million in donations from Chernick has been steered to Spencer's Jihad Watch group through David Horowitz's Freedom Center.)

Perfect sources for Republican political figures in search of the next hot-button cause, their rhetoric found its way into the talking points of Newt Gingrich and Sarah Palin as they propelled the crusade against Cordoba House into the national spotlight. Gingrich soon compared <http://www.mediaite.com/online/newt-gingrich-compares-ground-zero-islamic-center-to-nazi-sign-next-to-holocaust-museum/> the community center to a Nazi sign next to the Holocaust Memorial Museum, while Palin called it "a stab in the heart" of "the Heartland." Meanwhile, Tea Party candidates like Republican Ilario Pantano, an Iraq war veteran who killed <http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2010/oct/26/us-veteran-killed-iraqis-tea-party> two unarmed Iraqi civilians, shooting them 60 times -- he even stopped to reload -- made their opposition <http://www.pantanoforcongress.com/posts/video-ilario-pantano-at-the-9-11-rally-of-remembrance> to Cordoba House the centerpiece of midterm congressional campaigns conducted hundreds of miles from Ground Zero.

Geller's campaign against "the mosque at Ground Zero" gained an unexpected assist and a veneer of legitimacy from established Jewish leaders like Anti-Defamation League National Director Abraham Foxman. "Survivors of the Holocaust are entitled to feelings that are irrational," he remarked <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/07/31/nyregion/31mosque.html> to the New York Times. Comparing the bereaved family members of 9-11 victims to Holocaust survivors, Foxman insisted, "Their anguish entitles them to positions that others would categorize as irrational or bigoted."

Soon enough, David Harris, director of the (Chernick-funded) American Jewish Committee, was demanding <http://tpmcafe.talkingpointsmemo.com/2010/08/03/american_jewish_committee_also_opposes_mosque/> that Cordoba's leaders be compelled to reveal their "true attitudes" about Palestinian militant groups before construction on the center was initiated. Rabbi Marvin Hier of the Simon Wiesenthal Center of Los Angeles, another major Jewish group, insisted it would be "insensitive" for Cordoba to build near "a cemetery," though his organization had recently been granted permission from the municipality of Jerusalem to build <http://www.alzaytouna.net/arabic/?c=1519&a=116500> a "museum of tolerance" to be called The Center for Human Dignity directly on top of the Mamilla Cemetery, a Muslim graveyard that contained thousands of gravesites dating back 1,200 years.

Inspiration from Israel

It was evident from the involvement of figures like Gravers that the Islamophobic network in the United States represented a trans-Atlantic expansion of simmering resentment in Europe. There, the far-right was storming to victories in parliamentary elections across the continent in part by appealing to the simmering anti-Muslim sentiments of voters in rural and working-class communities. The extent of the collaboration between European and American Islamophobes has only continued to grow with Geller, Spencer, and even Gingrich standing beside Europe's most prominent anti-Muslim figure, Dutch parliamentarian Geert Wilders, at a rally against Cordoba House. In the meantime, Geller was issuing statements of support <http://maxblumenthal.com/2010/03/so-who-are-the-nazis-meet-atlass-thugs/> for the English Defense League, a band of unreconstructed neo-Nazis <http://www.hopenothate.org.uk/features/English-Defence-League-Hooligans-Unmasked.php> and former members of the whites-only British National Party who intimidate Muslims in the streets of cities like Birmingham and London.

In addition, the trans-Atlantic Islamophobic crusade has stretched into Israel, a country that has come to symbolize the network's fight against the Muslim menace. As Geller told the New York Times' Alan Feuer, Israel is "a very good guide because, like I said, in the war between the civilized man and the savage, you side with the civilized man."

EDL members regularly wave <http://www.loonwatch.com/wp-content/uploads/2009/10/edl_israel_flag.jpg> Israeli flags at their rallies, while Wilders claims to have formed his views about Muslims during the time he worked on an Israeli cooperative farm in the 1980s. He has, he says, visited the country more than 40 times since to meet with <http://www.israelnationalnews.com/News/News.aspx/141007> rightist political allies like Aryeh Eldad, a member of the Israeli Knesset and leader of the far right Hatikvah faction of the National Union Party. He has called for forcibly "transferring" the Palestinians living in Israel and the occupied West Bank to Jordan and Egypt. On December 5th, for example, Wilders traveled to Israel for a "friendly" meeting <http://www.rnw.nl/english/bulletin/geert-wilders-meets-israeli-foreign-minister-lieberman> with Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman, then declared <http://www.rnw.nl/english/bulletin/minister-rejects-wilders-plea-palestinian-state-jordan> at a press conference that Israel should annex the West Bank and set up a Palestinian state in Jordan.

In the apocalyptic clash of civilizations the global anti-Muslim network has sought to incite, tiny armed Jewish settlements like Yitzar, located on the hills above the occupied Palestinian city of Nablus, represent front-line fortresses. Inside Yitzar's state-funded yeshiva <http://www.haaretz.com/print-edition/features/akiva-eldar-u-s-tax-dollars-fund-rabbi-who-excused-killing-gentile-babies-1.2137> , a rabbi named Yitzhak Shapira has instructed students in what rules must be applied when considering killing non-Jews. Shapira summarized his opinions in a widely publicized book <http://maxblumenthal.com/2010/08/how-to-kill-goyim-and-influence-people-leading-israeli-rabbis-defend-manual-for-for-killing-non-jews/> , Torat HaMelech, or The King's Torah. Claiming that non-Jews are "uncompassionate by nature," Shapira cited rabbinical texts to declare that gentiles could be killed in order to "curb their evil inclinations." "There is justification," the rabbi proclaimed, "for killing babies if it is clear that they will grow up to harm us, and in such a situation they may be harmed deliberately, and not only during combat with adults."

In 2006, the rabbi was briefly held by Israeli police for urging his supporters to murder all Palestinians over the age of 13. Two years later, according to the Israeli newspaper Haaretz, he signed <http://www.haaretz.com/print-edition/news/violence-follows-removal-of-trailer-from-west-bank-outpost-1.250450> a rabbinical letter in support of Israeli Jews who had brutally assaulted two Arab youths on the country's Holocaust Remembrance Day. That same year, Shapira was arrested as a suspect in helping orchestrate <http://www.haaretz.com/jewish-world/news/the-king-s-torah-a-rabbinic-text-or-a-call-to-terror-1.261930> a rocket attack against a Palestinian village near Nablus.

Though he was not charged, his name came up again in connection with another act of terror when, in January 2010, the Israeli police raided his settlement seeking vandals who had set fire to a nearby mosque. One of Shapira's followers, an American immigrant, Jack Teitel <http://www.time.com/time/world/article/0,8599,1934103,00.html> , has confessed to murdering two innocent Palestinians and attempting to the kill the liberal Israeli historian Ze'ev Sternhell with a mail bomb.

What does all this have to do with Islamophobic campaigns in the United States? A great deal, actually. Through New York-based tax-exempt non-profits like the Central Fund of Israel <http://www.haaretz.com/print-edition/features/akiva-eldar-u-s-tax-dollars-fund-rabbi-who-excused-killing-gentile-babies-1.2137> and Ateret Cohenim, for instance, the omnipresent Aubrey Chernick has sent tens of thousands of dollars to support the Yitzar settlement, as well as to the messianic settlers dedicated to "Judaizing" East Jerusalem. The settlement movement's leading online news magazine, Arutz Sheva, has featured Geller as a columnist. A friend of Geller's, Beth Gilinsky, a right-wing activist with a group called the Coalition to Honor Ground Zero and the founder of the Jewish Action Alliance (apparently run <http://www.manta.com/c/mmzgtfs/jewish-action-alliance> out of a Manhattan real estate office), organized a large rally in New York City in April 2010 to protest the Obama administration's call for a settlement freeze.

Among Chernick's major funding recipients is a supposedly "apolitical" group called Aish Hatorah that claims to educate Jews about their heritage. Based in New York and active in the fever swamps of northern West Bank settlements near Yitzar, Aish Hatorah shares an address and staff with a shadowy foreign non-profit called the Clarion Fund. During the 2008 U.S. election campaign, the Clarion Fund distributed <http://www.atimes.com/atimes/Middle_East/JI26Ak03.html> 28 million DVDs of a propaganda film called Obsession as newspaper inserts to residents of swing states around the country. The film featured a who's who of anti-Muslim activists, including Walid Shoebat, a self-proclaimed "former PLO terrorist." Among Shoebat's more striking statements: "A secular dogma like Nazism is less dangerous than is Islamofascism today." At a Christian gathering in 2007, this "former Islamic terrorist" told the crowd that Islam was a "satanic cult" and that he had been born again as an evangelical Christian. In 2008, however, the Jerusalem Post, a right-leaning newspaper, exposed him <http://www.jpost.com/Features/Article.aspx?id=96502> as a fraud, whose claims to terrorism were fictional.

Islamophobic groups registered only a minimal impact during the 2008 election campaign. Two years later, however, after the Republicans regained control of the House of Representatives in midterm elections, the network appears to have reached critical mass. Of course, the deciding factor in the election was the economy, and in two years, Americans will likely vote their pocketbooks again. But that the construction of a single Islamic community center or the imaginary threat of Sharia law were issues at all reflected the influence of a small band of locally oriented activists, and suggested that when a certain presidential candidate who has already been demonized as a crypto-Muslim runs for reelection, the country's most vocal Islamophobes could once again find a national platform amid the frenzied atmosphere of the campaign.

By now, the Islamophobic crusade has gone beyond the right-wing pro-Israel activists, cyber-bigots, and ambitious hucksters who conceived it. It now belongs to leading Republican presidential candidates, top-rated cable news hosts, and crowds of Tea Party activists. As the fervor spreads, the crusaders are basking in the glory of what they accomplished. "I didn't choose this moment," Geller mused <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/10/10/nyregion/10gellerb.html> to the New York Times, "this moment chose me."

Max Blumenthal is an award-winning journalist whose work has appeared in the New York Times, the Los Angeles Times, the Daily Beast, the Nation, the Huffington Post, the Independent Film Channel, Salon.com, Al Jazeera English, and other publications. He is a writing fellow for the Nation Institute and author of the bestselling book Republican Gomorrah: Inside the Movement That Shattered the Party <http://www.amazon.com/dp/1568584172/ref=nosim/?tag=tomdispatch-20> (Nation Books).

Copyright 2010 Max Blumenthal

© 2010 TomDispatch. All rights reserved.
View this story online at: http://www.tomdispatch.com/blog/175334/

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 3:29 PM
To: H
Subject: Cloture

67 -28

Better than we thought. !

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 3:26 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: H: It worked. Sid
Attachments: hrc memo ni tactic 020810.docx; hrc memo ni tactic 020810.docx

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 15:23:59 2010
Subject: H: It worked. Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

February 8, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI/tactic works

The plan worked perfectly. Gordon made the speech in the late afternoon. Cameron felt compelled to support both the deal and the timing. Shaun called Lou Susman beforehand and Susman made a helpful call to Cameron "seeking clarification" an hour and a half before the event.

Now, Reg Empey is boxed in. He's considering his position. It may be that you will have to call him in a couple days.

Shaun will call you tomorrow at a time convenient to you.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773423 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

February 8, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI/tactic works

The plan worked perfectly. Gordon made the speech in the late afternoon. Cameron felt compelled to support both the deal and the timing. Shaun called Lou Susman beforehand and Susman made a helpful call to Cameron "seeking clarification" an hour and a half before the event.

Now, Reg Empey is boxed in. He's considering his position. It may be that you will have to call him in a couple days.

Shaun will call you tomorrow at a time convenient to you.

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773423 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 5:07 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Call list

Pls remove the following:

Lobo
Lavrov
Talbott
Conyers
Murtha
Solis
Nagin
Stewart
Height

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 4:17 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Pop Quiz on START: Who Would You Listen To?

You will enjoy this - the senate democratic communications center sent it out today. AM

---

From: Bruce Jentleson [redacted]
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Chollet, Derek H
Sent: Tue Dec 21 11:46:01 2010
Subject: Fwd: Pop Quiz: Whose Would You Listen To?

This is great!!

Bruce Jentleson
Duke University

Sent from my iPad

Begin forwarded message:

> From: "Jentleson, Adam (Reid)" <Adam_Jentleson@reid.senate.gov>
> Date: December 21, 2010 11:34:24 AM EST
> To: "Bruce Jentleson, Ph.D." [redacted] "Barbara C. Jentleson" <[redacted] B6 > Subject: FW: Pop Quiz: Whose Would You Listen To?
>
> Thought you guys would enjoy this. Sent it to reporters this morning.

---

From: SDCC-PRESS [mailto:SDCC-PRESS@DEMOCRATIC-MESSAGE-CENTER.SENATE.GOV] On Behalf Of Communications Center, Senate Democratic (Reid)
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 9:41 AM
To: SDCC-PRESS@DEMOCRATIC-MESSAGE-CENTER.SENATE.GOV
Subject: Pop Quiz: Whose Would You Listen To?

A question from your friends at the Senate Democratic Communications Center: If you were making a major foreign policy decision affecting massive arsenals of nuclear weapons, would you tend to lean towards the position supported by:

Or...?

In supporting ratification of the New START Treaty, Democrats are siding with the cross-party consensus view of virtually the entire foreign policy establishment – including former President George H.W. Bush, Secretary of Defense Gates, Secretary of State Clinton, and the secretaries of state from the last five presidents. In opposing ratification, many Senate Republicans are siding with the position supported by… Sarah Palin.

The individuals in the first group have over a century of foreign policy experience between them, and have worked closely on U.S.-Russia relations for decades. On the other hand, Palin can see Russia from her house. Apparently, that's good enough for many Senate Republicans.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 8:28 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: TFTP

Did EUR get memcon of my call w Westerwelle?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 8:48 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: TFTP

But I just heard that federal agencies will be closed again tomorrow! What are we doing to avoid or win the EP vote on 2/11?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 20:46:32 2010
Subject: Re: TFTP

Phil got a readout from Ops following the call. Memcon will be done tomorrow because of the snow day.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Feb 08 20:27:41 2010
Subject: TFTP

Did EUR get memcon of my call w Westerwelle?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 9:38 PM
To: 'slaughtera@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Your example

I wouldn't have closed the govt again tomorrow but once the decision was made, it is difficult to operate inside the Building since so many staff will stay away. So let's work from home--again!

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 21:34:52 2010
Subject: Your example

Your staying home tomorrow will make lots of parents at higher levels feel ok about staying home with their kids. I may be one of them!

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,1.4(D),B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 10:05 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

I read all the way down and am very concerned but not surprised. Have you shared the content w Bill? What do you think should be done--and by whom--to address these issues?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 21:45:58 2010
Subject: Fw: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

See traffic b/l

---

From: Lindwall, David E
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Koh, Harold Hongju; Merten, Kenneth H; Foote, Daniel L
Sent: Mon Feb 08 19:44:29 2010
Subject: RE: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

Cheryl, Bellerive hit me up before the beginning of a donors' meeting this morning to say that it's important that the US troops in country be covered by a bilateral agreement that defines, among other things, their immunities. [redacted] He noted that we have had SOFAs covering every military exercise in Haiti since he has been in government. [redacted] His critics have been on the radio daily accusing him and Préval of selling out Haiti's sovereignty by allowing foreign troops into the country. [redacted]. From other statements he made today, [redacted]. David

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 02/08/2025

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Mills, Cheryl D

Sent: Monday, February 08, 2010 7:10 PM
To: Lindwall, David E; Merten, Kenneth H; Kennedy, Patrick F; Brimmer, Esther D; Curtis, Meghann A; Robinson, David M; Jacobs, Janice L; Bond, Michele T; Reynoso, Julissa; Lambert, Christopher A; [redacted] B6
Cc: [redacted] Lucke, Lewis (HAITI/TDY); Dei, Carleene (HAITI/DIR); De Pirro, Velia M; [redacted] Anderson, Gerald C; Koh, Harold Hongju
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

Can you explain more on his goals for a SOFA given our joint communique

Adding harold koh

---

From: Lindwall, David E
To: Merten, Kenneth H; Kennedy, Patrick F; Brimmer, Esther D; Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A; Robinson, David M; Jacobs, Janice L; Bond, Michele T; Reynoso, Julissa; Lambert, Christopher A; Trivelli, Paul A AMB USSOUTHCOM/SC-CC (L) [redacted]
Cc: 'Keen, Ken LTG USA USSOUTHCOM/SC-CC (L)' [redacted] Lucke, Lewis (HAITI/TDY); Dei, Carleene (HAITI/DIR); De Pirro, Velia M; [redacted] Anderson, Gerald C
Sent: Mon Feb 08 19:01:51 2010
Subject: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

I was in three meetings today with Prime Minister Jean Max Bellerive and he made the following points:

Donors' Confab: The GOH would like to hold the donors' pledging conference in New York on April 15. They have discounted their original date (March 22-23) because there is an IDB meeting in Mexico City on those same dates. There is a technical donors' meetings in Santo Domingo on April 14, and the GOH would like the pledging session to come after it. Bellerive said the GOH would also be open to doing the pledging session on March 31, though they prefer April 15.

Status of Forces Agreement: Bellerive asked me if we could propose to the GOH a SOFA covering US troops in Haiti. [redacted] 1.4(D) B1 [redacted] I told him we would consult and get back to him ASAP.

Adoptions: Bellerive signed the two lists of humanitarian parole letters I brought him, [redacted] 1.4(B) [redacted] 1.4(D) asking if we are close to finishing all the kids in the pipeline. In a later meeting with multiple donors Bellerive talked about the case of the ten Amcits being held for allegedly trying to take Haitian children out of the country withou B1 authorization. He said that this case is in the hands of the courts and that the Executive has no influence over the outcome, but said it is an example of the GOH's need to control the problem of child trafficking which he said has increased exponentially since the earthquake. He said the judge has three months to decide the case. He has already dropped the most serious charge of kidnapping, and now the charges "only carry a maximum of 15 years in prison." He said that the judge might determine that there isn't enough evidence in the case to try the Amcits. He said that the only power the Executive has in the case would be a presidential pardon in the event they are found guilty. He would not speculate on whether Préval would consider a pardon if the Amcits are found guilty.

Migrants: He approved the return to Haiti of 62 Haitian migrants detained on Great Exuma and said repatriations should continue as pre-earthquake normal.

Relations with Dominican Republic: On instructions, I asked Bellerive in private what the GOH believed would be the appropriate role of the Dominican Republic in donor coordination mechanisms. 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1

Political dilemma: The executive decree establishing a state of urgency expires on February 15 and can only be extended by Parliament. Parliament has been fiercely critical of the Préval/Bellerive government since the disaster, and This leaves the government with the dilemma of how to handle extraordinary disaster needs (such as declaring land of public utility) after February 15. UN SRSG Mullet encouraged Bellerive to seek a "full consensus" with the opposition as "nothing short of unanimity" would be required to address the enormous challenges Haiti is facing. Bellerive told the donor community that the GOH may soon have to choose between becoming totally ineffective (which he said they will not do) or taking actions that exceed the authority given to the Executive by the law (which he implied they are prepared to do). The government is meeting with the private sector to get their approval of their reconstruction strategy, recognizing that they will have great difficulty getting a consensus with the political parties. Bellerive said that the GOH is also evaluating what to do about upcoming elections and constitutional reform, but implied that they have more time to reach a decision on these matters.

Préval to address the nation: The government is going to designate February 12 (the month anniversary of the quake) as a day of national mourning and President Préval will make his first formal address to the nation since the disaster. They are drafting his speech to be part mourning and part the vision of the future. Préval wants to announce that all the ministries are up and running as usual.

Ministries: The PM said that the Primature and the Ministry of Planning will be moving into the old US Embassy building. The courts will move into the old USAID building. The plan to move a number of the ministries out to Croix des Bouquets has met with very little enthusiasm from the main line ministries. They prefer to clear the rubble off of their properties in downtown Port-au-Prince and either build new buildings (EU is offering to finance) or put up temporary structures (Canada is offering to finance).

David E. Lindwall

Chargé d'Affairs

U.S. Embassy Port-au-Prince, Haiti

(509) 2229-8132

SBU

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 8:56 PM
To: H; 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Re: [redacted] B6

Asking.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: Huma Abedin; 'hanleymr@state.gov' <hanleymr@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Dec 21 20:55:32 2010
Subject: [redacted]

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 10:08 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'; 'cheryl.mills [redacted] B6
Subject: Tomorrow

I can't believe the govt is closed again. I guess I will work from home again but think this is silly.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:49 AM
To: Huma Abedin
Cc: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Yang

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Huma Abedin
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 10:46:07 2010
Subject: Yang

Jake said he spoke to you about making yang call. U willing to do tonite? Tomorrow morning?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 9:05 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Any word on vote yet?

Think it will be in the 12 to 2 timeframe. We are down to about 5 amendments, two of which we may just be able to accept. Spent some quality time with John McCain tonight, who once again railed about Putin on Larry King. Totally surreal that's what this has come down to...will email or call when we know more. Just had our last vote for the night.

----- Original Message -----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 08:55 PM
To: Verma, Richard R
Subject: Any word on vote yet?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 10:27 PM
To: 'vermarr@state.gov'
Subject: Re:

I am so sorry we lost him. Ed Rendell told me he wants to hold a big memorial service in the State Capitol in Harrisburg but he hasn't spoken to Joyce yet. I haven't either. I'd like to go too wherever it is. Let me know what you hear.

Also, since the govt is closed again tomorrow and Congress cancelled too, and another big storm is expected tomorrow night, do you think Congress will even bother showing up for our hearings? I'm planning on working from home.

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 22:22:20 2010
Subject:

Still haven't heard anything about funeral arrangements for Mr Murtha. I am planning to attend, wherever it will be (johnstown or arlington). Will let you know when I hear something. It's such a big loss for the community, the state and the country. PA officials are talking about a special election on May 18th.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 9:24 PM
To: H; 'hanleymr@state.gov'
Subject: Re: [redacted] B6

[redacted] Cannot do 8:30am.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: Huma Abedin; 'hanleymr@state.gov' <hanleymr@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Dec 21 20:55:32 2010
Subject: [redacted]

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:38 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: On the Ground Intelligence

Remind me who Bob McGuire is.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 11:24:34 2010
Subject: On the Ground Intelligence

Ruh-roh

From: remaguire [redacted] [mailto:remaguire [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:42 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: RE: RE: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points

General and specific concerns: Specifically heard from Haiti is that Preval has acceded too much authority to the Vorbe family.

Second, more general, is that the BAMBAM families (the term, I understand, created from the initials of the 6 leading elite families) are gearing up to inflate costs of doing things and to try to monopolize to the extent they can. Will forward in a separate email one or two articles I've seen on this.

I'm off to Trinity to prepare my classes for this week. (A reality of my full-time teaching load). While check email later. Thanks for this opportunity to share thoughts. Am very anxious to do this.

Can't miss the NFC game, even though the Eagles (I'm from Philly) already collapsed. I also lived in S.W. Louisiana during the N.O. "Aints" years.

Best - Bob

On Jn 24, 2010, Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov> wrote:

> You and our secretary share similar concerns about making sure Haiti's future is decided by Haiti.
>
> When we met with PM and P, they both indicated they wanted US to play a large coordination role on their behalf to ensure their voice, plans and goals were accomplished. We are committed to doing that as they requested.

I do think fast will mean some will make money they shouldn't – but goal is to have balance so we move with enough alacrity to build confidence that things are getting done.

Who are the Haiti "operator" types of which this concern is being spoken?

From: remaguire [mailto:remaguire B6
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 9:44 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: RE: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points

I hope the GOH has back-up to hold firm to its positions. Some will want to push it around. Also, while urgent need for tent cities clear PAP is clear, definitely not part of solution. Fearful of potential permanance of them unless alternates for rural resettlement along lines of talking points exist.

Am hearing that lots of concern that Haiti's "operators" are licking their chops to make lots of money off this. Fact of life or need to expand circle of actors?

Hang in there. - Bob

On Jan 24, 2010, Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov> wrote:

> Great – right in line with our thinking so this is great.
>
> Thanks for forwarding – anything else of note?
>
> cdm
>
> From: remaguire [mailto:remaguire
> Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 9:23 AM
> To: Mills, Cheryl D
> Subject: from GOH - Montreal meeting talking points
>
> Cheryl - See below the response of Leslie Voltaire and PM Jean Max Bellerive to talking points for tomorrow's Montreal meeting I proposed yesterday. Talking points at the end. Response positive. I have also shared these with Paul Farmer. Same response. Sources at the UN fear, however, that the donors will focus on PAP and miss this historic opportunity. - Bob

(email sent also to Patrick G.)

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Leslie Voltaire
Date: Jan 23, 2010
Subject: Tr : Montreal - talking points - urgent
To: remaguire B6

Komisyon pa chaj

Leslie

----- Message transféré ----
De : Jean Max Bellerive
À : Leslie Voltaire
Envoyé le : Sam 23 Janvier 2010, 19 h 33 min 51 s
Objet : Re: Montreal - talking points - urgent

Thanks ! En ligne avec ce que je pense dire

JMB

---

From: Leslie Voltaire
To: Jean-Max Bellerive
Sent: Sat, January 23, 2010 10:23:24 PM
Subject: Montreal - talking points - urgent

PM

Reflexions de Bob Maguire

Leslie

----- Message transféré ----
De : "remaguire <remaguire B6
À : lvoltaire
Envoyé le : Sam 23 Janvier 2010, 13 h 22 min 27 s
Objet : Montreal - talking points - urgent

Leslie - First, thank god you were in NYC on Jan 12th. I hope your personal losses were minimal. Surely, Haiti has lost much. We all have...

Thoughts for Montreal:

1. This offers an opportunity to 'rebalance' Haiti.
2. Pay attention to the exodus from PAP and catch up with it. (The migration to PAP over the past 30 years was an unnatural development, spurred by rural neglect and urban concentration.)
3. A decentralized system of 'welcome centers' in town and villages can assist returnees re-integrate. Medical and continuing education services should be a part of them. NEED TO ACT NOW.
4. More important, the centers must be equipped to provide work - make them the basis for organizing the civic service corps. Higly decentralized: work for cash; public works/environmental restoration/food production; restoration of human dignity; rural-urban partnerships through work;e in Haiti's real future. Also a chance to begin repairing the social fabric. Will need a 'tough love' approach; disciplined management. Not the work for NGOs.
5. No investment in rural areas and no response to this opportunity will = back to the future re. crowded PAP. People will trickle back to the city to replicate past problems.
6. The damage was done before the earthquake by development/investment policies that ignored the rural areas; saw Haitians simply as sources of cheap labor; denigrated human dignity; failed to strengthen local institutions.
7. This must stop; can't happen again.
8. This is the time to move forward with the Civic Service Corps - quickly.

kenbe. Pa lage. - Bob

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,1.4(D),B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 10:29 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

Are you going to stay home?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 22:27:49 2010
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

Am going to connect w/ bellerive in am

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Mon Feb 08 22:04:44 2010
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

I read all the way down and am very concerned but not surprised. Have you shared the content w Bill? What do you think should be done--and by whom--to address these issues?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 21:45:58 2010
Subject: Fw: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

See traffic b/l

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 02/08/2025

---

From: Lindwall, David E
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Koh, Harold Hongju; Merten, Kenneth H; Foote, Daniel L
Sent: Mon Feb 08 19:44:29 2010
Subject: RE: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1

Cheryl, Bellerive hit me up before the beginning of a donors' meeting this morning to say that it's important that the US troops in country be covered by a bilateral agreement that defines, among other things, their immunities. [redacted] He noted that we have had SOFAs covering every military exercise in Haiti since he has been in government. [redacted] His critics have been on the radio daily accusing him and Préval of selling out Haiti's sovereignty by allowing foreign troops into the country. 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1

From other statements he made today, David

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Monday, February 08, 2010 7:10 PM
To: Lindwall, David E; Merten, Kenneth H; Kennedy, Patrick F; Brimmer, Esther D; Curtis, Meghann A; Robinson, David M; Jacobs, Janice L; Bond, Michele T; Reynoso, Julissa; Lambert, Christopher A; B6
Cc: ; Lucke, Lewis (HAITI/TDY); Dei, Carleene (HAITI/DIR); De Pirro, Velia M; ; Anderson, Gerald C; Koh, Harold Hongju
Subject: Re: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

Can you explain more on his goals for a SOFA given our joint communique

Adding harold koh

---

From: Lindwall, David E
To: Merten, Kenneth H; Kennedy, Patrick F; Brimmer, Esther D; Mills, Cheryl D; Curtis, Meghann A; Robinson, David M; Jacobs, Janice L; Bond, Michele T; Reynoso, Julissa; Lambert, Christopher A; Trivelli, Paul A AMB USSOUTHCOM/SC-CC (L) <
Cc: 'Keen, Ken LTG USA USSOUTHCOM/SC-CC (L)' < ; Lucke, Lewis (HAITI/TDY); Dei, Carleene (HAITI/DIR); De Pirro, Velia M;
Anderson, Gerald C
Sent: Mon Feb 08 19:01:51 2010
Subject: PM Bellerive on Donors' Conference, SOFA, adoptions, migrants, political dilema and more

I was in three meetings today with Prime Minister Jean Max Bellerive and he made the following points:

Donors' Confab: The GOH would like to hold the donors' pledging conference in New York on April 15. They have discounted their original date (March 22-23) because there is an IDB meeting in Mexico City on those same dates. There is a technical donors' meetings in Santo Domingo on April 14, and the GOH would like the pledging session to come after it. Bellerive said the GOH would also be open to doing the pledging session on March 31, though they prefer April 15.

Status of Forces Agreement: Bellerive asked me if we could propose to the GOH a SOFA covering US troops in Haiti. 1.4(D) B1 I told him we would consult and get back to him ASAP.

Adoptions: Bellerive signed the two lists of humanitarian parole letters I brought him, 1.4(B) 1.4(D) asking if we are close to finishing all the kids in the pipeline. In a later meeting with multiple donors Bellerive talked about the case of the ten Amcits being held for allegedly trying to take Haitian children out of the country without B1 authorization. He said that this case is in the hands of the courts and that the Executive has no influence over the outcome, but said it is an example of the GOH's need to control the problem of child trafficking which he said has increased exponentially since the earthquake. He said the judge has three months to decide the case. He has already dropped the most serious charge of kidnapping, and now the charges "only carry a maximum of 15 years in prison." He said that the judge might determine that there isn't enough evidence in the case to try the Amcits. He said that the only power the Executive has in the case would be a presidential pardon in the event they are found guilty. He would not speculate on whether Préval would consider a pardon if the Amcits are found guilty.

Migrants: He approved the return to Haiti of 62 Haitian migrants detained on Great Exuma and said repatriations should continue as pre-earthquake normal.

Relations with Dominican Republic: On instructions, I asked Bellerive in private what the GOH believed would be the appropriate role of the Dominican Republic in donor coordination mechanisms. 1.4(B) 1.4(D) B1

Political dilemma: The executive decree establishing a state of urgency expires on February 15 and can only be extended by Parliament. Parliament has been fiercely critical of the Préval/Bellerive government since the disaster, and This leaves the 1.4(B) 1.4(D) government with the dilemma of how to handle extraordinary disaster needs (such as declaring land of public utility) after February 15. UN SRSG Mullet encouraged Bellerive to seek a "full consensus" with the opposition as "nothing short of unanimity" would be required to address the enormous challenges Haiti is facing. B1 Bellerive told the donor community that the GOH may soon have to choose between becoming totally ineffective (which he said they will not do) or taking actions that exceed the authority given to the Executive by the law (which he implied they are prepared to do). The government is meeting with the private sector to get their approval of their reconstruction strategy, recognizing that they will have great difficulty getting a consensus with the political parties. Bellerive said that the GOH is also evaluating what to do about upcoming elections and constitutional reform, but implied that they have more time to reach a decision on these matters.

Préval to address the nation: The government is going to designate February 12 (the month anniversary of the quake) as a day of national mourning and President Préval will make his first formal address to the nation since the disaster. They are drafting his speech to be part mourning and part the vision of the future. Préval wants to announce that all the ministries are up and running as usual.

Ministries: The PM said that the Primature and the Ministry of Planning will be moving into the old US Embassy building. The courts will move into the old USAID building. The plan to move a number of the ministries out to Croix des Bouquets has met with very little enthusiasm from the main line ministries. They prefer to clear the rubble off of their properties in downtown Port-au-Prince and either build new buildings (EU is offering to finance) or put up temporary structures (Canada is offering to finance).

David E. Lindwall

Chargé d'Affairs

U.S. Embassy Port-au-Prince, Haiti

(509) 2229-8132

SBU

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 11:43 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Setting up holbrooke first, and then Eugenie.

Who? I thought Eikenberry.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 11:42:34 2010
Subject: Setting up holbrooke first, and then Eugenie.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 8, 2010 10:41 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Murtha statement

Ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 08 22:38:38 2010
Subject: Murtha statement

You ok with this?
I was deeply saddened to hear of the passing of Congressman Jack Murtha. From the battlefields of Vietnam to the hills of Western Pennsylvania to the halls of Congress, Jack Murtha lived by the Marine Corps credo "Semper Fidelis," never wavering in his faithful commitment to the country he loved and the men and women who bravely defend her. In war and in peace, he fought for what he knew was right, even when it was unpopular. He was a fierce advocate for working families struggling with a changing economy and for better health care and equipment for servicemembers. And over the course of more than three decades in Congress, he became one of our nation's most respected voices on national security and foreign policy. Presidents of both parties sought his advice and generations of colleagues looked to him for leadership and wisdom. As Senator from New York serving on the Armed Services Committee, I was fortunate to call Jack a friend and mentor. And as Secretary of State, I continued to rely on his expertise and judgment. I knew that Jack would always shoot straight, like the Marine he was, and never shy away from a difficult question or a tough fight. Today our country has lost a decorated war hero and a distinguished public servant. The men and women of the our armed forces have lost a tireless champion. And the people of Pennsylvania's 12th district have lost a neighbor, an advocate, and a true friend. My thoughts and prayers are with them and with Jack's beloved wife Joyce and their family. He will be sorely missed.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 12:05 PM
To: 'preines[redacted] B6
Subject: Tavis Smiley

I just saw an article he wrote in USA Weekend claiming we had FOX on our airplane screens. What is he talking about? He makes a big deal out of it.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 11:30 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: ROK army to hold largest ever live-fire drill (Reuters)

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-Korea; SES-O_Shift-III; SES-O_OS
Sent: Tue Dec 21 21:57:25 2010
Subject: ROK army to hold largest ever live-fire drill (Reuters)

SEOUL (Reuters) - The Republic of Korea (ROK) army said it will hold its largest-ever live-fire drill near the military border with the Democratic People's Republic of Korea on December 23 in a show of force in the wake of Pyongyang's attack on one of its islands last month. The drill, involving artillery, fighter jets and the largest number of personnel in a peace-time exercise, comes after the ROK's live-fire artillery exercise on December 20 on the island near the tensely guarded sea border and is likely to infuriate Pyongyang. It will take place on the ROK mainland.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 7:39 AM
To: 'preines 'sullivanjj@state.gov' B6
Cc: 'cheryl.mills ; Huma Abedin
Subject: David Brooks

Took a shot at me in his column today. Any ideas what prompted it?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 12:08 PM
To: 'preines[redacted] B6
Subject: Re: Tavis Smiley

But why did he make such a big deal out of it? And what did I say when he asked?

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR <preines[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 12:06:34 2010
Subject: Re: Tavis Smiley

He asked you about this when you sat down. The press hangs in the Andrews DV lounge and gets on the plane well before you, the Air Force must have had Fox on when he was with us.

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
Subject: Tavis Smiley
Sent: Jan 24, 2010 12:04 PM

I just saw an article he wrote in USA Weekend claiming we had FOX on our airplane screens. What is he talking about? He makes a big deal out of it.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 7:26 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Contact Information

From: Jaime Aleman [mailto ] B6
Sent: Tuesday, December 21, 2010 9:55 AM
To: Jaime Aleman
Subject: Contact Information

Dear Friends,
As you probably know by now, I have decided to resign as Ambassador of Panama to the White House, effective January 2, 2011.

Regards,
Jaime

H.E. Jaime Alemán
Ambassador of the Republic of Panama to the United States
2862 McGill Terrace NW
Washington, D.C. 20008
tel. (202) 332-1275

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, February 9, 2010 9:47 AM
To: 'preines [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: David Brooks

Agreed--full speed ahead. But, I think we may also need a more aggressive strategy of pushing our message. Can you call me at home thru OPs? Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR <preines [redacted]
To: H
Cc: CDM <cheryl.mills [redacted] Huma Abedin; Jake Sullivan < [redacted]
Sent: Tue Feb 09 09:44:59 2010
Subject: Re: David Brooks

Not sure - but this is a good excuse to bring him in for an OTR with you. Lona mentioned you wanted to see Tom Friedman - with your ok, we could schedule both (separately) over the next month or so

I'd very much like to get back in the habit of bringing someone or a small group in every few weeks.

------Original Message------
From: Evergreen
To: PIR
To: Jake Sullivan
Cc: CDM
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: David Brooks
Sent: Feb 9, 2010 7:39 AM

Took a shot at me in his column today. Any ideas what prompted it?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 4:13 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'; Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Undeliverable: Followup w Sec Napolitano

What is Eric Scwarz's email?

----- Original Message -----
From: postmaster@state.gov <postmaster@state.gov>
To: scwarzericp@state.gov <scwarzericp@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 24 16:09:23 2010
Subject: Undeliverable: Followup w Sec Napolitano

Delivery has failed to these recipients or distribution lists:

scwarzericp@state.gov
The recipient's e-mail address was not found in the recipient's e-mail system. Microsoft Exchange will not try to redeliver this message for you. Please check the e-mail address and try resending this message, or provide the following diagnostic text to your system administrator.

Diagnostic information for administrators:

Generating server: MSWASHDCIB01.washdc.state.sbu

scwarzericp@state.gov
#< #5.1.1> #SMTP#

Original message headers:

Received: from vance2.state.gov ([10.4.16.249]) by
MSWASHDCIB01.washdc.state.sbu with Microsoft SMTPSVC(6.0.3790.3959); Sun, 24
Jan 2010 16:09:22 -0500
Received: from mail.clintonemail.com (ool-18bbeabb.static.optonline.net [24.187.234.187])
by vance2.state.gov with ESMTP id o0OKfLRW013222;
Sun, 24 Jan 2010 15:41:21 -0500
Received: from CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993]) by CLNTINET08.clinton.local ([fe80::d0bb:23d3:f75e:4993%10]) with mapi; Sun, 24 Jan 2010 16:09:21 -0500
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: "'cheryl.mills[redacted]" <cheryl.mills[redacted]>, B6
"'brimmere@state.gov'" <brimmere@state.gov>, "'scwarzericp@state.gov'"
<scwarzericp@state.gov>

CC: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
Date: Sun, 24 Jan 2010 16:09:21 -0500
Subject: Followup w Sec Napolitano
Thread-Topic: Followup w Sec Napolitano
Thread-Index: AcqdOX+x0D6YJ2s7QS+7tLkSF8OrVw==
Message-ID: <786762D781A7FF4FAC9060892B4044880368178E41@CLNTINET08.clinton.local>
Accept-Language: en-US
Content-Language: en-US
X-MS-Has-Attach:
X-MS-TNEF-Correlator:
acceptlanguage: en-US
Content-Type: text/plain; charset="utf-8"
Content-Transfer-Encoding: base64
MIME-Version: 1.0
Return-Path: HDR22@clintonemail.com
X-OriginalArrivalTime: 24 Jan 2010 21:09:22.0667 (UTC) FILETIME=[806AF3B0:01CA9D39]
X-TM-AS-Product-Ver: SMEX-8.0.0.4125-6.000.1038-17148.000
X-TM-AS-Result: No--15.161000-5.000000-31
X-TM-AS-User-Approved-Sender: No
X-TM-AS-User-Blocked-Sender: No

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 6:33 PM
To: 'toivnf@state.gov'
Cc: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Need a favor

Nora--

Cheryl has emailed dozens of memos about Haiti to me this weekend. Can you please print them and organize them in chrono order for me for my trip tomorrow or send to Lauren so she can do? Thx.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 9:48 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Floor Update: Senate passes DoD Authorization

FYI

From: Rodriguez, Miguel E
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 9:35 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: FW: Floor Update: Senate passes DoD Authorization

In case you're giving an update to S, wanted to be sure you saw that Defense Authorization has indeed passed the Senate and is now heading back to the House.

From: Engle, Tricia (DPC) [mailto:Tricia_Engle@dpc.senate.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 9:08 AM
To: Undisclosed recipients
Subject: Floor Update: Senate passes DoD Authorization

By unanimous consent, the Senate has passed Calendar #717, H.R. 6523, the DoD Authorization bill, with Levin-McCain amendment.

Tricia Engle
Senior Floor Assistant to Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid

To view the Senate Democratic Floor Schedule, vote tallies, unanimous consent agreements, and legislative and executive action visit http://democrats.senate.gov/calendar/

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 11:39 AM
To: H
Subject: McCain

Think we just got him. He cosponsored the Corker missile defense amendment...

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:56 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Jim's going to call you

Who's Jim?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 22:32:31 2010
Subject: FW: Jim's going to call you

fyi

From: Buhl, Cindy [mailto:Cindy.Buhl@mail.house.gov]
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 4:32 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Buhl, Cindy
Subject: Jim's going to call you

Dear Cheryl -
He's going to call your [redacted] number. We're both hoping, on one had, that you're not there and you're at home. Please feel free to call his cell phone [redacted] -- or he'll call you again on Monday. In the meantime, he asked me to pass along to you this simple but heartfelt comment: "Please tell her I've never been prouder of my government. I mean that. Sincerely." B6

Cindy

---
Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 10:59 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Conversation with Bob Maguire

Really good ideas. But remind me who McGuire is.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 22:35:56 2010
Subject: FW: Conversation with Bob Maguire

Think I may have sent this but interesting insights and overlapping ones.

---

From: Peter Harrell [redacted] B6
To: Harrell, Peter E
Sent: Sun Jan 24 14:56:20 2010
Subject: Conversation with Bob Maguire

Cheryl,

I had a good conversation with Bob this afternoon. The major points he wanted to emphasize were the ones he had included in his emails to you, including:

* "Rebalancing" Haitian development: Redevelopment should occur nationwide and encourage a more even distribution of the Haitian population. The international community should not rebuild Port-au-Prince at the expense of the rest of the country. Bob thinks that nationwide rebuilding will also reduce the chances of elite capture of the rebuilding effort, since elites are strongly concentrated in Port-au-Prince.

* Transparency: Bob is cautious about just throwing money at the problem. He thinks the international community should establish a new norm of transparency in Haiti, for example, to ensure that there isn't widespread corruption, price gauging, grants of monopolies, etc.

* Link the Haitian business community to other business communities: Bob thinks that if all the rebuilding is done by the usual suspects in the Haitian business community, they'll simply build back the country they had before. He recommends working to bring in foreign investors, and then linking foreign investors and leading Haitian businessmen (e.g., in a business roundtable) to socialize better business practices in Haiti.

* On the issue of legal authorities for reconstruction: Bob recommends exploring whether presidential commission-like structures could be empowered to resolve the legal problems likely to arise as barriers to reconstruction.

* Duration of US presence: Bob cautioned that most Haitians would be happy to see a long-term US military presence in the country, though this would likely have adverse reputational consequences in the hemisphere for the United States. Given that hurricane season will begin in the fall, Bob recommends that when we do draw down, we make clear that we will return if needed.

* Getting people to work: Bob argued that NGOs may not be the best vehicles for getting Haitians to work (e.g., through job training, etc.). In short, they're too nice. Many Haitians have never held a regular job, are unfamiliar with showing up on time, etc. They'll need a bit of tough love and discipline. Bob though ex-military might set the right kind of example.

* Diaspora: Engaging the diaspora is clearly important, but we do not want to support widespread repatriation of the diaspora as NGO employees, reconstruction experts, etc., at the expense of Haitians who never left. This reinforces wage differentials and social discontent about returnees.

* Conditional cash transfers: Bob thinks that conditional cash transfer programs have a lot of potential to improve education and the delivery of health services in Haiti.

--
Peter E. Harrell

B6

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 11:48 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: QDDR FOLLOWUP

Sigh – despite my having advised otherwise . . .

From: Hormats, Robert D
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 11:07 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: QDDR FOLLOWUP

Hi Cheryl,

As I head out of town for few days, I wanted to pass on a few comments on the QDDR.

First, on the "E" side of things, [redacted] B5

To prepare for the changes ahead, I have pulled together a team with Kerri-Ann, Jose, Dick Morningstar, David Goldwyn and Andy Reynolds from STAS to discuss [redacted] Tom Smitham on my staff will set up a coordination group with their deputies.

I want to ensure that the [redacted]

In my discussions over the past week with the A/Ss and Special Envoys, we identified the need [redacted] B5

I look forward to discussing with you, Tom Nides, Pat and others in the new year.

I want to wish you and your family a very happy holiday. It has been a pleasure working with you this year and I look forward to 2011.

Best regards,

Bob.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 25, 2010 7:15 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: URGENCE
Attachments: IMG_1902.JPG; IMG_1902.JPG

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Dr. Mark Hyman [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 20:13:09 2010
Subject: FW: URGENCE

Dear Hillary,

I just arrived back but my heart and mind are back in Haiti..... I am thankful that you helped me get there and supported the resurrection of the hospital in just one week. General Keen was key in reestablishing the hospital (and I got to appreciate MRE's). When we got there there were 1500 patients and 400 corpses in a deserted hospital — our team of 7 was the only group there.... And slowly over the week we have built a functioning hospital again.

Meeting and working with Paul has been good for the soul---- although when I felt I wanted to meet him – this was not the way...But I think I am in this for the long haul...

Below is an email for President Clinton (it was good to see him and Chelsea and Mark there) I promised to forward this email by a medical student he spoke to in the operating room .... Desperate to find a way to continue his education. Attached is picture of him and I in front of the surgery area. And there were 3 more I met a few nights later who had volunteered since the first days but had not eaten in a week (I managed to gather bag of biscuits from the world food program from behind 3 padlocks after 1 hours of searching – They slept on the hospital grounds because their homes were destroyed.

I am not sure what we can do... But I promised to pass this on!

Thank you for who you are in the world.. God bless you!

Your friend in gratitude,

Mark

------ Forwarded Message
From: [redacted]
Date: Sun, 24 Jan 2010 18:22:03 -0600
To: Mark Hyman < [redacted]
Subject: URGENCE

Dear M. President
My name is [redacted] the young man who took to you on the Hospital in Haiti.

With all my Heart i want to thank you so much for helping Haiti in this terrible situation,... Thank you so much for your visit in the country, we really appreciate that, so thank you so much...
As you know, all the universities are broken, so now we get no way to continue our education... And we are with our family in the streets, so life is become more difficult as we never imagine.... I know that the USA used to help Haiti with Scholarship, but is really sad to tell you that the kind of young man as me, never get chance to benefice a scholarship, just because we are in the last categories in the society (the poor persons)....So, In that Situation we need your help more than ever, Please, please, please M. President we are "3" friends are helping in the hospital since after the catastrophe, and now we are thinking about how to continue to sturdy, So Please, please, please help us have a scholarship in USA... And we promiss to come back after to teach, and help the orders... God will Bless you for that M. President because we are really, really, really in need...
Thank you so much to gave me a chance to talk to you, when you was in the country, and thank you for reading this mail, God bless you...

------ End of Forwarded Message

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 12:18 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma; Reines, Philippe I; Mills, Cheryl D; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Update

Just adopted the last amendment...could vote in the next hour or two. Still waiting for a uc agreement to lock in a time certain. But I believe it will be between now and 2.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 25, 2010 7:15 AM
To: 'cheryl.mills [redacted] B6
Subject: Fw: URGENCE
Attachments: IMG_1902.JPG; IMG_1902.JPG

We should help students whose education has been interrupted finish here or in French speaking countries. See story below.

----- Original Message -----
From: Dr. Mark Hyman [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 20:13:09 2010
Subject: FW: URGENCE

Dear Hillary,

I just arrived back but my heart and mind are back in Haiti..... I am thankful that you helped me get there and supported the resurrection of the hospital in just one week. General Keen was key in reestablishing the hospital (and I got to appreciate MRE's). When we got there there were 1500 patients and 400 corpses in a deserted hospital — our team of 7 was the only group there.... And slowly over the week we have built a functioning hospital again.

Meeting and working with Paul has been good for the soul---- although when I felt I wanted to meet him – this was not the way...But I think I am in this for the long haul...

Below is an email for President Clinton (it was good to see him and Chelsea and Mark there) I promised to forward this email by a medical student he spoke to in the operating room .... Desperate to find a way to continue his education. Attached is picture of him and I in front of the surgery area. And there were 3 more I met a few nights later who had volunteered since the first days but had not eaten in a week (I managed to gather bag of biscuits from the world food program from behind 3 padlocks after 1 hours of searching – They slept on the hospital grounds because their homes were destroyed.

I am not sure what we can do... But I promised to pass this on!

Thank you for who you are in the world.. God bless you!

Your friend in gratitude,

Mark

------ Forwarded Message
From: [redacted]
Date: Sun, 24 Jan 2010 18:22:03 -0600
To: Mark Hyman [redacted]
Subject: URGENCE

Dear M. President
My name is [redacted], the young man who took to you on the Hospital in Haiti.

With all my Heart i want to thank you so much for helping Haiti in this terrible situation,... Thank you so much for your visit in the country, we really appreciate that, so thank you so much...
As you know, all the universities are broken, so now we get no way to continue our education... And we are with our family in the streets, so life is become more difficult as we never imagine.... I know that the USA used to help Haiti with Scholarship, but is really sad to tell you that the kind of young man as me, never get chance to benefice a scholarship, just because we are in the last categories in the society (the poor persons)....So, In that Situation we need your help more than ever, Please, please, please M. President we are "3" friends are helping in the hospital since after the catastrophe, and now we are thinking about how to continue to sturdy, So Please, please, please help us have a scholarship in USA... And we promiss to come back after to teach, and help the orders... God will Bless you for that M. President because we are really, really, really in need...
Thank you so much to gave me a chance to talk to you, when you was in the country, and thank you for reading this mail, God bless you...

B6

------ End of Forwarded Message

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 25, 2010 7:16 AM
To: 'toivnf@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Need a favor

Thx so much.

----- Original Message -----
From: Toiv, Nora F <ToivNF@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 24 18:53:21 2010
Subject: RE: Need a favor

Yes. I'll have them for you before you leave State in the morning.

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, January 24, 2010 6:33 PM
To: Toiv, Nora F
Cc: Jiloty, Lauren C
Subject: Need a favor

Nora--

Cheryl has emailed dozens of memos about.Haiti to me this weekend. Can you please print them and organize them in chrono order for me for my trip tomorrow or send to Lauren so she can do? Thx.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 25, 2010 7:31 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: URGENCE
Attachments: IMG_1902.JPG; IMG_1902.JPG

Mark posted several postings on HuffPost from Haiti. Pls print them all for me. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Dr. Mark Hyman [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 20:13:09 2010
Subject: FW: URGENCE

Dear Hillary,

I just arrived back but my heart and mind are back in Haiti..... I am thankful that you helped me get there and supported the resurrection of the hospital in just one week. General Keen was key in reestablishing the hospital (and I got to appreciate MRE's). When we got there there were 1500 patients and 400 corpses in a deserted hospital — our team of 7 was the only group there.... And slowly over the week we have built a functioning hospital again.

Meeting and working with Paul has been good for the soul---- although when I felt I wanted to meet him – this was not the way...But I think I am in this for the long haul...

Below is an email for President Clinton (it was good to see him and Chelsea and Mark there) I promised to forward this email by a medical student he spoke to in the operating room .... Desperate to find a way to continue his education. Attached is picture of him and I in front of the surgery area. And there were 3 more I met a few nights later who had volunteered since the first days but had not eaten in a week (I managed to gather bag of biscuits from the world food program from behind 3 padlocks after 1 hours of searching – They slept on the hospital grounds because their homes were destroyed.

I am not sure what we can do... But I promised to pass this on!

Thank you for who you are in the world.. God bless you!

Your friend in gratitude,

Mark

------ Forwarded Message
From: [redacted]
Date: Sun, 24 Jan 2010 18:22:03 -0600
To: Mark Hyman [redacted]
Subject: URGENCE

Dear M. President
My name is [redacted], the young man who took to you on the Hospital in Haiti.

With all my Heart i want to thank you so much for helping Haiti in this terrible situation,... Thank you so much for your visit in the country, we really appreciate that, so thank you so much...
As you know, all the universities are broken, so now we get no way to continue our education... And we are with our family in the streets, so life is become more difficult as we never imagine.... I know that the USA used to help Haiti with Scholarship, but is really sad to tell you that the kind of young man as me, never get chance to benefice a scholarship, just because we are in the last categories in the society (the poor persons)....So, In that Situation we need your help more than ever, Please, please, please M. President we are "3" friends are helping in the hospital since after the catastrophe, and now we are thinking about how to continue to sturdy, So Please, please, please help us have a scholarship in USA... And we promiss to come back after to teach, and help the orders... God will Bless you for that M. President because we are really, really, really in need...
Thank you so much to gave me a chance to talk to you, when you was in the country, and thank you for reading this mail, God bless you...

B6

------ End of Forwarded Message

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 25, 2010 7:32 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Conversation with Bob Maguire

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 24 22:35:56 2010
Subject: FW: Conversation with Bob Maguire

Think I may have sent this but interesting insights and overlapping ones.

---

From: Peter Harrell [redacted] B6
To: Harrell, Peter E
Sent: Sun Jan 24 14:56:20 2010
Subject: Conversation with Bob Maguire

Cheryl,

I had a good conversation with Bob this afternoon. The major points he wanted to emphasize were the ones he had included in his emails to you, including:

* "Rebalancing" Haitian development: Redevelopment should occur nationwide and encourage a more even distribution of the Haitian population. The international community should not rebuild Port-au-Prince at the expense of the rest of the country. Bob thinks that nationwide rebuilding will also reduce the chances of elite capture of the rebuilding effort, since elites are strongly concentrated in Port-au-Prince.

* Transparency: Bob is cautious about just throwing money at the problem. He thinks the international community should establish a new norm of transparency in Haiti, for example, to ensure that there isn't widespread corruption, price gauging, grants of monopolies, etc.

* Link the Haitian business community to other business communities: Bob thinks that if all the rebuilding is done by the usual suspects in the Haitian business community, they'll simply build back the country they had before. He recommends working to bring in foreign investors, and then linking foreign investors and leading Haitian businessmen (e.g., in a business roundtable) to socialize better business practices in Haiti.

* On the issue of legal authorities for reconstruction: Bob recommends exploring whether presidential commission-like structures could be empowered to resolve the legal problems likely to arise as barriers to reconstruction.

* Duration of US presence: Bob cautioned that most Haitians would be happy to see a long-term US military presence in the country, though this would likely have adverse reputational consequences in the hemisphere for the United States. Given that hurricane season will begin in the fall, Bob recommends that when we do draw down, we make clear that we will return if needed.

* Getting people to work: Bob argued that NGOs may not be the best vehicles for getting Haitians to work (e.g., through job training, etc.). In short, they're too nice. Many Haitians have never held a regular job, are unfamiliar with showing up on time, etc. They'll need a bit of tough love and discipline. Bob though ex-military might set the right kind of example.

* Diaspora: Engaging the diaspora is clearly important, but we do not want to support widespread repatriation of the diaspora as NGO employees, reconstruction experts, etc., at the expense of Haitians who never left. This reinforces wage differentials and social discontent about returnees.

* Conditional cash transfers: Bob thinks that conditional cash transfer programs have a lot of potential to improve education and the delivery of health services in Haiti.

--
Peter E. Harrell

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 25, 2010 7:36 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Can you pls give me email addresses

For Claire, the special assistants and Joe?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 25, 2010 7:36 AM
To: 'slaughtera@state.gov'
Subject: Re: feedback on the internet speech

That is so gratifying! Thx for all your encouragement.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 10:50:12 2010
Subject: Fw: feedback on the internet speech

You must read this -- a Chinese blogger said that the Internet speech "was like a song to his heart."

---

From: Chollet, Derek H
To: Tillemann, Tomicah S; Muscatine, Lissa; Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Ross, Alec J; Cohen, Jared A; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jan 23 06:23:11 2010
Subject: Fw: feedback on the internet speech

Pretty cool

---

From: Heather Hurlburt [redacted] B6
To: Chollet, Derek H
Sent: Fri Jan 22 16:04:00 2010
Subject: feedback on the internet speech

Several NSN staff went to a CAP forum with some Chinese bloggers today, and came back emotionally overwhelmed by the bloggers' positive response to her speech. One of them apparently said the speech was like "a song to his heart" and my hard-bitten 20-something staffer said he almost cried when the guy said it. Nice work.

Heather Hurlburt

Executive Director

National Security Network

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, January 25, 2010 7:37 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: feedback on the internet speech

Pls print for me.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'slaughtera@state.gov' <slaughtera@state.gov>
Sent: Mon Jan 25 07:36:18 2010
Subject: Re: feedback on the internet speech

That is so gratifying! Thx for all your encouragement.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 23 10:50:12 2010
Subject: Fw: feedback on the internet speech

You must read this -- a Chinese blogger said that the Internet speech "was like a song to his heart."

---

From: Chollet, Derek H
To: Tillemann, Tomicah S; Muscatine, Lissa; Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Ross, Alec J; Cohen, Jared A; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jan 23 06:23:11 2010
Subject: Fw: feedback on the internet speech

Pretty cool

---

From: Heather Hurlburt [redacted] B6
To: Chollet, Derek H
Sent: Fri Jan 22 16:04:00 2010
Subject: feedback on the internet speech

Several NSN staff went to a CAP forum with some Chinese bloggers today, and came back emotionally overwhelmed by the bloggers' positive response to her speech. One of them apparently said the speech was like "a song to his heart" and my hard-bitten 20-something staffer said he almost cried when the guy said it. Nice work.

Heather Hurlburt

Executive Director

National Security Network

[redacted] B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 4:39 PM
To: H
Subject: Congratulations!!

This is an major achievement, and an even greater disaster averted. AM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 5:02 PM
To: H; Steinberg, James B; Hormats, Robert D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Valenzuela, Arturo A
Subject: trade preferences (Andean included...)

We just got a short term extension through the House and Senate.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Schwerin, Daniel B <SchwerinDB@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 5:24 PM
To: H
Cc: Reines, Philippe I; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Statement on Senate Passage of 9/11 Health Legislation

Madame Secretary, we have drafted a statement on the 9/11 health bill with help from Chris Falvo, Miguel, and Ann Gavaghan. Passing it along for your review.
Thanks
Dan

B5

###

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 5:26 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: HRC Veterans Legislation

From: Rodriguez, Miguel E
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Reines, Philippe I
Sent: Wed Dec 22 17:24:43 2010
Subject: HRC Veterans Legislation

S getting kudos from Durbin on the floor for her leadership on the Caregiver and Veterans Health Services Act, which he took up after she departed the Senate and provisions of which were enacted this year.

Miguel E. Rodriguez
Deputy Assistant Secretary for Senate Affairs
Bureau of Legislative Affairs
U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-2645
rodriguezme@state.gov

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 6:50 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: HRC Veterans Legislation

Done.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wed Dec 22 18:21:36 2010
Subject: Re: HRC Veterans Legislation

That is great news. Pls be sure Andrew Shapiro knows.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Dec 22 17:25:39 2010
Subject: Fw: HRC Veterans Legislation

---

From: Rodriguez, Miguel E
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Reines, Philippe I
Sent: Wed Dec 22 17:24:43 2010
Subject: HRC Veterans Legislation

S getting kudos from Durbin on the floor for her leadership on the Caregiver and Veterans Health Services Act, which he took up after she departed the Senate and provisions of which were enacted this year.

Miguel E. Rodriguez
Deputy Assistant Secretary for Senate Affairs Bureau of Legislative Affairs U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-2645
rodriguezme@state.gov

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 8:06 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Nides Confirmed

----- Original Message -----
From: Rodriguez, Miguel E
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 08:05 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Kennedy, Patrick F; Campbell, Piper; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Steinberg, James B
Cc: Verma, Richard R
Subject: Nides Confirmed

Tom Nides was just confirmed by the Senate.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 26, 2010 6:54 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Northern Ireland

Ok. I'm forwarding you more background from Shaun via Sid.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Jan 26 06:52:16 2010
Subject: Northern Ireland

Gordon Brown called Lou Susman a short while ago. Brown believes you should make a call to McGuinness this morning around 830 am (Declan and I agree that if you call McG you also must call Robinson). Brown proposes to speak with you at 820 or so to bring you up to speed before those calls.

The current situation is that Brown and Cowen are in Belfast, and met with Robinson, McGuinness, and other parties until 330 in the morning Belfast time. They have now resumed today. The sticking point is parades. Robinson wants the current parades commission abolished because it gives Republicans too much say. McGuinness refuses to allow the parades issue to be tied to the devolution issue.

The key message to McGuinness is to keep working this thing through -- not to take any drastic action that would bring down the assembly or collapse the process.

Declan agrees that this is the moment to make calls.

If you agree we can have the ops center set up the Brown call as well as the other two.

We'll get you some more background before the calls, but talking points will be fluid and shaped in large measure by Brown's report.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 8:06 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Nides Confirmed

----- Original Message -----
From: Rodriguez, Miguel E
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Kennedy, Patrick F; Campbell, Piper; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Steinberg, James B
Cc: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Wed Dec 22 20:05:24 2010
Subject: Nides Confirmed

Tom Nides was just confirmed by the Senate.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 8:12 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Nides Confirmed

What do u think about calling mcconnell?

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Rodriguez, Miguel E
Sent: Wed Dec 22 20:09:30 2010
Subject: Re: Nides Confirmed

If she is amenable, a call to McConnell would go a long way. Tom was the only person confirmed tonight...Miguel can confirm that...so it was a big deal.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 08:06 PM
To: Rodriguez, Miguel E; Mills, Cheryl D; Kennedy, Patrick F; Campbell, Piper; Sullivan, Jacob J; Steinberg, James B
Cc: Verma, Richard R
Subject: Re: Nides Confirmed

Thanks! Just passed to hrc too.

----- Original Message -----
From: Rodriguez, Miguel E
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Kennedy, Patrick F; Campbell, Piper; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Steinberg, James B
Cc: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Wed Dec 22 20:05:24 2010
Subject: Nides Confirmed

Tom Nides was just confirmed by the Senate.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 8:33 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Nides Confirmed

Ok. Rich confirms we got Nides, Brownfield, the MCC reps, and the UNGA reps. USAID got Paige Alexander.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wed Dec 22 20:17:58 2010
Subject: Re: Nides Confirmed

I already thanked him when he told me on the floor.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Dec 22 20:12:28 2010
Subject: Fw: Nides Confirmed

What do u think about calling mcconnell?

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R
To: Abedin, Huma
Cc: Rodriguez, Miguel E
Sent: Wed Dec 22 20:09:30 2010
Subject: Re: Nides Confirmed

If she is amenable, a call to McConnell would go a long way. Tom was the only person confirmed tonight...Miguel can confirm that...so it was a big deal.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 08:06 PM
To: Rodriguez, Miguel E; Mills, Cheryl D; Kennedy, Patrick F; Campbell, Piper; Sullivan, Jacob J; Steinberg, James B
Cc: Verma, Richard R
Subject: Re: Nides Confirmed

Thanks! Just passed to hrc too.

----- Original Message -----
From: Rodriguez, Miguel E
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Kennedy, Patrick F; Campbell, Piper; Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma; Steinberg, James B
Cc: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Wed Dec 22 20:05:24 2010
Subject: Nides Confirmed

Tom Nides was just confirmed by the Senate.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 8:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Draft on settlements ready for UN - Palestinians (Reuters)

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-IO; NEWS-NEA; NEWS-Mahogany; SES-O_Shift-III; SES-O_OS
Sent: Wed Dec 22 20:52:18 2010
Subject: Draft on settlements ready for UN - Palestinians (Reuters)

BETHLEHEM (Reuters) - A Palestinian Authority draft resolution condemning Israel's West Bank settlement activity is ready to be presented to the UNSC, a senior Palestinian Authority official said. Saeb Erekat, the chief Palestinian Authority negotiator in peace talks with Israel, said he expected the resolution would be put to a UNSC vote in February, after the United States ends its presidency of the council. "We are not condemning Israel. We are condemning settlement activities and we hope the resolution will pass," Erekat said. He said 15 nations had helped draft the proposal after Palestinian Authority President Abbas requested a UNSC meeting to discuss settlement building in November. "Something must be done on the international level to halt the settlement expansion which the Israeli government is undertaking in the West Bank, including Jerusalem," Nabil Abu Rdainah, Abbas's spokesman, said at the time. As the Palestinian Authority has only observer status at the UN, the resolution will be presented by a full member of the council. Erekat said he hoped the United States would not use its veto to defeat the resolution and added that if it did not succeed at the UNSC, "we will go to the International Court of Justice."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 8:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Bolivia sends formal letter recognizing Palestine (AP)

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Sent: Wed Dec 22 20:46:56 2010
Subject: Bolivia sends formal letter recognizing Palestine (AP)

LA PAZ (AP) - Bolivia has formally declared its recognition of an independent and sovereign state of Palestine. President Morales says his government "could not continue waiting with its arms crossed given the problems of human rights, territory and sovereignty." A Foreign Ministry official later confirmed that Bolivia sent a letter to Palestinian Authority President Abbas declaring its support. She spoke on condition of anonymity because she is not authorized to talk to the news media. Bolivia joins the governments of Argentina, Cuba, Brazil and Venezuela in supporting a sovereign state of Palestine with borders recognized prior to the 1967 Mideast war.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 11:40 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Confirmations

----- Original Message -----
From: Kennedy, Patrick F
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Wed Dec 22 21:15:37 2010
Subject: Confirmations

Cheryl

Only Nides, Brownfield, the MCC reps, and the UNGA reps were confirmed.

USAID got Paige Alexander.

==========

NOT/NOT confirmed were

APEC - Tong
IRF - Johnson
USUN/Mgt - Torsella
Several Public Diplomacy Commission Members ASEAN - Carden

Azberbaijan - Bryza
Brunei - Shields
Czech - Eisen
Kyrgyz - Spratlen
Montenegro - Brown
Syria - Ford
Turkey - Riccardone
Venezuela = Palmer

Six (6) F.S. commissioning and promotion lists

Will try to catch a few minutes tomorrow to discuss/firm up way ahead

Regards

pat
---

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 26, 2010 7:32 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Northern Ireland

Here it is. Also, would be good if I could start calls now.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov' <sullivanjj@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Jan 26 06:54:29 2010
Subject: Re: Northern Ireland

Ok. I'm forwarding you more background from Shaun via Sid.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Tue Jan 26 06:52:16 2010
Subject: Northern Ireland

Gordon Brown called Lou Susman a short while ago. Brown believes you should make a call to McGuinness this morning around 830 am (Declan and I agree that if you call McG you also must call Robinson). Brown proposes to speak with you at 820 or so to bring you up to speed before those calls.

The current situation is that Brown and Cowen are in Belfast, and met with Robinson, McGuinness, and other parties until 330 in the morning Belfast time. They have now resumed today. The sticking point is parades. Robinson wants the current parades commission abolished because it gives Republicans too much say. McGuinness refuses to allow the parades issue to be tied to the devolution issue.

The key message to McGuinness is to keep working this thing through -- not to take any drastic action that would bring down the assembly or collapse the process.

Declan agrees that this is the moment to make calls.

If you agree we can have the ops center set up the Brown call as well as the other two.

We'll get you some more background before the calls, but talking points will be fluid and shaped in large measure by Brown's report.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 23, 2010 10:21 AM
To: H
Subject: Daniel Rubinstein

He has some interesting reports from the Pal side, if you have a moment to talk secure.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 23, 2010 11:24 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: New Start foreign media

Thought you'd like to see this. Rose did a great job, especially with Russian media, and the new system seems to be working.

Sorry I didn't get to see you before you left. Hope you have a happy and peaceful holiday and actually manage to get a bit of down time --- is that even possible???

Cheers,

jm

-----Original Message-----
From: Smith, Dana S
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 7:39 PM
To: McHale, Judith A; DiMartino, Kitty; Schwartz, Larry R/PPR
Subject: Fw: New Start foreign media

Since I send you guys the complaints when principals don't come through, thought it would be nice to send a positive message when things go as they should. Rose is a champ and IME did great today.

----- Original Message -----
From: Korman, Samuel I. (Shai)
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 07:34 PM
To: Ratney, Michael A; Smith, Dana S
Subject: RE: New Start foreign media

I'll also add that when the dust settles this might warrant some kind of email to A/S Gottemoeller who was herself a driving force behind getting this done, getting out on the Russian media tonight to get into Russian media cycle to help advance policy. Sets a great example for her senior colleagues. Will send around the final round-up in a few.

-----Original Message-----
From: Ratney, Michael A
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 7:21 PM
To: Smith, Dana S
Cc: Korman, Samuel I. (Shai)
Subject: New Start foreign media

Dana -

IME staff kicked ass tonight on New START. We arranged a press call for Gottemoeller with five Russian journos at 6:00 pm - and it went perfectly. Then two TV interviews with Russian television from the mezzanine. BBC Russian radio to top it. Thursday we're setting up a conference call for DC-based press (foreign and domestic) supplemented by reporters from key countries in Europe such as Poland. (We're getting an assist on that from EUR and the Brussels Hub.)

We'll get Gottemoeller into the studio here tomorrow as well to do some clips that we'll push out on NewsMarket and America.gov.

All told, a very nice foreign media package on very short notice - and on a very big ticket issue. My hat is off to Shai, David, and Holly, and also to great collaboration from OBS and FPC.

Michael

This email is UNCLASSIFIED

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, January 26, 2010 8:17 AM
To: 'doug [redacted] B6
Cc: 'Russorv@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Personal

Of course. I will send a letter and welcome you, [redacted] to DC. The closer the better!

I'm copying Rob Russo so he can work w you to draft the letter.

This is very exciting.

----- Original Message -----
From: Doug Hattaway [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Mon Jan 25 18:59:54 2010
Subject: Personal

Mme. Secretary:

[redacted]

All the best, Doug

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 23, 2010 11:49 AM
To: H
Cc: Smith, Jeannemarie E; Laszczych, Joanne; Oscar Flores
Subject: DRAFT LETTER FOR OMB PASSBACK

HRC:

(Oscar – can you print for her)

Below is the draft OMB letter. After you review, we will send it to OMB with the goal to get it to them early afternoon. I am heading to a lunch and then back – you can reach me or Jeanne through Ops.

Cdm

Dear Mr. Lew:

B5

B5

B5

B5

B5

Sincerely,

Hillary Rodham Clinton
Secretary of State

Enclosure:
As stated.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 23, 2010 2:13 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: steve in the cable

FYI

-----Original Message-----
From: Caitlin Klevorick [mailto:
Sent: Thursday, December 23, 2010 12:54 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: steve in the cable

B6

Names: Radelet from State to USAID
Posted By Josh Rogin Thursday, December 23, 2010 - 12:34 PM Share

Steve Radelet, who joined the State Department last January to be Secretary of State Hillary Clinton's top advisor on development, is moving over to USAID to be their first ever Chief Economist.

Radelet left his post as a senior fellow the Center for Global Development to help Clinton during the development of the Quadrennial Diplomacy and Development Review, which was unveiled earlier this month. While at State he co-led the QDDR task force on aid effectiveness and helped stand up the Feed the Future Initiative, a huge program that will be transferred to USAID as part of the QDDR implementation. The Chief Economist job at USAID is new.

"The new position of Chief Economist (CE) will help establish USAID as a global leader for innovative policy analysis, research, and implementation," read an internal USAID email about Radelet's move, obtained by The Cable. Radelet will be part of the senior management team and report director to USAID Administrator Rajiv Shah.

According to the email, the job will have four functions:

1. Building USAID's capacity to conduct rigorous economic analysis, especially macroeconomic analysis, 2. Developing a network of leading economic researchers and development economists, 3. Cultivating a new generation of economists and research analysts at the Agency, and 4. Providing strategic and analytical support to USAID's work in priority countries, and implementation of Presidential Initiatives and the Presidential Policy Directive.

Before working at CGD, Radelet was a founding co-chair of the Modernizing Foreign Assistance Network. He was Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for Africa, the Middle East, and Asia from 2000 to 2002.

Read the full job description after the jump:

Chief Economist

The new position for Chief Economist (CE) will help establish USAID as a global leader for innovative policy analysis, research, and implementation by:

1. Building USAID's capacity to conduct rigorous economic analysis, especially macroeconomic analysis,

2. Developing a network of leading economic researchers and development economists,

3. Cultivating a new generation of economists and research analysts at the Agency, and

4. Providing strategic and analytical support to USAID's work in priority countries, and implementation of Presidential Initiatives and the Presidential Policy Directive.

Structure:

The Chief Economist will work extensively across the agency with both the functional and regional bureaus.

The CE will report to the Administrator and be a member of the Senior Management Team. The CE will be part of the Front Office and have a special assistant and administrative support.

The CE will serve in an advisory capacity to the Bureau of Policy Planning and Learning (PPL) and the Bureau for Sustainable Economic Growth (SEG). Given the cross cutting nature of the CE's work, and the resources and capacity it will draw upon from both PPL and SEG, the CE will need to work in close alignment with the leadership of these two Bureaus. The CE will participate in leadership meetings at both PPL and SEG, and be actively involved in advising both bureaus. The details of this functional relationship will require further discussion between the CE and the Assistant Administrators for PPL and SEG.

Build USAID's capacity to conduct rigorous economic analysis

Conduct focused economic and policy analysis in support of Administrator priorities at the direction of the Administrator and serve as an economics advisor to the Administrator Enhance USAID's abilities to evaluate and understand the cost-effectiveness and economic impacts of projects and programs.
Working closely with SEG, build USAID's capacity to incorporate rigorous economic analysis into project design, implementation, and evaluation.
Strengthen USAID's capacity for understanding innovative ideas from external research and analysis and best practices from other agencies, and incorporating these ideas into USAID programs.
Strengthen the knowledge base of all USAID staff on development economics through seminars, teaching, and training.
Establish regular development economics training seminars and courses for USAID staff and other staff from the interagency.
Develop a network of researchers and development economists

Build and sustain networks of development economists from both inside and outside of the federal government
Establish and lead an interagency group of development economists and allow for USAID to be seen as a leader for inter-agency thinking, analysis, and debate on development issues.
Develop strong partnerships between economic units and other major donor organizations such as World Bank, IMF, DFID, etc.
Develop a "brain trust" / advisory board consisting of the world's leading development economists. The "Brain trust" would be a mechanism under ACFVA and would leverage outside expertise and analysis in support USAID's economic growth agenda.
Publish thought pieces for the agency on key priority economic growth issues.
Lead, mentor and guide a network of Agency economists and researchers

Working with SEG and PPL, help cultivate a cadre of senior, mid-career and junior professional policy analysts and researchers that combine solid analytic and research skills with practical development experience.
Provide structured mentorship, support and guidance for the 77 economists working throughout the Agency.
Mentor and train a new generation of DLI economists.
Provide critical outlet and exchange function for Agency economists with the academic/ intellectual community.

Provide strategic and analytical support for priority Missions and Initiatives

Support PPL and the Missions in providing analysis and guidance as they lead implementation of the enhanced engagement countries.
Support SEG in bringing economic analysis - particularly macroeconomics, trade and investment analysis to Feed the Future and Climate Change Initiatives Review from time to time the effectiveness of economic growth programming.
Advise the Administrator on broad Agency policy issues, as needed.
Provide support to the Administrator to serve as the deputy governor at the regional development banks Working with PPL, lead a process in developing a new economic growth agenda and vision for USAID, articulating the Agency's contributions in relation to other USG agencies and the wider USG growth agenda.
Work with PPL, State and NSC to strategically increase the frequency with which USAID has the lead role in interagency policy analysis, discussion, and debate for major development issues.
Working closely with PPL, support efforts in the lead up to the November 2011 South Korean Aid effectiveness meeting.
Working closely with the SEG focal point on the MCC, provide advice and analysis to the Administrator in his role as a Board member of the MCC.
Represent the Agency at a senior level in interagency meetings and discussions, as appropriate.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 23, 2010 2:13 PM
To: H
Cc: Smith, Jeannemarie E; Laszczych, Joanne
Subject: RE: DRAFT LETTER FOR OMB PASSBACK

thanks

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, December 23, 2010 12:43 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Smith, Jeannemarie E; Laszczych, Joanne
Subject: Re: DRAFT LETTER FOR OMB PASSBACK

All set to go from my perspective. Thx so much.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Smith, Jeannemarie E <SmithJE3@state.gov>; Laszczych, Joanne <LaszczychJ@state.gov>; Oscar Flores
Sent: Thu Dec 23 11:49:09 2010
Subject: DRAFT LETTER FOR OMB PASSBACK

HRC:

(Oscar – can you print for her)

Below is the draft OMB letter. After you review, we will send it to OMB with the goal to get it to them early afternoon. I am heading to a lunch and then back – you can reach me or Jeanne through Ops.

Cdm

Dear Mr. Lew:

B5

B5

B5

B5

B5

Sincerely,

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Secretary of State

Enclosure:

As stated.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, October 20, 2010 5:56 PM
To: H
Subject: you were absolutely great

All the women I talked to afterwards from State had the same reaction; you make us SO proud.
AM

Anne-Marie Slaughter
Director of Policy Planning
U.S. Department of State
(202) 647-2972

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 27, 2010 2:54 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: maggie

I want to do dinner but discuss invites w me first. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 26 20:39:34 2010
Subject: FW: maggie

thoughts

From: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Tuesday, January 26, 2010 9:30 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Subject: maggie

Maggie is going to be down in DC on Thursday, February 18th and could do a "big think" dinner that evening – that date works well on HRC's calendar too.

Cheryl, if it's good on your end, should we run by HRC and move forward with invites?

Lona Valmoro

Special Assistant to the Secretary of State

202-647-9071 (direct)

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 2010 12:28 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: message from Vjosa

Ok
I have a staffer going to Kosovo next week

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Verveer, Melanne S
Sent: Thu Oct 21 00:13:33 2010
Subject: Re: message from Vjosa

I'd like to discuss how we do followup. Are you in on Thursday? If so, pls come see me.

----- Original Message -----
From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Oct 14 05:24:23 2010
Subject: Fw: message from Vjosa

I thought you'd like to see Vjosa's reaction tp your visit to Kosovo.

---

From: vjosa dobruna [redacted] B6
To: Verveer, Melanne S
Sent: Wed Oct 13 17:11:26 2010
Subject: Re: message from Vjosa

Dear Melanne,

Thank you; We, group of women leaders met with Secretary Clinton. It was a short meeting, introduction and photo opportunity. But, I hope the event send a message to our government that women should be supported. I also think that the Embassy will consider more vision of women of Kosova.
Secretary Clinton was just remarkable. Her message for our, also Belgrade leadership was clear and strait forward; dialogue, dialogue, dialogue as two independent states!
The admiration expressed by the population in the streets as motorcade was passing, meeting with PM and acting President, open meeting with students and media was impressive. She is really inspiration for all.
Maybe was not a right time, but I only wish she has pressed the PM on corruption practices.
Thank you once again for facilitating this meeting.

Best regards,

Vjosa

---

From: "Verveer, Melanne S" <VerveerMS@state.gov>
To: vjosadobruna[redacted] B6
Sent: Sat, October 9, 2010 6:38:34 PM
Subject: Re: message from Vjosa

She is eager to see you. The embassy told me that they talked to you and you're able to see her.

---

From: vjosa dobruna[redacted] B6
To: Verveer, Melanne S
Sent: Sat Oct 09 12:51:03 2010
Subject: Re: message from Vjosa

Thanks for replying to the message.
My phone number is[redacted].
Today someone called me from the US Embassy to invite me to meet Secretary on Wednesday. It is going to be a close 15 min meeting with several women leaders.
Thank you .

Vjosa

[redacted]
Sent: Fri, October 8, 2010 3:26:51 PM
Subject: RE: message from Vjosa

Vjosa, do you have a phone number? We're hoping that the Secretary will get to see you.

Melanne S. Verveer

Ambassador at Large for Global Women's Issues

U.S. Department of State

2201 C Street NW, Room 6805

Washington, DC 20520

Tel: (202) 647-7283

Fax: (202) 647-7288

VerveerMS@state.gov

From: vjosa dobruna [redacted] B6
Sent: Thursday, September 30, 2010 3:59 PM
To: Verveer, Melanne S
Subject: message from Vjosa

Dear Melanne,

Hope this message finds you well.
I am trying to follow your work and every time I run into information that involves you as a speaker or presenter, I know that strong advocacy for the benefit of women is coming for the future.

I am starting a foundation, with a objective to advocate policies on health, environment and human rights. Women in the region have serious obstacles to access health care and services, and are suffering from a luck of information. Many preventable diseases are taking its toll because of the lack of information and facilities, especially regarding breast cancer and cervical cancer. Also, laws on health care do not require for preventive services such as mammography, pap smear and other preventive services. I am planning to work on different level, not excluding other target groups but starting with women.
Today, media have announce the visit of Secretary Hillary Clinton in the region, including Kosovo. Is there any chance to meet with her during short visit in Prishtina? I know she is coming to assist the dialogue between Prishtina and Belgrade, but she would be even more helpful if she meets me and other women.
New early elections are coming in few months and she would bust our confidence and would support better participation of women and better election result.
I am afraid that our government officials are going to meet alone and/or be very selective who can meet her because is going to have impact on the election.
I am not with any political party but would be wonderful and extremely helpful for the support of woman's agenda Is any chance that you will be coming with Secretary Clinton?

Best regards,
Vjosa

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 23, 2010 3:53 PM
To: Oscar Flores
Cc: H
Subject: FW: Letter to the Secretary and paper Toward a New Policy on Iran
Attachments: Toward a New Policy on Iran (Dec 2010) (3) (3).doc; Letter to Secretary Clinton.doc

Please print for HRC

cdm

From: Pickering, Thomas R [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Wednesday, December 22, 2010 11:17 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Cc: Burns, William J
Subject: Letter to the Secretary and paper Toward a New Policy on Iran

Dear Cheryl:

As you know, a small group of us met with the Secretary and Bill Burns on Tuesday morning on Iran. We would like her to have both the attached letter of thanks and a paper which provides fuller detail on the ideas we discussed with her along with some further thoughts and suggestions in response to her statements to and questions of us.

With my thanks and good wishes for Christmas and New Years,

Sincerely, Tom Pickering

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 27, 2010 2:15 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Communique

Pls follow up.

----- Original Message -----
From: Melanne Verveer [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Wed Jan 27 14:11:47 2010
Subject: Communique

You might want to look at the reintegration parag in the communique.

[redacted] B5

Melanne Verveer
Pverveer [redacted] B6

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773680 Date: 08/31/2015

RELEASE IN FULL

TOWARD A NEW POLICY ON IRAN

BY HEINTZ, LUERS, PICKERING AND WISNER
December 21, 2010

I INTRODUCTION: US-Iran relations are never ripe for an opening but there is high risk to continuing to put it off. We propose that you urge the President to instruct you to open a direct relationship with Iran. That might begin by a letter of congratulations to Foreign Minister Salehi offering to work with him toward a new relationship. The burden rests on the US to convince an uncertain Iranian leadership to come out of its shell. The next few months offer an opportune moment for a new policy. The 2010 sanctions are taking a toll on Iran but are not changing Iran's behavior. The Iranian government has moved in a more repressive direction against the opposition and for consolidation of Khamenei/Ahmadinejad power, with an increasing role of the Iranian Revolutionary Guard.

The Administration has a responsibility and an opportunity now to take initiatives in 2011 that will diminish the possibility of conflict and enhance the US role in the Middle East. We try to answer below: Why now? What are the elements of a new policy? How to get started?

II Why Now?

A. The Administration's 2009 moves to reset US policy in the Middle East and the Islamic world have been well received by most Islamic nations but undercut by Iran. A US policy of isolating Iran is comforting and easier than alternatives but it also weakens the larger US objectives of resetting our role in the region. A new US policy toward Iran would enhance the administration's regional strategy and return the US to being a strategic player rather than a polarizing one.

B. The President's initiatives to engage Iran last year failed. The Iranian expectations for corrective actions from the Obama administration have been high. Iran's self image as an aggrieved victim of the US perfidy and efforts at regime change, provide a partial explanation for the Iranian unresponsiveness. Another factor has been Iran's domestic turmoil, almost unprecedented since the 1979 revolution. As a result the leadership has been even more immobilized than usual on whether and under what conditions to meet with American officials. Now is the time to return with even greater authority in an effort to talk to the Iranians (C below). ~~[Why now is a key question. Not clear the answer is here in the paper. We did say the longer it drags out the harder it becomes. A change in tactics re sanctions and signs of moving away from regime change can help condition the atmosphere. Iran is engaged in buying time and the task is to make clear that is an approach which lends only to danger and potential conflict by accident or failure to develop other opportunities.~~

UNCLASSIFIED U.S. Department of State Case No. F-2014-20439 Doc No. C05773680 Date: 08/31/2015

Formatted: Font color: Red

C. Significant US steps toward engagement now would surprise Iran's leaders. A new policy now would be more effective in changing Iranian behavior than the sanctions have been. The multilateral agreements in 2010 to strengthen the sanctions against Iran have sent a strong message to the Iranian leadership about the seriousness of the Obama administration. But the sanctions have also reinforced Iran's determination to stay the course. Iran's leaders perceive US policies over the past 30 years of seeking to isolate, punish, threaten, subvert, sanction, intimidate, and overthrow if possible Iran as a permanent fixture of American foreign policy. They have been successful in convincing the Iranian public that they are right. Now is the time to engage the Iranians with a new and determined US policy.

D. Failure to reach an agreement soon on Iran's nuclear program will increase the risk that Iran will have the capacity to develop a nuclear weapon. The decision to continue to deploy UNSC sanctions as our "weapon of choice" for stopping Iran's enrichment of uranium has failed. This policy has contributed to making Iran's nuclear program (not a nuclear bomb) a symbol of national unity and pride. As the UNSC approves more sanctions Iran builds more centrifuges. This US insistence on having some suspension of enrichment or a deal on their nuclear program as a precondition for talks on other subjects has led both countries into a dead end. The resulting confrontation seems likely to allow Iran the time to develop a nuclear bomb and as a result eventually toward potential conflict as the only option. Although the US has stressed that it is following a two track policy toward Iran, in fact the diplomatic track has been mainly in the successful diplomatic effort to expand sanctions. A new US policy must give Iran reasons to limit its nuclear program to peaceful purposes. We should consider an approach that provides enrichment in Iran under international supervision but such a discussion awaits a US decision and must be coordinated with the other members of the P-5.

E. The consequences of a failure in US policy toward Iran will severely damage US interest's world wide. US military action against Iran is unthinkable as a strategy or as the consequence of no strategy. Military conflict would gravely set back our programs in Iraq and Afghanistan, further derail the peace process, and perhaps lead to a regional war involving Israel, some Arab states and Hezbollah and Hamas. A new toll of human life in the Islamic world would be catastrophic for the goals of resetting US policy with consequences for US interests from Morocco to South East Asia. The consequences of prolonging the current policy without accomplishing any of its objectives will degrade US authority and power. Another consequence will be the missed opportunity to engage Iran in a long term constructive regional strategy:

1) To put in place a crisis management understanding that will reduce the possibility of US-Iran conflict in the Gulf or over Iraq and Afghanistan.

2) To deal directly with Iran over its nuclear program.

3) To help establish a regional security structure aimed at giving Iran and the Gulf states a greater sense of stability.

4) To build a regional stabilization program for Afghanistan and Iraq,

5) To carry out a joint program to reduce drug trafficking,

6) To develop a coordinated effort to deal with refugees in the region.

7) To develop together approaches to weaken the Taliban and destroy Qa'eda and eventually to weaken Iran's support for Hamas and Hezbollah.

8) To develop other common approaches to serious issues in the region where U.S. and Iranian interests are at play – drugs, refugees are examples.

III WHAT ARE THE ELEMENTS OF A NEW POLICY? The US should make a determined and carefully designed effort to get the Iranians to the table. The risks of delaying this relationship are getting higher. Any new policy toward Iran should begin with the following characteristics.

A. A new policy must engender a positive decision from the Supreme Leader and his advisors and thus must be seen to come from the President and have his full commitment to its implementation. It must aim in the first instance at defining a framework of negotiations that address all outstanding issues between the US and Iran.

B. It must eliminate suggestions to Iran that the suspension of enrichment or some other "progress" on our nuclear demands is a precondition for any progress to direct talks. The Iranians still believe that broader talks on a full range of issues with the US based on mutual respect and justice will only happen if Iran suspends enrichment. This Iranian posture is partially a reflection of their paranoia and insecurity in dealing with the US. But fruitful discussions on nuclear issues are only likely to come after Iran has determined that the US seriously seeks a bilateral relationship based on mutual respect for each other's interests, concerns and role in the region.

C. The US should achieve an arrangement with Iran that would maximize IAEA and other international access to and monitoring of Iran's nuclear program. As the US sets aside its zero enrichment preconditions for any progress in the talks, it should link Iran's assurances that it will not build a nuclear bomb to a new agreement. That agreement should provide for intrusive inspections from the IAEA and multilateral or international management of their enrichment program.

D. A US offer to cooperate with Iran as an equal partner on one or more non-nuclear issues will set the stage for more fruitful discussion of the nuclear issue. The US will improve markedly chances to get Iran to deal seriously with the nuclear issues by starting with an offer to cooperate on other problems in the region. The Iranians do not want to "talk" or "negotiate" with the US. Small gestures such as direct flights to Tehran from the US and liberalizing travel restrictions on their diplomats in the US might help but not change the situation significantly. They want to work together with the US. The issues that would demonstrate a serious US intention to work with Iran would be:

a. Create crisis management mechanisms to deal with the possibility of incidents in the Gulf or in Iraq and Afghanistan.
b. Renew the cooperation on Afghanistan (that was cut off in January 2002).
c. Seek cooperation on Iraq (in anticipation of further US force draw down) building on the bilateral talks that took place in Baghdad several years ago.
d. Seek cooperation on controlling drug trafficking along the Afghan border and more broadly.

E. Take actions that will signal to Iran's leaders that the US has genuinely rejected a regime change strategy. Oral assurances have not been sufficient. The Iranians have appreciated President Obama's rhetorical outreach but argue that the rhetoric has not been matched with any material change in US actions. Such steps would include a decision to reduce or cease ~~for a period of time~~ some executive branch actions taken against Iran, particularly anysome covert political military activities (with the exception of efforts to delay or disrupt their progress on enrichment) that Iran's leaders might identify as part of the US strategy of regime change.

F. One way to begin a new effort at engagement would be for the Secretary of State to send a letter to the new Iranian Foreign Minister Salehi congratulating him on his new position and suggesting a willingness to work with him toward a new era in US-Iranian relations. Such a letter might be delivered directly through the Iranian Permanent Representative to the United Nations along with the oral message to the Supreme Leader that we recommend below.

G. Set a new tone in reciprocal communications including a moratorium on the rhetorical attacks from leaders on both sides. The President and cabinet members would constrain their threats and red lines on Iranian behavior, make clear at every opportunity that the US does not have a policy of regime change and agree to open up the entire range of bilateral issues that are particularly important to the Iranians. Astute subtle gestures on both sides can diminish the distrust. The Iranian leadership would be asked to agree to comparable restraint in relation to the US. Our overall goal is to secure Iranian recognition that we are legitimate players in the region, have interests and will defend them. At the same time, we will not seek to destabilize Iran's domestic order. We can compete peacefully on the playing field of ideas, without challenging the legitimacy of each other's interests.

H. Establish a formal structure through which the two governments will communicate directly. But diplomatic relations should not be sought at the outset. One early priority will be for both sides to empower a senior representative to conduct regular discussions on official business. Key communications should go through one established channel, agree to avoid informal back channels, and seek progressively to raise the level of those authorized officials. Each side will want to establish a bilateral process to manage the multiple bilateral incidents and problems such as arrested nationals and travel of Iranian diplomats at the UN. Iranian officials have underscored their reluctance to establish diplomatic relations for now since they have a long history of distrust for the purposes and activities of a US Embassy in Tehran.

IV. HOW TO GET STARTED?

A. The President must find a way to communicate directly with the Supreme Leader a US desire to open official talks.

Further written communications alone from the President will not persuade the Leader that the US is serious this time. Getting directly to the Leader with an oral message (perhaps confirmed by a non-paper), delivered at a very senior level, is important to get through despite~~around~~ the intense internal political struggles in Tehran over relations with the US – and over who will rule Iran.

The message to the Leader should declare that President Obama has designated his personal representative to conduct official discussions with a representative of the Supreme Leader. In a respectful tone the message should call for:

- The avoidance of misunderstandings in the Gulf, Afghanistan, Iraq or the Levant that would lead to conflict.
- Greater cooperation between these two important states – the US and Iran - in the Middle East.
- Mutual recognition of the other's legitimate interests in the area.
- The beginning, without preconditions, of discussions on cooperative steps on regional and global problems.
- Mutual recognition that both leaders of the US and Iran have stated publicly their desire for a world without nuclear weapons.
- An understanding that the Leader's fatwa against the building or use of nuclear weapons could establish an excellent basis for discussions with the aim of agreement for greater IAEA access to Iran's nuclear program to assure the world about Iran's nuclear intentions and develop an arrangement regarding enrichment.
- Finally, an understanding of what types of reciprocal actions might be undertaken by each side to demonstrate the seriousness of this new effort to work toward cooperation.

B. Getting this message directly to the Supreme Leader is a major hurdle. We offer several possible approaches:

- First. A senior US Government official, perhaps the Secretary of State, would make an oral presentation to the Iran's permanent representative to the UN, who is the senior Iranian official within reach and request that the message get directly to the Supreme Leader. This approach would have the advantage of not appearing to bypass President Ahmadinejad and provide an opportunity for the new Foreign Minister Salehi to become a player. It would have the disadvantage of throwing the message into the middle of Iran's political disorder and competitive environment where US relationships have become a touchstone...
- Second. A senior American, not a member of the administration, could deliver this message to a senior counterpart in Tehran. For example Senator Kerry might meet with Larijani the President of the Majlis. The advantage would be that it would enable the President to have deniability should this initial approach prove to be unproductive or be rejected. But the disadvantage is that it would bring in a key player who is a strong competitor to Ahmadinejad and perhaps not be seen as a serious US Presidential initiative...
- Third. A senior Envoy from the US or a Third Country could take this message directly to Ahmadinejad, who claims to be the strongest supporter of closer US/Iran contacts. The advantage of this approach would be to engage the second most important player in the Iranian government. The disadvantages are that it would enhance, at least temporarily, Ahmadinejad's stature in Iran's governing structure and open up even more open opposition within Iran's power elite.

- Fourth. A senior statesman from a third country who has direct access to the Supreme Leader could be asked to determine whether the Leader would respond favorably to President Obama's message. We have in mind someone like Prime Minister Erdogan of Turkey, who is one of the few statesmen who probably has direct access to the Leader. There may well be others in that category such as Oman. The advantage of this approach is that Erdogan's stature as an Islamic leader friendly to Iran might make the message more credible to the Leader. Another advantage would be that the initial approach could be confidential and provide some deniability for the President should this approach sour or fail. The disadvantage would be the involvement of a third country national whose personal and national prestige would become engaged and raise the possibility that the President's message to the Leader might be distorted or misunderstood. The Iranians see Turkey in a competitive and possibly disdainful light based on a history with periods of confrontation and tension.

C. Should the ~~initial~~ approach to the Supreme Leader prove successful in setting up ~~initial~~ discussions between designated envoys, one possible and ambitious route for the administration would be an agreement between President Obama and the Supreme Leader on a structure to manage the bilateral differences and promote the common interests. Such an agreement would provide clear direction to each government on establishing a new tone and spirit in conducting relations. It would also set the agenda for cooperation on a wide range of bilateral problems.

D. The administration would need to develop a public diplomatic strategy in advance of the first meeting of empowered representatives to explain the objectives to the Congress, to our allies and friends and to the American people.

Conclusion: We can give no assurances that any of these suggestions would work. We are convinced however that given the Iranian obsession about US regime change policies and the negative consequences for US interests of not changing the relationship, the US will have to take the lead in persuading the Supreme Leader and his advisers that the US generally seeks a new relationship.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, January 27, 2010 6:18 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: maggie

Anything else going on?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Jan 27 04:39:31 2010
Subject: Re: maggie

K

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Wed Jan 27 02:54:26 2010
Subject: Re: maggie

I want to do dinner but discuss invites w me first. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Jan 26 20:39:34 2010
Subject: FW: maggie

thoughts

From: Valmoro, Lona J
Sent: Tuesday, January 26, 2010 9:30 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Subject: maggie

Maggie is going to be down in DC on Thursday, February 18th and could do a "big think" dinner that evening – that date works well on HRC's calendar too.

Cheryl, if it's good on your end, should we run by HRC and move forward with invites?

Lona Valmoro

Special Assistant to the Secretary of State

202-647-9071 (direct)

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 23, 2010 11:33 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Fw: Feedback

Fyi

From: Eikenberry, Karl W
To: Ruggiero, Frank J; Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Wayne, E Anthony
Sent: Thu Dec 23 22:23:28 2010
Subject: Feedback

Frank – the Secretary's call was extraordinarily well-received. Good morale boost as we enter the holiday seasons which, as you know, can be a difficult time for those serving in tough assignments far from home. Please pass on our collective gratitude to her for spending the time with the Mission.

Also – would like to recommend [redacted] B5

Happy holidays to all,

Karl

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 11:11 AM
To: 'slaughtera@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Plane reading: old boys network v Ashton

What is her family life complexity?

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Jan 28 10:12:47 2010
Subject: Plane reading: old boys network v Ashton

Below is from the Economist blogger re efforts w/l EU to discredit Ashton, particularly from the French. Wouldn't hurt to mention her positively with French interlocutors. See particularly this line: "There is, frankly, a whiff of old boy's network against Lady Ashton: she is not a lifetime member of the honourable guild of former foreign ministers, and she is surrounded by men in suits who think they know a lot more about foreign policy than she does. There is not much sympathy for her complicated family life, involving young children, and much commuting between Brussels and Britain."

A blog by the author of our column on the European Union

Charlemagne's notebook <http://www.economist.com/blogs/charlemagne>

- Why did Lady Ashton take the EU's foreign policy job?
<http://www.economist.com/blogs/charlemagne/2010/01/should_lady_ashton_have_taken_eus_top_foreign_policy_job>

- Jan 26th 2010, 22:04

NOT yet February, and the briefing against Catherine Ashton, the newly appointed EU foreign policy chief, is getting nasty. Jean Quatremer, the Brussels blogger and well-connected EU correspondent of Libération, dropped another depth charge against the baroness tonight <http://bruxelles.blogs.liberation.fr/coulisses/2010/01/ashton-ne-r%C3%A9pond-plus-au-t%C3%A9l%C3%A9phone-europ%C3%A9en-apr%C3%A8s-20-heures.html#more> . His list of complaints against her is long, and I have a feeling some of them are a smidgeon exaggerated. I find it hard to believe it is literally impossible to reach Lady Ashton after eight o'clock in the evening as Mr Quatremer charges, because she allegedly has her mobile telephones diverted to the EU situation centre (a small intelligence analysis cell staffed by officers from national servicies) after that hour. I also have some doubts about the stress laid on the fact that she has not yet got round to having top secret security clearance yet, so cannot see any confidential papers. As a former British cabinet minister, and serving UK commissioner, something tells me the British at least may share just the odd secret with her.

A senior official I saw today also made the point that any holder of Lady Ashton's post would currently be struggling with teething problems and squabbling as the new foreign policy apparatus created by the Lisbon Treaty takes shape. There is, frankly, a whiff of old boy's network against Lady Ashton: she is not a lifetime member of the honourable guild of former foreign ministers, and she is surrounded by men in suits who think they know a lot more about foreign policy than she does. There is not much sympathy for her complicated family life, involving young children, and much commuting between Brussels and Britain.

Finally, at the risk of sounding too loyal to the British, I think Mr Quatremer is being unfair when he says that it suits the Foreign Office in London to have Lady Ashton "sabotage" the post. My impression is that the British government feels Lady Ashton needs a lot of support right now and worries she is not getting enough support, but at the same time worries that if she receives too much help in the way of briefings and advice from British officials, she will be seen as a British stooge. That may be a self-serving sort of fear (because it allows the British to offer Lady Ashton lots of help) but it is real enough.

Other charges probably have something to them. They certainly chime with things I have been told by other people.

But most damaging, to my mind, is the intimate nature of some of the briefing: this stuff is coming from officials close to Lady Ashton, or who are senior enough to have significant contact with her. And I can confirm from my own conversations that people across the whole EU foreign policy machine are asking the same question: why did she take this huge job, when her instinct seems to be to make it as low key as possible? That is a dangerous question mark to have hanging over you.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 3:26 PM
To: 'toivnf@state.gov'
Cc: 'millscd@state.gov'; 'cheryl.mills [redacted] B6
Subject: Call w Cheryl

Nora--Pls tell Cheryl to call me back on my berry # which Ops has. Thx.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 3:34 PM
To: 'toivnf@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Call w Cheryl

Later is fine.

----- Original Message -----
From: Toiv, Nora F <ToivNF@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 28 15:31:29 2010
Subject: RE: Call w Cheryl

She is headed downstairs to do a quick interview with Andrea Mitchell and then she's off to the PC. I'll try!!

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 3:26 PM
To: Toiv, Nora F
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; [redacted] B6
Subject: Call w Cheryl

Nora--Pls tell Cheryl to call me back on my berry # which Ops has. Thx.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 9:00 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Lugar Remarks tonight

Can you call my berry?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 28 20:54:47 2010
Subject: FW: Lugar Remarks tonight

fyi

From: Klevorick, Caitlin B
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 4:44 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Lugar Remarks tonight

Speech of Senator Lugar

Foreign Assistance and Development in a New Era

Thursday, January 28, 2010

U.S. Sen. Dick Lugar will deliver the following speech tonight at the Society for International Development's annual dinner.

I thank the Society for International Development, its members and its leadership – Betsy Bassan and Joe Feuer – for the work they do on development issues around the world, and for organizing this annual gala. It is unfortunate that Chairman Kerry could not be with us tonight, but I know he shares my gratitude for your recognition.

I also want to take this opportunity to thank Dr. Shah for his remarks and to recognize the efforts of USAID and its new Administrator in responding to the tragic earthquake in Haiti. Dr. Shah has faced one of the most challenging crises imaginable only five days after being sworn in. The job ahead of him – in Haiti and around the globe – is monumental. I look forward to supporting his work and that of his agency in the coming years. I commend all of our responders from all government agencies for their courage, compassion, and skill as they continue their mission in Haiti, and I join all of you in extending our prayers to the people of that nation.

Tonight I would like to offer a few points about where we have come from and where we might be going with regard to U.S. investments in development.

The challenges of global poverty and hunger are growing at a time when worries about the sustainability of natural resources are increasing. Population growth and increased affluence in some parts of the globe will require that we more than double world food production by 2050 to keep pace. At the same time, to address environmental concerns, we will have to harvest that food from roughly the same amount of land that is in production today. The accessibility and availability of food deeply affects the health of populations. Childhood malnutrition has lifelong consequences for the productivity of individuals and nations. Poverty denies opportunity to the world's young people and breeds extremism and instability that spills over borders. It is not surprising that the CIA has long tracked and analyzed global food supplies as an indicator of potential conflict.

There is probably not a person in this room who would disagree that development is critical for U.S. national security and that the alleviation of poverty and hunger is a key component. This is a sentiment that is shared in most parts of our government, including the Department of Defense.

But even though the importance of advancing development goals is evident, constructing the most efficient, accountable, and transparent means for achieving those goals is complex and challenging. Differences of opinion exist with regard to who should be performing development functions and how these activities should be integrated into our broader foreign policy efforts. We have not reached a consensus within our government on who should be doing what, where, when and why.

As we debate these issues, we should keep in mind that diplomacy and development are two distinct disciplines. Although diplomacy and development often can be mutually reinforcing, at their core, they have different priorities, resource requirements, and time horizons. Most obviously, diplomacy is far more concerned with solving immediate problems, usually associated with countries of strategic interest. Although we hope that our development efforts will sometimes yield short-term strategic benefits, that is not their primary purpose. In a development context, we are willing to take a much longer view of the world and devote resources to countries of less, or even minimal, strategic significance. We are willing to allow the diplomatic and national security benefits of development work to accrue over time. And we are willing to engage in missions for purely altruistic reasons. These differences underscore why development must be an independent partner of diplomacy, not merely its servant.

Reforming U.S. Foreign Assistance

Reforming U.S. foreign assistance – in both substance and architecture – has been a priority for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Secretary Clinton has stated: "I want USAID to be seen as the premier development agency in the world." I share that sentiment. One of the basic questions with respect to foreign aid reform is how we can best strengthen the capacity of USAID to run effective assistance programs. During the last two decades, decision-makers have not made it easy for the agency to perform its mission. Development resources declined precipitously in the 1990s and reorganization initiatives resulted in the agency's loss of evaluation, budget, and policy capacity. There is broad consensus among development experts that the loss of these functions at USAID is inhibiting the success of our development programs. Our development efforts will never be as effective as they should be if the agency that houses most of our development expertise is cut out of relevant policy and budget decisions.

Events since 2001 have spurred greater investments in foreign assistance. But many of these resources have been located outside of USAID. Roughly two dozen departments and agencies have taken over some aspects of foreign assistance, including the Department of Defense and the Department of Agriculture.

The President has advocated doubling foreign assistance over time, and has announced new initiatives on food security and health. Given the increased resources needed for these initiatives, it is crucial that the American people and Congress have confidence that these funds will be used efficiently.

USAID must have a central role in development policy decisions. If we are to avoid inefficient experimentation, it must have the capacity to evaluate programs and disseminate information about best practices and methods. That requires policy makers to continue augmenting the agency's staffing and expertise. These principals are reflected in legislation that Senator Kerry and I introduced last year, S. 1524, the Foreign Assistance Revitalization and Accountability Act.

The Administration has initiated two separate studies – the State Department's Quadrennial Diplomacy and Development Review and the National Security Council's Presidential Study Directive on Development – in an attempt to make recommendations on how development programs can better support U.S. foreign policy objectives. The QDDR will not be completed until this fall and it is uncertain when, or if, we will know the outcomes of the PSD.

I am eager to review the Administration's ideas when they are ready. But in the meantime, Congress should be offering its own ideas on how to improve our government's development capacity. The Kerry-Lugar foreign assistance reform bill is the product of well over a year of research and analysis by Senators and their staffs. It has strong support in the aid community. And it is co-sponsored by a bipartisan group of 23 Senators, twelve of whom are members of the Foreign Relations Committee. This level of backing for a bill related to foreign assistance is extremely rare. It provides an opportunity to build something approaching a consensus on this issue. I am hopeful that the Executive Branch will recognize that a bill co-sponsored by a majority of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and nearly a quarter of the full Senate should be given substantial weight in its review process. A strong development agency that serves under the foreign policy guidance of the Secretary of State, as envisioned in our bill, will best empower her to advance U.S. goals.

A Development Policy Guided by Objectives

Even as we reconsider our development architecture, it is vital that development policy is guided by objectives rather than by how we organize our government to deliver development assistance. We should focus on the big issues – food scarcity, poverty, disease, environmental degradation -- that prevent economic growth in a large swath of the world's countries. Those objectives require that strategies reflect the needs of the countries we are helping rather than the vagaries of our own budget process, which often allocates funds in response to lobbying pressures, media interest, or political favoritism. Country strategies based on broad objectives also give us the best chance to avoid dependence on arbitrary spending targets for specific sectors. For example, promoting food security requires investments not just in agricultural productivity, but in clean water, infrastructure, basic and higher education, and land titling, to name just a few factors.

The Global Food Security Act, which I authored with Senator Casey and which Senator Kerry has co-sponsored, reflects these principles. The food price crisis that occurred in 2008 resulted from a culmination of policy choices by donor and recipient governments over a decades-long period. That crisis was a wakeup call for the development community, for international donors, and for policymakers worldwide. Because achieving food security must be a multi-sector endeavor that goes beyond simply raising crop yields, U.S. policy must seek to integrate a variety of approaches and actors. At the same time, we do not want to delegate responsibility for food security policy to multiple departments. That could further weaken our already fractured foreign assistance structure. That is why our bill designates USAID, which has the broad development experience necessary, as the lead agency to implement the strategy.

"Whole-of-Government" in Perspective

The term "whole-of-government" has come into vogue in policy circles. To the extent that the term underscores the complexity of development problems and the need to apply the talents of a diverse set of agencies to their solution, it is useful and descriptive. Our government must have the capacity to draw on expertise to achieve vital development missions without artificial barriers erected by agencies. Many agencies are working together successfully on development problems in many parts of the world.

But we should not mistake the term "whole-of-government" for an organizational strategy. Even if multiple agencies are making contributions, someone must be in charge, someone must coordinate the activities of all involved, and someone must take responsibility for inefficiencies and failures.

This is especially important in a development context because of our highly fragmented aid system. The risk is that the term "whole-of-government," will be used to justify that fragmentation or preserve roles for agencies where they are not justified. We also must be careful that the whole-of-government concept does not re-define development as a series of technical decisions – from where to dig wells to which seeds to plant in which soils. Such a redefinition would devalue the discipline of development, which many practitioners have spent a lifetime studying and testing. We know from long experience that technical expertise must be grounded in an understanding of development. For example, agricultural advancement depends as much or more on reaching women farmers, building agriculture education, and engaging civil society in support of rural development than it does on seed quality and planting decisions. An integrated strategy can only come from an agency that understands development is a separate discipline, as Dr. Shah has said.

I believe the starting point for any future design of our assistance programs should not be the status quo, but rather the period in which we had a well-functioning and well-resourced aid agency. Even if we emphasize the talents of multiple agencies, a strong aid agency that can design integrated country-specific strategies is a key to success.

Unity of Purpose

Instead of accepting whole-of-government, or any other organizational model, as the guiding narrative, I believe there is a more helpful way of viewing the development mission – that is "unity-of-purpose." We need to be unified around common purposes for which we can marshal the appropriate level of resources and variety of approaches. There will be situations that call for the involvement of multiple agencies under the direction of one government entity. But, the decision to involve other government actors should be driven by the purpose. Such is clearly the case now in Haiti. The U.S. government and international actors are unified for the purpose of disaster response. That response involves the coordination of hundreds of organizations to rescue people and to provide basic elements needed for survival. At some point soon, the mission will evolve from disaster response to reconstruction to development. We should be asking whether we will be able to maintain a unity-of-purpose even as that purpose changes.

The Lugar-Casey bill proposes that there be a unity-of-purpose around achieving global food security. Regardless of the situation, it is the unity-of-purpose that should guide how foreign assistance is designed. I applaud Secretary Clinton for adopting food security as a top priority. Her inter-agency team has been working diligently on its Global Food Security and Hunger Initiative, and Congress has been responsive in appropriating funding. Many operational decisions have yet to be made, particularly decisions relating to coordination, but I stand ready to work with the Administration to pass the Lugar-Casey bill as soon as possible. I look forward to achieving a unity-of-purpose between Congress and the Administration on food security.

These are not easy issues to solve. I applaud all of you here tonight for your dedication to development and your willingness to work with Congress and the Administration as we try to rebuild our assistance infrastructure. I would conclude with a quote from Dr. Norman Borlaug, the Nobel Laureate and Father of the Green Revolution, whose optimism never flagged. He believed that constant striving would eventually wear down all obstacles. He said, "I cannot emphasize too strongly the fact that further progress depends on intelligent, integrated and persistent effort by government leaders, statesmen, tradesmen, scientists, educators and communication agencies." That is as true today as when he said it 39 years ago, and I invite everyone here to make their own contributions in that spirit.

###

Caitlin Klevorick

Office of the Counselor

Department of State

KlevorickCB@state.gov

202.647.6115

redacted

B6

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 29, 2010 3:27 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Cc: H
Subject: Re: Lugar Remarks tonight

Well, as I thought, this bill has legs and looks like it's about to start running. Also, I thought the QDDR would be done much sooner than Fall. Let's discuss this weekend.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 28 20:54:47 2010
Subject: FW: Lugar Remarks tonight

fyi

From: Klevorick, Caitlin B
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 4:44 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Lugar Remarks tonight

Speech of Senator Lugar

Foreign Assistance and Development in a New Era

Thursday, January 28, 2010

U.S. Sen. Dick Lugar will deliver the following speech tonight at the Society for International Development's annual dinner.

I thank the Society for International Development, its members and its leadership – Betsy Bassan and Joe Feuer – for the work they do on development issues around the world, and for organizing this annual gala. It is unfortunate that Chairman Kerry could not be with us tonight, but I know he shares my gratitude for your recognition.

I also want to take this opportunity to thank Dr. Shah for his remarks and to recognize the efforts of USAID and its new Administrator in responding to the tragic earthquake in Haiti. Dr. Shah has faced one of the most challenging crises imaginable only five days after being sworn in. The job ahead of him – in Haiti and around the globe – is monumental. I look forward to supporting his work and that of his agency in the coming years. I commend all of our responders from all government agencies for their courage, compassion, and skill as they continue their mission in Haiti, and I join all of you in extending our prayers to the people of that nation.

Tonight I would like to offer a few points about where we have come from and where we might be going with regard to U.S. investments in development.

The challenges of global poverty and hunger are growing at a time when worries about the sustainability of natural resources are increasing. Population growth and increased affluence in some parts of the globe will require that we more than double world food production by 2050 to keep pace. At the same time, to address environmental concerns, we will have to harvest that food from roughly the same amount of land that is in production today. The accessibility and availability of food deeply affects the health of populations. Childhood malnutrition has lifelong consequences for the productivity of individuals and nations. Poverty denies opportunity to the world's young people and breeds extremism and instability that spills over borders. It is not surprising that the CIA has long tracked and analyzed global food supplies as an indicator of potential conflict.

There is probably not a person in this room who would disagree that development is critical for U.S. national security and that the alleviation of poverty and hunger is a key component. This is a sentiment that is shared in most parts of our government, including the Department of Defense.

But even though the importance of advancing development goals is evident, constructing the most efficient, accountable, and transparent means for achieving those goals is complex and challenging. Differences of opinion exist with regard to who should be performing development functions and how these activities should be integrated into our broader foreign policy efforts. We have not reached a consensus within our government on who should be doing what, where, when and why.

As we debate these issues, we should keep in mind that diplomacy and development are two distinct disciplines. Although diplomacy and development often can be mutually reinforcing, at their core, they have different priorities, resource requirements, and time horizons. Most obviously, diplomacy is far more concerned with solving immediate problems, usually associated with countries of strategic interest. Although we hope that our development efforts will sometimes yield short-term strategic benefits, that is not their primary purpose. In a development context, we are willing to take a much longer view of the world and devote resources to countries of less, or even minimal, strategic significance. We are willing to allow the diplomatic and national security benefits of development work to accrue over time. And we are willing to engage in missions for purely altruistic reasons. These differences underscore why development must be an independent partner of diplomacy, not merely its servant.

Reforming U.S. Foreign Assistance

Reforming U.S. foreign assistance – in both substance and architecture – has been a priority for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Secretary Clinton has stated: "I want USAID to be seen as the premier development agency in the world." I share that sentiment. One of the basic questions with respect to foreign aid reform is how we can best strengthen the capacity of USAID to run effective assistance programs. During the last two decades, decision-makers have not made it easy for the agency to perform its mission. Development resources declined precipitously in the 1990s and reorganization initiatives resulted in the agency's loss of evaluation, budget, and policy capacity. There is broad consensus among development experts that the loss of these functions at USAID is inhibiting the success of our development programs. Our development efforts will never be as effective as they should be if the agency that houses most of our development expertise is cut out of relevant policy and budget decisions.

Events since 2001 have spurred greater investments in foreign assistance. But many of these resources have been located outside of USAID. Roughly two dozen departments and agencies have taken over some aspects of foreign assistance, including the Department of Defense and the Department of Agriculture.

The President has advocated doubling foreign assistance over time, and has announced new initiatives on food security and health. Given the increased resources needed for these initiatives, it is crucial that the American people and Congress have confidence that these funds will be used efficiently.

USAID must have a central role in development policy decisions. If we are to avoid inefficient experimentation, it must have the capacity to evaluate programs and disseminate information about best practices and methods. That requires policy makers to continue augmenting the agency's staffing and expertise. These principals are reflected in legislation that Senator Kerry and I introduced last year, S. 1524, the Foreign Assistance Revitalization and Accountability Act.

The Administration has initiated two separate studies – the State Department's Quadrennial Diplomacy and Development Review and the National Security Council's Presidential Study Directive on Development – in an attempt to make recommendations on how development programs can better support U.S. foreign policy objectives. The QDDR will not be completed until this fall and it is uncertain when, or if, we will know the outcomes of the PSD.

I am eager to review the Administration's ideas when they are ready. But in the meantime, Congress should be offering its own ideas on how to improve our government's development capacity. The Kerry-Lugar foreign assistance reform bill is the product of well over a year of research and analysis by Senators and their staffs. It has strong support in the aid community. And it is co-sponsored by a bipartisan group of 23 Senators, twelve of whom are members of the Foreign Relations Committee. This level of backing for a bill related to foreign assistance is extremely rare. It provides an opportunity to build something approaching a consensus on this issue. I am hopeful that the Executive Branch will recognize that a bill co-sponsored by a majority of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and nearly a quarter of the full Senate should be given substantial weight in its review process. A strong development agency that serves under the foreign policy guidance of the Secretary of State, as envisioned in our bill, will best empower her to advance U.S. goals.

A Development Policy Guided by Objectives

Even as we reconsider our development architecture, it is vital that development policy is guided by objectives rather than by how we organize our government to deliver development assistance. We should focus on the big issues – food scarcity, poverty, disease, environmental degradation -- that prevent economic growth in a large swath of the world's countries. Those objectives require that strategies reflect the needs of the countries we are helping rather than the vagaries of our own budget process, which often allocates funds in response to lobbying pressures, media interest, or political favoritism. Country strategies based on broad objectives also give us the best chance to avoid dependence on arbitrary spending targets for specific sectors. For example, promoting food security requires investments not just in agricultural productivity, but in clean water, infrastructure, basic and higher education, and land titling, to name just a few factors.

The Global Food Security Act, which I authored with Senator Casey and which Senator Kerry has co-sponsored, reflects these principles. The food price crisis that occurred in 2008 resulted from a culmination of policy choices by donor and recipient governments over a decades-long period. That crisis was a wakeup call for the development community, for international donors, and for policymakers worldwide. Because achieving food security must be a multi-sector endeavor that goes beyond simply raising crop yields, U.S. policy must seek to integrate a variety of approaches and actors. At the same time, we do not want to delegate responsibility for food security policy to multiple departments. That could further weaken our already fractured foreign assistance structure. That is why our bill designates USAID, which has the broad development experience necessary, as the lead agency to implement the strategy.

"Whole-of-Government" in Perspective

The term "whole-of-government" has come into vogue in policy circles. To the extent that the term underscores the complexity of development problems and the need to apply the talents of a diverse set of agencies to their solution, it is useful and descriptive. Our government must have the capacity to draw on expertise to achieve vital development missions without artificial barriers erected by agencies. Many agencies are working together successfully on development problems in many parts of the world.

But we should not mistake the term "whole-of-government" for an organizational strategy. Even if multiple agencies are making contributions, someone must be in charge, someone must coordinate the activities of all involved, and someone must take responsibility for inefficiencies and failures.

This is especially important in a development context because of our highly fragmented aid system. The risk is that the term "whole-of-government," will be used to justify that fragmentation or preserve roles for agencies where they are not justified. We also must be careful that the whole-of-government concept does not re-define development as a series of technical decisions – from where to dig wells to which seeds to plant in which soils. Such a redefinition would devalue the discipline of development, which many practitioners have spent a lifetime studying and testing. We know from long experience that technical expertise must be grounded in an understanding of development. For example, agricultural advancement depends as much or more on reaching women farmers, building agriculture education, and engaging civil society in support of rural development than it does on seed quality and planting decisions. An integrated strategy can only come from an agency that understands development is a separate discipline, as Dr. Shah has said.

I believe the starting point for any future design of our assistance programs should not be the status quo, but rather the period in which we had a well-functioning and well-resourced aid agency. Even if we emphasize the talents of multiple agencies, a strong aid agency that can design integrated country-specific strategies is a key to success.

Unity of Purpose

Instead of accepting whole-of-government, or any other organizational model, as the guiding narrative, I believe there is a more helpful way of viewing the development mission – that is "unity-of-purpose." We need to be unified around common purposes for which we can marshal the appropriate level of resources and variety of approaches. There will be situations that call for the involvement of multiple agencies under the direction of one government entity. But, the decision to involve other government actors should be driven by the purpose. Such is clearly the case now in Haiti. The U.S. government and international actors are unified for the purpose of disaster response. That response involves the coordination of hundreds of organizations to rescue people and to provide basic elements needed for survival. At some point soon, the mission will evolve from disaster response to reconstruction to development. We should be asking whether we will be able to maintain a unity-of-purpose even as that purpose changes.

The Lugar-Casey bill proposes that there be a unity-of-purpose around achieving global food security. Regardless of the situation, it is the unity-of-purpose that should guide how foreign assistance is designed. I applaud Secretary Clinton for adopting food security as a top priority. Her inter-agency team has been working diligently on its Global Food Security and Hunger Initiative, and Congress has been responsive in appropriating funding. Many operational decisions have yet to be made, particularly decisions relating to coordination, but I stand ready to work with the Administration to pass the Lugar-Casey bill as soon as possible. I look forward to achieving a unity-of-purpose between Congress and the Administration on food security.

These are not easy issues to solve. I applaud all of you here tonight for your dedication to development and your willingness to work with Congress and the Administration as we try to rebuild our assistance infrastructure. I would conclude with a quote from Dr. Norman Borlaug, the Nobel Laureate and Father of the Green Revolution, whose optimism never flagged. He believed that constant striving would eventually wear down all obstacles. He said, "I cannot emphasize too strongly the fact that further progress depends on intelligent, integrated and persistent effort by government leaders, statesmen, tradesmen, scientists, educators and communication agencies." That is as true today as when he said it 39 years ago, and I invite everyone here to make their own contributions in that spirit.

###

Caitlin Klevorick

Office of the Counselor

Department of State

KlevorickCB@state.gov

202.647.6115

[redacted] (blackberry)

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 2010 8:00 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 10/21/10 Thursday

8:15 am DEPART Private Residence
En route State Department

8:25 am ARRIVE State Department

8:25 am PRESIDENTIAL DAILY BRIEFING
8:30 am Secretary's Office

8:45 am DAILY SENIOR STAFF MEETING
9:15 am Secretary's Conference Room

9:15 am WEEKLY MEETING w/REGIONAL BUREAU SECRETARIES
10:00 am Deputy Secretary's Conference Room

10:00 am OFFICE TIME
11:30 am Secretary's Office

11:30 am DROP BY KURT CAMPBELL MEETING w/CHINESE MINISTER
11:40 am FOR TAIWAN AFFAIRS WANG YI Secretary's Conference Room

11:45 am MEETING w/SPECIAL ENVOY FOR INTERNATIONAL
12:00 pm ENERGY AFFAIRS DAVID GOLDWYN Secretary's Office

12:00 pm OFFICE TIME
2:00 pm Secretary's Office

2:00 pm MEETING w/DANNY ABRAHAM
2:15 pm Secretary's Office

2:30 pm MEETING w/STROBE TALBOTT AND PHIL GORDON
3:00 pm Secretary's Office

3:00 pm OFFICE TIME
4:45 pm Secretary's Office

4:50 pm DEPART State Department
En route Bureau of Medicine Compound, Navy Hill

4:55 pm ARRIVE Navy Hill

5:00 pm U.S.-PAKISTAN DIALOGUE SMALL GROUP DISCUSSION AND DINNER
8:00 pm Residence of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Quarters AA
Bureau of Medicine Compound, Navy Hill

8:05 pm DEPART Navy Hill
En route Private Residence

8:15 pm ARRIVE Private Residence

FYI:
6:30 pm "TOMORROW'S YOUTH" ORGANIZATION DINNER HONORING
9:00 pm WJC AND CHERIE BLAIR Ballroom, Ritz Carlton Hotel
1150 22nd Street, NW

###

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 29, 2010 3:28 AM
To: 'verveerms@state.gov'
Cc: H
Subject: Re: S Photo w/ 4 Afghan Civil Society Women

Let's discuss Monday.

----- Original Message -----
From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 28 19:44:29 2010
Subject: Fw: S Photo w/ 4 Afghan Civil Society Women

Thank you SO much! We will get the photo off widely.

Had a good meeting w Melinda Gates. They are ready to support our maternal and child health initiative. Your husband touched everyone here with his Haiti plea.
We're making good progress on women's issues.

----- Original Message -----
From: Breeden, Philip X
To: Ghori, Saba N; Modi, Anjana J; Verveer, Melanne S
Cc: Goshko, Matt E; Mayhew, Sarah-Jane; Kaiser, Sandra L; Palmer, Christopher G
Sent: Thu Jan 28 14:07:37 2010
Subject: Re: S Photo w/ 4 Afghan Civil Society Women

The secretary had her picture taken with the 4 women right before her press conference. She met them as she walked to the site, and then invited them to walk with her to the press conference. The four Afghan women sat together during the conference and the Secretary asked them to rise so she could acknowledge and applaud their courageous work promoting women's rights in Afghanistan. We will send some photos around. Cheers, P

**********

Philip Breeden
Press Counselor, US Embassy London
Tel: 44-(0) 20-7894-0672
Fax: 44-(0) 20-7491-2485
Cell: [redacted] B6
Email: breedenpx@state.gov
**********

----- Original Message -----
From: Ghori, Saba N
To: Breeden, Philip X; Modi, Anjana J; Adler, Caroline E; Yehl, Ashley C; Verveer, Melanne S
Cc: Goshko, Matt E; Mayhew, Sarah-Jane
Sent: Thu Jan 28 09:51:22 2010
Subject: Re: S Photo w/ 4 Afghan Civil Society Women

Thanks, please let us know if this works!

----- Original Message -----
From: Breeden, Philip X
To: Modi, Anjana J; Adler, Caroline E; Yehl, Ashley C
Cc: Ghori, Saba N; Goshko, Matt E; Mayhew, Sarah-Jane
Sent: Thu Jan 28 09:36:58 2010
Subject: Re: S Photo w/ 4 Afghan Civil Society Women

I'm working this. We will see. P

**********

Philip Breeden
Press Counselor, US Embassy London
Tel: 44-(0) 20-7894-0672
Fax: 44-(0) 20-7491-2485
Cell: B6
Email: breedenpx@state.gov
**********

----- Original Message -----
From: Modi, Anjana J
To: Adler, Caroline E; Yehl, Ashley C
Cc: Breeden, Philip X; Ghori, Saba N; Goshko, Matt E; Mayhew, Sarah-Jane
Sent: Thu Jan 28 08:43:15 2010
Subject: RE: S Photo w/ 4 Afghan Civil Society Women

Caroline and Ashley:

Saba Ghori (from the State Department's Office of Global Women's Issues covering Afghanistan) can be reached at [redacted] She is in London and in contact with the 4 Afghan Civil Society Women representatives observing today's conference, and understands here is a possibility of a photo/pull aside for the Afghan women with the Secretary.

Of the Afghan women, three are at the media center, and one is at the civil society conference. Saba doesn't have a way to access the media canter/Lancaster House. If the Secretary can do this photo opp/pull aside, someone would need to meet and escort the women. Two of the women have local cell numbers: [redacted] Hope you can help to coordinate with Saba and 4 Afghan women.

Thanks,
Anjana
-----Original Message-----
From: Goshko, Matt E
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 1:19 PM
To: Modi, Anjana J; Ghori, Saba N
Cc: Breeden, Philip X; Yehl, Ashley C; Adler, Caroline E; Mayhew, Sarah-Jane
Subject: RE: S Photo w/ 4 Afghan Civil Society Women

Saba and Modi,

I have included the Secretary's press team Ashley Yehl and Caroline Adler on this chain. They are best placed to coordinate with Huma and Philippe on this. Sarah Jane-Mayhew, our official photographer, will be at the media center at about 1530.

Please note that Embassy blackberries are very slow. (I have this message on my desk top but it has not yet reached my bb) If Phil needs to take quick action on this please send him a text message at

Best,

Matt

Matt Goshko
Press Officer
U.S. Embassy London
GoshkoME@state.gov
office: 020 7894 0651
cell:
(If calling from outside the UK dial + 44 and omit the first zero)

B6

-----Original Message-----
From: Modi, Anjana J
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 1:10 PM
To: Goshko, Matt E
Subject: FW:

Matt,

This is the email chain regarding the a possibly opportunity for the 4 Afghan women civil society representatives to meet with the Secretary and take a photo. Three of the 4 are in the media center and Saba who has been travelling with them isPhil suggested she contact Huma. If you have other thoughts on who Saba can contact let me know and I'll pass that info along.

Saba is from the State Department's Office of Global Women's Issues covering Afghanistan for the U.S. Ambassador-at-Large for Global Women's Issues, Ambassador Melanne Verveer.

Thanks,
Anjana

-----Original Message-----
From: Modi, Anjana J
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 12:24 PM
To: Ghori, Saba N
Cc: 'mansury 'koppell
Subject: RE:

Saba,

Our press office says your best bet would be to work with Huma to see if this is possible. The logistics are a challenge. Huma's number is

-----Original Message-----
From: Ghori, Saba N
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 11:54 AM

To: 'mansury [redacted] 'koppell [redacted] Modi, Anjana J B6
Subject: Fw:

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: pverveer [redacted]
To: Ghori, Saba N
Sent: Thu Jan 28 05:35:16 2010
Subject: Re:

Huma told me they will do a photo but that was befoire last night ------Original Message------
From: Ghori, Saba N
To: pverveer [redacted]
Sent: Jan 28, 2010 5:31 AM
Subject: Re:

I haven't been able to get in. I emailed huma and she hasn't responded.

The conference is going on right now.

If the women could even meet with the Secretary for a few minutes, that would be great! Can you ask huma?

I have the nos of the women who are in the conf

----- Original Message -----
From: pverveer [redacted]
To: Ghori, Saba N
Sent: Thu Jan 28 05:22:36 2010
Subject: Re:

Yes, huma told me about last night
What time is the conf?
Are you in? I asked her

------Original Message------
From: Ghori, Saba N
To: pverveer [redacted]
Sent: Jan 28, 2010 2:30 AM
Subject: Re:

Apparently, the women gave their recommendations to S and SRAP at a reception hosted by the prince of whales last night. They urged the two not to forget @ them

----- Original Message -----
From: Ghori, Saba N
To: 'pverveer [redacted]
Sent: Thu Jan 28 02:27:05 2010
Subject: Re:

The conference is today (thurs).
I asked mary beth googman in SRAP if I cd go and was told it was very difficult S will take a photo with the women? Do you have access to a phone?

----- Original Message -----
From: pverveer [redacted] B6
To: Ghori, Saba N
Sent: Thu Jan 28 02:12:31 2010
Subject: Re:

I'm talking about the conference at which the women will be observers. Isn't that tomw?
S will take a hoti w women but you need to be with them ------Original Message------
From: Ghori, Saba N
To: pverveer [redacted]
Sent: Jan 28, 2010 2:00 AM
Subject: Re:

I want to but I'm not accredited. I think I asked you @ this in the other email. Who could we ask to get me in? You have to get there super early, and its already 7 am here! Please advise

----- Original Message -----
From: Melanne Verveer [redacted]
To: Ghori, Saba N
Sent: Thu Jan 28 01:39:53 2010

Just watched .ary and Wazhma on CNN
Are you going to the conf w them tomw?

Melanne Verveer
Pverveer [redacted]

Sent via BlackBerry from T-Mobile

Sent via BlackBerry from T-Mobile

Sent via BlackBerry from T-Mobile

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Crowley, Philip J <CrowleyPJ@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, December 24, 2010 4:21 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D; McHale, Judith A; Koh, Harold Hongju; Kennedy, Patrick F; Verma, Richard R; Sullivan, Jacob J; Reines, Philippe I; Goldberg, Philip S; Burns, William J; Steinberg, James B; Hormats, Robert D; Posner, Michael H; Abedin, Huma
Subject: WikiLeaks Update

Madame Secretary, first of all, Merry Christmas. I trust you, the President and Chelsea will have a special holiday.

B5

B5

PJ

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 2010 8:14 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: North Korea

See highlighted

---

From: Ross, Alec J
Sent: Wednesday, October 20, 2010 11:10 AM
To: Toiv, Nora F; Burns, William J; Crowley, Philip J; Chollet, Derek H; Mills, Cheryl D; Slaughter, Anne-Marie; Sullivan, Jacob J; Verma, Richard R; Abedin, Huma; Valmoro, Lona J; Reines, Philippe I; Fuchs, Michael H; Daniel, Joshua J; Woodard, Eric W
Cc: Parker, Emily
Subject: North Korea

Following up on the discussion in yesterday's policy committee meeting about North Korea, I thought some of you might be interested in the following articles:

"North Koreans Use Cell phones to Bare Secrets" New York Times
http://www.nytimes.com/2010/03/29/world/asia/29news.html

"North Korean man executed for calling a friend in South Korea on mobile phone"
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/worldnews/article-1255375/North-Korean-man-executed-calling-friend-South-Korea-mobile-phone.html

I have also attached a very good article (translated) from a Korean publication which describes what is called the "Information Belt" formed along the North Korea-China border.

Anybody with an appetite for more content, let me know and I'll send on high side.

Alec

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 29, 2010 3:31 AM
To: 'cheryl.mills[redacted]'; 'millscd@state.gov'; Doug Band B6
Cc: H
Subject: Fw: Haiti

Fyi.

----- Original Message -----
From: Burns Strider[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 28 17:20:10 2010
Subject: Haiti

I had a group call me today... It is "F & B Catering" who have an agreement they are working to finalize with the International Disaster Relief Fund... One of the principles is Craig Fant. Their operation is on the Gulf Coast. The agreement would be to provide meals to 120,000 folks a day for a year in Haiti. I did a good bit of due diligence thru the afternoon with contacts I have on the coast, in Jackson and in the Delta (the ag region) and these folks did a lot of the Katrina work and have the staging facilities in Gulfport to move their goods to Haiti... the facility, in fact, was built with Katrina money as part of the single largest FAA grant in history... this airport is used as the staging and departure area for troops going to Afghanistan... the cargo terminals and personnel are equipped and experienced in this type of work. Also, there has been a solid, transparent and deliberate effort by this company to work with and buy products from minority farmers in the Delta... I don't know your politics, etc. I don't know the details on your end, boss... I get so many requests each month wanting me to offer good words, etc. to you on behalf of some entity... most of the time it's all about the dollar signs I see in their eyes... I ignore them... but my discovery process of F & B Catering, their Katrina work, the confidence in their capacity, the use of post Katrina federally funded facilities and the commitment to minority farmers was all compelling... so I share! Thanks, ma'am.

Burns Strider

Founding Partner

The Eleison Group

Join Me on Facebook <http://www.facebook.com/profile.php?id=1279552305&ref=name>

Follow Me on Twitter <http://twitter.com/BStrider>

Visit The Eleison Group Website <http://www.eleisongroup.com/>

Visit Pea Ridge Confidential, My Personal Blog <http://pearidgeconfidential.blogspot.com/>

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 29, 2010 3:37 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: CVC

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 28 13:51:20 2010
Subject: FW: CVC

cdm

From: Jules A Martin [mailto:
Sent: Thursday, January 28, 2010 1:49 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: CVC

Cheryl,

Take care
Jules

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Ebeling, Betsy <
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 2010 9:52 AM
To: H
Subject: RE: Emailing: Wedding-

That we are. And Huma and your other girls--Capricia, Maggie, Cheryl, Kelly--all proudly show your touch as well. As ugly and disturbed as the world can be and is these days, there are so many peaceful and beautiful people and places. You and WJC keep tidying up all the rough patches. We'll be in NY this weekend for the WJC event. Tom may burst upon seeing and hearing Eric Clapton. Love you, B

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Wednesday, October 20, 2010 11:06 PM
To: Ebeling, Betsy
Subject: Re: Emailing: Wedding

----- Original Message -----
From: Ebeling, Betsy
To: Huma Abedin; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>; H
Sent: Tue Oct 19 13:15:22 2010
Subject: Emailing Wedding-

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 29, 2010 4:03 AM
To: 'mchaleja@state.gov'
Subject: Re: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

That's the result of your leadership and a new model of engagement w our own people. Onward!

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H; Burns, William J <BurnsWJ@state.gov>; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Smith, Daniel B <SmithD2@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Jan 28 05:06:38 2010
Subject: FW: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

Our Posts at work.

From: DiMartino, Kitty
Sent: Wednesday, January 27, 2010 11:07 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

-- VEJA MAGAZINE, BRAZIL (Jan. 25, headline of a two-page article showing U.S. servicemen walking in front of destroyed buildings in Port-au-Prince): "Better with them, impossible without."

--CHOSUN ILBO NEWSPAPER, KOREA (Jan. 25): U.S. involvement in overseas natural disasters is a 40-year-long humanitarian tradition. . . In a disaster-stricken area, the military is more systematic and effective in carrying out a relief operation than any other group."

-- EXPRESSO NEWSPAPER, PORTUGAL (Jan. 24): "In critical moments of the history of mankind, over the last 100 years, the United States is, in fact, the indispensable nation. Sometimes for bad reasons and, other times, as in Haiti, for good reasons."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Smith, James E <SmithJE@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, December 25, 2010 6:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: News

I will be in and out of the office this week, but will intermittently check my e-mail. Should you need assistance with urgent matters concerning FSI and NENA area studies,please contact Program Assistant John Manion, manionje@state.gov, 703-302-6862.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 30, 2010 8:58 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: CVC

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 03:13:29 2010
Subject: Fw: CVC

----- Original Message -----
From: Jules Martin
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sat Jan 30 01:50:06 2010
Subject: CVC

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Campbell, Piper <CampbellP@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, December 25, 2010 6:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: News

Piper Campbell is out of Washington until Wed., Dec 29. Please contact Maya Seiden or Nadia Shepherd.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 30, 2010 10:14 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: NI

Welcome news. Pls keep me updated w what you hear. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 10:09:06 2010
Subject: NI

Here's the update, pieced together from various sources:

Starting at around 3 pm Friday, Adams and McGuinness returned to Hillsborogh to meet with Robinson and Arlene Foster. The four talked privately for several hours and then asked for the draft papers to review. The discussion continued until around 1 am when the parties left Hillsborough. (Foster's presence is apparently very helpful. Her relationship with the SF leaders is much more positive and direct, treating them as equal colleagues.)

Woodward and Irish FM Martin will meet with Adams and Robinson separately this afternoon to assess where the talks are. The talks last night/early morning ended more positively and if that is still the case there may be a decision to push on today to see if agreement can be reached. It is equally possible that the two ministers and DUP/SF will decide to wind up today and resume on Monday.

Brown and Cowen have spoken this morning and will speak again late this afternoon.

The issue is still parades. Robinson needs some certainity of change on parades. It is important for him politically within the DUP, but also externally since this has become a symbol of whether he has achieved something or compromised too much. Adams and SF have moved very far from their original positions on parades, adding that Robinson has also moved.

The DUP linkage of the timeframes for devolution and parades is not Robinson's goal but DUP deputy party leader Nigal Dodds. Logistically, such a linkage would be impossible without delaying devolution given that the parades framework requires consultation, legislation, and implementation.

The role of Justice Minister and his/her relationship to the Executive has been agreed. Other issues, such as Irish language act, N-S bodies, etc, while symbolic and emotive for SF and the nationalists community can be dealt with.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Hyde, Dana <HydeD@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, December 25, 2010 6:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: News

I will be out of the office until January 3rd. For immediate assistance please contact the D(L) staff assistants. Many thanks, Dana

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, December 26, 2010 9:27 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Nice piece

Caitlin had made me talk to him last monday

From: Caitlin Klevorick [redacted] B6
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 09:21:45 2010
Subject: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

December 25, 2010

The Big (Military) Taboo

By NICHOLAS D. KRISTOF

We face wrenching budget cutting in the years ahead, but there's one huge area of government spending that Democrats and Republicans alike have so far treated as sacrosanct.

It's the military/security world, and it's time to bust that taboo. A few facts:

• The United States spends nearly as much on military power as every other country in the world combined, according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute. It says that we spend more than six times as much as the country with the next highest budget, China.

• The United States maintains troops at more than 560 bases and other sites abroad, many of them a legacy of a world war that ended 65 years ago. Do we fear that if we pull our bases from Germany, Russia might invade?

• The intelligence community is so vast that more people have "top secret" clearance than live in Washington, D.C.

• The U.S. will spend more on the war in Afghanistan this year, adjusting for inflation, than we spent on the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the Mexican-American War, the Civil War and the Spanish-American War combined.

This is the one area where elections scarcely matter. President Obama, a Democrat who symbolized new directions, requested about 6 percent more for the military this year than at the peak of the Bush administration.

"Republicans think banging the war drums wins them votes, and Democrats think if they don't chime in, they'll lose votes," said Andrew Bacevich, an ex-military officer who now is a historian at Boston University. He is author of a thoughtful recent book, "Washington Rules: America's Path to Permanent War."

The costs of excessive reliance on military force are not just financial, of course, as Professor Bacevich knows well. His son, Andrew Jr., an Army first lieutenant, was killed in Iraq in 2007.

Let me be clear: I'm a believer in a robust military, which is essential for backing up diplomacy. But the implication is that we need a balanced tool chest of diplomatic and military tools alike. Instead, we have a billionaire military and a pauper diplomacy. The U.S. military now has more people in its marching bands than the State Department has in its foreign service — and that's preposterous.

What's more, if you're carrying an armload of hammers, every problem looks like a nail. The truth is that military power often isn't very effective at solving modern problems, like a nuclear North Korea or an Iran that is on the nuclear path. Indeed, in an age of nationalism, our military force is often counterproductive.

After the first gulf war, the United States retained bases in Saudi Arabia on the assumption that they would enhance American security. Instead, they appear to have provoked fundamentalists like Osama bin Laden into attacking the U.S. In other words, hugely expensive bases undermined American security (and we later closed them anyway). Wouldn't our money have been better spent helping American kids get a college education?

Paradoxically, it's often people with experience in the military who lead the way in warning against overinvestment in arms. It was President Dwight Eisenhower who gave the strongest warning: "Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired signifies, in the final sense, a theft from those who hunger and are not fed, those who are cold and are not clothed." And in the Obama administration, it is Defense Secretary Robert Gates who has argued that military spending on things large and small can and should expect closer, harsher scrutiny; it is Secretary Gates who has argued most eloquently for more investment in diplomacy and development aid.

American troops in Afghanistan are among the strongest advocates of investing more in schools there because they see firsthand that education fights extremism far more effectively than bombs. And here's the trade-off: For the cost of one American soldier in Afghanistan for one year, you could build about 20 schools.

There are a few signs of hope in the air. The Simpson-Bowles deficit commission proposes cutting money for armaments, along with other spending. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton unveiled a signature project, the quadrennial diplomacy and development review, which calls for more emphasis on aid and diplomacy in foreign policy.

"Leading through civilian power saves lives and money," Mrs. Clinton noted, and she's exactly right. The review is a great document, but we'll see if it can be implemented — especially because House Republicans are proposing cuts in the State Department budget.

They should remind themselves that in the 21st century, our government can protect its citizens in many ways: financing research against disease, providing early childhood programs that reduce crime later, boosting support for community colleges, investing in diplomacy that prevents costly wars.

As we cut budgets, let's remember that these steps would, on balance, do far more for the security of Americans than a military base in Germany.

I invite you to comment on this column on my blog, On the Ground. Please also join me on Facebook, watch my YouTube videos and follow me on Twitter.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, December 26, 2010 10:21 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

I can do now if you can - otherwise, noon

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 10:18:48 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Great. [redacted] B6

When can you talk today? I'm trying to schedule my day but want to talk thru a few things w you in the midst of our coming blizzard!

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Dec 26 09:27:22 2010
Subject: Fw: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Nice piece

Caitlin had made me talk to him last monday

---

From: Caitlin Klevorick [redacted]
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 09:21:45 2010
Subject: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

December 25, 2010

The Big (Military) Taboo

By NICHOLAS D. KRISTOF
<http://topics.nytimes.com/top/opinion/editorialsandoped/oped/columnists/nicholasdkristof/index.html?inline=nyt-per>

We face wrenching budget cutting in the years ahead, but there's one huge area of government spending that Democrats and Republicans alike have so far treated as sacrosanct.

It's the military/security world, and it's time to bust that taboo. A few facts:

• The United States spends nearly as much on military power <http://www.sipri.org/research/armaments/milex/resultoutput/trends> as every other country in the world combined, according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute. It says that we spend more than six times as much <http://www.sipri.org/research/armaments/milex/resultoutput/trendgraphs/Top10bubble/top10bubble2009/image_view_fullscreen> as the country with the next highest budget, China.

• The United States maintains troops at more than 560 bases and other sites abroad, many of them a legacy of a world war that ended 65 years ago. Do we fear that if we pull our bases from Germany, Russia might invade?

• The intelligence community is so vast that more people have "top secret" clearance than live in Washington, D.C.

• The U.S. will spend more on the war in Afghanistan this year <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/07/29/opinion/29kristof.html>, adjusting for inflation, than we spent on the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the Mexican-American War, the Civil War and the Spanish-American War combined.

This is the one area where elections scarcely matter. President Obama, a Democrat who symbolized new directions, requested about 6 percent <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/07/23/us/politics/23budget.html?_r=3> more for the military this year than at the peak of the Bush administration.

"Republicans think banging the war drums wins them votes, and Democrats think if they don't chime in, they'll lose votes," said Andrew Bacevich, an ex-military officer who now is a historian at Boston University. He is author of a thoughtful recent book, "Washington Rules: America's Path to Permanent War."

The costs of excessive reliance on military force are not just financial, of course, as Professor Bacevich knows well. His son, Andrew Jr., an Army first lieutenant, was killed in Iraq in 2007.

Let me be clear: I'm a believer in a robust military, which is essential for backing up diplomacy. But the implication is that we need a balanced tool chest of diplomatic and military tools alike. Instead, we have a billionaire military and a pauper diplomacy. The U.S. military now has more people in its marching bands than the State Department has in its foreign service — and that's preposterous.

What's more, if you're carrying an armload of hammers, every problem looks like a nail. The truth is that military power often isn't very effective at solving modern problems, like a nuclear North Korea or an Iran that is on the nuclear path. Indeed, in an age of nationalism, our military force is often counterproductive.

After the first gulf war, the United States retained bases in Saudi Arabia on the assumption that they would enhance American security. Instead, they appear to have provoked fundamentalists like Osama bin Laden into attacking the U.S. In other words, hugely expensive bases undermined American security (and we later closed them anyway). Wouldn't our money have been better spent helping American kids get a college education?

Paradoxically, it's often people with experience in the military who lead the way in warning against overinvestment in arms. It was President Dwight Eisenhower who gave the strongest warning: "Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired signifies, in the final sense, a theft from those who hunger and are not fed, those who are cold and are not clothed." And in the Obama administration, it is Defense Secretary Robert Gates who has argued that military spending on things large and small can and should expect closer, harsher scrutiny; it is Secretary Gates who has argued most eloquently for more investment in diplomacy and development aid.

American troops in Afghanistan are among the strongest advocates of investing more in schools there because they see firsthand that education fights extremism far more effectively than bombs. And here's the trade-off: For the cost of one American soldier in Afghanistan for one year, you could build about 20 schools.

There are a few signs of hope in the air. The Simpson-Bowles deficit commission proposes cutting money for armaments, along with other spending. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton unveiled a signature project, the quadrennial diplomacy and development review, which calls for more emphasis on aid and diplomacy in foreign policy.

"Leading through civilian power saves lives and money," Mrs. Clinton noted, and she's exactly right. The review is a great document, but we'll see if it can be implemented — especially because House Republicans are proposing cuts in the State Department budget.

They should remind themselves that in the 21st century, our government can protect its citizens in many ways: financing research against disease, providing early childhood programs that reduce crime later, boosting support for community colleges, investing in diplomacy that prevents costly wars.

As we cut budgets, let's remember that these steps would, on balance, do far more for the security of Americans than a military base in Germany.

I invite you to comment on this column on my blog, On the Ground <http://www.nytimes.com/ontheground> . Please also join me on Facebook <http://www.facebook.com/kristof> , watch my YouTube videos <http://www.youtube.com/nicholaskristof> and follow me on Twitter <http://twitter.com/nickkristof> .

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, December 26, 2010 10:49 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Will call you at house

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 10:44:04 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Let's do noon. Do you want to call me at the house direct or dhould I call you?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Dec 26 10:20:51 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

I can do now if you can - otherwise, noon

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 10:18:48 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Great. [redacted] B6

When can you talk today? I'm trying to schedule my day but want to talk thru a few things w you in the midst of our coming blizzard!

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Dec 26 09:27:22 2010
Subject: Fw: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Nice piece

Caitlin had made me talk to him last monday

---

From: Caitlin Klevorick [redacted] B6
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 09:21:45 2010

Subject: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

December 25, 2010

The Big (Military) Taboo

By NICHOLAS D. KRISTOF
<http://topics.nytimes.com/top/opinion/editorialsandoped/oped/columnists/nicholasdkristof/index.html?inline=nyt-per>

We face wrenching budget cutting in the years ahead, but there's one huge area of government spending that Democrats and Republicans alike have so far treated as sacrosanct.

It's the military/security world, and it's time to bust that taboo. A few facts:

• The United States spends nearly as much on military power <http://www.sipri.org/research/armaments/milex/resultoutput/trends> as every other country in the world combined, according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute. It says that we spend more than six times as much <http://www.sipri.org/research/armaments/milex/resultoutput/trendgraphs/Top10bubble/top10bubble2009/image_view_fullscreen> as the country with the next highest budget, China.

• The United States maintains troops at more than 560 bases and other sites abroad, many of them a legacy of a world war that ended 65 years ago. Do we fear that if we pull our bases from Germany, Russia might invade?

• The intelligence community is so vast that more people have "top secret" clearance than live in Washington, D.C.

• The U.S. will spend more on the war in Afghanistan this year <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/07/29/opinion/29kristof.html> , adjusting for inflation, than we spent on the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the Mexican-American War, the Civil War and the Spanish-American War combined.

This is the one area where elections scarcely matter. President Obama, a Democrat who symbolized new directions, requested about 6 percent <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/07/23/us/politics/23budget.html?_r=3> more for the military this year than at the peak of the Bush administration.

"Republicans think banging the war drums wins them votes, and Democrats think if they don't chime in, they'll lose votes," said Andrew Bacevich, an ex-military officer who now is a historian at Boston University. He is author of a thoughtful recent book, "Washington Rules: America's Path to Permanent War."

The costs of excessive reliance on military force are not just financial, of course, as Professor Bacevich knows well. His son, Andrew Jr., an Army first lieutenant, was killed in Iraq in 2007.

Let me be clear: I'm a believer in a robust military, which is essential for backing up diplomacy. But the implication is that we need a balanced tool chest of diplomatic and military tools alike. Instead, we have a billionaire military and a pauper diplomacy. The U.S. military now has more people in its marching bands than the State Department has in its foreign service — and that's preposterous.

What's more, if you're carrying an armload of hammers, every problem looks like a nail. The truth is that military power often isn't very effective at solving modern problems, like a nuclear North Korea or an Iran that is on the nuclear path. Indeed, in an age of nationalism, our military force is often counterproductive.

After the first gulf war, the United States retained bases in Saudi Arabia on the assumption that they would enhance American security. Instead, they appear to have provoked fundamentalists like Osama bin Laden into attacking the U.S. In other words, hugely expensive bases undermined American security (and we later closed them anyway). Wouldn't our money have been better spent helping American kids get a college education?

Paradoxically, it's often people with experience in the military who lead the way in warning against overinvestment in arms. It was President Dwight Eisenhower who gave the strongest warning: "Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired signifies, in the final sense, a theft from those who hunger and are not fed, those who are cold and are not clothed." And in the Obama administration, it is Defense Secretary Robert Gates who has argued that military spending on things large and small can and should expect closer, harsher scrutiny; it is Secretary Gates who has argued most eloquently for more investment in diplomacy and development aid.

American troops in Afghanistan are among the strongest advocates of investing more in schools there because they see firsthand that education fights extremism far more effectively than bombs. And here's the trade-off: For the cost of one American soldier in Afghanistan for one year, you could build about 20 schools.

There are a few signs of hope in the air. The Simpson-Bowles deficit commission proposes cutting money for armaments, along with other spending. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton unveiled a signature project, the quadrennial diplomacy and development review, which calls for more emphasis on aid and diplomacy in foreign policy.

"Leading through civilian power saves lives and money," Mrs. Clinton noted, and she's exactly right. The review is a great document, but we'll see if it can be implemented — especially because House Republicans are proposing cuts in the State Department budget.

They should remind themselves that in the 21st century, our government can protect its citizens in many ways: financing research against disease, providing early childhood programs that reduce crime later, boosting support for community colleges, investing in diplomacy that prevents costly wars.

As we cut budgets, let's remember that these steps would, on balance, do far more for the security of Americans than a military base in Germany.

I invite you to comment on this column on my blog, On the Ground <http://www.nytimes.com/ontheground> . Please also join me on Facebook <http://www.facebook.com/kristof> , watch my YouTube videos <http://www.youtube.com/nicholaskristof> and follow me on Twitter <http://twitter.com/nickkristof> .

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 30, 2010 12:22 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'; 'cheryl.mills [redacted] B6
Subject: When do you want to talk today or tomorrow?

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, December 26, 2010 11:30 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

No worries

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 11:12:44 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

I'm running out to buy a few things so may be a little late. I'll email you when I get back.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Dec 26 10:48:44 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Will call you at house

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 10:44:04 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Let's do noon. Do you want to call me at the house direct or dhould I call you?

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Dec 26 10:20:51 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

I can do now if you can - otherwise, noon

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 10:18:48 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Great. [redacted] B6

When can you talk today? I'm trying to schedule my day but want to talk thru a few things w you in the midst of our coming blizzard!

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Dec 26 09:27:22 2010
Subject: Fw: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Nice piece

Caitlin had made me talk to him last monday

---

From: Caitlin Klevorick <[redacted]> B6
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 09:21:45 2010
Subject: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

December 25, 2010

The Big (Military) Taboo

By NICHOLAS D. KRISTOF
<http://topics.nytimes.com/top/opinion/editorialsandoped/oped/columnists/nicholasdkristof/index.html?inline=nyt-per>

We face wrenching budget cutting in the years ahead, but there's one huge area of government spending that Democrats and Republicans alike have so far treated as sacrosanct.

It's the military/security world, and it's time to bust that taboo. A few facts:

• The United States spends nearly as much on military power <http://www.sipri.org/research/armaments/milex/resultoutput/trends> as every other country in the world combined, according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute. It says that we spend more than six times as much <http://www.sipri.org/research/armaments/milex/resultoutput/trendgraphs/Top10bubble/top10bubble2009/image_view_fullscreen> as the country with the next highest budget, China.

• The United States maintains troops at more than 560 bases and other sites abroad, many of them a legacy of a world war that ended 65 years ago. Do we fear that if we pull our bases from Germany, Russia might invade?

• The intelligence community is so vast that more people have "top secret" clearance than live in Washington, D.C.

• The U.S. will spend more on the war in Afghanistan this year <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/07/29/opinion/29kristof.html> , adjusting for inflation, than we spent on the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the Mexican-American War, the Civil War and the Spanish-American War combined.

This is the one area where elections scarcely matter. President Obama, a Democrat who symbolized new directions, requested about 6 percent <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/07/23/us/politics/23budget.html?_r=3> more for the military this year than at the peak of the Bush administration.

"Republicans think banging the war drums wins them votes, and Democrats think if they don't chime in, they'll lose votes," said Andrew Bacevich, an ex-military officer who now is a historian at Boston University. He is author of a thoughtful recent book, "Washington Rules: America's Path to Permanent War."

The costs of excessive reliance on military force are not just financial, of course, as Professor Bacevich knows well. His son, Andrew Jr., an Army first lieutenant, was killed in Iraq in 2007.

Let me be clear: I'm a believer in a robust military, which is essential for backing up diplomacy. But the implication is that we need a balanced tool chest of diplomatic and military tools alike. Instead, we have a billionaire military and a pauper diplomacy. The U.S. military now has more people in its marching bands than the State Department has in its foreign service — and that's preposterous.

What's more, if you're carrying an armload of hammers, every problem looks like a nail. The truth is that military power often isn't very effective at solving modern problems, like a nuclear North Korea or an Iran that is on the nuclear path. Indeed, in an age of nationalism, our military force is often counterproductive.

After the first gulf war, the United States retained bases in Saudi Arabia on the assumption that they would enhance American security. Instead, they appear to have provoked fundamentalists like Osama bin Laden into attacking the U.S. In other words, hugely expensive bases undermined American security (and we later closed them anyway). Wouldn't our money have been better spent helping American kids get a college education?

Paradoxically, it's often people with experience in the military who lead the way in warning against overinvestment in arms. It was President Dwight Eisenhower who gave the strongest warning: "Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired signifies, in the final sense, a theft from those who hunger and are not fed, those who are cold and are not clothed." And in the Obama administration, it is Defense Secretary Robert Gates who has argued that military spending on things large and small can and should expect closer, harsher scrutiny; it is Secretary Gates who has argued most eloquently for more investment in diplomacy and development aid.

American troops in Afghanistan are among the strongest advocates of investing more in schools there because they see firsthand that education fights extremism far more effectively than bombs. And here's the trade-off: For the cost of one American soldier in Afghanistan for one year, you could build about 20 schools.

There are a few signs of hope in the air. The Simpson-Bowles deficit commission proposes cutting money for armaments, along with other spending. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton unveiled a signature project, the quadrennial diplomacy and development review, which calls for more emphasis on aid and diplomacy in foreign policy.

"Leading through civilian power saves lives and money," Mrs. Clinton noted, and she's exactly right. The review is a great document, but we'll see if it can be implemented — especially because House Republicans are proposing cuts in the State Department budget.

They should remind themselves that in the 21st century, our government can protect its citizens in many ways: financing research against disease, providing early childhood programs that reduce crime later, boosting support for community colleges, investing in diplomacy that prevents costly wars.

As we cut budgets, let's remember that these steps would, on balance, do far more for the security of Americans than a military base in Germany.

I invite you to comment on this column on my blog, On the Ground <http://www.nytimes.com/ontheground> . Please also join me on Facebook <http://www.facebook.com/kristof> , watch my YouTube videos <http://www.youtube.com/nicholaskristof> and follow me on Twitter <http://twitter.com/nickkristof> .

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, December 26, 2010 12:18 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Will shoot you time later - have fun

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 12:00:48 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Can we try for later--we got sidetracked out here in the so-called real world. I should be back at the house after 1 and will be there hunkered down from the storm the rest of the day.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Dec 26 11:30:23 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

No worries

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 11:12:44 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

I'm running out to buy a few things so may be a little late. I'll email you when I get back.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Dec 26 10:48:44 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Will call you at house

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 10:44:04 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Let's do noon. Do you want to call me at the house direct or dhould I call you?

----- Original Message -----

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Dec 26 10:20:51 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

I can do now if you can - otherwise, noon

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 10:18:48 2010
Subject: Re: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Great. B6

When can you talk today? I'm trying to schedule my day but want to talk thru a few things w you in the midst of our coming blizzard!

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Dec 26 09:27:22 2010
Subject: Fw: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

Nice piece

Caitlin had made me talk to him last monday

---

From: Caitlin Klevorick B6
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sun Dec 26 09:21:45 2010
Subject: Kristof on qddr/3 ds

December 25, 2010

The Big (Military) Taboo

By NICHOLAS D. KRISTOF
<http://topics.nytimes.com/top/opinion/editorialsandoped/oped/columnists/nicholasdkristof/index.html?inline=nyt-per>

We face wrenching budget cutting in the years ahead, but there's one huge area of government spending that Democrats and Republicans alike have so far treated as sacrosanct.

It's the military/security world, and it's time to bust that taboo. A few facts:

• The United States spends nearly as much on military power <http://www.sipri.org/research/armaments/milex/resultoutput/trends> as every other country in the world combined, according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute. It says that we spend more than six times as much <http://www.sipri.org/research/armaments/milex/resultoutput/trendgraphs/Top10bubble/top10bubble2009/image_view_fullscreen> as the country with the next highest budget, China.

• The United States maintains troops at more than 560 bases and other sites abroad, many of them a legacy of a world war that ended 65 years ago. Do we fear that if we pull our bases from Germany, Russia might invade?

• The intelligence community is so vast that more people have "top secret" clearance than live in Washington, D.C.

• The U.S. will spend more on the war in Afghanistan this year <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/07/29/opinion/29kristof.html>, adjusting for inflation, than we spent on the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the Mexican-American War, the Civil War and the Spanish-American War combined.

This is the one area where elections scarcely matter. President Obama, a Democrat who symbolized new directions, requested about 6 percent <http://www.nytimes.com/2010/07/23/us/politics/23budget.html?_r=3> more for the military this year than at the peak of the Bush administration.

"Republicans think banging the war drums wins them votes, and Democrats think if they don't chime in, they'll lose votes," said Andrew Bacevich, an ex-military officer who now is a historian at Boston University. He is author of a thoughtful recent book, "Washington Rules: America's Path to Permanent War."

The costs of excessive reliance on military force are not just financial, of course, as Professor Bacevich knows well. His son, Andrew Jr., an Army first lieutenant, was killed in Iraq in 2007.

Let me be clear: I'm a believer in a robust military, which is essential for backing up diplomacy. But the implication is that we need a balanced tool chest of diplomatic and military tools alike. Instead, we have a billionaire military and a pauper diplomacy. The U.S. military now has more people in its marching bands than the State Department has in its foreign service — and that's preposterous.

What's more, if you're carrying an armload of hammers, every problem looks like a nail. The truth is that military power often isn't very effective at solving modern problems, like a nuclear North Korea or an Iran that is on the nuclear path. Indeed, in an age of nationalism, our military force is often counterproductive.

After the first gulf war, the United States retained bases in Saudi Arabia on the assumption that they would enhance American security. Instead, they appear to have provoked fundamentalists like Osama bin Laden into attacking the U.S. In other words, hugely expensive bases undermined American security (and we later closed them anyway). Wouldn't our money have been better spent helping American kids get a college education?

Paradoxically, it's often people with experience in the military who lead the way in warning against overinvestment in arms. It was President Dwight Eisenhower who gave the strongest warning: "Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired signifies, in the final sense, a theft from those who hunger and are not fed, those who are cold and are not clothed." And in the Obama administration, it is Defense Secretary Robert Gates who has argued that military spending on things large and small can and should expect closer, harsher scrutiny; it is Secretary Gates who has argued most eloquently for more investment in diplomacy and development aid.

American troops in Afghanistan are among the strongest advocates of investing more in schools there because they see firsthand that education fights extremism far more effectively than bombs. And here's the trade-off: For the cost of one American soldier in Afghanistan for one year, you could build about 20 schools.

There are a few signs of hope in the air. The Simpson-Bowles deficit commission proposes cutting money for armaments, along with other spending. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton unveiled a signature project, the quadrennial diplomacy and development review, which calls for more emphasis on aid and diplomacy in foreign policy.

"Leading through civilian power saves lives and money," Mrs. Clinton noted, and she's exactly right. The review is a great document, but we'll see if it can be implemented — especially because House Republicans are proposing cuts in the State Department budget.

They should remind themselves that in the 21st century, our government can protect its citizens in many ways: financing research against disease, providing early childhood programs that reduce crime later, boosting support for community colleges, investing in diplomacy that prevents costly wars.

As we cut budgets, let's remember that these steps would, on balance, do far more for the security of Americans than a military base in Germany.

I invite you to comment on this column on my blog, On the Ground <http://www.nytimes.com/ontheground> . Please also join me on Facebook <http://www.facebook.com/kristof> , watch my YouTube videos <http://www.youtube.com/nicholaskristof> and follow me on Twitter <http://twitter.com/nickkristof> .

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, December 27, 2010 7:46 AM
To: H
Subject: Khodorkovsky verdict

Embassy Moscow and Bill recommend that we put out the below statement in your name. [redacted] B5

[redacted]

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY CLINTON

Statement on the Verdict in the Khodorkovsky/Lebedev Case

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, December 27, 2010 7:52 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Khodorkovsky verdict

Flying back this morning. Back this afternoon.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Dec 27 07:50:21 2010
Subject: Re: Khodorkovsky verdict

Ok. Are you back in the office?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Dec 27 07:45:48 2010
Subject: Khodorkovsky verdict

Embassy Moscow and Bill recommend that we put out the below statement in your name. [redacted] B5

[redacted]

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY CLINTON

Statement on the Verdict in the Khodorkovsky/Lebedev Case

[redacted]

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, December 27, 2010 8:01 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Khodorkovsky verdict

Me too! On way to airport now - think DC is okay.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Dec 27 07:55:36 2010
Subject: Re: Khodorkovsky verdict

Hope you can get back all right.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Dec 27 07:52:14 2010
Subject: Re: Khodorkovsky verdict

Flying back this morning. Back this afternoon.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Mon Dec 27 07:50:21 2010
Subject: Re: Khodorkovsky verdict

Ok. Are you back in the office?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Mon Dec 27 07:45:48 2010
Subject: Khodorkovsky verdict

Embassy Moscow and Bill recommend that we put out the below statement in your name. [redacted] B5

[redacted]

STATEMENT BY SECRETARY CLINTON

Statement on the Verdict in the Khodorkovsky/Lebedev Case

B5

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 2010 2:21 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Thank you

-----Original Message-----
From: Howard Paster [mailto:
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 2010 8:12 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Thank you

B6

Cheryl -

Please accept my thanks for your help and the help of your excellent staff, especially Nora, when I became ill in Cairo earlier this week. We are home now and I am doing better. I am grateful to Mary Grandfield and others at the Embassy, with special thanks to Mark Perry who was very attentive and extremely helpful. He called repeatedly to check up on me and, very importantly, arranged help at the Cairo airport.

It is a real comfort to be able to call on old friends and to get such a positive response.

With thanks and all good wishes,

Howard

Privileged/Confidential Information may be contained in this message. If you are not the addressee indicated in this message (or responsible for delivery of the message to such person), you may not copy or deliver this message to anyone. In such case, you should destroy this message and kindly notify the sender by reply email.
Please advise immediately if you or your employer does not consent to email for messages of this kind. Opinions, conclusions and other information in this message that do not relate to the official business of the WPP 2005 Ltd shall be understood as neither given nor endorsed by it.

RELEASE IN PART
B1,1.4(D)

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, December 27, 2010 12:21 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Update

I hope all the Clintons had a wonderful Xmas.

[redacted] 1.4(D) B1

-----Original Message-----
From [redacted]
Sent: Saturday, December 25, 2010 8:48 PM
To: Verveer, Melanne S
Subject: Update

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 12/26/2035

Dear Melanne:

[redacted]

[redacted]

1.4(D)
B1

Sent wirelessly via BlackBerry

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, December 27, 2010 4:19 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Gallup Survey: Hillary Clinton Again "Most Admired" Woman

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Mon Dec 27 15:21:37 2010
Subject: Gallup Survey: Hillary Clinton Again "Most Admired" Woman

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton finished first for the ninth straight year on Gallup and USA Today's "most-admired" list. She was followed by Sarah Palin, Oprah Winfrey, Michelle Obama, Condoleezza Rice, and Queen Elizabeth. President Obama remains the nation's most-admired man for the third straight year, despite falling approval ratings.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, December 27, 2010 4:20 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Israeli PM: Interim Mideast peace deal 'possible' (AP)

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_Shift-III; SES-O_OS
Sent: Mon Dec 27 14:11:41 2010
Subject: Israeli PM: Interim Mideast peace deal 'possible' (AP)

JERUSALEM (AP) - Speaking to Israeli Channel 10 TV December 27, Benjamin Netanyahu said if negotiations stall over Jerusalem or Palestinian refugees, "it could be that the result will then be an interim agreement." On December 26 Israel's hard-line Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman floated the same proposal. Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat said the interim agreement idea is "a nonstarter and will not fly."

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, December 27, 2010 4:28 PM
To: H; cheryl.mills [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: Can you talk??

Sorry

[redacted] - I can talk later - will that work?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D; 'cheryl.mills [redacted]' <cheryl.mills [redacted]>
Sent: Mon Dec 27 07:58:29 2010
Subject: Can you talk??

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 2010 8:17 PM
To: H
Subject: Hof trip

Tom has expressed a different view on the Hof trip. From my perspective, it's obvious that this is your call. But it might be worth touching base with him.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, December 27, 2010 4:29 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Gallup Survey: Hillary Clinton Again "Most Admired" Woman

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Mon Dec 27 15:21:37 2010
Subject: Gallup Survey: Hillary Clinton Again "Most Admired" Woman

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton finished first for the ninth straight year on Gallup and USA Today's "most-admired" list. She was followed by Sarah Palin, Oprah Winfrey, Michelle Obama, Condoleezza Rice, and Queen Elizabeth. President Obama remains the nation's most-admired man for the third straight year, despite falling approval ratings.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Monday, December 27, 2010 4:33 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Can you talk??

Will do

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Mon Dec 27 16:29:57 2010
Subject: Re: Can you talk??

I'll be on a plane. Let's try tomorrow. [redacted] B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H; cheryl.mills[redacted]<cheryl.mills[redacted]>
Sent: Mon Dec 27 16:28:21 2010
Subject: Re: Can you talk??

Sorry

[redacted] - I can talk later - will that work?

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Mills, Cheryl D; 'cheryl.mills[redacted]<cheryl.mill[redacted]>
Sent: Mon Dec 27 07:58:29 2010
Subject: Can you talk??

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 2010 8:57 PM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J; Abedin, Huma
Subject: Fw: US Chairing OECD Ministerial

----- Original Message -----
From: Kornbluh, Karen F
To: Mills, Cheryl D; Lew, Jacob J; Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Thu Oct 21 17:57:49 2010
Subject: US Chairing OECD Ministerial

OECD Counsel chose US to Chair their 50th Anniversary Ministerial with Secretary Clinton heading the delegation. Germany bowed out of their desire to co-chair but agreed to Vice Chair and confirmed Chancellor Merkel will deliver a speech. We'll firm up schedule in coming days. Looking forward to it!

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 2010 10:41 PM
To: H
Subject: R u up? He's done and wondering u r up.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 30, 2010 5:39 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re:

B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 17:36:51 2010
Subject: Fw:

---

From: Jules A Martin
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Sat Jan 30 16:09:46 2010

Jules

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 30, 2010 5:49 PM
To: 'cheryl.mills[redacted]'; 'millscd@state.gov' B6
Subject: Have you received email from Bill w letter from Ban yet?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Cheryl Mills [redacted] B6
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 2010 10:59 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: FYI

see traffic – steinberg saying he's here to stay beyond the date al k was going to write (dec)

---

From: Steinberg, James B [mailto:SteinbergJB@state.gov]
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 2010 12:07 PM
To: Reines, Philippe I; Cheryl.mills[redacted] B6
Cc: Crowley, Philip J
Subject: Re: FYI

Excellent

From: Reines, Philippe I
To: Steinberg, James B; 'Cheryl.mills[redacted] <Cheryl.mills[redacted] B6
Cc: Crowley, Philip J
Sent: Thu Oct 21 11:58:15 2010
Subject: Re: FYI

I'm going to say just that

From: Steinberg, James B
To: Reines, Philippe I; 'Cheryl.mills[redacted] <Cheryl.mills[redacted] B6
Cc: Crowley, Philip J
Sent: Thu Oct 21 11:57:25 2010
Subject: Re: FYI

Shut it down. I plan to celebrate my second anniversay as D on jan 28 2011 on the 7th floor and al k is invited to come

From: Reines, Philippe I
To: Steinberg, James B; 'Cheryl.mills[redacted] <Cheryl.mills[redacted] B6
Cc: Crowley, Philip J
Sent: Thu Oct 21 11:53:05 2010
Subject: FYI

This is his way of saying he's running an item - unless we shut it down

From: Al Kamen [redacted] B6
To: Reines, Philippe I
Sent: Thu Oct 21 11:51:05 2010
Subject: increasing buzz that Steinberg's gone in Dec.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 30, 2010 9:40 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid
Attachments: hrc memo ni breakthrough 013010.docx; hrc memo ni breakthrough 013010.docx

Sounds real--cross your fingers. Let me know what you hear.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 21:23:01 2010
Subject: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

B6

CONFIDENTIAL

January 30, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI breakthrough

Shaun has just called me—about 9 p.m. EST. He says it is very likely that an agreement will be announced on Monday. The parties have reached agreement tonight. Shaun will call you on Sunday to brief. Gordon will fly into Belfast on Monday for a ceremony if all goes according to plan now. He will mention your role. You should be prepared to speak to the parties before the event and issue a statement. Hope it doesn't come unraveled over the next 36 hours.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 22, 2010 6:52 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AFP) Bomb kills Afghan district governor

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Fri Oct 22 02:02:39 2010
Subject: (AFP) Bomb kills Afghan district governor

JALALABAD (AFP) – A Taliban-style bomb attack killed a district governor in eastern Afghanistan on October 22, police said. Khorsheed, the governor of Dur Baba in Nangarhar province, was driving to work when the improvised-explosive device often used in insurgent attacks blew up his vehicle, said police spokesman Colonel Abdul Ghafour. Like many Afghans, the official had only one name. "The district governor has been martyred. Three other people, his driver and guards have been injured," Ghafour told AFP. He could not say who was behind the attack, but the tactics were typical of the Taliban.

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

January 30, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI breakthrough

Shaun has just called me—about 9 p.m. EST. He says it is very likely that an agreement will be announced on Monday. The parties have reached agreement tonight. Shaun will call you on Sunday to brief. Gordon will fly into Belfast on Monday for a ceremony if all goes according to plan now. He will mention your role. You should be prepared to speak to the parties before the event and issue a statement. Hope it doesn't come unraveled over the next 36 hours.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 30, 2010 9:55 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

That is very welcome news. Let's hope it actually holds til Monday. Thx for helping keep me informed along the way.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 21:23:01 2010
Subject: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

January 30, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI breakthrough

Shaun has just called me—about 9 p.m. EST. He says it is very likely that an agreement will be announced on Monday. The parties have reached agreement tonight. Shaun will call you on Sunday to brief. Gordon will fly into Belfast on Monday for a ceremony if all goes according to plan now. He will mention your role. You should be prepared to speak to the parties before the event and issue a statement. Hope it doesn't come unraveled over the next 36 hours.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 8:58 AM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Suicide attack kills 10 in NW Pakistan

Can you call me?

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 08:56:39 2010
Subject: Fw: Suicide attack kills 10 in NW Pakistan

---

From: Riggs, Susan J
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-SCA; NEWS-Pakistan
Sent: Wed Feb 10 07:49:05 2010
Subject: Suicide attack kills 10 in NW Pakistan

PESHAWAR (AP) - A local government official said a suicide car bomber attacked a tribal police patrol in northwestern Pakistan, killing 10 policemen. Rasheed Khan says the attacker rammed his car into a vehicle carrying the police on a main highway in the Khyber tribal area near the Afghan border. Another 15 people were injured in the attack. No group has claimed responsibility for the attack, but Taliban militants often target Pakistani security forces.

Regards,

Susan Riggs

Watch Officer

State Department Operations Center

202-647-1512

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 30, 2010 9:57 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Cc: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Also, I'm copying Jake Sullivan so we can arrange a time for Shaun's call tomorrow. Thx again.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 21:23:01 2010
Subject: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

January 30, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI breakthrough

Shaun has just called me—about 9 p.m. EST. He says it is very likely that an agreement will be announced on Monday. The parties have reached agreement tonight. Shaun will call you on Sunday to brief. Gordon will fly into Belfast on Monday for a ceremony if all goes according to plan now. He will mention your role. You should be prepared to speak to the parties before the event and issue a statement. Hope it doesn't come unraveled over the next 36 hours.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 30, 2010 10:18 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Should I make a statement in briefing room on Monday? What about Sid's comment that Shaun would want to talk to me tomorrow?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 22:15:06 2010
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Missed Shaun, but was just on the phone with his COS, who said there are still some details to be worked out Monday. She "wouldn't put a full stop on it," but things are looking very good.

Looks like tomorrow will be a down day and then they'll reconvene Monday to try to bang out the last details and announce.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jan 30 21:40:05 2010
Subject: Fw: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Sounds real--cross your fingers. Let me know what you hear.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 21:23:01 2010
Subject: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

January 30, 2010

For: Hillary

From: Sid
Re: NI breakthrough

Shaun has just called me—about 9 p.m. EST. He says it is very likely that an agreement will be announced on Monday. The parties have reached agreement tonight. Shaun will call you on Sunday to brief. Gordon will fly into Belfast on Monday for a ceremony if all goes according to plan now. He will mention your role. You should be prepared to speak to the parties before the event and issue a statement. Hope it doesn't come unraveled over the next 36 hours.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 30, 2010 10:19 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

I did get it. Did you just get mine w questions about tomorrow and Monday?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 22:18:15 2010
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Just tried emailing you but not sure it went through --

Missed Shaun, but talked to his COS a short while ago. She said there are still a few details to be worked out Monday. She "wouldn't put a full stop on it," though things are looking very good. Tomorrow will be a down day and they'll reconvene Monday to bang out last details and (hopefully) announce.

I'll be in touch with other people in the morning and give you there reports.

Will also check in with Declan!

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jan 30 21:40:05 2010
Subject: Fw: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Sounds real--cross your fingers. Let me know what you hear.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 21:23:01 2010
Subject: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

January 30, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI breakthrough

Shaun has just called me—about 9 p.m. EST. He says it is very likely that an agreement will be announced on Monday. The parties have reached agreement tonight. Shaun will call you on Sunday to brief. Gordon will fly into Belfast on Monday for a ceremony if all goes according to plan now. He will mention your role. You should be prepared to speak to the parties before the event and issue a statement. Hope it doesn't come unraveled over the next 36 hours.

RELEASE IN PART B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 30, 2010 10:43 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

I will definitely talk to Shaun anytime after noon. Just let me know what works.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 22:33:51 2010
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jan 30 22:18:07 2010
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Should I make a statement in briefing room on Monday? What about Sid's comment that Shaun would want to talk to me tomorrow?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 22:15:06 2010
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Missed Shaun, but was just on the phone with his COS, who said there are still some details to be worked out Monday. She "wouldn't put a full stop on it," but things are looking very good.

Looks like tomorrow will be a down day and then they'll reconvene Monday to try to bang out the last details and announce.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jan 30 21:40:05 2010
Subject: Fw: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Sounds real--cross your fingers. Let me know what you hear.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 21:23:01 2010
Subject: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

January 30, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI breakthrough

Shaun has just called me—about 9 p.m. EST. He says it is very likely that an agreement will be announced on Monday. The parties have reached agreement tonight. Shaun will call you on Sunday to brief. Gordon will fly into Belfast on Monday for a ceremony if all goes according to plan now. He will mention your role. You should be prepared to speak to the parties before the event and issue a statement. Hope it doesn't come unraveled over the next 36 hours.

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, January 30, 2010 10:44 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Actually, I can also make it work before noon if he prefers by moving other calls around. Just let me know. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 22:33:51 2010
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jan 30 22:18:07 2010
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Should I make a statement in briefing room on Monday? What about Sid's comment that Shaun would want to talk to me tomorrow?

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 22:15:06 2010
Subject: Re: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Missed Shaun, but was just on the phone with his COS, who said there are still some details to be worked out Monday. She "wouldn't put a full stop on it," but things are looking very good.

Looks like tomorrow will be a down day and then they'll reconvene Monday to try to bang out the last details and announce.

----- Original Message -----

From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Jan 30 21:40:05 2010
Subject: Fw: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

Sounds real--cross your fingers. Let me know what you hear.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Sat Jan 30 21:23:01 2010
Subject: H: BREAKTHROUGH IN NI TALKS! Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

January 30, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: NI breakthrough

Shaun has just called me—about 9 p.m. EST. He says it is very likely that an agreement will be announced on Monday. The parties have reached agreement tonight. Shaun will call you on Sunday to brief. Gordon will fly into Belfast on Monday for a ceremony if all goes according to plan now. He will mention your role. You should be prepared to speak to the parties before the event and issue a statement. Hope it doesn't come unraveled over the next 36 hours.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 10:50 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Insulza

It's a public statement! Just email it.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Feb 10 10:48:14 2010
Subject: Fw: Insulza

See below from Tom. We can put together a conference call at your convenience with Arturo, Craig, Carmen, CDM, me, and perhaps Jim.

On the Mitchell material, for reasons that elude me, the two versions of the Blair statement were done on the classified system. Ops will get the statement and the other document to you ASAP. I've also asked them to convert the statement so that it can be emailed to you.

----- Original Message -----
From: Shannon, Thomas A
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 09:33:26 2010
Subject: RE: Insulza

B5

B5

SBU
This email is UNCLASSIFIED-----Original Message-----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 2:49 AM
To: Shannon, Thomas A
Subject: Insulza

Tomorrow's wapo editorial makes a pretty good case about insulza and the oas. What are your thoughts on how to proceed?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 22, 2010 7:50 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Haiti president confirms cholera outbreak, 138 dead

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS
Sent: Fri Oct 22 07:47:09 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Haiti president confirms cholera outbreak, 138 dead

PORT-AU-PRINCE (Reuters) - Haitian President Preval said October 22 an outbreak of cholera killed at least 138 people in the quake-hit country's central region and his government was taking measures to try to stop the disease spreading.

"I can confirm it is cholera," Preval told Reuters, as Haitian and international health officials confronted the poor Caribbean nation's biggest medical crisis since the January 12 earthquake.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 7:52 AM
To: 'slaughtera@state.gov'
Subject: Re: looking good

Thx but did you see the photos of my shoe falling off as I reached the top step of the Elysee to be greeted by Sarkozy? Very funny--I'll bring them to show you!

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Fri Jan 29 10:53:51 2010
Subject: looking good

There is a very elegant picture of you on the front page of the IHT. AM

Anne-Marie Slaughter

Director of Policy Planning

U.S. Department of State

(202) 647-2972

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 11:30 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Blair statement

Well, that is certainly worthy of being top secret. Fine to go w Mitchell version; Blair's seems written as an oral statement.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 11:26:11 2010
Subject: Blair statement

The first has Mitchell's edits, the second is original from Blair's guy to Mara:

Draft Statement by the Secretary as Revised by Senator Mitchell

This Administration has, from the beginning, worked to bring about comprehensive peace in the Middle East, including a two-state solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. On that issue our approach has been three-fold: (1) to help build the economy and capacity to govern of a Palestinian state; (2) to renew political negotiations to enable the earliest possible establishment of that state; and (3) to achieve these in a manner that ensures the security of Israel and of the Palestinians.

Consistent with Prime Minister Fayyad's plan for a future Palestinian state, and to support the political negotiations, Tony Blair, as the Quartet representative, will intensify his partnership with Senator Mitchell to mobilize the efforts of the international community: (1) to build support for the institutional capacity and governance of a future Palestinian State; (2) to improve freedom of movement and access for Palestinians; (3) to encourage further private sector investment; and (4) to bring change in the living conditions of the people in Gaza.

Original Draft Statement by the Secretary Submitted by Tony Blair

The United States is determined to bring about a two-state solution. Believes there is a strong basis for doing so. Believes it can be done by combining a renewed political negotiation with change on the ground, bottom up, as set out in Prime Minister Fayyad's plan for a Palestinian state.

To this end, Tony Blair, as Quartet Representative, will work in partnership with Senator Mitchell to suppor t the political negotiation by mobilizing the efforts of the international community: (1) to build support for the institutional capacity and future governance of a future Palestinian state; (2) to improve freedom of movement and access for Palestinians; (3) to encourage further private sector investment; and (4) to bring change in the living conditions of the people in Gaza.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 1:23 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Iran

In stories today PJ suggests we're open to alternatives to our TRR proposal. The WSJ says it's a reversal of position. What gives?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 22, 2010 7:53 AM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Mini Schedule 10/22/10 Friday

7:15 am CALL w/DUTCH FOREIGN MINISTER URI ROSENTHAL
7:30 am Private Residence

8:00 am DEPART Private Residence
En route State Department

8:10 am ARRIVE State Department

8:15 am U.S.-PAKISTAN DIALOGUE PLENARY SESSION
9:30 am Benjamin Franklin Room, 8th Floor

9:30 am OFFICE TIME
10:30 am Secretary's Office

10:45 am VIDEOS (7)
11:30 am George Marshall Room, 7th Floor

11:45 am DROP-BY w/HARVARD KENNEDY SCHOOL SPRING EXERCISE STUDENTS
11:55 am Treaty Room, 7th Floor

12:00 pm OFFICE TIME
1:00 pm Secretary's Office

1:15 pm PHOTO OP w/ RICH VERMA'S MOTHER
1:20 pm Secretary's Outer Office

1:30 pm WEEKLY DEVELOPMENT TEAM MEETING
2:30 pm Secretary's Outer Office

2:30 pm MEETING w/PAKISTANI F.M. MAKHDOOM SHAH MEHMOOD
3:00 pm QURESHI Secy's Conf. Room *Official photo at top in East Hall.

3:00 pm PRESS AVAILABILITY PREP
3:05 pm Secretary's Office

3:05 pm JOINT PRESS AVAILABLITY w/PAKISTANI FOREIGN MINISTER
3:20 pm MAKHDOOM SHAH MEHMOOD QURESHI Treaty Room

3:45 pm DROP BY US-AFGHAN WOMEN'S COUNCIL MEETING
4:15 pm Principals Conference Room 7516

4:25 pm DEPART State Department *En route Washington Reagan National Airport

4:50 pm ARRIVE Washington Reagan National Airport (DCA)

5:00 pm DEPART Washington Reagan National Airport via US Air 2180
En route LaGuardia Airport

6:15 pm ARRIVE LaGuardia Airport (LGA)

6:25 pm DEPART LaGuardia Airport *En route Private Residence

7:25 pm ARRIVE Private Residence

FYI:
12:45 pm U.S.-PAKISTAN DIALOGUE LUNCH
2:15 pm Benjamin Franklin Room, 8th Floor

###

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 7:54 AM
To: 'mchaleja@state.gov'
Cc: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Re: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

When will you be back so we can catch up? Also who is your right hand on all of these initiatives? I'm copying Lona so she can work w your office for a time.

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jan 29 06:46:50 2010
Subject: Re: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

Thx. Had a great conversation with Doug Hattaway. [redacted] B5
[redacted] Will fill you in when I see you.

Also working with Amb Pascual on a new strategy for Mexicom

Finally working with Cheryl to help GoH with communication from g to p.

On my way to india and bangalesh.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Fri Jan 29 04:02:52 2010
Subject: Re: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

That's the result of your leadership and a new model of engagement w our own people. Onward!

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H; Burns, William J <BurnsWJ@state.gov>; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Smith, Daniel B <SmithD2@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Jan 28 05:06:38 2010
Subject: FW: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

Our Posts at work.

From: DiMartino, Kitty
Sent: Wednesday, January 27, 2010 11:07 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

-- VEJA MAGAZINE, BRAZIL (Jan. 25, headline of a two-page article showing U.S. servicemen walking in front of destroyed buildings in Port-au-Prince): "Better with them, impossible without."

--CHOSUN ILBO NEWSPAPER, KOREA (Jan. 25): U.S. involvement in overseas natural disasters is a 40-year-long humanitarian tradition. . . In a disaster-stricken area, the military is more systematic and effective in carrying out a relief operation than any other group."

-- EXPRESSO NEWSPAPER, PORTUGAL (Jan. 24): "In critical moments of the history of mankind, over the last 100 years, the United States is, in fact, the indispensable nation. Sometimes for bad reasons and, other times, as in Haiti, for good reasons."

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 1:17 PM
To: 'preines [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: FLOTUS re XFLOTUS

That's so nice.

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR [redacted]
To: H
Cc: CDM <cheryl.mills [redacted]>; Huma Abedin; Jake Sullivan [redacted]
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:16:00 2010
Subject: FLOTUS re XFLOTUS

From Larry King last night:

LARRY KING: How is the -- it was so bitter -- well, rather bitter in the campaign with Hillary, when they were going at each other.

MICHELLE OBAMA: Yes, it seems so long ago.

KING: Yes. How are they doing now together?
OBAMA: They're great. Hillary Clinton is an amazing secretary of State. I mean she would have been an amazing president. She was an amazing attorney. She's a phenomenal professional. And she's proven to be a tremendous asset in -- in so many ways. So the relationship is -- is -- is strong. They share the same views in terms of international policy and approach. And we're seeing the outcome of that on the international stage. I think, you know, we can say pretty clearly that the United States -- the -- the view of this nation around the world has changed. People are enthusiastic about the potential. Things aren't perfect. We're still a nation fighting two wars. But when we travel around the country, the excitement and the possibility are palpable. And I think that's because of the president, but I think it's also because of our secretary of State.

http://transcripts.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/1002/09/lkl.01.html

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 1:27 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: START

Any word on status in Geneva?

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,B5,1.4(D)

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 2:35 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Iran

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 07/30/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 02/10/2025

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:57:13 2010
Subject: Re: Iran

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1
B5

I called Bill about that this morning when I saw the stories.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:22:32 2010
Subject: Iran

In stories today PJ suggests we're open to alternatives to our TRR proposal. The WSJ says it's a reversal of position. What gives?

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 2:36 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Tftp

Agreed.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:59:50 2010
Subject: Fw: Tftp

Troubling news from Europe. [redacted] B5

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Jones, Stuart
To: Gordon, Philip H; McEldowney, Nancy E; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:40:36 2010
Subject: Tftp

Jake, we just got off conf call re status of ep vote on tftp. The debate this aft was dramatic. The council + commission apologized for mishandling the issue + begged mep's not to take out their frustration on interim agreement which is saving lives. Both epp leader ver hofstadt + socialist leader schultz responded by openly advocating postponement.

After debate party leaders met but failed to achieve consensus on postponement. [redacted] B5

[redacted]

We are now working on contingency press guidance. [redacted]

[redacted]

Stu

RELEASE IN PART
1.4(B),B1,B5,1.4(D)

---

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:00 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Iran

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 14:37:23 2010
Subject: Re: Iran

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 14:35:07 2010
Subject: Re: Iran

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 07/30/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 02/10/2025

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:57:13 2010
Subject: Re: Iran

1.4(B)
1.4(D)
B1
B5

I called Bill about that this morning when I saw the stories. [redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]

In short, he thinks this is all playing out in Moscow, not in Geneva.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 10 13:22:32 2010
Subject: Iran

In stories today PJ suggests we're open to alternatives to our TRR proposal. The WSJ says it's a reversal of position. What gives?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:10 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Governor Richardson's inquiries re missionaries, travel, and supplies

When can you talk? I'm free until 4 and after 7.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 15:06:45 2010
Subject: FW: Governor Richardson's inquiries re missionaries, travel, and supplies

sigh

---

From: Banks, Dana
To: SES_DutyDeputies
Cc: SES-O_SWO-Only
Sent: Wed Feb 10 14:51:27 2010
Subject: FW: Governor Richardson's inquiries re missionaries, travel, and supplies

Dan,

Wanted to bring this to your attention. Gov. Bill Richardson called the taskforce today to inquiring about travel to Haiti. His specific concerns were:

- An update on the court proceedings of the missionaries, particularly whether or not a Haitian court decision is imminent;
- Information on whether or not he could travel to Haiti and how to set up a trip;
- Information on whether or not he could travel by private plane;
- A list of what supplies are needed in Haiti; and
- Direction on how to deliver those supplies.

He said he may not travel if he receives an indication that the case of the Amcit missionaries would be decided sometime in the next few days.

H has been informed. Please let us know if you would like us to forward to C or M.

Dana

From: Haiti TaskForce1D-DepCoordinator
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 1:41 PM
To: TaskForce-1; Cleveland, Charlena A; Elder, Christine A; 'elderc@ ; Christman, Kim N; 'ebdorn '; Psyhos, Nicholas A; Bulgrin, Julie K; Hall, Suzanne K; Tomlinson, Daniel W; Van Buskirk, Raymond M; Kim, Haelee (LAC/AA/CUBA); Finnegan, Joseph P; Youmans, Frances; Dubois, Kim F; Bradford, Qiana; SES-O_Shift-II
Cc: xHaiti File Mail
Subject: Governor Richardson's inquiries re missionaries, travel, and supplies

B6

New Mexico Governor Bill Richardson called the Haiti Task Force at 1300 EST on February 10 to inquire about

1) the status of the missionaries;

2) how to get to Haiti; and

3) how to deliver supplies needed on the ground.

The three missionaries in question - and - The are now The three all have relatives living in who have contacted Governor Richardson to intervene in the case.

Governor Richardson understood that a Haitian court would decide the missionaries' case on February 10 and said there was some speculation that the missionaries would be released. If they are not going to be released, then Governor Richardson is considering traveling to Haiti to inquire about the status of the missionaries, deliver needed supplies to Haitians, and meet with President Preval Governor Richardson emphasized that the trip plans could be eliminated if he received some indication that the case would be decided sometime in the next few days.

Governor Richardson specifically requested:

- An update on the court proceedings of the missionaries, particularly whether or not a Haitian court decision is imminent;
- Information on whether or not he could travel to Haiti and how to set up a trip;
- Information on whether or not he could travel by private plane;
- A list of what supplies are needed in Haiti; and

- Direction on how to deliver those supplies.

The answers to the questions above can be sent to:

Alarie Ray

Communications Director

New Mexico Governor's Office

Office: (505) 476-2248

Cell: [redacted] B6

Also, his secretary's contact information is:

Janis Hartley

[redacted]

Office: (505) 476-2245

Cell: [redacted]

Thank you,

Oni

Oni Blair

Haiti Task Force Deputy Coordinator

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:19 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: 4pm oas call confirmed

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 15:16:08 2010
Subject: 4pm oas call confirmed

Jake Sullivan
Cheryl Mills
Mike Fuchs
Carmen Lomellin
Craig Kelly
Jim Steinberg (tentative)
Arturo Valenzuela
Anne-Marie Slaughter
Ops will connect to you.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:41 PM
To: 'preines[redacted] B6
Subject: Re: Mother Teresa

I didn't know that--can we find out why. At least we had it open for 7 years but why does stuff like this stalk us?

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR[redacted]
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Sent: Wed Feb 10 15:33:21 2010
Subject: Mother Teresa

Just FYI on the below, from one of those crazy right "magazines" - notes that the home you referenced in your Prayer Breakfast remarks has since closed.

I checked in with Lissa & Melanne, they didn't know it closed, which makes sense since it happened in 2002 after you left the White House.

I made it clear that your longtime commitment to this issue - throughout your public career - is well known, and you remain very proud of your work with Mother Teresa in opening this home in 1995. And that your partnership is a success story to be emulated.

Again, this is just FYI

http://www.worldmag.com/webextra/16398

ADOPTION | Hillary Clinton continues to hail an adoption home she helped open with Mother Teresa that has since closed its doors By Emily Belz

WASHINGTON—An adoption ministry Secretary of State Hillary Clinton hailed as a home she helped open with Mother Teresa no longer handles adoptions and its phone line has been disconnected, though at last week's National Prayer Breakfast Clinton spent five minutes of her 30-minute speech relating the story of its opening. Last Thursday Clinton described Mother Teresa "beaming about what this meant for children and their futures," seemingly oblivious that the Mother Teresa Home for Infant Children in northwest Washington, D.C., is now defunct. She said she worked tirelessly to "cut through all the red tape," although it appears that red tape prevented the work from continuing. According to a pastor at the church next door to the home's former location, the adoption ministry failed to take off because the Roman Catholic nuns who ran it weren't allowed to care for babies without medical personnel on site. "I'm not sure the legal thing that came down upon them, but they realized they needed to expend their energies in another way," said Maureen Freshour, who along with her husband, David, pastors Chevy Chase Baptist Church and lives nearby. Freshour has stayed in touch with the nuns from the Missionaries of Charity order who ran the home and said that the remaining three or four sisters have moved to another house in Washington, where they are ministering to the homeless."This has been a core issue—adoption—whether the home [Clinton] talked about survived or not," said Chuck Johnson, chief operating officer of the National Council for Adoption. "It's an issue she's been consistent on."During her speech on Thursday, Clinton reminisced about the 1994 National Prayer Breakfast when she attended as first lady and Mother Teresa was the speaker. The Roman Catholic nun delivered a blistering speech about abortion, saying, "Any country that accepts abortion is not teaching its people to love, but to use any violence to get what they want." Mother Teresa then called on attendees to fight abortion through adoption: "Please don't kill the child. I want the child. Please give me the child."The audience that day gave her a standing ovation—but President and Mrs. Clinton, both pro-abortion, did not stand. Afterward, Mother Teresa asked to meet with Hillary Clinton and they went to talk behind a curtain on the stage, sitting on folding chairs, Mother Teresa in sandals even though it was winter."She told me that she knew that we had a shared conviction about adoption being vastly better as a choice for unplanned or unwanted babies," Clinton related last Thursday. "And she asked me—or more properly, she directed me—to work with her to create a home for such babies here in Washington."Clinton followed through and set up a home for unwanted babies in Washington in just over a year, no small feat in a city that was known then for its inefficient and corrupt bureaucracy. The Mother Teresa Home for Infant Children opened in June 1995 in the district's affluent Chevy Chase neighborhood to house eight pregnant mothers and their babies—but it remains unclear whether it facilitated any adoptions.I called the Missionaries of Charity in Washington, a worldwide Roman Catholic order established by Mother Teresa. The nun who answered the phone said she couldn't give her name because they aren't allowed to talk to the press. She did say, however, that the sisters who are in the order now were not in the order when the adoption home opened, so she wasn't sure why it closed. She added that the order sold the Chevy Chase house in 2002. "We work with the poor and we didn't have any work there because it's a rich neighborhood," she said. The sisters, she added, are now working with the homeless and those with AIDS in a more transitional neighborhood in the northeast section of town on Otis Street.

###

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 3:42 PM
To: 'preines [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: Mother Teresa

Also, I wrote about it in Living History and no one said a word. Was it still open in some form in 2004?

----- Original Message -----
From: PIR [redacted]
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin
Sent: Wed Feb 10 15:33:21 2010
Subject: Mother Teresa

Just FYI on the below, from one of those crazy right "magazines" - notes that the home you referenced in your Prayer Breakfast remarks has since closed.

I checked in with Lissa & Melanne, they didn't know it closed, which makes sense since it happened in 2002 after you left the White House.

I made it clear that your longtime commitment to this issue - throughout your public career - is well known, and you remain very proud of your work with Mother Teresa in opening this home in 1995. And that your partnership is a success story to be emulated.

Again, this is just FYI

http://www.worldmag.com/webextra/16398

ADOPTION | Hillary Clinton continues to hail an adoption home she helped open with Mother Teresa that has since closed its doors By Emily Belz

WASHINGTON—An adoption ministry Secretary of State Hillary Clinton hailed as a home she helped open with Mother Teresa no longer handles adoptions and its phone line has been disconnected, though at last week's National Prayer Breakfast Clinton spent five minutes of her 30-minute speech relating the story of its opening. Last Thursday Clinton described Mother Teresa "beaming about what this meant for children and their futures," seemingly oblivious that the Mother Teresa Home for Infant Children in northwest Washington, D.C., is now defunct. She said she worked tirelessly to "cut through all the red tape," although it appears that red tape prevented the work from continuing. According to a pastor at the church next door to the home's former location, the adoption ministry failed to take off because the Roman Catholic nuns who ran it weren't allowed to care for babies without medical personnel on site. "I'm not sure the legal thing that came down upon them, but they realized they needed to expend their energies in another way," said Maureen Freshour, who along with her husband, David, pastors Chevy Chase Baptist Church and lives nearby. Freshour has stayed in touch with the nuns from the Missionaries of Charity order who ran the home and said that the remaining three or four sisters have moved to another house in Washington, where they are ministering to the homeless."This has been a core issue—adoption—whether the home [Clinton] talked about survived or not," said Chuck Johnson, chief operating officer of the National Council for Adoption. "It's an issue she's been consistent on."During her speech on Thursday, Clinton reminisced about the 1994 National Prayer Breakfast when she attended as first lady and Mother Teresa was the speaker. The Roman Catholic nun delivered a blistering speech about abortion, saying, "Any country that accepts abortion is not teaching its people to love, but to use any violence to get what they want." Mother Teresa then called on attendees to fight abortion through adoption: "Please don't kill the child. I want the child. Please give me the child."The audience that day gave her a standing ovation—but President and Mrs. Clinton, both pro-abortion, did not stand. Afterward, Mother Teresa asked to meet with Hillary Clinton and they went to talk behind a curtain on the stage, sitting on folding chairs, Mother Teresa in sandals even though it was winter."She told me that she knew that we had a shared conviction about adoption being vastly better as a choice for unplanned or unwanted babies," Clinton related last Thursday. "And she asked me—or more properly, she directed me—to work with her to create a home for such babies here in Washington."Clinton followed through and set up a home for unwanted babies in Washington in just over a year, no small feat in a city that was known then for its inefficient and corrupt bureaucracy. The Mother Teresa Home for Infant Children opened in June 1995 in the district's affluent Chevy Chase neighborhood to house eight pregnant mothers and their babies—but it remains unclear whether it facilitated any adoptions.I called the Missionaries of Charity in Washington, a worldwide Roman Catholic order established by Mother Teresa. The nun who answered the phone said she couldn't give her name because they aren't allowed to talk to the press. She did say, however, that the sisters who are in the order now were not in the order when the adoption home opened, so she wasn't sure why it closed. She added that the order sold the Chevy Chase house in 2002. "We work with the poor and we didn't have any work there because it's a rich neighborhood," she said. The sisters, she added, are now working with the homeless and those with AIDS in a more transitional neighborhood in the northeast section of town on Otis Street.

###

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 11:08 AM
To: 'tauschereo@state.gov'
Cc: 'gordonph@state.gov'; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: NSS invites

[redacted]

[redacted] I'm very happy to discuss. Can we get a decision made? B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 4:42 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Calling u on 3rd floor phone with dennis ross as you requested

I know but can't get the STEA to work--didnt work this am for secure fax either so trying the white phone now.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 10 16:40:15 2010
Subject: Calling u on 3rd floor phone with dennis ross as you requested

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 12:13 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Declan

Have you seen the memcon of my T/C w Shaun? Pls review so we can be prepared tomorrow.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 31 11:56:43 2010
Subject: Declan

Interesting observations from Declan:

Foster was a critical component in the talks apparently. However there is already speculation that PR may use this moment to try to come back early and resume position of FM given that the other investigations have been delayed pending the outcome of the police investigation. He went to London with his family yesterday to visit his wife, who is in a clinic there apparently.

Empey still not on board apparently so the "community confidence" round may be used to put pressure on him to do so.

Our intervention on Thursday night/Friday morning was seen as a very important moment/catalyst. That, coupled with the jobs losses that day and the fact that the radio and tv phone-in lines and newspapers were full of commentary supporting what we said, seems to have made people realize, that they couldn't lose the moment.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 22, 2010 9:47 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Former president Clinton on mission to rescue Democratic Party in fall elections

From: Toiv, Nora F
Sent: Friday, October 22, 2010 9:36 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Former president Clinton on mission to rescue Democratic Party in fall elections

The Washington Post

Former president Clinton on mission to rescue Democratic Party in fall elections

By Philip Rucker
Washington Post Staff Writer
Friday, October 22, 2010; 12:01 AM

Bill Clinton is baffled. The former president's friends say he is in disbelief that in the closing weeks of the midterm campaigns Democrats have failed to articulate a coherent message on the economy and, worse, have allowed themselves to become "human pinatas."

So Clinton is deploying himself on a last-ditch, dawn-to-dusk sprint to rescue his beleaguered party. And as the only president in modern times who has balanced the federal budget, he is leveraging his credibility to become one of the most fierce defenders of President Obama's economic policies.

"To hear the Republicans tell it, from the second President Obama took his hand off the Bible taking the oath of office, everything that happened after that was his fault," Clinton said this week at a campaign rally for Sen. Patty Murray (D-Wash.). "I'd like to see any of you get behind a locomotive going straight downhill at 200 miles an hour and stop it in 10 seconds."

If there was any doubt that Clinton remains the Democratic Party's North Star, it has been erased over the past few weeks as he has packed legions of supporters into basketball arenas, college quads and airport hangars. He is the Democrats' most in-demand messenger and, unlike Obama, he is summoned everywhere - no matter how hostile the territory.

By Election Day, Clinton will have traveled to more than 100 events, including one Thursday in Maryland, where he appeared with Gov. Martin O'Malley.

Some Democrats are troubled that Clinton, who left office a decade ago, is a bigger draw than Obama and the party's current leaders. "Bill Clinton is not going to live forever, and it's time for the Democratic Party to develop other voices," said Bob Rucker, a journalism profressor, as he left a recent Clinton rally at San Jose State University.

But even with his party out of favor, polls show Clinton is among the most popular national political figures in the country. His newfound popularity among Republicans is a notable reversal from 16 years ago - when, two years into his presidency, a GOP resurgence cost Democrats both chambers of Congress.

"Look, folks, I've seen this movie before, in 1994," Clinton said at the rally in Everett, Wash. "I called the president the other day, and I said: 'Relax. They haven't said anything about you they didn't say about me. The only reason they're being nice to me right now is because I can't run for anything any more.' "

'Keep on being mad'

Clinton's pitch is rooted in empathy and delivered off the cuff. In Everett, he laid out what he said is the Republican argument: "I know you're angry. I know you're scared. . . . So let's make this a referendum on everything that's bothering you about life right now - take everything that's not working right now and put Patty Murray's face on it and make it a referendum."

"It is not a referendum. It. Is. A. Choice," he continued, pausing between each word for emphasis, "a choice between two different sets of ideas."

Clinton exhorted the crowd to "keep on being mad. But concentrate your anger so that it clarifies your judgment instead of clouding it. . . . The worst thing you can do right now is bring back the shovel brigade to start digging the hole again."

No other Democrat has so consistently given voice to the mood of this year's volatile, angsty electorate. Where other politicians speak of the housing crisis in staid terms - "Mortgages? I understand homes are underwater," Senate Majority Leader Harry M. Reid (D-Nev.) said in a debate last week - Clinton talks about bad mortgages as if his family were shackled with one.

"More than 10 million of us are living in houses not worth as much as our mortgages, and we can't move like we used to do because our credit would be toast for a decade," Clinton said at a stop in Espanola, N.M., never betraying that he is a millionaire many times over and the owner of multiple properties.

Clinton connects with "how normal 'walking-around' folks are feeling," said Paul Begala, a confidant and former top strategist. "Both the right and the left have mocked that I-feel-your-pain empathy, but Americans have always liked it. It's the core of him, even more than the brain. It's real."

Over the past two weeks, Clinton has had one day off, Saturday, which he spent in Northern California with his close friend Terry McAuliffe. The two stayed up late, playing cards and drafting new talking points for Democrats to trot out on the trail.

"He literally sat down with a yellow legal pad," said McAuliffe, a former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, adding that Clinton told him: "Make sure, Terry, you get these talking points out to every candidate."

It was then, McAuliffe said, that Clinton confided that he has been frustrated with the Democrats' message.

"He is just baffled and bewildered about why there has not been a more coherent message talking about what the party has done, why we allowed ourselves to become human pinatas," McAuliffe said. "I think he is agitated that Democrats haven't put their best foot forward in explaining to the American public what they've actually done."

Student-loan policy

Clinton reserves time near the end of his speeches to talk about student-loan policy change, an Obama accomplishment he says isn't getting its due on the campaign trail. Clinton bemoans that the United States has fallen from first to ninth in the world in the percentage of adults with a four-year college degree - because too many students drop out for fear that they can't repay their loans.

Democrats overhauled student-loan policy to cap monthly repayments at 10 percent of discretionary income - a law Clinton says Republicans want to repeal.

"Do you know how many working families there are where people go home at night now, men and women and the children they love better than life, and they're sick with worry, they think they'll never be able to send their kids to college?" Clinton said in Everett.

"Oh, yes, you will," Clinton continued. "Do not let this bill be repealed. If the young people of America show up, we will vote for the future and the bill will be secured. That's why you've got to vote for Patty Murray. These are real choices here - real, serious choices."

Clinton, taking time off from running his global charitable foundation, is in the midst of a two-week swing that has taken him from the Mississippi Delta to the Pacific Northwest and seemingly everywhere in between. It took him across California, where he put a rivalries aside to join hands with Jerry Brown, running to reclaim his old job as governor. Aides said Clinton might return to the road next week to visit the battlegrounds of Ohio, Pennsylvania and Kentucky.

Some assume Democratic leaders in Washington are orchestrating Clinton's campaign activities, but he is deployed by no one but himself.

Democratic candidates of all stripes are funneling requests and seeking advice through his top aide, Douglas Band. Clinton prioritizes politicians who helped his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, in her 2008 presidential campaign. (As secretary of state, she is banned from political activity.) He also has paid special care to loyal friends such as Rep. Kendrick B. Meek (D-Fla.), who, despite running a distant third in his Senate race, has drawn Clinton for more than a half-dozen visits, most recently this week.

The White House and congressional leaders do not coach him on what to say. Clinton does not read from a prompter and only rarely refers to his notes at the lectern. He gives no interviews with local or national reporters and on most days races in his motorcade from airport to rally to airport again.

Clinton speaks infrequently with the candidates - in some cases not at all before showing up for an event. Clinton always has been a voracious consumer of news, especially political news, and aides say he stays up to speed on their races.

This is evident in his speeches. He devotes a substantial portion to the local issues defining specific races. In Washington state, he mused repeatedly about a Boeing tanker deal. In New Mexico, he riffed at length about water use and encroachment from neighboring Texas.

At each stop, Clinton waxes nostalgic, as if he were revisiting an old haunt. At San Jose State: "In 1992, when I ran for president the first time, the best rally we had in all of California was here at San Jose State." In New Mexico: "When you voted for me twice, I got to know this state and know its people, and know the unique heart and soul and dreams, and know the way you accommodate all this diversity and build a common sense of humanity here. It means something to me. You're special to America."

After every speech, he flings off his suit jacket and works the crowd. He wraps his arms around folks and listens for cues about what ails America. Clinton's speeches are bookended by thumping tunes - a Motown classic in Everett, a Kanye West hit at San Jose State's arena, a mariachi folk song in Espanola.

"I keep thinking I'm too old for this," Clinton quipped to a crowd of 5,000 as the sun set behind him over the open-air Plaza de Espanola at a rally for New Mexico gubernatorial candidate Diane Denish.

"No! No! No!" the crowd cried out.

"Then I got out here and started stirring around and realized a lot of people were mad and even more confused, and I didn't want it on my conscience," Clinton said. "So I sort of loaded up and started strolling around."

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 5:21 PM
To: 'vermarr@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Fwd: Murtha Funeral Update

Does this mean Bill should not plan on going and we just wait for the public memorial service?

----- Original Message -----
From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
To: H; Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Feb 10 17:10:48 2010
Subject: Fw: Fwd: Murtha Funeral Update

More details...

---

From: Patrick Justin Alwine [redacted] B6
To: Verma, Richard R
Sent: Wed Feb 10 15:17:50 2010
Subject: Fwd: Murtha Funeral Update

----- Original Message -----
From: Mazonkey, Matthew
Sent: Wed Feb 10 14:48:55 2010
Subject: Murtha Funeral Update

The Murtha Family has announced further details regarding funeral services for the late Congressman John P. Murtha -

A public viewing will take place at Duca Funeral Home from 3:00-7:00 p.m. on Sunday, February 14, 2010, and Monday, February 15, 2010. The funeral home is located at 1622 Menoher Boulevard in Johnstown, PA.

A private funeral service will be held at the Westmont Presbyterian Church at 11:00 a.m. on Tuesday, February 16, 2010. The church is located at 601 Luzerne Street in Johnstown, PA. A private internment will follow at Grandview Cemetery, also in Johnstown.

The family is also working with the Office of the Speaker of the House to hold a public memorial in the U.S. Capitol in the coming weeks. Details will be forthcoming. An official Congressional Delegation is also expected to be present for the private funeral service on Tuesday.

In lieu of flowers, the Murtha family suggests contributions be made to the UPMC John P. Murtha Cancer Pavilion (337 Somerset Street, Johnstown, PA 15901) or the Joyce Murtha Breast Care Center (600 Somerset Avenue, Windber, PA 15963).

Further details about media coverage will be forthcoming.

---

Sent from my BlackBerry Wireless Handheld

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 5:55 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Calls

I called and talked w INR DAS Jim Buchanan at John Dinger's request. Pls let John know.

I called Marty Edelman and LM.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 10, 2010 6:20 PM
To: 'cheryl.mills[redacted]'; 'sullivanjj@state.gov' B6
Subject: Baptists

Just heard on TV they may be released tomorrow since judge found they had no criminal intent. Do you know if that's true?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 2:35 PM
To: 'lmuscatine
Subject: Re: Draft of Prayer Breakfast

B6

Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Lissa Muscatine
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 31 14:32:56 2010
Subject: Draft of Prayer Breakfast

I've just asked the Specials to fax the draft to you in Chappaqua. You should be getting it shortly. Hopefully this is a start. Feedback welcome, of course.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 2:35 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Northern Ireland

I also suggested an Ian Paisley call to Cameron.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 31 14:16:47 2010
Subject: Northern Ireland

Brown has asked to speak with you at 8 am tomorrow morning.

B5

Also, I just spoke with Declan about the conference. There are challenges with the idea of a conference that I'd like to discuss with you in the morning.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 11, 2010 9:28 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Can you call me thru ops?

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 3:45 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Pfizer case (cvsg)

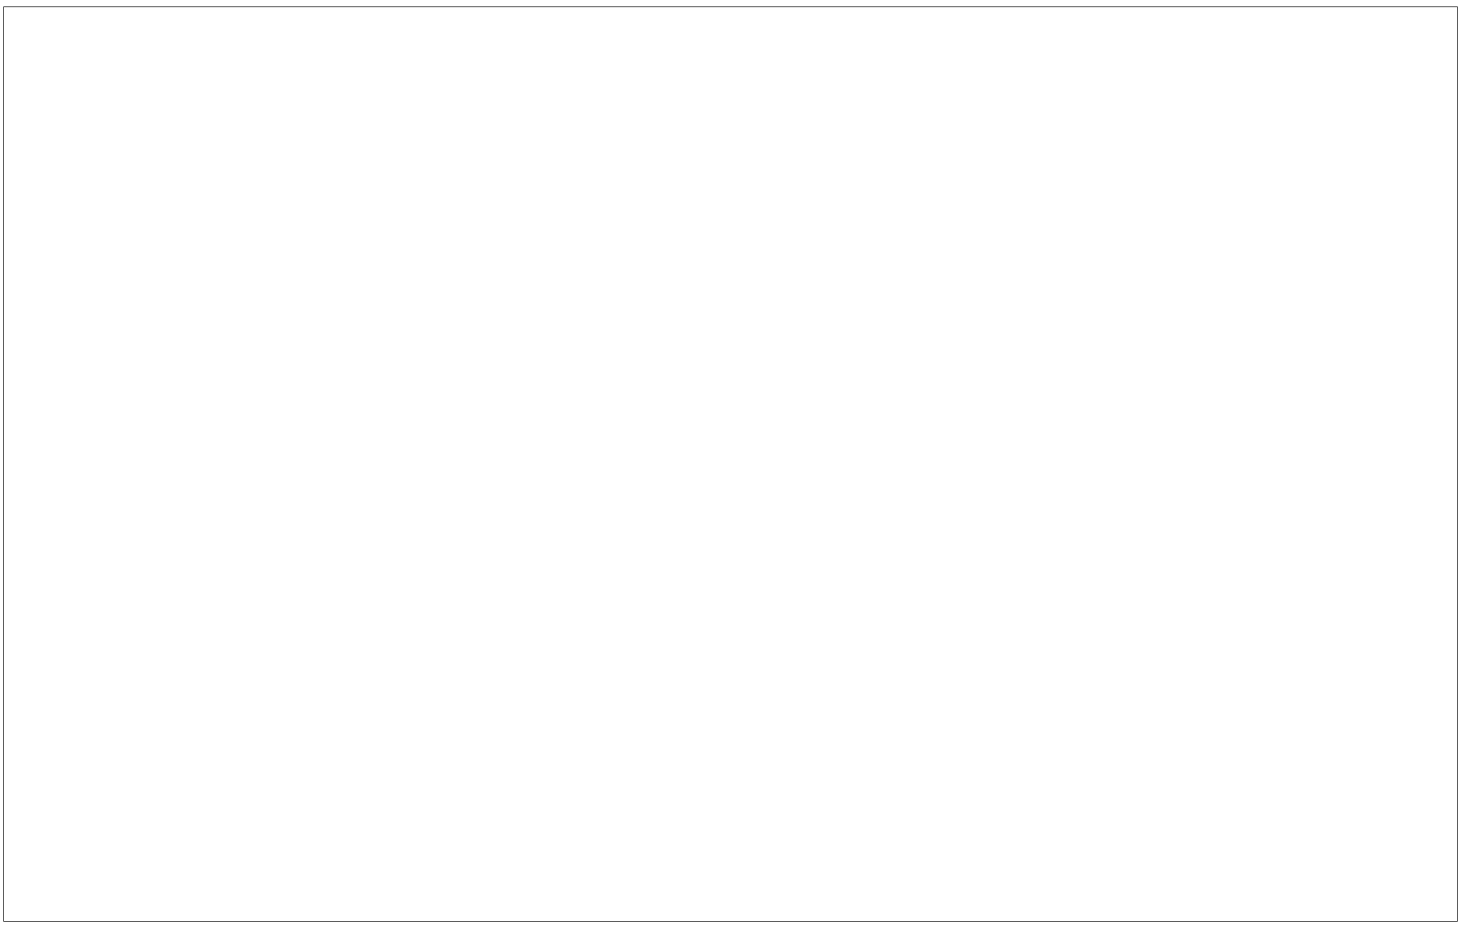
Ok



----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 31 14:48:00 2010
Subject: FW: Pfizer case (cvsg)

FYI below. Harold is proposing to send substantive views on the Pfizer case [redacted] B5

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Koh, Harold Hongju
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Jan 27 21:44:36 2010
Subject: Pfizer case (cvsg)

[redacted] B5

B5

Please let us know if we can provide any further information.

Best,

Harold
Harold Hongju Koh
The Legal Adviser
U.S. Department of State
Suite 6421
2201 C St. NW
Washington, DC 20520-6421
202 647 9598 office
[redacted]
202 647 7096 fax

B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 11, 2010 10:57 AM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'; Huma Abedin
Subject: Schedule

The Lithuanian FM just told me the Community of Democracies is July 9-11 in Cracow, Poland. I have to go since I promised the Polish FM but had hoped they would schedule July 2-4. Can you check w EUR and DRL to see if dates can be moved? If not I can only go for the 9th since [redacted] Let's see if there is any give. I would also go to other places first during that week in Europe, including Warsaw for a bilateral meeting. B6

Also, am I doing a video to congratulate Lithuania on the 20th anniversary of their Independence on March 11?

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 11, 2010 11:44 AM
To: 'slaughtera@state.gov'
Subject: Re: A few more words on the Dalai Lama

I agree and will act accordingly.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Feb 11 09:41:35 2010
Subject: A few more words on the Dalai Lama

I never heard the earlier part of this debate [redacted] B5

We shd not use our meeting w/ the DL to beat them up, but treat it like we would treat a meeting with a Coptic leader from Egypt or a Bahai leader from Iran, etc. We have nothing to hide. Let the Chinese make a big issue out of it if they want to; we will just do what we have always done.
AM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 4:34 PM
To: 'oterom2@state.gov'
Cc: 'FuchsMH@state.gov'
Subject: Water

Former Dep Secretary of State John Whitehead has a private sector group working on water. Pls be sure he is contacted as part of our planning.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 11, 2010 11:46 AM
To: 'slaughtera@state.gov'
Subject: Re: A few more words on the Dalai Lama

Indeed!

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 11 11:45:08 2010
Subject: RE: A few more words on the Dalai Lama

I see I'm not the only person who does email while on the phone! ;-)

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, February 11, 2010 11:44 AM
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Subject: Re: A few more words on the Dalai Lama

I agree and will act accordingly.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Feb 11 09:41:35 2010
Subject: A few more words on the Dalai Lama

I never heard the earlier part of this debate a [redacted] B5

We shd not use our meeting w/ the DL to beat them up, but treat it like we would treat a meeting with a Coptic leader from Egypt or a Bahai leader from Iran, etc. We have nothing to hide. Let the Chinese make a big issue out of it if they want to; we will just do what we have always done.
AM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 4:37 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Call list

Pls add Billie Jean King and find out from Maura exactly what she is doing for ECA and wants to do. Tell Maura we should have an event for all of our cultural and sports envoys to acknowledge and thank them.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 11, 2010 1:23 PM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Amcits in Haiti

Agree that if they're released then get them out asap. Either we or DOJ can issue statement.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 11 12:49:41 2010
Subject: FW: Amcits in Haiti

fyi

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Thursday, February 11, 2010 12:49 PM
To: Koh, Harold Hongju; Merten, Kenneth H; Kennedy, Patrick F
Cc: Torres, Susan; Johnson, Clifton M
Subject: RE: Amcits in Haiti

Thank you.

B5

From: Koh, Harold Hongju
Sent: Thursday, February 11, 2010 12:09 PM
To: Merten, Kenneth H; Mills, Cheryl D; Kennedy, Patrick F
Cc: Torres, Susan; Johnson, Clifton M
Subject: Amcits in Haiti

Privileged/Attorney-Client Privilege/Attorney Work Product/Deliberative/SBU

B5

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 11, 2010 2:13 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Blair statement

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 11 13:44:44 2010
Subject: Blair statement

Blair's guy said you ok'ed releasing today. If so, we'll pull the trigger. It is pasted below:

Statement by the Secretary

B5

This Administration has, from the beginning, worked to bring about comprehensive peace in the Middle East, including a two-state solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. On that issue our approach has been three-fold: (1) to help build the economy and capacity to govern of a Palestinian state; (2) to renew political negotiations to enable the earliest possible establishment of that state; and (3) to achieve these in a manner that ensures the security of Israel and of the Palestinians.

Consistent with Prime Minister Fayyad's plan for a future Palestinian state, Tony Blair, as the Quartet representative, will intensify his partnership with Senator Mitchell in support of the political negotiations. In his role as Quartet Representative Tony Blair will continue, with full support by and coordination with Senator Mitchell, to mobilize the efforts of the international community: (1) to build support for the institutional capacity and governance of a future Palestinian State, including on the rule of law; (2) to improve freedom of movement and access for Palestinians; (3) to encourage further private sector investment; and (4) to bring change in the living conditions of the people in Gaza.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 4:43 PM
To: 'mchaleja@state.gov'
Subject: Re: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

[redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J <ValmoroLJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 31 08:29:39 2010
Subject: RE: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

I get back the morning of February 9 and will be in the office that afternoon. I'll email you and Lona a copy of my schedule. Walter Douglas and Dan Sreebney have been working with me on Haiti. Walter is in California for Victoria DeLongh's funeral and will be back in the office Tuesday. He has been working closely with Dan Smith on the Haiti initiative. Let me know if there is anything you need me to do from here.

jm
-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 7:54 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Cc: Valmoro, Lona J
Subject: Re: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

When will you be back so we can catch up? Also who is your right hand on all of these initiatives? I'm copying Lona so she can work w your office for a time.

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Jan 29 06:46:50 2010
Subject: Re: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

Thx. Had a great conversation with Doug Hattaway. [redacted] B5
[redacted] Will fill you in when I see you.

Also working with Amb Pascual on a new strategy for Mexicom

Finally working with Cheryl to help GoH with communication from g to p.

On my way to india and bangalesh.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: McHale, Judith A
Sent: Fri Jan 29 04:02:52 2010

Subject: Re: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

That's the result of your leadership and a new model of engagement w our own people. Onward!

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H; Burns, William J <BurnsWJ@state.gov>; Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Smith, Daniel B <SmithD2@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thu Jan 28 05:06:38 2010
Subject: FW: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

Our Posts at work.

From: DiMartino, Kitty
Sent: Wednesday, January 27, 2010 11:07 AM
To: McHale, Judith A
Subject: a couple of powerful quotes from foreign media which we highlighted in our cable

-- VEJA MAGAZINE, BRAZIL (Jan. 25, headline of a two-page article showing U.S. servicemen walking in front of destroyed buildings in Port-au-Prince): "Better with them, impossible without."

--CHOSUN ILBO NEWSPAPER, KOREA (Jan. 25): U.S. involvement in overseas natural disasters is a 40-year-long humanitarian tradition. . . In a disaster-stricken area, the military is more systematic and effective in carrying out a relief operation than any other group."

-- EXPRESSO NEWSPAPER, PORTUGAL (Jan. 24): "In critical moments of the history of mankind, over the last 100 years, the United States is, in fact, the indispensable nation. Sometimes for bad reasons and, other times, as in Haiti, for good reasons."

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 4:50 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Call list

Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 31 16:49:07 2010
Subject: Re: Call list

Bjk has also been in very close touch with nina bishop, who does great work in the sports united office (under ECA). Ill make sure she and maura also connect.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Cc: Huma Abedin
Sent: Sun Jan 31 16:36:51 2010
Subject: Call list

B6

Pls add Billie Jean King and find out from Maura exactly what she is doing for ECA and wants to do. Tell Maura we should have an event for all of our cultural and sports envoys to acknowledge and thank them.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 5:13 PM
To: 'lmuscatine[redacted]Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Draft of Prayer Breakfast

B6

I was out but upon return, did not find a faxed speech. Can you track down?

----- Original Message -----
From: Lissa Muscatine [redacted]
To: H
Cc: Huma Abedin <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 31 14:32:56 2010
Subject: Draft of Prayer Breakfast

I've just asked the Specials to fax the draft to you in Chappaqua. You should be getting it shortly. Hopefully this is a start. Feedback welcome, of course.

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 12, 2010 1:01 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Pinera-Insulza

Agree w strategy.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 12 12:59:04 2010
Subject: Pinera-Insulza

See the report below: Pinera has announced his support.

I had a long conversation with Craig a little while ago. He spoke with a number of people in Chile, including his close friend, [redacted] B6

According to Craig, Pinera had made the calculation that it would be politically untenable to dump Insulza. Apparently there is a coalition leadership in the lower house, and Insulza's party, Concertacion, controls the upper house. So he had no choice.

That said, Craig believes that his clear message had an impact on what Pinera told Insulza. He apparently gave his support with two conditions: (1) don't interfere in Chilean politics, and (2) take the democratization agenda seriously and don't carry the ALBA countries' water.

Craig also said that Arturo had been effective in making clear that the jury was out on Insulza in Washington -- that had an impact on the Pinera government and reinforced their second message to him.

Bottom line: Craig said we couldn't have talked Pinera off of this, but we helped drive a stronger set of conditions on Pinera's support.

[redacted] B5

-----Original Message-----
From: Kelly, Craig A
Sent: Friday, February 12, 2010 12:51 PM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Valenzuela, Arturo A; Restrepo, Daniel A.; Lomellin, Carmen
Cc: McMullen, Christopher J; Jacobson, Roberta S; Reynoso, Julissa; Gonzalez, Juan S
Subject: FW: Piñera anuncia apoyo a reelección de Insulza en la OEA | POLÍTICA | latercera.com

To All: La Tercera in Chile just reported that Piñera has announced his support for Insulza's re-election, after meeting with Insulza in Santiago. ck

-----Original Message-----
From: [redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, February 12, 2010 12:42 PM

To: Kelly, Craig A
Subject: Piñera anuncia apoyo a reelección de Insulza en la OEA | POLÍTICA | latercera.com

http://www.latercera.com/contenido/674_225506_9.shtml
Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 5:45 PM
To: 'lmuscatine [redacted] B6
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Draft of Prayer Breakfast

I now have it. Thx

----- Original Message -----
From: Muscatine Lissa [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 31 17:20:16 2010
Subject: Re: Draft of Prayer Breakfast

If Huma is with you, she has an electronic copy and apparently was going to print it for you rather than use a faxed version. FYI: It is not in speech font yet -- I just wanted you to see where this is going, but we can send one with bigger spacing and bigger type too in case you want to write your own thoughts on it.

On Jan 31, 2010, at 5:13 PM, H wrote:

> I was out but upon return, did not find a faxed speech. Can you track > down?
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Lissa Muscatine [redacted]
> To: H
> Cc: Huma Abedin <AbedinH@state.gov>
> Sent: Sun Jan 31 14:32:56 2010
> Subject: Draft of Prayer Breakfast
>
> I've just asked the Specials to fax the draft to you in Chappaqua. You > should be getting it shortly. Hopefully this is a start. Feedback > welcome, of course.
>
>

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 6:29 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: One word

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sun Jan 31 18:25:35 2010
Subject: Fw: One word

Kris balderston urging you to call bloomberg. We will have time tomorrow if you want to do it.

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Sun Jan 31 18:19:10 2010
Subject: Re: One word

Thnx. We are still $10M short and have less than 90 days. We'll make it but we have to go full speed ahead.

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C
To: Balderston, Kris M
Sent: Sun Jan 31 17:34:30 2010
Subject: Re: One word

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: Balderston, Kris M
To: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Sun Jan 31 16:07:50 2010
Subject: One word

Bloomberg if you can nudge.

I am in Shanghai.

Thnx.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 8:54 PM
To: 'gordonph@state.gov'
Subject: Re: NSS invites

B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Gordon, Philip H <GordonPH@state.gov>
To: H; Tauscher, Ellen O <TauscherEO@state.gov>
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Jan 31 19:22:28 2010
Subject: RE: NSS invites

Phil

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Sunday, January 31, 2010 11:08 AM
To: Tauscher, Ellen O
Cc: Gordon, Philip H; Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: NSS invites

B5

I'm very happy to discuss. Can we get a decision made?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 12, 2010 9:16 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Calls

Pls add to List:

Bill Galston
Evan Bayh
Warren Buffet
Judith McHale

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 12, 2010 10:01 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: H: Just thinking about Bill and wishing all best. Sid

B6

Thankfully, all is well.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 11 17:13:40 2010
Subject: H: Just thinking about Bill and wishing all best. Sid

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 12, 2010 10:09 PM
To: 'slaughtera@state.gov'
Subject: Re: My thoughts and prayers are with you.

You're so right. Thankfully all is well.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 11 17:20:29 2010
Subject: My thoughts and prayers are with you.

The news about president clinton just came over the wire. Family always comes first. AM

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 12, 2010 10:47 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re:

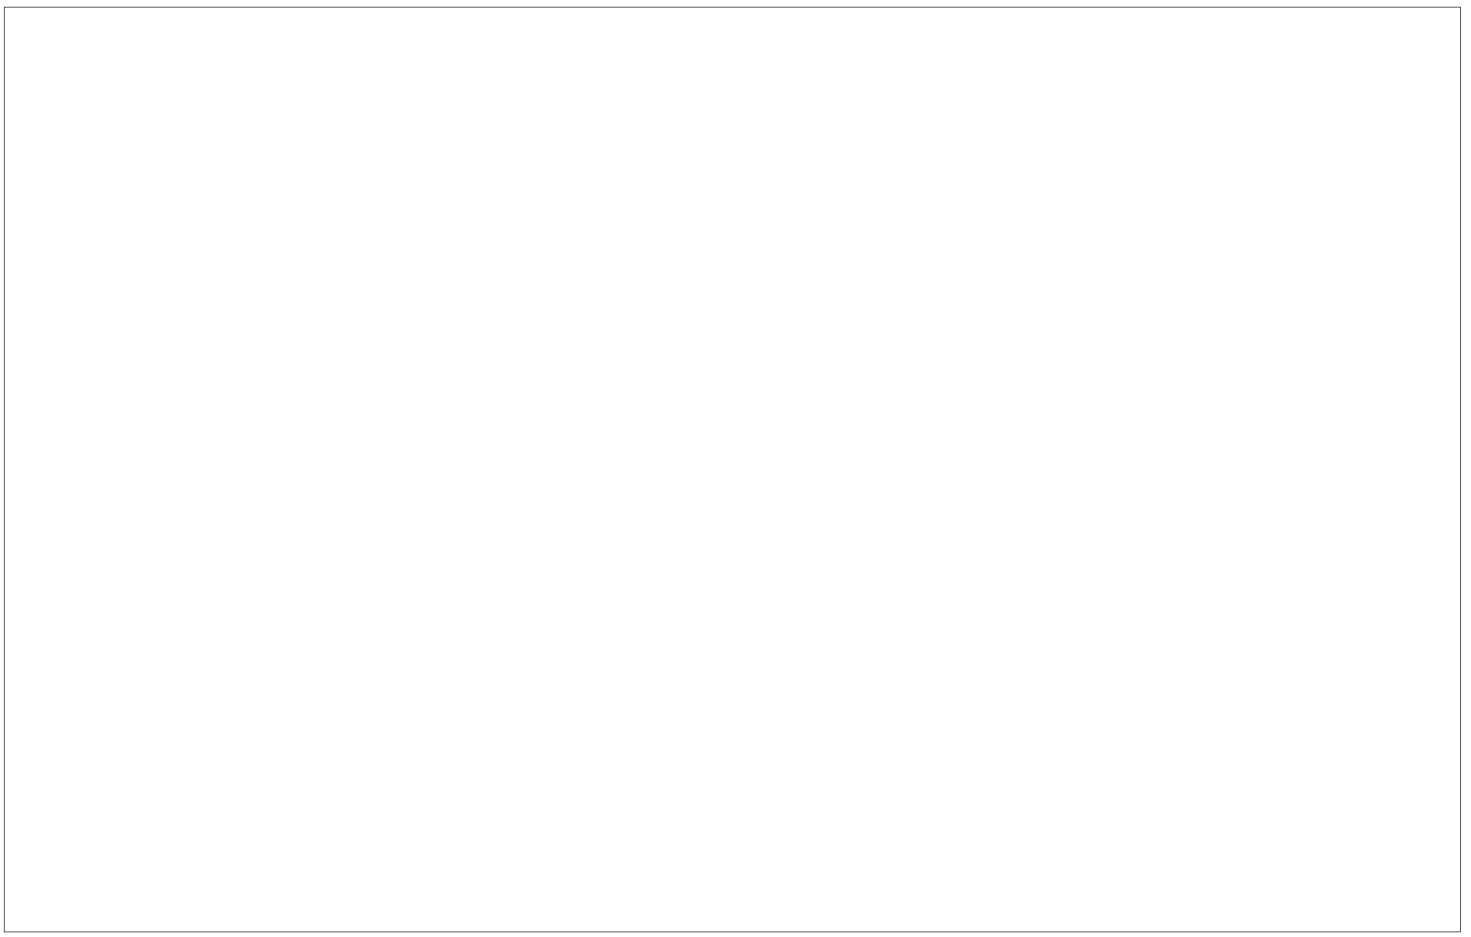
[redacted] See you tomorrow. B6

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 11 18:32:01 2010
Subject:



[redacted]

I spoke to Ellen tonight, who is preparing a memo and will have it Monday.

Pasted below is a draft letter that our Ambassador plus French and Russians will be working on tomorrow in Vienna, ideally to deliver to Amano, [redacted] B5

[redacted]

B5

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 1, 2010 8:48 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Mark Penn's latest Huffington Post blog: "Stopping the Republican Comeback (Déjà Vu All Over Again)"

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: Mark J. Penn [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Thu Jan 21 09:56:56 2010
Subject: FW: Mark Penn's latest Huffington Post blog: "Stopping the Republican Comeback (Déjà Vu All Over Again)"

Great internet speech based on excerpts I have seen – terrific. Here's piece I did yesterday.

The Huffington Post

January 20, 2010

Strategy Corner: Stopping the Republican Comeback (Déjà Vu All Over Again)

Once again an initially popular Democratic president tries to pass healthcare reform, raise taxes on the wealthy and expand domestic spending. And once again the voters send a sharp signal that they want him to chart a more centrist course. As Yogi Berra said "It's déjà vu all over again."

President Clinton's wakeup call came with the 1994 mid-term elections -- Obama's came a year earlier with yesterday's special election in Massachusetts.

In response to the similar situation, President Clinton fundamentally changed everything -- his team, his policies, and the overall direction and message of his administration. He moved to the center with a balanced budget, welfare reform, and policies that helped concerned moms raise their kids, leaving behind the divisive bitterness of his first two years. As a part of that new team then, I saw how President Clinton consciously took his presidency back to the centrist message of his presidential campaign and relentlessly pursued swing voters; he didn't go small, he went to the vital center -- 24 million jobs and a balanced budget were big accomplishments.

President Obama now has plenty of time to turn this around before facing the kind of losses President Clinton did. But stopping the Republican machine now will not be done on the basis of words alone -- it will take actions and results to calm this electorate.

It also won't be done on the basis of stepped up populist rhetoric. You can't make deals with Wall Street, Pharma, and other major interest groups and then turn around and make them the whipping boy with any credibility. No doubt there will be a fight over this in the White House with many inside wanting to go back to the equivalent of "people vs. the powerful." Only the voters see the White House as the powerful now and such a lurch would probably have the harshest electoral consequences next November.

But Obama can turn it around and keep the country moving on a steady path of change if he makes the kind of significant changes in his direction that President Clinton did. It's all about getting above the trappings of Washington and being who you said you were.

Here's five things the President could do now.

1) Agree to full transparency in health care hearings and other major reform areas -- Obama's original idea to put them on C-SPAN was the right one. Then go on a major transparency in government binge, seeking out new ways to bring people closer to what the administration is doing through social networking and other online means. Make transparency an action, not a theme.

2) Break health care up into its components and move them step by step. The problem with health care is no one agrees on the solution and this bill is not about the longer lives, greater access and greater efficiency people want. Break it down and start with the easy stuff like electronic medical records first and work up to the harder parts year after year.

3) Look for ways to be genuinely bi-partisan instead of seeking the 60th vote through deals and compromise. Genuine bi-partisanship would have given the Republicans malpractice reform in exchange for a public option -- if you don't invest the opposition in the outcome, then they have no reason to support it. Just looking for one vote is an exercise in deal making and compromise that does not live up to the post-partisan promise. Obama's got to call the Republican leaders and sit down with them, not push them away.

4) Put jobs front and center -- the failure to do this earlier is at the root of the discontent. The administration hit the 10 per cent tripwire of unemployment and the numbers in the center of the country are dismal -- far worse than Massachusetts. This means moving the country forward into the new economic world, not trying to take it backwards. Raising taxes is another flash point now as much of the administration's support came from upper income voters turned off by the right wing, anti-intellectual campaigns of the Republicans. People need to know there is a strategy for competing and winning in the emerging global, high tech economy.

5) Don't be afraid to do what some think of as the small stuff -- helping people in their daily lives. Helping people deal with the new stresses of modern life -- from texting on the road to many working well past 65 -- is not a small thing. People are again afraid of big, grandiose plans that they fear can bankrupt the country and need to see the government also relating to their daily lives in manageable, concrete ways. It's the kind of daily activism Democrats uniquely bring to the White House. This has got to be part of a strategy that returns us to lower unemployment, lower deficits, and restrained spending.

There will be plenty of time to push back on the Republicans when they get too heady. That day will come as it did when Newt Gingrich shut down the government and it backfired. But right now the Republicans are not the issue -- the issue is whether the administration has gone Washington and whether it can reclaim the centrist, people-oriented mantle that brought it to town. And this means taking the administration back to the vital center and fulfilling its core promises -- greater transparency, less political posturing, true bi-partisanship, extreme focus on jobs and the economy, and a government that demonstrates daily how really cares about the people.

Penn, Schoen and Berland Associates
1110 Vermont Ave Suite 1200
Washington, DC 20005
To learn more about PSB, please visit http://www.psbresearch.com
To unsubscribe, please click on the following link:Unsubscribe
<http://emm.adhost.com/u?id=B73AA248703B14F26850F29B76D0AD7F7603FA3DBB830448>

<http://emm.adhost.com/t?c=745267&r=1144&l=35007&t=10&e=B73AA248703B14F26850F29B76D0AD7F7603FA3DBB830448>

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 13, 2010 9:27 AM
To: 'sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
Subject: Re: H: memo on Saudi/Chas Freeman. Glad Bill is well. Sid

Thanks on both counts.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 12 13:58:15 2010
Subject: H: memo on Saudi/Chas Freeman. Glad Bill is well. Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

February 12, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Saudi Arabia

I have been in contact with Chas Freeman, former ambassador to Saudi Arabia, and he has sent me his most recent public speech on the subject. He says the policy part is toward the end, and that King Abdullah's new university (KAUST) is an important initiative. He also relates that the atmosphere is near toxic because of Obama's failure to follow up his Cairo speech and the rebuff from Netanyahu. Cynicism, at best, is pervasive among the Saudi elite.

Saudi Arabia: The End of Progress without Change Remarks to the Sarasota Institute for Lifetime Learning

Ambassador Chas W. Freeman, Jr. (USFS, Ret.) Sarasota, Florida, February 11, 2010

I have been asked to speak to you about the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. This is a topic I have never before addressed to an American audience. Why bother?

We Americans reserve the right to have strong opinions on the basis of little or no knowledge. There are few countries that better exemplify our assertive ignorance of foreign geography, history, and culture than Saudi Arabia. Most of us are convinced that Saudis are Muslim zealots, control the world's oil prices, and are absurdly rich, anti-feminist, and undemocratic. They hate our values and want to destroy us. Talk radio confirms this. What more needs to be said?

On reflection, a lot does. Neither caricature nor a priori reasoning is a sound basis for policy. A distorted view of foreign realities precludes success at dealing with them. There is much at stake in our relationship with Saudi Arabia. We can ill afford to get it wrong.

That country is, of course, the heartland of Islam and the custodian of the world's largest oil reserves. It lies athwart transport routes between Asia, Europe, and Africa. It is at the center of a growing concentration of global capital. Under any circumstances, the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia would be important. It is all the more so in an era when we Americans are at war with ever more peoples in the Islamic world, depend on ever greater amounts of imported energy, and need ever larger foreign loans to run our government and sustain our life style.

Yet Saudi Arabia is little known. It is the only society on the planet not to have been penetrated by Western colonialism. No European armies breached its borders; no missionaries; no merchants. Its capital, Riyadh, was long off limits to infidels; the holy cities of Mecca and Medina remain so today. When Westerners finally came to Saudi Arabia, we came not as the vindicators of our presumed cultural superiority, but as hired help. As a result, some say that Saudis secretly see the world's peoples as divided into two basic categories: (1) fellow Saudis; and (2) potential employees. Be that as it may, foreigners, Western, Asian, or Arab, who have lived in Saudi Arabia all see it as a very strange place – one that is not easy to understand and that remains at odds with many of the values non-Saudis profess.

The Kingdom has long stood apart from global norms. Its system of government draws on tribal and Islamic traditions rather than Western models. Its king presides rather than rules over the royal family and Saudi society. His responsibility is less to make decisions than to shape and proclaim consensus, while assuring a share of the national wealth to all, especially the least privileged. Saudi Arabia levies no taxes on its citizens, other than the religious tithe known as "zakat" – a two-and-a-half percent annual donation of private capital to charity and other public purposes. All Saudis enjoy free education and medical care from birth to death and can pursue these services at home or abroad, as they wish. The Kingdom has no parliament, though it does have elaborate informal mechanisms for consultation with its citizens on policy matters. Saudi Arabia reverses and thereby affirms a basic principle of American political philosophy. "No representation without taxation."

Unlike some other countries in the Arab Gulf, Saudi Arabia has invested its oil wealth at home, not abroad, though it has long been generous with foreign aid. (At one point it was donating six percent of GDP to other, mostly Muslim, nations.) The desperate poverty of the pre-oil period is now, at most, a dim memory. Over the lifetime of elderly Saudis, the Kingdom's per capita income has risen about one hundred fold. Sparsely populated mud-walled villages have grown into huge air-conditioned cities with 21st Century architecture. Today, Saudis are not just literate; many have university degrees. There are more U.S. Ph.D.'s in the Saudi Cabinet than in our Cabinet and Congress put together.

Despite rapid development, the strong family structure that characterized traditional Saudi society has remained largely intact. It is truly moving to see how lovingly children and grandchildren care for their elders in the Kingdom. Saudi Arabia's unique social stability is reflected in the fact that almost none of its citizens emigrate, though many have second homes abroad, and a few, like Osama Binladin, have been exiled for deviant behavior..

For a long time it was easier for journalists and academics to get a visa to Tibet than to Saudi Arabia. Perhaps this accounts for the near total lack of institutions and scholars that study the place. In the United States, 9/11 was followed by an avalanche of polemical tracts, but there are still very few books about the Kingdom that reflect its realities rather than the authors' biases or propagandistic agendas. Lack of personal familiarity with the Kingdom helps explain the repeated prediction by pundits that the Saudi monarchy is in jeopardy. Generations of such pundits have passed away. The Kingdom has not. When I was ambassador to Riyadh, I was so struck by the apparent social stasis that I briefly thought the national motto should be "progress without change." But in fact change is a constant in Saudi Arabia. Most of it comes from the top down.

Not all Saudis are happy with the status quo. Some are angry about the extent to which the Kingdom is opening up and reforming. Others are impatient to get on with reform. The ranks of the latter clearly include King Abdullah bin Abdulaziz Al-Sa`ud, the current ruler. Now in his late eighties and on the throne only since 2005, he has surprised everyone with the vigor of his efforts to modernize Saudi society and to reshape its relationships with the world beyond its borders. Saudi Arabia has plenty of problems to keep the king engaged.

A lot of issues derive from the peculiar religious heritage of the Saudi state. The current Kingdom of Saudi Arabia (now over a century old) is the third political structure to ally the House of Sa`ud with the family of the eighteenth century religious reformer Shaykh al Islam Mohammed ibn `Abd al-Wahhab Al-Tamimi. Ibn `Abd al-Wahhab's writings form the doctrinal basis of so-called Wahhabism, a notoriously intolerant and socially conservative form of Islam that is often confused with other reactionary religious traditions like that of the Taliban. Saudi history has involved a sustained effort by the Kingdom's rulers to persuade its religious scholars and their puritanical followers to embrace change and to open up to the outside world. This struggle has mainly been peaceful and virtually invisible to outsiders. Sometimes, however, it has engendered violence. In 1975, for example, the late King Faisal paid with his life for instituting public education for girls and for introducing television to his nation.

Both as regent (from 1996 to 2005) and more recently as ruler, King Abdullah has been so careful to avoid drama in his promotion of change that it is truly startling to review the cumulative results of his leadership. Take women's issues, for example. In 2002, responsibility for girls' education was transferred from the religious authorities to the ministry of education. Women now make up 58 percent of the enrollment in Saudi universities. The new Princess Noura bint Abdulrahman University for Women, currently under construction in Riyadh, will enroll 40,000 students this fall.

Female participation in the labor force is rising rapidly. Twenty-nine percent of women now work outside the home. (That is a low figure compared to our own but represents a remarkable advance for the Kingdom.) One-third of civil service positions have been reserved for women. The first woman took her seat in the Council of Ministers last year. After a bit of a kerfuffle, the Kingdom's religious scholars finally endorsed coeducation at the new King Abdullah University for Science and Technology. That was big blow to the legitimacy of gender apartheid. A Saudi friend and I are betting that it will not be long before women in the Kingdom can drive. We plan to clean up by building the separate road system this may require. (That's a joke, I hope.)

A word about the vision embodied in the King Abdullah University for Science and Technology. Founded by the king last September with an initial endowment of ten billion dollars, KAUST is an international, graduate-level research university. It sits in a two-billion-dollar campus on the Red Sea about seventy-five miles northwest of Mecca. On one level, it is the leading element in an effort to prepare the Kingdom for a knowledge-based economy that can complement and eventually supercede the current reliance on energy exports. But on another level, it is a powerful answer to the religious zealotry that terrorist movements like al Qa`ida espouse. Let me explain.

There is a broad consensus among the world's 1.6 billion Muslims that the modern age is ethically corrupt and that religious faith needs reinvigoration and renewal. Much like early Christian Protestants, many believe that the way to achieve this is to rediscover and reaffirm the values of their religion's earliest times. When he inaugurated KAUST, King Abdullah explained that he envisaged it as a reborn Bayt al-Hikma or "House of Wisdom." The original "House of Wisdom" was founded in Baghdad around 760 C.E., in the second century of the Muslim era. It was where the Arabs incorporated Greek, Indian and other foreign knowledge into Islam and conceived much of modern mathematics, astronomy, medicine, chemistry, zoology, and geography. It made Islamic civilization the global leader in science and technology. The "House of Wisdom" prospered in an age of tolerance, when Jews and Christians served alongside Muslims as ministers of government. Though destroyed by the Mongols in 1258, the knowledge it preserved and developed eventually found its way to Europe, where it sparked the Renaissance.

Today, like mainstream Muslims, the extremists of al Qa`ida and related movements argue that Islam must return to its roots. But they portray early Islam as puritanical, xenophobic, intolerant, and oppressive of women. KAUST is a living rebuttal of this historical fallacy and the ideology of hatred derived from it. It was conceived as a new "House of Wisdom." It stands for the principle that Islam was founded as and can only be reborn as the religious guide to a society open to ideas from other traditions. It represents a call for return to an Islam tolerant of foreign ways, respectful of women, dedicated to the scientific study of God's handiwork, and committed to the development of new technologies to better the human condition. KAUST is as much an instrument of religious renaissance and an answer to extremism as it is an academic institution.

This brings me to the issue of religious tolerance. In 2003, King Abdullah inaugurated what he called a "national forum for intellectual dialogue." This ongoing national dialogue is an unprecedented acceptance of religious diversity in the Kingdom. It marks an end to longstanding official discrimination against its Shiite minority. In 2007, King Abdullah made an historic call on the Pope in the Vatican, the first time a Muslim leader of his stature had done so. In 2008 he organized two unprecedented international interfaith conferences between Muslims, Jews, Christians, Buddhists, and others at Madrid and New York. He intends this dialogue, too, to be a continuing process.

There are other major domestic reform initiatives in progress, like a complete revamping of the Saudi educational system and curriculum, experiments with elections at lower levels of government and civil society, efforts to shift the Kingdom toward reliance on alternative sources of energy, the development of a huge new petrochemical industry to complement the production of energy in its primary form. Time will not permit me to describe these developments. My point is simply that there is a great deal more going on in Saudi Arabia than our press and pundits seem to realize.

That said, everything is, of course, relative. Sadly, to many Saudis, the history of their nation suggests that the more religiously uptight they are, the more oil comes out of the ground. The Kingdom continues in many ways to belie God's admonition in the Holy Quran that "there can be no compulsion in religion." The open practice of religions other than Islam remains banned. The status and role of women in Saudi society is controversial and far from settled. Despite efforts at "Saudiization," foreign workers continue to dominate the employment market, while demanding a premium to compensate for the discomfort and stress that Saudi Arabia's religiously sanctioned mores impose on them. Methods of political consultation that worked in a more cohesive and less populous Saudi Arabia can no longer produce consensus. The fiscal basis of the state continues to be oil exports, and oil is a commodity whose price fluctuates unpredictably. There is, in other words, a very long list of problems for Saudis to work out in coming years.

Let me turn briefly to Saudi Arabia's foreign relations before reviewing the state of our country's interaction with it.

In foreign even more than domestic affairs, King Abdullah's impact has been little short of revolutionary. He has overseen the negotiated settlement of the Kingdom's long-disputed borders with all of its neighbors. He brought Saudi Arabia into the World Trade Organization, ensuring that its trade and investment activities for the first time follow internationally agreed rules. In 1982, at Beirut, he led the Arab League in an historic reversal of policy toward the Israel-Palestine issue. Saudi Arabia had long insisted that it would be the last state in the region to recognize and establish relations with Israel. At Beirut, King Abdullah committed to be the first to normalize relations with Israel upon its achievement of a mutually acceptable arrangement for coexistence with the Palestinians. He persuaded all other Arab countries to promise they would do the same. To his great frustration, Israel did not respond. Since then, hope for a two-state solution that could gain acceptance for Israel in the region has dimmed.

Many of Saudi Arabia's foreign policy challenges stem from recent American policies in the region. These policies have had the effect of liberating Israel from all constraints on its settlement activities and belligerent intervention in its Arab neighbors, installing Iran as the dominant political influence in both Iraq and Lebanon, consolidating rather than eroding the Syrian-Iranian alliance, pushing Hamas into the arms of the Iranians, and raising regional tensions over Tehran's nuclear program while doing nothing effective about it. Then there is Afghanistan, where the United States now seems to be engaged in a crusade against militant Islam – one that many in the region now fear may soon extend to Yemen. Saudi counter-terrorism specialists, who have a well-deserved international reputation for effectiveness, are convinced that the most efficient way to radicalize Muslim populations and encourage terrorism against the United States and its foreign policy partners is to invade, occupy, and humiliate them. They believe that the panicked militarism of the U.S. response to 9/11 was exactly what groups like al Qa'ida hoped for. They see no sign that the United States is about to abandon actions and policies that metastasize extremism and stimulate terrorist reprisal against Americans and our foreign friends.

No longer willing to be publicly associated with U.S. policies in the Holy Land, Iraq, Afghanistan, and elsewhere that radicalize the region and menace the Kingdom's own security, Saudi Arabia is actively attempting to reduce its historic dependence on America. To this end, it is building new relationships with countries like China, India, and Russia, while strengthening cooperation with longstanding partners in Europe and Asia like Britain, France, Germany, Japan, and south Korea. It is not that the Kingdom has given up on the United States. As the king's scholarship program for Saudi students in this country evidences, Saudi Arabia continues to reach out and seek improved relations with America. But Saudis no longer trust us to take their interests into account or to protect them from their enemies.

In December 2002, as the U.S. prepared to invade Iraq against the forcefully expressed advice of then Crown Prince Abdullah, Saudi Aramco (the world's largest oil company) quietly abandoned a decades-old subsidy for the cost of shipping oil to the North American market. Within months, China replaced the United States as the Kingdom's biggest overseas market for oil. U.S. exports have remained relatively constant as the Saudi Arabian economy has boomed, dramatically reducing our market share in our largest Middle Eastern market. Ironically, the best element of the US-Saudi relationship is now cooperation against terrorists. This is a task in which the Saudis have perforce learned to excel. American policies ensure an endless supply of angry young Muslim men in the region, including in Saudi Arabia.

The United States is now said to have entered a "long war." The last time we did so, in 1947 with Soviet Communism, the enemy was obvious, George Kennan gave us a strategy, and skillful American diplomacy gave us the allies we needed to pursue it. Kennan's "long telegram" from Moscow outlined a comprehensive approach to the political, economic, cultural, and military containment of the threat to our survival and our values posed by the Soviet Union. We followed his outline. Forty years later, as Kennan forecast, without our having to go to war with the USSR, our Soviet enemy collapsed of its own infirmities.

This time, our "long war" is with various Islamic extremists, tribes, sects, and societies. We're not quite sure who our enemy is. No Kennan has emerged to give us a strategy for winning without fighting or, indeed, any "strategy" at all. Instead, we are flailing about with our superbly lethal military in response to events. Lacking a strategy, we have been unable to recruit foreign partners to support one. We are now alone in Iraq. We are isolated internationally on the Israel-Palestine issue. Our NATO allies are with us in Afghanistan out of consideration for NATO, not because they think we know what we are doing. Many of them have already announced their intention to withdraw. Pakistan is with us only because all its alternatives are worse.

Saudi Arabia and America head al Qa`ida's enemies list. The Kingdom has, however, been successfully vilified in the eyes of the American elite and public. To deal effectively with Islamic extremism, we need Muslim allies. There is none more potent that the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. Yet we have made no effort to seek its advice about how to address the challenges of Islamic extremism. We have not sought its help to legitimize an effective political, informational, cultural, and economic strategy for productive engagement with the Islamic world.

Meanwhile, however, many things now happening in the Kingdom – like the implicit message of the king's vision for KAUST – suggest that such a partnership with Saudi Arabia and Arab nations of like mind is possible. Such a partnership could be the basis for a strategy to bring victory in this latest "long war." The common interests on which to forge an alliance are clearly there. Last June in Cairo, President Obama brilliantly articulated a credible basis for sound relations with the Islamic world. His vision was persuasive, but it remains a mirage, not a reality. It is past time to implement it. An intensive effort to reset the relationship with Saudi Arabia and to craft a common antiterrorist strategy with its king would be a good place to start.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 13, 2010 9:35 AM
To: 'cb
Subject: Re: Get well soon

B6

Thanks for your concern I'm on the way to Qatar and Saudi Arabia. I will see the Sheikha in Doha and learn more about her work. I hope to see you soon for a catchup visit. All the best.

----- Original Message -----
From: Cherie Blair
To: Clinton, Bill
Cc: H
Sent: Fri Feb 12 15:34:07 2010
Subject: Get well soon

Cherie Blair

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: Jake Sullivan [redacted] B6
Sent: Thursday, September 23, 2010 12:03 PM
To: H
Subject: Moratinos/Cuba

Cheryl and I [redacted] B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 13, 2010 9:35 AM
To: 'slaughtera@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Reassurance on QDDR

Thanks--see you next week.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Fri Feb 12 19:23:43 2010
Subject: Reassurance on QDDR

Jake just downloaded with me from your conversation w/ him yesterday re the Interim Report. I just want to reassure you that I get it completely; you saw a much earlier draft than I would have liked. I'll be working on it all weekend and we'll make you proud. Have a good trip -- I used to be on the board of thr US-Islamic World Forum and went a couple of times. AM

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 1:20 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Palestinians critical of U.S. settlement proposal

From: Casteel, Ezra A
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-I; SES-O_OS
Sent: Sun Nov 14 01:15:53 2010
Subject: (AP) Palestinians critical of U.S. settlement proposal

JERUSALEM (AP) - Palestinians are expressing strong reservations about a U.S. proposal meant to entice Israel to reinstate limits on West Bank settlement construction and revive peace talks. Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat did not reject the proposal outright, but said a decision on whether to endorse it would be made after consultations with Palestinian and Arab leaders. Erekat says the Palestinians "have a major problem in not including east Jerusalem."

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 23, 2010 12:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: [redacted] Mitchell's right B5

Read from bottom up.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sachar, Alon (NEA/IPA)
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Sep 23 12:51:29 2010
Subject: Fw: [redacted] Mitchell's right

This is what's going on:

----- Original Message -----
From: Sachar, Alon (NEA/IPA)
To: Hale, David M
Sent: Thu Sep 23 12:44:24 2010
Subject: Re: This is a waste of time; Mitchell's right

100 percent. [redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Hale, David M
To: Sachar, Alon (NEA/IPA)
Sent: Thu Sep 23 12:41:20 2010
Subject: [redacted] Mitchell's right

RELEASE IN PART
B1 1.4(B) 1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 23, 2010 1:12 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: G8 FMs Lunch

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Burns, William J
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Wells, Alice G
Sent: Thu Sep 23 13:10:18 2010
Subject: G8 FMs Lunch

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

Mostly uneventful. All other FM's there. Straightforward discussion on Af-Pak, CT, Global Partnership, Lat Am-West Af-Eur drug connection, etc. New Japanese FM

Pres UNGA speech well-received. S efforts on Pal-Isr much appreciated. Mins agreed to weigh in with both parties on need to continue.

B1
1.4(D)

Bill

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 09/22/2035

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 23, 2010 1:15 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: One more thing

fyi

---

From: Dan Glickman [mailto: ] B6
Sent: Thursday, September 23, 2010 9:51 AM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: One more thing

As you know, the US Global leadership Coalition is hosting Secretaries Clinton, Gates, Geithner etal on Tuesday afternoon for a formal discussion/announcement of new development initiatives. I am currently the chair of the education arm (501c3) of this organization, and will be opening the session with very brief and general welcoming remarks, then turning it over to Liz Schrayer who is the leader of the group. Just an fyi.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 6:40 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: postscript to last night/ preview of call

See below from Daniel.

What's so crazy is that they roundly rejected the first moratorium in large measure because it excluded Jerusalem and now they are saying the difference is that this one clearly excludes Jerusalem!

----- Original Message -----
From: Rubinstein, Daniel H
To: Feltman, Jeffrey D; Hale, David M; Walles, Jacob; Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sun Nov 14 06:09:54 2010
Subject: postscript to last night/ preview of call as can be expected, huge amount of media reports and speculation, some accurate, some not explicit exclusion of JRSM reverberating very, very hard as it appears in all the reports and statements, and has been seized on by P's

i have gone over the same ground today as yesterday/last night, including emphasis on what our senior levels assess re: sufficiency to proceed she will likely hear about the significant difficulty the "blunt" explicit exclusion (vice a fuzzier approach) presents to proceeding back to negotiations during her call. if she doesn't, DH and I are certain to hear it tomorrow don't want to beat a dead horse, but don't want her to be surprised either

RELEASE IN PART
B1 1.4(B) 1.4(D), B5

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 23, 2010 1:27 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: For [redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Thu Sep 23 13:25:03 2010
Subject: For [redacted] B5

Pls show S:

[redacted], stress [redacted] B5

Background from Bill: [redacted]

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 09/22/2035

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 6:42 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Israeli Cabinet to consider US settlement proposal

Looks very much like there will be a vote today.

---

From: Casteel, Ezra A
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-I; SES-O_OS
Sent: Sun Nov 14 02:26:15 2010
Subject: (AP) Israeli Cabinet to consider US settlement proposal

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israel's prime minister will ask his Cabinet to consider a package of security and diplomatic incentives the U.S. proposed to entice Israel to renew limits on settlement construction and revive peace talks with the Palestinians. However, the Palestinians are expressing strong reservations about the proposal. Although Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat did not reject it outright, he says a decision on whether to endorse it would be made after consultations with Palestinian and Arab leaders.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Ebeling, Betsy <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, October 22, 2010 11:03 AM
To: H
Subject: for your mom.....

Keith Richards Has Memories to Burn

By JANET MASLIN

It is 3 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time in the New York office of Keith Richards's manager, a place that might look ordinary if every wall and shelf were not crammed with some of the world's most glorious rock 'n' roll memorabilia. Mr. Richards has a 3 o'clock appointment. "Come on in, he'll be here in a minute," an assistant says — and here he comes in a minute, at 3:01. This from a man who once prided himself for operating on Keith Time, as in: the security staff ate the shepherd's pie that Keith wanted in his dressing room? Then everyone in this packed stadium can bloody well wait. The Rolling Stones don't play until another shepherd's pie shows up.

Chalk up the promptness to the man's new incarnation: he is now Keith Richards, distinguished author. True, he is far from the only rock star to turn memoirist, and far from the only Rolling Stone to write a book about himself — very much about himself. The raven-haired Ron Wood wrote "Ronnie," in which he described Brian Jones as "me in a blond wig." Bill Wyman, the band's retired bass player and bean counter, wrote "Stone Alone," in which not a 15-shilling demo disc went unmentioned. Now Mr. Richards has written the keeper: "Life," a big, fierce, game-changing account of the Stones' nearly half-century-long adventure.

"It's the most difficult thing I've ever done," he says about the book. "I'd rather make 10 records."

But he sounds anything but weary. And he seems refreshed, bearing surprisingly little resemblance to the battered, kohl-eyed pirate Keith Richards who looks like 50 miles of bad road. Today, in neutral street clothes and hot-green shoes, he is positively debonair. On his hands: the ubiquitous silver skull ring, swollen knuckles, the thin white scar from a hunk of steaming phosphorus that burned his finger to the bone while he played through a concert without stopping. On his head: both a headband and a raffish, straw-colored hat, gray tufts poking out in all directions. Not a single gewgaw hangs off it. "I've been through that phase," he says. "Don't know that the hair will take the pressure anymore."

He's been through quite a lot of phases. And they're all on the page in "Life": the Boy Scout (really); the tyro rocker; the lovestruck kid (mad for Ronnie Spector, unbeknownst to Phil Spector); the astonished new star; the heroin-addicted older one; the jaded veteran of countless world tours; and the longtime sparring partner of Mick Jagger. (Despite tabloid shock over the bickering in the book, these two have seriously been calling each other names at least since the early 1980s.) All of this is recounted with straight-up candor, and some of it is easily sensationalized. But the book's single biggest stunner is a hand-written note on its jacket flap: "Believe it or not, I haven't forgotten any of it."

How, he is asked, is this humanly possible from a man as well known for stupefaction as "Satisfaction?" "I think my main concern at the beginning was whether my memory was really reliable," he says. "Fox had to do a little sleuthing." Fox is James Fox, the journalist and author of "White Mischief," who has been Mr. Richards's friend over many years and was his collaborator in putting "Life" together. (It was sold to Little, Brown & Company for a reported advance of more than $7 million.)

Mr. Fox wound up researching Mr. Richards's past, conducting interviews with those who knew him long ago and drawing upon wonderfully candid old letters and journal entries. "Spent day practising," the 19-year-old Mr. Richards wrote in January 1963, when the Stones were just beginning to play in public. "Worthwhile, I hope!" Also exhumed: a 1962 letter from Mr. Richards to his Aunt Patty describing a boy he had known in primary school, Mick Jagger. He signs off "Luff/Keith xxxxx"

These artifacts turned out to be the Richards equivalent of Proust's madeleines, though Mr. Richards, whose reading taste runs to naval history and the novels of Patrick O'Brian and George MacDonald Fraser, would hardly put it that way. In any case they prompted recollections that he never expected to rediscover, and "Life" began to click. Once his stories were told and a draft was written, he and Mr. Fox wound up sitting together with separate copies of the manuscript as Mr. Fox read the whole book aloud. "What I couldn't guess was that he'd be such a very good natural editor," Mr. Fox, reached by e-mail, says of Mr. Richards. "He cut, accordingly, for pace and rhythm — a real musical cut."

As for calling the book "Life," Mr. Richards did some editing there too. "My Life" was what the book was to be called. "I said 'I tell you what, just cut off the 'My,' and you've got a title," he says. He might just as appropriately have used another title he likes, "Keep It Dark." But, he says, "I'm saving it for a song."

The contents of "Life" are dark enough already. The book begins with a 1975 drug bust in Arkansas and a judge who was persuaded to free Mr. Richards after confiscating his hunting knife (which still hangs in the courtroom) and having a picture taken with him. How did Mr. Richards get so lucky? "I really can't explain it," he says, deadpan, about that now. "Maybe I've got an honest face."

It covers many other arrests too, as well as Mr. Richards's grueling efforts to kick his heroin addiction, which he claims to have done successfully 30 years ago. "Stories like this aren't told very much," he insists. "There aren't many people willing to tell them."

Then there are the other health hazards that the book describes. Like electrocution. "My most spectacular one was in Sacramento. ..." he now says with a smile, drifting off into a fond-sounding reverie that involves a guitar string touching an ungrounded microphone and clouds of smoke billowing out of his mouth. He has a good laugh at the memory of finding himself in a hospital and hearing a doctor say, "Well, they either wake up or they don't."

"Life" has already attracted undue attention for a schoolyard-sounding anatomical swipe at Mr. Jagger. But this is a book that pulls no punches, and most of its disses are more serious than that. "Cold-blooded" and "vicious" are only two of the more printable words he uses to describe Brian Jones. Allen Ginsberg was an "old gasbag." Mick Taylor, the former Rolling Stone, "didn't do anything" after he left the band, and Donald Cammell, the film director ("Performance," starring Mr. Jagger and Anita Pallenberg, Mr. Richards's longtime lover and partner in crime), couldn't commit suicide quickly enough to suit Mr. Richards. (He shot himself in 1996.) When Marlon Brando propositioned him and Ms. Pallenberg, Mr. Richards remembers replying with this: "Later, pal."

As for Mr. Jagger, the complaints are deep-seated. They involve credit hogging, social climbing, egomania, insecurity, unethical business behavior and — here comes a Freudian's holiday for anyone who's ever watched the bare-chested young Jagger and Richards vamp it up together — uncertain sexual identity. There's also a cool condescension about Mr. Jagger's contributions to the duo's songwriting. And a nasty nickname or two, like "Disco Boy."

In conversation about all this, Mr. Richards is emphatically blasé: "It's bound to be somewhat rough, but the point is I'm trying to tell the story from Day 1 to now," he says. And sure: "There's the odd conflict here and there. But if you weigh it all out, those things count for nothing." Mr. Richards did see to it that Mr. Jagger knew what was in the book ahead of time. "The important thing to me," he says, "was that Mick had been through it and seen it and knew what was what." And is there anything that one Stone can say about another Stone and really give offense at this point? "No."

But is there anything new that can be said about the Stones anyway? As "Life" emphatically demonstrates, the answer is yes. And some of its most surprisingly revelatory material appears in what Mr. Richards jokingly calls "Keef's Guitar Workshop." Here are the secrets of some of the world's most famous rock riffs and the almost toy-level equipment on which they were recorded, like the cassette recorder onto which Mr. Richards dubbed guitar layer after guitar layer for "Street Fighting Man," "Jumpin' Jack Flash" and part of "Gimme Shelter." Here's how the silent beats in Elvis Presley's "Heartbreak Hotel" worked their way into some of Mr. Richards's most inspired solos. Mr. Fox found that "Heartbreak Hotel" itself was the key to some of Mr. Richards's best musical memories.

Some of this is by now well known to music critics. But Mr. Richards makes it fascinating at the layman's level. And he is surprised to find that early readers haven't been skipping the musicology, even though the book cordially invites them to do so. What he finds most gratifying about having written "Life" is the chance for both him and his readers to grasp the breadth and range of this book's material. He is the rare memoirist who can say, without hyperbole, "that what I hoped was worth sharing with people turned out to be far more important than I could possibly imagine."

It's getting late. Time to leave this bright orange room where Mr. Richards's name is emblazoned on a director's chair; where assorted music awards and platinum records are everywhere; where there's a discreet little skull in the middle of the wall mirror; where his Louis Vuitton guitar case — he did an ad for Vuitton — is parked in a corner. But the items likeliest to catch his eye are the ones on the coffee table: loose cigarettes neatly arrayed in a holder, a lighter, more cigarettes in a pack.

"Do you mind if I smoke?" he had asked when he first appeared. Easy one: Who, aside from Keith Richards and certain legal authorities, has ever kept Keith Richards from doing anything? But an hour has gone by, and he hasn't touched the cigarettes. He hasn't even looked at them. He has done not one thing to make him resemble the sullen, haunted, diabolically beautiful creature on the cover of his book, the one with hellfire blazing up from his hand to meet the blurry white thing he's smoking.

"That?" he says innocently when asked about the picture. "Oh, that's just me lighting a cigarette. That's all I was doing."

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Thursday, September 23, 2010 5:27 PM
To: H
Subject: H: Predictable Woodward outcome. Sid

Burned by Woodward's Fire
by Leslie H. Gelb
September 23, 2010 | 1:32pm

The president and his team cooperated with the famed author's new book. Leslie H. Gelb on the fallout—and how Obama's Wars shows the U.S. is stuck in an open-ended conflict.

Lots of White House officials observed Bob Woodward, Mr. First Draft of History, repeatedly and boldly slipping behind the closed doors of President Obama's most intimate advisers. They all knew what was happening. The president's men were helping The Washington Post's sleuth write "the inside story" of how the boss masterfully managed the most trying of Herculean labors—the war in Afghanistan. There's only one very big problem in dealing with Woodward in this manner: Once the boss opens the doors to spilling the secrets, many of his subordinates feel liberated to "tell their side of the story." By the time each has exhausted tales of his own heroism and the shortcomings of his fellow senior officials, well, no one looks terribly heroic.

Let's start with Obama, who emerges from the pages of Obama's Wars as he is—brilliant, emotionless, abstract, focused, and confused, a Chicago law-school professor in presidents' clothes. He obviously wanted Woodward to portray him as a brilliant intellectual leader of a government that was not giving him too much help in solving the Afghan mystery, but that he trudged on, doing the best anyone possibly could under these terrible circumstances.

The worst circumstance, as Team Obama alleged to Woodward, was that the Pentagon leadership and the U.S. generals did not give him the real choices he was asking for. He wanted options for troop increases below, even far below, what the generals were giving him. He didn't get them. He wanted a strategy for how U.S. forces would be drawn down after they reached their projected peak of about 100,000 (more than three times the number George W. Bush left him). The military didn't provide him with that, either.

As they say in Missouri, "Give me a break." If the commander in chief of the United States doesn't know how to get what he wants from the U.S. military, he might want to do something about that. And some of the many generals in the White House who he picked to guide him might have told him how to go about that task. To cut to the chase: Obama didn't understand what he had to do—tell Defense Secretary Bob Gates to tell the generals either they meet the president's wishes or they will be fired. Republican presidents do just that. And so, as Woodward describes, Obama had to write the strategy all by himself.

This was and still is an awful situation that springs from two sources. One is that the president has just not been clear enough about his thinking and objectives for Afghanistan, and the military and the rest of us must have real clarity to pursue wars. Woodward has this right. Here are a few Obama quotes that illustrate the problem. The president told Woodward that he didn't think about the Afghan war in the "classic" terms of the U.S. winning or losing. "I think about it more in terms of: Do you successfully prosecute a strategy that results in the country being stronger rather than weaker at the end?" What on earth does that mean? Or try this one, to Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) about whether the July 2011 deadline to begin withdrawal was firm: "I have to say that. I can't let this be a war without end, and I can't lose the whole Democratic Party." Does that mean Obama really believes in the war, but his party doesn't? Or to White House aides: "This needs to be a plan about how we're going to hand it off and get out of Afghanistan." So, if he wanted such a plan, he should have gotten such a plan. He is president after all.

Which leads to the second problem: When a president is not clear about a tough problem, the military smells vacillations. And they sure don't like vacillation when it comes to dispatching their men and women to war. Americans don't fathom well the military mentality. The military in most countries throughout history doesn't like to go to war; they like to build up their arms and overall strength. But once in war, they want only more troops, fewer restrictions on their use, and above all, victory, victory, victory. Since Vietnam, they smell only vacillation among Democrats, and they don't like it. For their part, Democrats see insubordination and worse among the military toward them, and they don't care for the suits either. It's not a happy circumstance. Woodward didn't explore this underlying reality, which is critical for Americans to understand.

_breakAd_

The White House clash with the military could get worse over the latest news about Gen. Stanley McChrystal's firing over naughty things said about the White House to a reporter. According to a preliminary Army investigation, the general—and perhaps even his senior Army aides—were not the sources of those nasty quotes. It was some other guys—you know, the usual culprits, the Navy and civilians. There will be further formal inquiries on this, but nothing good will come of them.

There's another important thread running throughout the Woodward account that, I believe, he gets more wrong than right. That is, Woodward's repeated insistence of open and bitter policy brawls in the good old Situation Room (the inner sanctum for White House meetings) over Afghan policy. Mr. Instant Historian paints a picture of a war of all against all. My information has always been that there was relative agreement on major policy. Based on my sources, there is no doubt that Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, Defense Secretary Bob Gates, and Joint Chiefs Chairman Mike Mullen were almost always quite cordial and in full lock step. They, along with the NSC Adviser Jim Jones and field commanders like General McChrystal and General Petraeus, are the key players. Of course, Vice President Joe Biden and Chief of Staff Rahm Emanuel were the only regular critics of where policy was heading. The generals did lobby for their positions in public—in advance of presidential decisions. And that's a big no-no. But by that standard, almost all Obama's top advisers did as much. The day after his West Point speech last December, where he set the firm date of July 2011 to begin unspecified U.S. troop withdrawals, almost all the advisers publicly stated that maybe one didn't have to take this date too seriously, that everything was "conditions based." That group of rebels included Gates and Clinton.

So, if anything, most of Obama's top counselors were more or less united—sometimes against where he seemed to be going. Here is what Petraeus had to say to Woodward on the subject of goals, and it's a stunner: "You have to recognize also that I don't think you win this war. I think you keep fighting. It's a little bit like Iraq, actually.... Yes, there has been enormous progress in Iraq. But there are still horrific attacks in Iraq, and you have to stay vigilant. You have to stay after it. This is the kind of fight we're in for the rest of our lives and probably our kids' lives." The brilliant general said as much to others over the last year. It's enough to knock your socks off.

So far, there are no heroes to this narrative, only self-described heroic skeptics of the war and warriors who would fight on forever.

Doubtless, President Obama does not want to fight an open-ended war. He's sworn to that time and again, and I believe him, despite his history of calling for "victory" and "defeat" of the Taliban and al Qaeda. But what the Woodward book demonstrates is that Obama and his team just don't know how to get from here to there. So far, there are no heroes to this narrative, only self-described heroic skeptics of the war and warriors who would fight on forever.

Leslie H. Gelb, a former New York Times columnist and senior government official, is author of Power Rules: How Common Sense Can Rescue American Foreign Policy (HarperCollins 2009), a book that shows how to think about and use power in the 21st century. He is president emeritus of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Get a head start with the Morning Scoop email. It's your Cheat Sheet with must reads from across the Web. Get it.

For inquiries, please contact The Daily Beast at editorial@thedailybeast.com.

URL: http://www.thedailybeast.com/blogs-and-stories/2010-09-23/bob-woodwards-obamas-wars-les-gelb-on-who-got-burned/p/

<img src="http://b.scorecardresearch.com/b?c1=2&c2=6433482&c3=&c4=&c5=&c6=&c15=&cv=1.3&cj=1" style="display:none" width="0" height="0" alt="" />

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: jake.sullivan[redacted] B6
Sent: Thursday, September 23, 2010 10:55 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Blair

Copy

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'jake.sullivar[redacted]
Subject: Blair
Sent: Sep 23, 2010 10:52 PM

Be sure he knows I've been trading calls w Lynn de Rothschild and hope to connect late tonight.

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: aclb
Sent: Friday, September 24, 2010 4:58 AM
To: H
Cc: 'jake.sullivan
Subject: Re: Info for you

Thanks - that's really good of you. I will speak to Jake and let you know how I'm getting on. Best Tony.

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: aclb
Cc: 'jake.sullivan <jake.sullivan
Sent: Fri Sep 24 05:16:14 2010
Subject: Fw: Info for you

Tony---

Message delivered. Pls read all the way down. Also, I'm copying Jake Sullivan because I've asked him to arrange a call w you once you land so you can be fully briefed before seeing BN. We are on a fast moving train changing direction every hour but determined to reach our destination.

Thx again for jumping into action this week. It's great having you on the team. All the best, H

----- Original Message -----
From: Lynn Forester de Rothschild
To: H
Sent: Thu Sep 23 23:58:37 2010
Subject: Re: Info for you

Hillary,
We of course understand and thank you for personally reaching out to us. It is a big loss for the weekend but as we know it does not add up to a hill of beans. You are the best, and we remain your biggest fans.
Sweet dreams and Godspeed with everything you are doing.
Oxoxo
Lynn

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Lynn Forester de Rothschild
Sent: Thu Sep 23 22:30:45 2010
Subject: Info for you

Lynn,

I was trying to reach you to tell you and Teddy that I asked Tony Blair to go to Israel as part of our full court press on keeping the Middle East negotiations going. He told me that he had a commitment in Aspen w you two and the conference, but after we talked, he decided to go and asked me to tell you. He is very sorry, obviously, but I'm grateful that he accepted my request. I hope you all understand and give him a raincheck.

If you were interested, he might be able to satellite in if you have the technology available.

He should land around 5am Aspen time. Let me know what penance I owe you. And pls explain to Teddy. As ever, H

DISCLAIMER

WARNING – This email is only intended for the person to whom or entity to which it is addressed and, together with any files transmitted with it, is confidential and may also be privileged. If you are not the intended recipient, you must not copy, forward, use or rely on any part of it or disclose its contents to any person. If you have received it in error, please notify our system manager on +44 20 7647 7782 and delete all copies immediately.

Except where this email is sent in the usual course of our business, the views expressed in this email are those of the sender and not those of The Office of Tony Blair.

The Office of Tony Blair accepts no responsibility for software viruses and you should check for viruses before opening any attachments. Internet communications are not secure and therefore The Office of Tony Blair does not provide any guarantee or warranty that this email or any attachments shall remain confidential.

The Office of Tony Blair is a trading name of Windrush Ventures Limited and Windrush Ventures No.3 LP. Windrush Ventures Limited is a limited company registered in England and Wales with registered number 06397276. Its registered office is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL.

Windrush Ventures No. 3 LP is a limited partnership registered in England and Wales with registered number LP012665. Its registered office is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL. The members of Windrush Ventures No.3 LP are BDBCO No.819 Limited and Windrush Ventures No.2 LLP and the address at which each of these can be served is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL.

This email may relate to or be sent from other members of the Windrush group.

---

This email has been scanned by the MessageLabs Email Security System.
For more information please visit http://www.messagelabs.com/email

---

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 24, 2010 6:38 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Israeli leaders condemn Clinton immigrant comments

From: Rudnitski, Jennine R
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-I
Sent: Fri Sep 24 05:22:11 2010
Subject: (AP) Israeli leaders condemn Clinton immigrant comments

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israeli leaders are criticizing former President Clinton's comment that Russian immigrants in Israel an obstacle to peace. Clinton noted the most recent arrivals in Israel have the hardest time agreeing to share the land with the Palestinians. He also said residents who have been in Israel the longest and have more of a historical perspective and are most supportive of peace in Israel. Among the Israel leaders criticizing Clinton's comments is Foreign Minister Lieberman, whose political party relies heavily on immigrant support. He called the remarks "crude generalizations" and interference in Israel's internal affairs.

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 13, 2010 9:36 AM
To: 'mchaleja@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Examples of successful global media engagement in Haiti

Will you be in next week? I hope we can catch up.

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Feb 13 03:03:22 2010
Subject: FW: Examples of successful global media engagement in Haiti

I'm sorry I was not able to join last week's meeting on Haiti but I have calls into Anne Marie and Arturo to get an update. Once I get a better understanding of how we plan to move forward on a regional basis we will work on putting together a comprehensive PD strategy to support our efforts. B5

If you like the idea I can begin to trial balloon it with media execs in US and LA that I know personally to gauge their reaction.

Of course we can't rely on a psa campaign alone to sustain the effort so we will develop other PD strategies for engagement throughout the region which I will forward as they evolve.

Let me know what you think. In the meantime I thought you might be interested in the report below (copy attached as well) which outlines the results to date of our global media outreach initiative.

Successfully Engaging Global Media

About the U.S. Role and International Cooperation in Haiti

Examples of Post Efforts to Date

EUROPE

· Reinforcing the Secretary's message, U.S. Ambassador to France Rivkin engaged directly with over 100 journalists in an event streamed live on-line by CNN, where he highlighted U.S. assistance to Haiti and the cooperation of the US with France, the UN and the international community. Embassy Paris also reached out to senior officials in the Elysee, MFA, French media and civil society at all levels to underscore the message of positive coordination with our French partners and to set the record straight on the work of the USG in Haiti. As a result, leading French officials dismissed rumors of rising diplomatic tensions between the two countries. Leading officials consistently praised the work of the Obama administration in Haiti and the need for a strong US role in the emergency response.

· Embassy London's media blitz featured Ambassador Susman, who underlined the U.S. commitment to Haiti at an Embassy Martin Luther King Jr. holiday event with actor James Earl Jones; the event was covered by BBC World News (audience 270 million worldwide) and various U.K. papers. The Ambassador and the IO also spoke about Haiti on January 20-22 on BBC TV 2's "Daily Politics Show," BBC Radio, the BBC TV Evening News, and other media and helped embed an ITV journalist on the USNS Comfort to help balance ITV's previously negative reporting and reached out personally to BBC producers to call attention to inaccurate reporting alleging that the U.S. military prevented Medicins Sans Frontiers from delivering aid and supplies to the airport in Port Au Prince.

· With media coverage growing more critical, U.S. Ambassador to Greece Speckhard gave an interview to Ta Nea newspaper and DCM Deborah McCarthy, who previously served in Haiti, was interviewed by Real Sunday newspaper, resulting in positive stories about U.S. assistance to Haiti. Meanwhile, the PAO spoke with the Director of Elefterotypia, whose paper has run some of the most misdirected coverage of Haiti, and received a commitment to run an Embassy-produced story to counteract the misinformation.

AFRICA

· Four African posts – Senegal, Ghana, Nigeria and Tanzania – organized highly successful outreach programs based on the diversion of the USS Gunston Hall to Haiti. The ship, with African officers aboard, was headed to western Africa under AFRICOM's African Partnership Station maritime security training program when it was diverted to provide relief to Haiti. With African officers working alongside U.S. military officers to deliver assistance to Haitians, PAOs at those posts connected local reporters with the ship to conduct live interviews of the Africans for their home media, resulting in excellent media placement in all four countries.

· On January 20 U.S. Ambassador to South Africa Gips gave a 10-minute live interview on Haiti with 5FM, a leading youth station with listenership of approx 800,000. The Ambassador highlighted the depth and breadth of US support and congratulated South Africa for sending emergency teams. The radio hosts told the Embassy afterward that e-mails and SMS messages were pouring into the station in support of U.S. efforts. Ambassador Gips reached out to additional audiences via broadcast media on January 21 and recorded a program via the Africa Regional Media Hub with SABC-International TV's "Rendezvous Africa" program (broadcast across the continent) and live interviews with drive-time radio programs on two national stations.

· As a result of a press conference hosted by the Embassy on January 22, all major Angolan media gave positive coverage to U.S. efforts in Haiti, including Radio Nacional de Angola and the Jornal de Angola newspaper, which ran an editorial January 23 that stated: "We need to believe and let those on the ground do their work because the old tactics of criticizing who is doing something for the Haitian People just for the sake of criticizing at a moment like this is not acceptable. . . Just see the numbers of daily flights that arrive in Haiti to have an idea and quickly come to the conclusion that the possible failures and omissions do not supersede the positive and timely work done by the entities undertaking the relief efforts in Haiti."

EAST ASIA-PACIFIC

· The U.S. Ambassador to Indonesia's January 21 byliner on Haiti ran as the lead item on the editorial page of Seputar Indonesia daily, and it was subsequently picked up by Antara, the Indonesian national news agency, and subsequently appeared in most Indonesian media.

· South Korea: Looking to help Korean audiences connect with the situation in Haiti, PA Seoul arranged a Digital Video Conference with the U.S. Consul in Nagoya, Japan, who had previously served as Information Officer in Port-au-Prince and was a fluent Korean speaker. CG Kwak underlined the long tradition of US humanitarian assistance to Haiti as well as the massive US response to the current crisis and noted Korea's own active involvement in the relief work. The U.S. Ambassador's blog on January 22, dedicated to the earthquake and those affected by it, received more than 1,500 hits in three days, with almost all comments supporting U.S. concerns.

The EAP Regional Media Hub in Tokyo hosted a journalists' roundtable with Gordon Duguid in Haiti on January 25 that included journalists from Hong Kong's Ming Pao newspaper, Malaysia's New Straits Times newspaper, BERNAMA (Malaysian National News Agency), and Australia's Canberra Times newspaper and Radio 6PR (Perth), and resulted in favorable stories appearing over the next few days in all participating media.

NEAR EAST

· Lebanon: Television station Al-Jadid is not Hezbollah-affiliated, with most of its funding coming from the Gulf and Libya. Their coverage is also routinely sensationalistic and mirrored Al-Manar's coverage. PAS Beirut clarified aspects of USG assistance in Haiti to Al-Jadid on January 20. On Saturday January 23, Al-Jadid hosted the PAO for 30 minutes on morning news talk-show al-Hadath to discuss American relief efforts in Haiti. The PAO was able to address many of the accusations carried in the Al-Manar report, including the myriad "weapons testing" myths being propagated by Russian and Venezuelan media outlets. [Post cannot engage directly with Hezbollah television station Al-Manar as it was designated as a Special Designated Global Terrorist organization in 2006 under E.O. 13224]

· Morocco: On 1/28/10 the nationalist French-language daily L'Opinion published an op-ed entitled, "Haiti: After terror, the dread..." The paper is generally considered to be fairly hostile to the USG, however, on 1/29/10, PAO Rabat and an FSN went to L'Opinion to discuss the op-ed. Post was amazed to find the staff, including the writer himself, accommodating and even apologetic during the meeting. The editor-in-chief immediately agreed that the piece had been unfair, and the writer somewhat sheepishly explained himself by saying that public opinion had not quite recovered from "the Bush years," but readily acknowledged as well that the article was not balanced. PAO gave the writer a dossier of Washington File articles and some information from Infocentral's regular updates, which he promised to use in writing a counterpoint article. On 2/1/10, L'Opinion published an article entitled, "The massive humanitarian action of the United States," based on the articles provided by Post. The excellent article underscored the scope of American assistance, both government and private sector, to aide Haiti's earthquake victims.

· Syria: Syrian state-run media coverage of the USG role in Haiti relief efforts has been largely negative and inaccurate, portraying the U.S. military as occupying Haiti. Examples include the Ba'ath party's Al-Baath newspaper publishing three critical articles (1/21/01) under the headlines: "US Crimes in Haiti," "US Military Forces Tighten Grip on Haiti," and "US Forces Stop Humanitarian Planes from Landing." On 1/25/10, government-owned Tishreen published an op-ed claiming that the superpowers were rushing towards a military conquest of Haiti in order to profit from reconstruction operations, which is the new method of colonialism. On 1/28/10, DAS Maura Connelly met with Syrian Ambassador Mustafa, who promised to work to halt the negative coverage coming from some Syrian outlets. To encourage more balanced coverage, Embassy Damascus will host a roundtable 2/3/10 with journalists from government-owned and independent Syrian media. Post also extended a personal invitation to an advisor of the Minister of Information.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Hanley, Monica R <HanleyMR@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 24, 2010 7:28 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Requests

Will do
And have email printed for you

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Hanley, Monica R
Sent: Fri Sep 24 07:37:45 2010
Subject: Requests

B6

Thx.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 13, 2010 9:37 AM
To: 'mchaleja@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Joseph Nye/The New Public Diplomacy

Sounds good. Let's discuss when we see each other--hopefully next week.

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Feb 13 03:22:40 2010
Subject: FW: Joseph Nye/The New Public Diplomacy

Thought you might be interested in this piece by Joe Nye which I believe validates the new approach we are trying to implement. We have begun to roll-out the new plan and so far the reaction has been reasonably positive. We have organized a set of working groups around key initiatives --- women's empowerment; cve; expanded English language training; cultural programming; youth; climate change; etc so that we can incorporate new proposals into FY2012 budget and re-direct FY 2010 and 2011 funds wherever possible and appropriate. The working groups are being chaired by senior level officers from the regional bureaus --- Bob Blake; Craig Kelly, etc. --- and are being asked to report back within 4 to 6 weeks. I'll continue to keep you posted as things move forward.

jm

The New Public Diplomacy

Joseph S. Nye <http://www.project-syndicate.org/contributor/422>

2010-02-10

CAMBRIDGE – The world of traditional power politics was typically about whose military or economy would win. In today's information age, politics is also about whose "story" wins.

National narratives are, indeed, a type of currency. Governments compete with each other and with other organizations to enhance their own credibility and weaken that of their opponents. Witness the contest between the government and protesters after the Iranian elections in June 2009, in which the Internet and Twitter played crucial roles, or the recent controversy between Google and China.

Reputation has always mattered in world politics, but credibility has become crucial because of a "paradox of plenty." When information is plentiful, the scarce resource is attention. Under the new conditions, a soft sell may, more than ever, prove more effective than a hard sell.

For example, the relative independence of the BBC, sometimes a source of consternation to British governments, has paid rich dividends in credibility, as illustrated by this account of Tanzanian President Jakaya Kikwete's day: "he rises at dawn, listens to the BBC World Service, then scans the Tanzanian press."

Skeptics who treat the term "public diplomacy" as a mere euphemism for propaganda miss the point. Simple propaganda is counterproductive as public diplomacy. Nor is public diplomacy merely a public-relations campaign. Public diplomacy also involves building long-term relationships that create an enabling environment for government policies.

The contribution of direct government information to long-term cultural relationships varies with three dimensions or stages of public diplomacy, and all three are important. The first and most immediate dimension is daily communications, which involves explaining the context of domestic and foreign-policy decisions. This dimension also involves preparation for dealing with crises. If there is a vacuum in information after an event, others will rush in to fill it.

The second dimension is strategic communication, which develops a set of simple themes, much as a political or advertising campaign does. While the first dimension is measured in hours and days, the second occurs over weeks, months, and even years.

The third dimension of public diplomacy is the development of lasting relationships with key individuals over many years or even decades, through scholarships, exchanges, training, seminars, conferences, and access to media channels. These programs develop what the American journalist Edward R. Murrow once called the crucial "last three feet" – face-to-face communications, with the enhanced credibility that reciprocity creates.

But even the best advertising cannot sell an unpopular product. A communications strategy cannot work if it cuts against the grain of policy. Actions speak louder than words. All too often, policymakers treat public diplomacy as a bandage that can be applied after damage is done by other instruments. For example, China tried to enhance its soft power by successfully staging the 2008 Olympics, but its domestic simultaneous crackdown in Tibet – and subsequent repression in Xinxiang and arrests of human rights lawyers – undercut its gains.

Great powers try to use culture and narrative to create soft power that promotes their advantage, but they do not always understand how to do it. Critics in the United States complain that the over-militarization of foreign policy undercuts its credibility. Instead, they advocate diplomacy "on steroids," staffed by diplomats trained in new media, cross-cultural communications, granular local knowledge, and networks of contacts with under-represented groups.

The centralized mass-media approach to public diplomacy still plays an important role. Governments need to correct daily misrepresentations of their policies, as well as to try to convey a longer-term strategic message. The main strength of the mass-media approach is its audience reach and ability to generate public awareness and set the agenda. But its weakness is its inability to influence how the message is perceived in different cultural settings. The sender knows what she says, but not always what the targets hear. Cultural barriers are apt to distort what is heard.

Networked communications, on the other hand, can take advantage of two-way communications and peer-to-peer relations to overcome cultural differences. This type of decentralization and flexibility is difficult for governments to accomplish, given their central accountability structures.

The greater flexibility of non-governmental organizations in using networks has given rise to what some call "the new public diplomacy," which is no longer confined to messaging, promotion campaigns, or even direct governmental contacts with foreign publics serving foreign-policy purposes. It is also about building relationships with civil-society actors in other countries and facilitating networks between non-governmental parties at home and abroad.

In this approach to public diplomacy, government policy is aimed at promoting and participating in, rather than controlling, such cross-border networks. Indeed, too much government control, or even the appearance of it, can undercut the credibility that such networks are designed to engender. The evolution of public diplomacy from one-way communications to a two-way dialogue treats publics as co-creators of meaning and communication.

Power in a global information age, more than ever, will include a soft dimension of attraction as well as the hard dimensions of coercion and payment. Combining these dimensions effectively is called "smart power." For example, the current struggle against transnational terrorism is a struggle over winning hearts and minds, and over-reliance on hard power alone is not the path to success.

Public diplomacy is an important tool in the arsenal of smart power, but smart public diplomacy requires an understanding of credibility, self-criticism, and the role of civil society in generating soft power. If it degenerates into propaganda, public diplomacy not only fails to convince, but can undercut soft power. Instead, it must remain a two-way process, because soft power depends, first and foremost, upon understanding the minds of others.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 8:53 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Netanyahu presents U.S. settlement plan to cabinet

From: Moore, Anna W
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_CMS; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sun Nov 14 08:51:01 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Netanyahu presents U.S. settlement plan to cabinet

JERUSALEM (Reuters) – Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu presented a U.S. plan to his cabinet November 14 that would extend a freeze on West Bank settlements for 90 days in return for diplomatic and security incentives.

Washington wants Israel to renew a freeze on settlement building in efforts to resume peace talks with Palestinians, who in September halted negotiations after just a few weeks when Israel refused to extend a 10-month settlement freeze.

Under the U.S. proposal, if Israel extended the freeze Washington would pledge not to seek further extensions and to veto any attempts at the United Nations to force a unilateral peace settlement.

U.S. security aid to Israel would also be upgraded.

"I will insist that in any proposal Israel's security needs will be addressed, both in the immediate term and regarding the threats facing us in the coming decade," Netanyahu said in public comments before the cabinet meeting.

The prime minister has previously said any settlement moratorium will not apply to areas around East Jerusalem that Israel captured during a 1967 war and the Palestinians want as the capital of a future state.

One official in Netanyahu's office said the proposal had "positive elements". Israeli political sources said a narrow majority in Netanyahu's security cabinet, which is ultimately responsible, would likely support accepting the U.S. proposal.

Secretary of State Hillary Clinton shared the plan at a meeting in New York last week, Netanyahu said, adding that U.S. and Israeli teams were still negotiating a final formula.

A spokesman for Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas said there had been no official word regarding a renewed Israeli freeze on housing starts in the occupied West Bank.

"An official Palestinian commitment will come only after President Abbas hears officially from the American administration what is going on between them and the Israelis," Nabil Abu Rdainah told Reuters.

Palestinian officials in private have expressed anger over U.S. incentives to get Israel to prolong the partial freeze, saying they were effectively bribing Israel to fulfill basic international obligations.

Israeli officials said Netanyahu, who faces a tough political sell within his own coalition on the settlement issue, had pushed Clinton for the broad understandings.

Settler leaders, who said acceptance of the proposal would represent "a fundamental collapse" of the government's integrity, called an emergency meeting to discuss the issue.

Under the U.S. plan, Israel would declare a further, three month suspension of construction in the West Bank, land it captured in a 1967 war where Palestinians seek a state. Any building launched since the original moratorium ended late in September would be frozen, a diplomatic source said.

Among the pledges offered to Israel by Washington was a guarantee to veto any resolutions brought to the United Nations Security Council that seek "to impose a political settlement on Israel," the source said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The United States would also undertake to veto resolutions deemed anti-Israel in the United Nations and other international organisations, a move that could make Israel less vulnerable to threats made by some Palestinians to declare statehood unilaterally in the event that peace talks fail.

The Obama Administration would also ask Congress to approve the supply of three billion dollars worth of advanced warplanes to the Jewish state "to maintain its qualitative edge" in the region, the source added.

The United States would further sign a more comprehensive deal to enhance its substantial security aid to Israel as part of any agreement concluded with the Palestinians.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 8:55 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Netanyahu presents U.S. settlement plan to cabinet

Trying to figure out what's actually happening here.

---

From: Moore, Anna W
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_CMS; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sun Nov 14 08:51:01 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Netanyahu presents U.S. settlement plan to cabinet

JERUSALEM (Reuters) – Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu presented a U.S. plan to his cabinet November 14 that would extend a freeze on West Bank settlements for 90 days in return for diplomatic and security incentives.

Washington wants Israel to renew a freeze on settlement building in efforts to resume peace talks with Palestinians, who in September halted negotiations after just a few weeks when Israel refused to extend a 10-month settlement freeze.

Under the U.S. proposal, if Israel extended the freeze Washington would pledge not to seek further extensions and to veto any attempts at the United Nations to force a unilateral peace settlement.

U.S. security aid to Israel would also be upgraded.

"I will insist that in any proposal Israel's security needs will be addressed, both in the immediate term and regarding the threats facing us in the coming decade," Netanyahu said in public comments before the cabinet meeting.

The prime minister has previously said any settlement moratorium will not apply to areas around East Jerusalem that Israel captured during a 1967 war and the Palestinians want as the capital of a future state.

One official in Netanyahu's office said the proposal had "positive elements". Israeli political sources said a narrow majority in Netanyahu's security cabinet, which is ultimately responsible, would likely support accepting the U.S. proposal.

Secretary of State Hillary Clinton shared the plan at a meeting in New York last week, Netanyahu said, adding that U.S. and Israeli teams were still negotiating a final formula.

A spokesman for Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas said there had been no official word regarding a renewed Israeli freeze on housing starts in the occupied West Bank.

"An official Palestinian commitment will come only after President Abbas hears officially from the American administration what is going on between them and the Israelis," Nabil Abu Rdainah told Reuters.

Palestinian officials in private have expressed anger over U.S. incentives to get Israel to prolong the partial freeze, saying they were effectively bribing Israel to fulfill basic international obligations.

Israeli officials said Netanyahu, who faces a tough political sell within his own coalition on the settlement issue, had pushed Clinton for the broad understandings.

Settler leaders, who said acceptance of the proposal would represent "a fundamental collapse" of the government's integrity, called an emergency meeting to discuss the issue.

Under the U.S. plan, Israel would declare a further, three month suspension of construction in the West Bank, land it captured in a 1967 war where Palestinians seek a state. Any building launched since the original moratorium ended late in September would be frozen, a diplomatic source said.

Among the pledges offered to Israel by Washington was a guarantee to veto any resolutions brought to the United Nations Security Council that seek "to impose a political settlement on Israel," the source said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The United States would also undertake to veto resolutions deemed anti-Israel in the United Nations and other international organisations, a move that could make Israel less vulnerable to threats made by some Palestinians to declare statehood unilaterally in the event that peace talks fail.

The Obama Administration would also ask Congress to approve the supply of three billion dollars worth of advanced warplanes to the Jewish state "to maintain its qualitative edge" in the region, the source added.

The United States would further sign a more comprehensive deal to enhance its substantial security aid to Israel as part of any agreement concluded with the Palestinians.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 13, 2010 9:57 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'; 'rooneym@state.gov'; 'feltmanjd@state.gov'
Subject: Doha speech

I will have more to say when I see you on the plane, but I wanted to share some thoughts from Judith McHale, that are not in reaction to the speech which I doubt she's seen, but which more generally address the question of communicating w Muslim audiences. B5

Judith mentions a recent piece by Joe Nye which is also worth reading that I will forward to you. Thx.

Muslim engagement

B5

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 13, 2010 9:58 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'; 'rooneym@state.gov'; 'feltmanjd@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: Joseph Nye/The New Public Diplomacy

Fyi.

----- Original Message -----
From: McHale, Judith A <McHaleJA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Feb 13 03:22:40 2010
Subject: FW: Joseph Nye/The New Public Diplomacy

Thought you might be interested in this piece by Joe Nye which I believe validates the new approach we are trying to implement. We have begun to roll-out the new plan and so far the reaction has been reasonably positive. We have organized a set of working groups around key initiatives --- women's empowerment; cve; expanded English language training; cultural programming; youth; climate change; etc so that we can incorporate new proposals into FY2012 budget and re-direct FY 2010 and 2011 funds wherever possible and appropriate. The working groups are being chaired by senior level officers from the regional bureaus --- Bob Blake; Craig Kelly, etc. --- and are being asked to report back within 4 to 6 weeks. I'll continue to keep you posted as things move forward.

jm

The New Public Diplomacy

Joseph S. Nye <http://www.project-syndicate.org/contributor/422>

2010-02-10

CAMBRIDGE – The world of traditional power politics was typically about whose military or economy would win. In today's information age, politics is also about whose "story" wins.

National narratives are, indeed, a type of currency. Governments compete with each other and with other organizations to enhance their own credibility and weaken that of their opponents. Witness the contest between the government and protesters after the Iranian elections in June 2009, in which the Internet and Twitter played crucial roles, or the recent controversy between Google and China.

Reputation has always mattered in world politics, but credibility has become crucial because of a "paradox of plenty." When information is plentiful, the scarce resource is attention. Under the new conditions, a soft sell may, more than ever, prove more effective than a hard sell.

For example, the relative independence of the BBC, sometimes a source of consternation to British governments, has paid rich dividends in credibility, as illustrated by this account of Tanzanian President Jakaya Kikwete's day: "he rises at dawn, listens to the BBC World Service, then scans the Tanzanian press."

Skeptics who treat the term "public diplomacy" as a mere euphemism for propaganda miss the point. Simple propaganda is counterproductive as public diplomacy. Nor is public diplomacy merely a public-relations campaign. Public diplomacy also involves building long-term relationships that create an enabling environment for government policies.

The contribution of direct government information to long-term cultural relationships varies with three dimensions or stages of public diplomacy, and all three are important. The first and most immediate dimension is daily communications, which involves explaining the context of domestic and foreign-policy decisions. This dimension also involves preparation for dealing with crises. If there is a vacuum in information after an event, others will rush in to fill it.

The second dimension is strategic communication, which develops a set of simple themes, much as a political or advertising campaign does. While the first dimension is measured in hours and days, the second occurs over weeks, months, and even years.

The third dimension of public diplomacy is the development of lasting relationships with key individuals over many years or even decades, through scholarships, exchanges, training, seminars, conferences, and access to media channels. These programs develop what the American journalist Edward R. Murrow once called the crucial "last three feet" – face-to-face communications, with the enhanced credibility that reciprocity creates.

But even the best advertising cannot sell an unpopular product. A communications strategy cannot work if it cuts against the grain of policy. Actions speak louder than words. All too often, policymakers treat public diplomacy as a bandage that can be applied after damage is done by other instruments. For example, China tried to enhance its soft power by successfully staging the 2008 Olympics, but its domestic simultaneous crackdown in Tibet – and subsequent repression in Xinxiang and arrests of human rights lawyers – undercut its gains.

Great powers try to use culture and narrative to create soft power that promotes their advantage, but they do not always understand how to do it. Critics in the United States complain that the over-militarization of foreign policy undercuts its credibility. Instead, they advocate diplomacy "on steroids," staffed by diplomats trained in new media, cross-cultural communications, granular local knowledge, and networks of contacts with under-represented groups.

The centralized mass-media approach to public diplomacy still plays an important role. Governments need to correct daily misrepresentations of their policies, as well as to try to convey a longer-term strategic message. The main strength of the mass-media approach is its audience reach and ability to generate public awareness and set the agenda. But its weakness is its inability to influence how the message is perceived in different cultural settings. The sender knows what she says, but not always what the targets hear. Cultural barriers are apt to distort what is heard.

Networked communications, on the other hand, can take advantage of two-way communications and peer-to-peer relations to overcome cultural differences. This type of decentralization and flexibility is difficult for governments to accomplish, given their central accountability structures.

The greater flexibility of non-governmental organizations in using networks has given rise to what some call "the new public diplomacy," which is no longer confined to messaging, promotion campaigns, or even direct governmental contacts with foreign publics serving foreign-policy purposes. It is also about building relationships with civil-society actors in other countries and facilitating networks between non-governmental parties at home and abroad.

In this approach to public diplomacy, government policy is aimed at promoting and participating in, rather than controlling, such cross-border networks. Indeed, too much government control, or even the appearance of it, can undercut the credibility that such networks are designed to engender. The evolution of public diplomacy from one-way communications to a two-way dialogue treats publics as co-creators of meaning and communication.

Power in a global information age, more than ever, will include a soft dimension of attraction as well as the hard dimensions of coercion and payment. Combining these dimensions effectively is called "smart power." For example, the current struggle against transnational terrorism is a struggle over winning hearts and minds, and over-reliance on hard power alone is not the path to success.

Public diplomacy is an important tool in the arsenal of smart power, but smart public diplomacy requires an understanding of credibility, self-criticism, and the role of civil society in generating soft power. If it degenerates into propaganda, public diplomacy not only fails to convince, but can undercut soft power. Instead, it must remain a two-way process, because soft power depends, first and foremost, upon understanding the minds of others.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 10:11 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Gerry Adams to seek Louth nomination for General Election

Fyi

From: Rita O'Hare <[redacted]> B6
To: US Email <[redacted]>
Sent: Sun Nov 14 09:04:08 2010
Subject: Fw: Gerry Adams to seek Louth nomination for General Election

-----Forwarded Message-----
From: Sinn Féin Press Office
Sent: Nov 14, 2010 8:37 AM
To: sinnfeinpress@oireachtas.ie
Subject: Gerry Adams to seek Louth nomination for General Election

Sinn Féin Press Office
Kevin Barry Memorial Hall
44 Parnell Square
Dublin 1

Email: press.sinnfein@gmail.com
Contact Shaun Tracey on 0877735218

For immediate release 14th November 2010:

Gerry Adams to seek Louth nomination for General Election

Sinn Féin President Gerry Adams has today announced his decision to put his name forward for the Sinn Féin nomination for the Louth constituency at the next General Election. Mr. Adams was speaking today at the Edentubber commemoration in County Louth. He said:

"Ireland is at a crossroads. This state is in the midst of a deep economic and social crisis. This Government is probably the most unpopular in the history of the state. It is now implementing bad, deeply damaging policies. It has no mandate whatsoever for this.

There is a better way. Together we can rebuild Ireland.

People need to make a stand against what is happening. We need a better way forward for our country and its people.

All this imposes a huge responsibility on those of us in positions of political leadership. In the past I have asked people to step forward and to show leadership.

I have asked people to make a stand. I believe that it is my duty at this critical time to step forward and do what I have asked of others.

As Leader of Sinn Féin, I want to be part of the necessary fight-back against bad economic policies in both parts of this island and for a fair, decent and united society for all the people of Ireland.

As a representative of west Belfast I should be able to do this in the Dáil, but the Irish government refuses to allow this, despite a commitment during the Good Friday Agreement negotiations and subsequently, by the then Taoiseach Bertie Ahern that he would introduce measures to allow speaking rights for MPs from the north.

So, as Leader of the only all Ireland party with an all-island mandate I have a choice to make whether to stay in west Belfast, a place that I love, or to seek a mandate in another constituency in the south. West Belfast is my home. It is where Colette and our family are and where I live.

But after thoughtful consideration, and with the support of colleagues, I have decided to put my name forward for Louth. If elected for this constituency I will work and stay here and travel home when possible.

This means that I will be stepping down as an MLA for west Belfast. My replacement will be chosen this week. I am proud and honoured to have represented the people of west Belfast in the Assembly. I will remain as MP until the next Leinster House election.

This is a significant initiative by the Sinn Fein leadership. It is a measure of our determination to provide a real alternative to the consensus for cuts being pushed by the other parties.

Ireland needs political change. We need change in the Dáil. We need more voices that will stand up against the consensus for cuts – more voices that will stand up for ordinary people. We need new politics. We need a political realignment.

A change of government without a change in policies will be worthless.

A Fine Gael led government, propped up by the Labour Party is not a real alternative.

Fine Gael and Labour offer nothing that is substantially different from the current government. They are part of the consensus for cuts.

Sinn Féin is the only effective opposition in the Dáil. We forced this government to hold the Donegal South West by-election. We have shifted the debate on the economy by rejecting the consensus for cuts, and producing a costed, viable economic programme that can protect the vulnerable and low and middle income earners, while stimulating the economy and creating jobs.

This is a small island. The problems faced by citizens throughout the country are the same.

We have a republic only in name.

Sinn Féin is a republican party. We believe that a republic must first and foremost be about the welfare of the community. This includes access to a decent public health service and the protection of vulnerable people such as the old, the sick and those with disabilities.

It also includes at this time of crisis those who are economically vulnerable — including low and middle income earners - a group that is growing in number by the day because of the bad policies pursued by this Government.

As the leader of Sinn Féin, in this time of crisis in our country, I am making a stand with this initiative — a stand for a better, fairer, united Ireland. I believe that things can be turned around. That there is a better way.

Look at the progress that has been made in the north. The peace process has shown what is possible. The North has been transformed for the better. Sinn Féin has led that transformation. We have demonstrated what is possible when people work together in the common good, in the national interest, and for the benefit of all.

Our focus at this time is on tackling the mistakes of this government and providing a real alternative to the Fianna Fáil lite policies of Fine Gael and Labour.

Whether it is charting a way out of conflict or striving to rebuild the economy, Sinn Féin is about improving the quality of people's lives.

This must be the guide for the reconstruction of Ireland in the years ahead.

I intend to lead from the front.

The people of Ireland face enormous challenges at this time. But we are no mean people and I am confident that with clear headed leadership and sound economic policies we can rebuild the economy and return prosperity.

I want to pay tribute to Arthur Morgan who, for the past 8 years has been a first class representative for the people of Louth and an outstanding member of Sinn Féin's Dáil team.

I first met Arthur in the H-Blocks of Long Kesh where he was incarcerated for his republican beliefs.

I want to pay tribute to Marian. Without her Arthur could not have played the role that he has done over the years.

He will continue to play an important role in Sinn Féin. His experience and talent will be available to this party in Louth and nationally in the time ahead.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 13, 2010 10:28 AM
To: 'sbwhoeop
Subject: Re: H: FYI, you might want to read this one. Sid

B6

Good for Paul! I look forward to reading it.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 13 10:19:18 2010
Subject: H: FYI, you might want to read this one. Sid

H: FYI. This story headlined the Huffington Post, has more hits and comments than any other piece, and is the number one story on blogs across the web right now. Paul is a researcher at the Sunlight Foundation. Politico, Wash Post and NYT have belatedly followed up on Paul's story but lack a lot of his reporting. Sid http://www.huffingtonpost.com/paul-blumenthal/the-legacy-of-billy-tauzi_b_460358.htmlou <file:///C:/Users/Owner/AppData/Local/Temp/moz-screenshot.png> r request

Paul Blumenthal <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/paul-blumenthal>

Paul Blumenthal <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/paul-blumenthal>

http://www.huffingtonpost.com/paul-blumenthal/the-legacy-of-billy-tauzi_b_460358.html

Posted: February 12, 2010 01:28 PM
BIO <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/paul-blumenthal/#blogger_bio>

The Legacy of Billy Tauzin: The White House-PhRMA Deal <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/paul-blumenthal/the-legacy-of-billy-tauzi_b_460358.html>

For more research like this, visit the Sunlight Foundation's blog <http://blog.sunlightfoundation.com/> .

More than a million spectators gathered before the Capitol on a frosty January afternoon to witness the inauguration of Barack Obama, who promised in his campaign to change Washington's mercenary culture of lobbyists, special interest influence and backroom deals. But within a few months of being sworn in, the President and his top aides were sitting down with leaders from the pharmaceutical industry to hash out a deal that they thought would make health care reform possible.
Over the following months, pharmaceutical industry lobbyists and executives met with top White House aides dozens of times to hammer out a deal that would secure industry support for the administration's health care reform agenda in exchange for the White House abandoning key elements of the president's promises to reform the pharmaceutical industry. They flooded Congress with campaign contributions, and hired dozens of former Capitol Hill insiders to push their case. How they did it--pieced together from news accounts, disclosure forms including lobbying reports and Federal Election Commission records, White House visitor logs and the schedule Sen. Max Baucus releases voluntarily <http://wiki.opencongress.org/wiki/Max_Baucus/Schedule> --is a testament to how ingrained the grip of special interests remains in Washington.

In the 2008 campaign, Obama declared his intention to include all stakeholders as he sought to reform the nation's health care system, but also supported key Democratic health reform policies <http://www.barackobama.com/2007/06/16/obarna_says_drug_plan_could_sav.php> . Among these were several that targeted the pharmaceutical industry: Allowing re-importation of drugs from first world countries with lower drug prices and providing Medicare with negotiating authority over prescription drug prices in the recently enacted Part D program. These weren't just promises, Obama had already voted for both of them as a senator in 2007. (Roll Call Vote 132 <http://www.senate.gov/legislative/LIS/roll_call_lists/roll_call_vote_cfm.cfm?congress=110&session=1&vote=00132> and Roll Call Vote 150 <http://www.senate.gov/legislative/LIS/roll_call_lists/roll_call_vote_cfm.cfm?congress=110&session=1&vote=00150> .)
Set to carry out this agenda were two Capitol Hill veterans, schooled in the monied Washington culture, chief of staff Rahm Emanuel <http://www.nytimes.com/2009/08/16/us/politics/16emanuel.html?_r=1> and deputy chief of staff Jim Messina <http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2009/02/20/AR2009022003853.html> . Emanuel was a former fundraiser, Clinton administration official, investment banker and member of the Democratic leadership in Congress. Messina was the former campaign manager and chief of staff to the powerful Senate Finance Committee chairman Max Baucus. Both were known for their unparalleled legislative abilities.
Because of Obama's decision to develop a plan operating through the legislative process, members of Congress also played key roles. Early on, the pharmaceutical companies were told to deal directly with Senate Finance Committee chairman Max Baucus <http://www.nytimes.com/2009/08/06/health/policy/06insure.html> . Baucus would be the vehicle for the deal worked out behind the scenes by the White House and PhRMA.
Central to this effort was PhRMA president, CEO and top lobbyist Billy Tauzin, a longtime Democratic member of Congress who switched party affiliations after Republicans gained control of Congress in 1994. By switching parties Tauzin was able to maintain his influence and even rose to be Chairman of the House Committee on Energy & Commerce. Tauzin became the poster child of Washington's mercenary culture. He crafted a bill to provide prescription drug access to Medicare recipients, one that provided major concessions to the pharmaceutical industry. Medicare would not be able to negotiate for lower prescription drug costs and reimportation of drugs from first world countries would not be allowed. A few months after the bill passed, Tauzin announced that he was retiring from Congress and would be taking a job helming PhRMA for a salary of $2 million.
Tauzin's job change became fodder for a campaign ad that then presidential candidate Barack Obama ran in the spring of 2008 simply titled "Billy <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NCRO0g9CfAw> ." It featured the candidate, sleeves rolled up, talking to a salon of gasping Americans about the ways of Washington. "The pharmaceutical industry wrote into the prescription drug plan that Medicare could not negotiate with drug companies. And you know what, the chairman of the committee, who pushed the law through, went to work for the pharmaceutical industry making $2 million a year." The screen fades to black to inform the viewer that, "Barack Obama is the only candidate who refuses Washington lobbyist money," while the candidate continues his lecture, "Imagine that. That's an example of the same old game playing in Washington. You know, I don't want to learn how to play the game better, I want to put an end to the game playing."
Aiding PhRMA in their outreach to Congress would be a squadron of lobbyists to push their health care reform priorities. Over the course of 2009, the drug industry trade group spent over $28 million <http://www.opensecrets.org/lobby/clientsum.php?lname=Pharmaceutical+Rsrch+%26+Mfrs+of+America&year=2009> on in house and hired lobbyists. Aside from PhRMA's massive in-house lobbying operation, the trade group hired 48 outside lobbying firms. The total number of lobbyists working for PhRMA in 2009 reached 165. Some 137 of those 165 lobbyists representing PhRMA were former employees of either the legislative or executive branches. Of these dozens were former congressional staffers including two former chiefs of staff to Max Baucus.
According to data compiled by the Center for Responsive Politics, drug makers contributed huge sums to congressional campaign committees <http://www.opensecrets.org/industries/indus.php?ind=H04> during the same period--from January to the end of October (4th quarter numbers are still being totaled), industry political action committees, employees and their family members flooded lawmakers with over $8 million. Those contributions tilted heavily to Democrats over Republicans by a 57 to 42 percent margin--the first time in any election cycle going back to 1990, the first year that the Center for Responsive Politics began tracking industry giving, that Democrats were so favored. Given their majorities on Capitol Hill, and the new President's intention to reform America's health care system, the new tilt was perhaps not surprising.

***

On March 5, the White House held a meeting with major health care industry leaders <http://www.pbs.org/newshour/updates/health/jan-june09/healthcare_03-05.html> to try to bring them to the table and see what could be done to gain their support. In attendance were Billy Tauzin, president, CEO and top lobbyist for PhRMA, Pfizer CEO Jeff Kindler, America's Health Care Plans (AHIP) Chairman Karen Ignani, Tom Donohue of the Chamber of Commerce and Robert Wood Johnson Foundations' Risa Lavizzomourey. A day before the White House meeting Tauzin appeared on CNBC <http://business.theatlantic.com/2009/03/big_pharmas_top_lobbyist_said_what.php> touting health care reform and promising to work closely with the Obama administration. In the interview he touted it as an "optimistic plan", acknowledging that the industry did have a few problems but was glad to have a chance to discuss these. Some were <http://business.theatlantic.com/2009/03/big_pharmas_top_lobbyist_said_what.php> caught dumb-founded <http://corner.nationalreview.com/post/?q=NjQxZjZhYTc0ZjM2MDAxMjQ1NDY4NzNhZWEzNjg3YmM=http://corner.nationalreview.com/post/?q=NjQxZjZhYTc0ZjM2MDAxMjQ1NDY4NzNhZWEzNjg3YmM=> by this apparent change of heart on behalf of an industry long adverse to health care reforms.

On April 15, Jim Messina and Jon Selib, chief of staff to Senate Finance Committee chairman Max Baucus, convened a meeting at the headquarters of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee (DSCC) with leaders of organized labor and health care groups, including PhRMA. At the meeting, the groups decided to form two nonprofit entities to promote reform efforts, Healthy Economy Now and Americans for Stable Quality Care, that would be almost entirely funded by PhRMA <http://www.politico.com/news/stories/1009/28362.html> . The two groups spent $24 million on their advertising campaigns; the contract to produce and place ads went to White House Senior Advisor David Axelrod's former firm <http://www.politico.com/news/stories/0809/26240.html> , AKPD, which owed Axelrod $2 million.

In the next month, CEO's from pharmaceutical companies would meet with Baucus and administration officials at least four times. These talks preceded a major public event at the White House, one critical to its strategy to promote health care reform. On May 11, PhRMA and other trade industry groups pledged cost cutting measures <http://cnnmoney.printthis.clickability.com/pt/cpt?action=cpt&title=Health+care+groups+propose+$2+trillion+in+cost+controls+-+May.+11,+2009&expire=-1&urlID=403007811&fb=Y&url=http://money.cnn.com/2009/05/11/news/economy/healthcare_reformproposals/index.htm&partnerID=2200> to the White House that would save, they claimed, upwards of $2 trillion over the next decade. President Obama announced the deal in the State Dining Room, flanked by leaders of the various trade groups; the administration followed up with a media blitz in the press and on the White House Web site <http://www.whitehouse.gov/blog/Coming-Together-Bringing-Down-Costs/> .

The next day, Healthy Economy Now's PhRMA funded ad campaign ran their first advertisement <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=n0KuoAV6yt0> in support of the health care reform process calling for the government to finally "fix" the nation's health care cost problems. While many elements of the $2 trillion cost cutting pledge fell apart, the drug industry remained committed to the process in the hopes that they could ultimately win out and defeat the provisions they most feared in closed-door meetings with the White House.

The first occurred on June 2. White House visitor logs show PhRMA's top executives, including Tauzin, and industry CEOs met with Sarah Fenn from the White House Office of Health Care Reform. On the same day, the publicly available schedule of Senator Max Baucus shows Tauzin and the same industry CEOs met the Senate Finance Committee chairman. What ultimately resulted from these coordinated meetings would be revealed by Baucus on June 20.

In a press release <http://finance.senate.gov/press/Bpress/2009press/prb062009.pdf> featuring a statement by Tauzin, Baucus revealed that the pharmaceutical industry had accepted $80 billion in cost cutting measures to be included in the Senate Finance Committee version of the bill. According to news reports <http://dyn.politico.com/printstory.cfm?uuid=BD18F267-18FE-70B2-A8F5960026D227DF> , Baucus initially proposed $100 billion in cost cutting measures, but the executives and lobbyists meeting on June 2 were able to win the lower figure.

The terms of the initial cost-cutting deal included $30 billion go directly towards closing the "donut hole" in Medicare prescription drug coverage. The "donut hole" is a term for the gap in coverage that occurs within the Medicare prescription drug coverage. For those purchasing prescription drugs through the Medicare program coverage cuts off at $2,700 spent and does not pick back up again until $6,154 is spent by the participant. The amount proposed in the deal, 50 percent coverage for drugs within the coverage gap, however, would not completely close the "donut hole."

In Baucus' press release, Tauzin is quoted as saying, "This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity and, working together, we can make this hope for a better tomorrow a reality today." This "once-in-a-lifetime" opportunity also extended to the pharmaceutical industry's ability to blunt the long-term Democratic agenda of lowering prescription drug prices through Medicare negotiations, re-importation and quicker release of generics onto the market. After making such a grand statement of support through cost cutting proposals it was time for the pharmaceutical industry to finally force the White House and Democrats to take certain chips off the table.
Baucus proceeded with a plan to convene a bipartisan group <http://www.nytimes.com/2009/07/28/us/politics/28baucus.html> in an effort to craft the bill desired by the White House. These participants included Democrats Kent Conrad and Jeff Bingaman and Republicans Chuck Grassley, Mike Enzi and Olympia Snowe. Baucus' decision and the need to solidify deals with groups like the pharmaceutical industry - which were reliant on Baucus producing a bill - slowed down the legislative process making it impossible for Congress to meet the White House's announced August recess deadline <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/2009/07/21/obama-defends-august-dead_n_241755.html> for passing health care reform.
Soon after, PhRMA's big guns and industry lobbyists paid the White House another visit on July 7 and this time met with Rahm Emanuel and Jim Messina (Baucus' chief of staff Jon Selib is also listed in White House visitor logs for this meeting). In August, The Huffington Post's <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/2009/08/13/internal-memo-confirms-bi_n_258285.html> Ryan Grim reported on an internal memo that was drafted at that meeting that outlined the policies that would not be allowed into any final version of health care reform. These included Medicare prescription drug negotiations, drug re-importation, and the lowering of prices for drugs available through Medicare Part D and Part B. The deal would be $80 billion in cost cutting and absolutely no more.
***
While the $80 billion deal was cut with Baucus' committee, other congressional committees continued to mark-up their own versions of health care reform without the knowledge that the White House was relying on Baucus to produce the final product. In the House of Representatives, the House Energy & Commerce Committee leveled a direct threat to the $80 billion deal. Energy & Commerce Chair Henry Waxman sought to include all of the provisions that PhRMA had gotten the White House and Baucus to cut out of the reform bill. These included drug reimportation, Medicare negotiating power and speedier release of generics to the market. According to previous analysis of the measures proposed by the committee, these measures would have totaled hundreds of billions in cost cuts, far exceeding the $80 billion cap agreed to by the White House, Baucus and PhRMA.
The cost cutting measures passed in the Energy & Commerce bill spooked the board of PhRMA, which included all of the CEOs involved in the deal-cutting meetings with the White House and Baucus. The board pressured Tauzin to go public with the deal to ensure that the White House would recognize it and not renege. On August 4, the Los Angeles Times <http://articles.latimes.com/2009/aug/04/nation/na-healthcare-pharma4> , in an exclusive report, featured quotes from Tauzin claiming that a deal between the White House and PhRMA existed and that, as Tauzin put it, "The White House blessed it." Tom Hamburger wrote in the article, "For his part, Tauzin said he had not only received the White House pledge to forswear Medicare drug price bargaining, but also a separate promise not to pursue another proposal Obama supported during the campaign: importing cheaper drugs from Canada or Europe."
The White House's Jim Messina later confirmed Tauzin's claim, stating, "The president encouraged this approach ... He wanted to bring all the parties to the table to discuss health insurance reform."
Democratic lawmakers were furious. Rep. Raul Grijalva, chairman of the Progressive Caucus, asked <http://www.nytimes.com/2009/08/06/health/policy/06insure.html> , "Are industry groups going to be the ones at the table who get the first big piece of the pie and we just fight over the crust?"
***
On September 7, Baucus' bill made a private circulation on the Hill; pharmaceutical industry cost-cutting did not exceed $80 billion. Five days later, the New York Times <http://prescriptions.blogs.nytimes.com/2009/09/12/drug-makers-plan-to-back-baucus-plan-with-ad-dollars/> reported that PhRMA planned to spend up to $150 million in an advertising blitz in support of Baucus' bill. The Times noted that the ad spending "...would be a follow-up to the deal that drug makers struck in June with Mr. Baucus and the White House." On September 16, Baucus released the full text of his legislation <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/2009/09/16/health-care-bill-baucus-s_n_288218.html> to the public.
The White House, PhRMA and Baucus still had to fight a few battles to keep the deal intact. The key amendment targeting the PhRMA deal in committee mark-up came from Sen. Bill Nelson from Florida, which has one of the largest Medicare participant populations in the nation. The pull of constituent needs clearly put Bill Nelson into a position to push for further cost cutting in Medicare prescription drug pricing. His target: closing the "donut hole" completely. Nelson claimed that his amendment would generate $106 billion in revenue <http://www.politico.com/livepulse/0909/Nelson_PhRMA_amendment_fails.html> , or from PhRMA's perspective increase their cost-cutting to $186 billion. That would be unacceptable to PhRMA, to Baucus, to the White House and to the pharmaceutical industry who had made the deal. Other Senate Democrats, Tom Carper and Robert Menendez voted with Republicans and Baucus on the committee to defeat the amendment <http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2009/sep/24/panel-fails-overturn-white-house-deal-drugmakers/> . It is little surprise the Carper's Delaware is home to AstraZeneca and Menendez' New Jersey is home to Merck and Bristol-Myers-Squibb, all of which lobbied for the $80 billion cap.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid introduced the final bill, with the cap in place, on November 19. Debate began on Dec. 3, and with it come one more attempt by members to change the terms of the deal. Senator Byron Dorgan introduced an amendment that would allow for drug re-importation, but as the date for voting drew near, the Federal Drug Administration (FDA) released a letter <http://thehill.com/homenews/senate/71307-fda-opposes-senate-drug-importation-amendmen> objecting to the proposal that echoed pharmaceutical industry talking points: "...as currently written, the resulting structure would be logistically challenging to implement and resource intensive. In addition, there are significant safety concerns." Dorgan's amendment was defeated <http://www.politico.com/livepulse/1209/BREAKING_Senate_rejects_Dorgan_amendment.html> with numerous Democrats previously in support of reimportation switching to "no" votes.

On Christmas Eve, the bill passed the Senate with the PhRMA deal fully intact.

***

New Year's Eve passed with no further action on health care reform. Public opinion regarding the health care reform bill had been slipping throughout 2009. It reached a fulcrum in the special election to replace the deceased senator Ted Kennedy in Massachusetts on January 19, 2010. Newly minted senator Scott Brown campaigned that he would be the senator to provide Republicans with the votes to filibuster the final health care reform bill. Democrats ran for cover. Despite having the largest majorities of any party since the 1970s, Democrats put the brakes on their agenda, particularly health care reform.

In the end, the pharmaceutical industry's support for health care reform would be left up in the air . After spending $100 million in advertising in support of legislation that Tauzin and key executives hoped would be a windfall for the pharmaceutical industry, the legislative process had flat-lined. In February, the board of PhRMA, split over the deal cut by Tauzin, pushed Tauzin to resign his post <http://thecaucus.blogs.nytimes.com/2010/02/11/health-reform-in-limbo-top-drug-lobbyist-quits/?partner=rss&emc=rss> .

In an interview with Diane Sawyer <http://www.politico.com/livepulse/0110/Obama_concedes_talks_raised_legitimate_concerns.html> , President Obama owed up to failures in the process of passing health care reform, "[T]he health care debate as it unfolded legitimately raised concerns not just among my opponents, but also amongst supporters that we just don't know what's going on ... And it's an ugly process and it looks like there are a bunch of back room deals."

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 24, 2010 10:39 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) US House panel approves China currency bill

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-China; NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-H
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Fri Sep 24 10:35:51 2010
Subject: (Reuters) US House panel approves China currency bill

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - A U.S. congressional panel, in a move likely to increase trade tensions with China, approved a bill that allows the United States to slap duties on goods from countries with fundamentally undervalued currencies.

The House of Representatives Ways and Means Committee backed the legislation on a voice vote, clearing the way for the full House to take up the measure next week. It may never become law, however, as it faces an uncertain future in the Senate.

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 12/28/2025

RELEASE IN PART B1,B5,1.4(D), B6

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 28, 2010 2:06 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Meeting with the Finance Today

[redacted] he's meeting with Amb Moriarty tomw [redacted] B5

----- Original Message -----
From: [redacted] 1.4(D)
To: Verveer, Melanne S B1
Sent: Tue Dec 28 11:43:49 2010 B6
Subject: Meeting with the Finance Today

1.4(D)
B1

Dear Melanne

[redacted]

Sent wirelessly via BlackBerry

1.4(D)
B1

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: aclb <
Sent: Friday, September 24, 2010 10:49 AM
To: H
Cc: 'jake.sullivan
Subject: Re: Info for you

Hi Hillary. Just spent 3 hours with BB. Ready to speak when convenient but should do it on secure line. Best Tony

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: aclb
Cc: 'jake.sullivan <jake.sullivan
Sent: Fri Sep 24 05:16:14 2010
Subject: Fw: Info for you

Tony---

Message delivered. Pls read all the way down. Also, I'm copying Jake Sullivan because I've asked him to arrange a call w you once you land so you can be fully briefed before seeing BN. We are on a fast moving train changing direction every hour but determined to reach our destination.

Thx again for jumping into action this week. It's great having you on the team. All the best, H

----- Original Message -----
From: Lynn Forester de Rothschild
To: H
Sent: Thu Sep 23 23:58:37 2010
Subject: Re: Info for you

Hillary,
We of course understand and thank you for personally reaching out to us. It is a big loss for the weekend but as we know it does not add up to a hill of beans. You are the best, and we remain your biggest fans.
Sweet dreams and Godspeed with everything you are doing.
Oxoxo
Lynn

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Lynn Forester de Rothschild
Sent: Thu Sep 23 22:30:45 2010
Subject: Info for you

Lynn,

I was trying to reach you to tell you and Teddy that I asked Tony Blair to go to Israel as part of our full court press on keeping the Middle East negotiations going. He told me that he had a commitment in Aspen w you two and the conference, but after we talked, he decided to go and asked me to tell you. He is very sorry, obviously, but I'm grateful that he accepted my request. I hope you all understand and give him a raincheck.

If you were interested, he might be able to satellite in if you have the technology available.

He should land around 5am Aspen time. Let me know what penance I owe you. And pls explain to Teddy. As ever, H

DISCLAIMER

WARNING – This email is only intended for the person to whom or entity to which it is addressed and, together with any files transmitted with it, is confidential and may also be privileged. If you are not the intended recipient, you must not copy, forward, use or rely on any part of it or disclose its contents to any person. If you have received it in error, please notify our system manager on +44 20 7647 7782 and delete all copies immediately.

Except where this email is sent in the usual course of our business, the views expressed in this email are those of the sender and not those of The Office of Tony Blair.

The Office of Tony Blair accepts no responsibility for software viruses and you should check for viruses before opening any attachments. Internet communications are not secure and therefore The Office of Tony Blair does not provide any guarantee or warranty that this email or any attachments shall remain confidential.

The Office of Tony Blair is a trading name of Windrush Ventures Limited and Windrush Ventures No.3 LP. Windrush Ventures Limited is a limited company registered in England and Wales with registered number 06397276. Its registered office is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL.

Windrush Ventures No. 3 LP is a limited partnership registered in England and Wales with registered number LP012665. Its registered office is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL. The members of Windrush Ventures No.3 LP are BDBCO No.819 Limited and Windrush Ventures No.2 LLP and the address at which each of these can be served is 50 Broadway, London SW1H 0BL.

This email may relate to or be sent from other members of the Windrush group.

---

This email has been scanned by the MessageLabs Email Security System.
For more information please visit http://www.messagelabs.com/email

---

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, December 28, 2010 7:15 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: From Arturo

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Valenzuela, Arturo A
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Tue Dec 28 17:11:58 2010
Subject: From Arturo

B5

Happy New Year!!!

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 13, 2010 10:31 AM
To: 'cb[redacted] B6
Subject: Re: Get well soon

Who is and doing what?

----- Original Message -----
From: Cherie Blair [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 13 10:30:33 2010
Subject: RE: Get well soon

We are all in Oman!

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: 13 February 2010 14:35
To: Cherie Blair
Subject: Re: Get well soon

Thanks for your concern. [redacted] I'm on the way to Qatar and Saudi Arabia. I will see the Sheikha in Doha and learn more about her work. I hope to see you soon for a catchup visit. All the best.

----- Original Message -----
From: Cherie Blair [redacted]
To: Clinton, Bill [redacted]
Cc: H
Sent: Fri Feb 12 15:34:07 2010
Subject: Get well soon

[redacted]

Cherie Blair

[redacted]

This message has been scanned by MailController - www.MailController.altohiway.com

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 12:14 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Israeli official: Hamas rockets can reach Tel Aviv

---

From: Moore, Anna W
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_CMS; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sun Nov 14 12:02:03 2010
Subject: (AP) Israeli official: Hamas rockets can reach Tel Aviv

TEL AVIV (AP) – A senior Israeli intelligence official says Hamas has rockets with a range of 50 miles, putting the coastal metropolis of Tel Aviv within range of its launchers. The official blames Egypt, saying it is not doing enough to stem smuggling through a network of tunnels along the relatively short border between its Sinai desert and the Gaza Strip. The official said most of the tunnels were concentrated in an area no longer than 2.5 miles. "Egypt can stop all this smuggling of weapons within 24 hours if they want to do it," the official said November 14, speaking on condition of anonymity under Israeli security regulations. The official said, however, that intelligence cooperation with Egypt was otherwise effective.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 29, 2010 11:15 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Ynet: Erekat: PA to ask UN to recognize state soon

FYI – see below. Dennis is on a plane today but we will talk secure this evening.

From: Hoyer, Kurt J
To: Cunningham, James B; Goldberger, Thomas H; Silverman, Robert J; Burnett, David R; Hale, David M; Olsin-Windecker, Hilary S; Levin, Jan; Cyril, Todd A; Harvey, Michael (WBGAZA/DIR); [redacted] B6
Cc: Otto, Jeffrey L; Baldwin, Virginia E; Brooks, Judith A; NEA-Press-DL
Sent: Wed Dec 29 07:59:18 2010
Subject: FW: Ynet: Erekat: PA to ask UN to recognize state soon

Erekat: PA to ask UN to recognize state soon

Chief negotiator says Palestinians will submit request as soon as Bosnia take over Security Council presidency. 'Israeli government is witnessing an international isolation that it hasn't witnessed before,' he says

The Palestinians will ask the United Nations Security Council to unilaterally recognize an independent Palestinian state within the 1967 borders early next month, chief negotiator Saeb Erekat was quoted as saying by the Maan News Agency Wednesday.

Speaking to reporters in the West Bank town of Jericho, Erekat said the Palestinians are waiting for Bosnia to take the presidency of the Security Council before submitting the proposal.

"The Israeli government is witnessing an international isolation that it hasn't witnessed before," Erekat added. "And this is due to the efforts exerted by the Palestinian leadership and by President Mahmoud Abbas."

According to the report, Erekat expressed hope that the US would not veto the proposal, and also called for South Korea, Japan, New Zealand and Australia to unilaterally recognize a Palestinian state.

Brazil, Argentina, Ecuador and Bolivia have all recognized a Palestinian stare over the past few weeks.

The Palestinians have recently announced their plan to introduce a draft resolution at the UN Security Council condemning Jewish settlements in the West Bank.

On Friday the London-based Arabic daily Al Hayat quoted Erekat as saying "the negotiations (with Israel) are over. Now is the time for decisions, not negotiations."

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Lauren Jiloty
Sent: Friday, September 24, 2010 11:39 AM
To: H
Subject: RE:

MS,
The Argentina desk is working this issue on your behalf. They will be in touch with the sender of the letter (Mr. Ramer in California). The letter asks you to enter into a bilateral agreement with Argentina in order to rectify a Locally Employed Staffer's (in Argentina) personal tax predicament. I'm happy to call Brian too, if you like.

Lauren

From: HDR22@clintonemail.com
To: Laurenjiloty
Date: Tue, 21 Sep 2010 06:49:13 -0400
Subject: Fw: Fwd:

Pls check on status of this issue. I had you print for me and then asked that someone follow up. Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Brian Greenspun
To: H
Sent: Thu Sep 09 03:00:17 2010
Subject: Fwd:

Hi Hillary,
Once again I am imposing on our friendship to get to you a matter that is important to my brother-in-law Bruce Ramer and, therefore , important to me. I am enclosing his note to me just so you can read how he really talks! I know his relationship with his friend and can attest to the personal nature of his appeal. Thank you for whatever attention you give to this which, by my understanding, seems to be a simple matter of justice. Alas, nothing is simple. All the best, Brian

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Bruce M. Ramer
To: "Brian Greenspun"

Brian, I so appreciate your willingness to get my letter (attached, with attachments) into Hilary's hands.

This is purely an act of love for my friend As I say in the letter to her, I am N OT acting as an attorney (or for any organization--see end of my letter), but only for a friend who is getting screwed (not the terminology of the letter).

You are more than welcome to read all of the enclosures. Naturally.
The attachments to this email should be: Ramer letter to Secretary Clinton, with an attachment of the letter from tax lawyer (and three official attachments thereto--a letter from the IRS to the Argentine Embassy, a revenue ruling and a certification issued this year by the State Department.

My letter contains a brief summary of the situation and argument.

This is, as I said, very meaningful to me. Thank you for helping in an indispensible way.

Love to the Greenspun clan. Bruce

--Forwarded Message Attachment--

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 13, 2010 11:40 AM
To: 'sbwhoeop[redacted] B6
Subject: Re:

Ok.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop[redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 13 10:51:34 2010
Subject:

[redacted] had confided in Clemons his version of what happened to him. I'll tell you when you return from your trip.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 12:24 PM
To: H
Subject: Dennis R

Suggests that you offer the possibility of you signing the slightly modified offer.

The one thing we have to be careful of is the criticism that we are spending 1.7 billion for 3 months. We have good answers, but that's the criticism.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 29, 2010 11:16 AM
To: H
Subject: FW: Erekat: PA has no plans to request UN recognition of state

Easy come, easy go. See below

From: Sachar, Alon (NEA/IPA)
To: Sachar, Alon (NEA/IPA); Hale, David M; Rudman, Mara; Hof, Frederic C; 'jmprince [redacted] Sullivan, Jacob J; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Walles, Jacob; [redacted] Djerassi, Alexander M; Jacoby, Julia I; Reed, Julia G B6
Subject: Erekat: PA has no plans to request UN recognition of state

Jerusalem Post

Erekat: PA has no plans to request UN recognition of state
By JPOST.COM STAFF

Chief Palestinian negotiator denies reports that he said PA would request the UN Security Council unilaterally recognize Palestinian state along 1967 borders, says PA will instead demand criticism of settlements.

Chief Palestinian Negotiator Saeb Erekat on Wednesday denied saying that the Palestinian Authority plans to request that the United Nations Security Council unilaterally recognize a Palestinian state along 1967 borders, Israel Radio reported.

Erekat said that the Palestinians have no intention of presenting such a proposal in the near future and that the earlier report by Palestinian news agency Ma'an was erroneous.

He explained that the PA plans on demanding that the UN Security Council criticize settlement building in the West Bank.

According to the earlier report, Erekat had said that the PA plan to present a proposal to the UN Security Council on the unilateral recognition of a Palestinian state. He was also quoted as expressing hope that the US would not attempt to act against the PA's attempts and also called for South Korea, Japan, New Zealand and Australia to unilaterally recognize a Palestinian state.

The PA negotiator was speaking at a meeting of Palestinian security officials in the town of Jericho.

Erekat had added that PA President Mahmoud Abbas contacted international and Hamas officials in an effort to prevent an Israeli attack on the Gaza Strip.

After Erekat denied the report, a senior official told Israel Radio that the negotiator's remarks prove that the Palestinians are not interested in negotiations but are interested in forcing solutions.

The official said that the US will operate covertly to eliminate settlement criticism from the UN Security Council's agenda. If they do not succeed, it may be possible to veto the proposal or to present a counter-proposal, the official added.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Yigal Palmor said the Palestinian efforts do little to promote peace.

"By choosing unilateralism over direct talks, the Palestinians are declaring that they renounce peace altogether," he said. "The Palestinians are choosing not to renew negotiations and are doing all they can to score minor points. They are trying everything except to talk."

From: Sachar, Alon (NEA/IPA)
Sent: Wednesday, December 29, 2010 9:08 AM
To: Hale, David M; Rudman, Mara; Hof, Frederic C; 'jmprince[redacted]; Sullivan, Jacob J; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Walles, Jacob; [redacted]; Djerassi, Alexander M; Jacoby, Julia I; Reed, Julia G B6
Subject: Fw: Ynet: Erekat: PA to ask UN to recognize state soon

From: Hale, David M
Sent: Wednesday, December 29, 2010 08:42 AM
To: Sachar, Alon (NEA/IPA)
Subject: Fw: Ynet: Erekat: PA to ask UN to recognize state soon

Be sure people see this.

---

From: Hoyer, Kurt J
To: Cunningham, James B; Goldberger, Thomas H; Silverman, Robert J; Burnett, David R; Hale, David M; Olsin-Windecker, Hilary S; Levin, Jan; Cyril, Todd A; Harvey, Michael (WBGAZA/DIR); [redacted]
Cc: Otto, Jeffrey L; Baldwin, Virginia E; Brooks, Judith A; NEA-Press-DL
Sent: Wed Dec 29 07:59:18 2010
Subject: FW: Ynet: Erekat: PA to ask UN to recognize state soon

Erekat: PA to ask UN to recognize state soon

Chief negotiator says Palestinians will submit request as soon as Bosnia take over Security Council presidency. 'Israeli government is witnessing an international isolation that it hasn't witnessed before,' he says

The Palestinians will ask the United Nations Security Council to unilaterally recognize an independent Palestinian state within the 1967 borders early next month, chief negotiator Saeb Erekat was quoted as saying by the Maan News Agency Wednesday.

Speaking to reporters in the West Bank town of Jericho, Erekat said the Palestinians are waiting for Bosnia to take the presidency of the Security Council before submitting the proposal.

"The Israeli government is witnessing an international isolation that it hasn't witnessed before," Erekat added. "And this is due to the efforts exerted by the Palestinian leadership and by President Mahmoud Abbas."

According to the report, Erekat expressed hope that the US would not veto the proposal, and also called for South Korea, Japan, New Zealand and Australia to unilaterally recognize a Palestinian state.

Brazil, Argentina, Ecuador and Bolivia have all recognized a Palestinian stare over the past few weeks.

The Palestinians have recently announced their plan to introduce a draft resolution at the UN Security Council condemning Jewish settlements in the West Bank.

On Friday the London-based Arabic daily Al Hayat quoted Erekat as saying "the negotiations (with Israel) are over. Now is the time for decisions, not negotiations."

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

This email is UNCLASSIFIED.

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 13, 2010 1:09 PM
To: 'slaughtera@state.gov'
Cc: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Language re arab peace initiative in doha speech

I agree.

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sat Feb 13 12:57:49 2010
Subject: Language re arab peace initiative in doha speech

In keeping w/ email I sent you re my conversation w/ robert wexler and danny abraham, this speech is doing exactly what is needed on our side. To encourage KSA and others to respond, however, B5

AM

---

From: Anne-Marie Slaughter B6
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Sat Feb 13 12:38:59 2010
Subject: m e peace language

The 2002 Arab Peace Initiative was an encouraging[AMS1] step; it is time to renew that spirit today[AMS2] in support of negotiations.

Important and encouraging step; it is time to renew that spirit today and move to specifics.

---

[AMS1]I think we should say "an important and encouraging step" – we want to bolster these guys.

[AMS2]I would say "and move to specifics." I know these are policy calls – I will try to get them cleared higher up.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 13, 2010 1:17 PM
To: 'sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
Subject: Re:

Are you at home?

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 13 10:51:34 2010
Subject:

[redacted] had confided in Clemons his version of what happened to him. I'll tell you when you return from your trip.

RELEASE IN PART
B5,B6

From: jake.sullivar B6
Sent: Friday, September 24, 2010 3:24 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Moratinos/Cuba

Sorry - just seeing. Arturo will see him 1-1 privately at 4 today.
------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'jake.sullivan B6
Subject: Re: Moratinos/Cuba
Sent: Sep 24, 2010 2:33 PM

What happened w this?

----- Original Message -----
From: Jake Sullivan <jake.sullivan B6
To: H
Sent: Thu Sep 23 12:03:03 2010
Subject: Moratinos/Cuba

Cheryl and I B5

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Monday, February 15, 2010 6:26 PM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'; Huma Abedin
Subject: What happened?

Let me know what the outcome is---this is very unfortunate so hope we get it fixed.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: jake.sullivar[redacted] B6
Sent: Friday, September 24, 2010 3:24 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Pls let me know when Dennis and Dan return.

I will - we haven't heard any word.

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'jake.sullivan[redacted]
Subject: Pls let me know when Dennis and Dan return.
Sent: Sep 24, 2010 2:45 PM

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: jake.sullivan
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 12:52 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: Can you send me the final copy of the document from Thursday asapby email?

I don't have it by email. Let me see if Dan does

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'jake.sullivan
Subject: Can you send me the final copy of the document from Thursday asapby email?
Sent: Nov 14, 2010 12:41 PM

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, February 16, 2010 9:57 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: H: FYI: Les Gelb. S

Fyi.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Tue Feb 16 08:39:31 2010
Subject: H: FYI: Les Gelb. S

<http://www.tdbimg.com//image/print_blogs_header.gif?v=7.22>
Replace Rahm
by Leslie H. Gelb
February 15, 2010 | 10:48pm
BS Top - Gelb Get Rid of Rahm <http://www.tdbimg.com/files/2010/02/15/img-bs-top---gelb-get-rid-of-rahm_135707996825.jpg> Kristoffer Tripplaar / SIPA President Obama desperately needs a sweeping staff shakeup to save his presidency. Leslie H. Gelb on why he must reassign Rahm, dump Larry Summers, and get rid of National Security adviser Jim Jones.
The negative, even dismissive, talk about the Obama White House has reached a critical point. The president must change key personnel now. Unless he speedily sets up a new team, he will be reduced to a speechmaker. It's mostly a matter of relocating the Chicago and campaign crowd who surround the Oval Office and inserting people with proven records of getting things done in Washington and the world.
To be fair, it's not clear whether the bad judgments on priorities, practicalities, and steadiness come from Mr. Obama or his White House team. Maybe he overpowers them in discussions, or maybe he gives them a role in policymaking far beyond their experience in that realm. Unless you're there, you don't know. But Mr. Obama is the president, and except for the right-wing crazies, most Americans still recognize his great talents and promise. It is he who's got to be helped. So it is they who've got to go.
It is he who's got to be helped. So it is they who've got to go.
One may quarrel with my sense of urgency here. But it's hard to have a conversation with opinion leaders anywhere—and especially in Washington—that doesn't descend into ripping Obama's White House team. The refrain of complaints is always the same:
• Obama is forever taking strong stances only to backfill and trim. Most recently, he said he did not "begrudge" Wall Streeters their big earnings because that was part of the market system. This, in the face of his saying only a couple of weeks ago that such big bonuses were "shameful."
• Obama doesn't know what's really going on. Regarding the Middle East, he recently said that "I think it is absolutely true that what we did this year didn't produce the kind of breakthrough that we wanted, and if we had anticipated some of these political problems on both sides earlier, we might not have raised expectations as high." He had to be totally out of it not to realize that the Palestinians and Israelis were nowhere close to sitting down with each other and dealing.
• Obama wants to get along with everyone so badly he doesn't recognize real opposition when he sees it—let alone know how to deal with it. He emerges from a meeting with congressional Republican leaders on health-care reform and says he is "an eternal optimist"—when those very same Republican leaders just told the press that they don't see any common ground and believe the administration has to "scrap the bill and start over."
• It's even hard to follow his latest Afghan policy. He calls Afghanistan a "war of necessity" and orders more than 30,000 new troops there, coupled with an announcement that he'll begin withdrawing some of them in a year plus, only to see some of his advisers say he will start withdrawals and some say he won't.

I've scribbled similar points in recent months in The Daily Beast. And last week in The Financial Times, Edward Luce provided <http://www.ft.com/cms/s/0/b6b4700a-10fb-11df-9a9e-00144feab49a.html> a thunderclap on Washington's negative consensus about the incompetence of Obama's Chicago-laden team. Luce named names in the White House, and a number of journalists and bloggers strikingly failed to link to the Luce story. They were said to fear the wrath of the Chicagoans. Steve Clemons, author of The Washington Note, essentially endorsed <http://www.thewashingtonnote.com/archives/2010/02/core_chicago_te/> the Luce finding and slapped his fellow bloggers' wrists for hiding from this issue. The situation is as serious as it was during the Carter administration. There, two very capable political campaigners—Hamilton Jordan and Jody Powell—moved into critical White House positions without knowing very much about doing business in Washington. And they were, quite naturally, too busy to learn. They also added to the "them" versus "us" (Washington insiders and bureaucrats versus the regular guys from Georgia) mentality that plagues most administrations.

The Chicagoans and others "guarding" the president create their own "us versus them" world. It's hard to imagine a policy conversation between the president and the Chicago crowd, since none of them, except Rahm Emanuel, has Washington or policy experience. And there isn't much evidence that they bring in strong-minded outsiders to challenge the president on a regular basis either. The result is an inexperienced president advised by an inexperienced team.

Here are the personnel changes being bruited about in political and policy circles: First, remove Rahm Emanuel as chief of staff and move him to a senior political adviser slot. No one I've talked to believes he has the management skills and discipline to run the White House. But he is a terrific political mind and a fighter and should be given the new job and the time to do his thing. Proven pros who could step right in include the following: Erskine Bowles, president of the University of North Carolina and former Clinton chief of staff; Leon Panetta, now CIA director and formerly White House chief as well under Clinton; Sylvia Mathews, a former deputy chief of staff also under Clinton; and John Podesta, another former Clinton chief who now heads the Center for American Progress. All four are tough and know how to manage.

Replace Lawrence Summers, director of the White House's National Economic Council, with Paul Volcker, the former chairman of the Federal Reserve. Summers is brilliant and highly controversial; he's been beaten up and is said to want out anyway. Volcker has unmatched stature, practical experience, and the courage of a lion. He is the only one now in a position to get down to step-by-step brass tacks on the economy and stop Mr. Obama's weekly gyrations. Others with proven track records who can help as inside or outside advisers are: Stephen Robert, formerly head of Oppenheimer, Vincent Mai, former leader of AEA Investors, and Tom Hill of Blackstone. There are also two economic stars in Washington who'd improve both policymaking and public combat: Sheila Bair, chairwoman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and Elizabeth Warren, chair of the Congressional Oversight Panel. One outside adviser above all would help the president see the economic hard choices ahead: Peter G. Peterson, accomplished businessman and policy head.

David Axelrod, the senior political adviser to the president, needs to concentrate on the next presidential campaign, wherein his expertise lies, and not on domestic and foreign policy, where he is just another smart unknowledgeable voice. Good replacements who do know the politics of Washington would be the aforementioned Podesta; and Tom Daschle, the former Democratic Senate Majority Leader. As for David Plouffe, another senior campaign aide, now in unofficial residence at the White House, he should be lodged in the nearby Executive Office Building. Senior adviser and Chicago buddy Valerie Jarrett is too much a part of the inner circle to move, but she should be given a more limited role in making policy.

Mr. Obama's crowd appears to think that getting things done means his giving another speech. It's nice, but not nearly enough.

Robert Gibbs needs a rest from being press secretary. Let's put it this way: He wasn't born for daily jousts with pithy Republicans. His job calls for memorable and pointed phrases and attacks, not circle-the-wagon circumlocutions. Possible successors? Try Doyle McManus of the L.A. Times, Jake Tapper of ABC News, or Helene Cooper of The New York Times.

Last but not least, James Jones, the National Security Adviser, has to move on. The career Marine was greatly admired and respected as Commandant of the Corps and as NATO's military chief. He handled those duties with great skill. But by wide acclamation inside and outside the White House, he has not emerged as a strategist—perhaps the key requirement of this key position. The person in that job has to pull everything together—laying out achievable objectives and precise plans to dispense carefully packaged carrots and sticks. One Democrat who could step in now, despite his age, is Zbigniew Brzezinski, Jimmy Carter's national-security adviser. He has a first-rate strategic mind—a rare quality—and knows how to deliver results. Obama will need to iron out Zbig's lack of sympathy toward Israel and Russia.

Also available are a boatload of first-class retired diplomats with the judgment and background needed to perform the National Security Council job effectively. They would be greeted with applause both at home and abroad. Try former ambassadors Thomas Pickering, Morton Abramowitz, Frank Wisner, Reginald Bartholomew, and Winston Lord. They have it all. At a minimum, they and others like them should form the core of a group that meets regularly with Obama on strategy.

Yes, many of the pros suggested above have reached their golden years. But 70 and even 80 are the new 60. They all possess the necessary energy, experience and rare skill in delivering results. They are also shovel-ready. As a critical bonus, they could and would mentor the next generation down, a very talented one indeed, to succeed them in two or three years. To lead America and the world, Obama has to grow far beyond his present propensity to treat problems as intellectual puzzles—to collect facts and hear the arguments. The great tasks of governing demand proven intuition in sensing what's achievable, which buttons to push when, how to buy the time for power to take hold, how to make adjustments without flagrantly foolish rhetoric, how to avoid failures that only diminish power, and how to succeed in small as well as large ways. With a team versed in such arts and skills, President Obama and America would succeed.

Leslie H. Gelb, a former New York Times columnist and senior government official, is author of Power Rules: How Common Sense Can Rescue American Foreign Policy <http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0061714542/thedaibea-20> (HarperCollins 2009), a book that shows how to think about and use power in the 21st century. He is president emeritus of the Council on Foreign Relations.

For more of The Daily Beast, become a fan <http://www.facebook.com/thedailybeast> on Facebook and follow <http://twitter.com/thedailybeast> us on Twitter.

For inquiries, please contact The Daily Beast at editorial@thedailybeast.com <mailto:editorial@thedailybeast.com> .

<http://www.tdbimg.com//image/print_footer.gif?v=7.22>

URL: http://www.thedailybeast.com/blogs-and-stories/2010-02-15/replace-rahm/p/

<http://b.scorecardresearch.com/b?c1=2&c2=6433482&c3=&c4=&c5=&c6=&c15=&cv=1.3&cj=1>

RELEASE IN PART B6

---

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 17, 2010 1:59 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Re: General Petraeus

Pls schedule call when I can do this afternoon. I'm on my way back.

----- Original Message -----
From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 17 12:29:14 2010
Subject: RE: General Petraeus

His office just called back again to offer another number that they prefer we use. I've made a note of it here.

[redacted] B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C
Sent: Wednesday, February 17, 2010 12:27 PM
To: 'H'
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: General Petraeus

MS,

General Petraeus just logged a call to you from his liaison office in the Pentagon. He will be there until 4:00 PM today. [redacted] I will add to your grid.

Lauren

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 17, 2010 2:01 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: H: Iran. Sid
Attachments: hrc memo iran 021710.docx; hrc memo iran 021710.docx

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop [redacted] B6
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 17 08:42:05 2010
Subject: H: Iran. Sid

CONFIDENTIAL

February 17, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Iran, Saudi

Had dinner last night (Tuesday, February 16) with Joschka Fischer. We had an interesting conversation on Iran and Saudi Arabia, among other things. (As you know Fischer is now director of the Nabucco pipeline project.) On Iran, harsh, targeted sanctions are absolutely necessary, but are most effective diplomatically when always coupled with an offer to negotiate. The iron fist in the velvet glove approach achieves several objectives: According to Fischer's intelligence, Ahmanijehad wished some negotiated settlement but was blocked. The regime has splits at the top. Perhaps true, perhaps not. But constantly pushing negotiations alongside sanctions puts additional pressure on internal divisions, whatever they are. Extending an open hand while brandishing a stick closes diplomatic and political room to maneuver for Iran. Its refusal to accept the open hand justifies application of the stick. Even when sanctions are enforced it always remains useful to say another way is open. The damage done to Iran is therefore the result of its own choice. This approach also aids the opposition. A purely condign sanctions strategy can contribute to the regime's will to punish and tighten repression. Talking of regime change, of course, undermines the cause of regime change. It is a gift to the regime. The opposition is a new factor in the Iran equation that must be taken into account on the political and moral level. Pushed to the wall, the regime may feel compelled to repress, which might involve thousands or tens of thousands of political killings. On Saudi Arabia, Fischer points out that if Iran develops nuclear weaponry the Saudis already have their own bomb. The Saudis invested in Pakistan's nuclear weaponry partly for this eventuality; that's their bomb in reserve.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: Strobe Talbott
Sent: Wednesday, December 29, 2010 4:01 PM
To: H
Cc: Jake Sullivan (DOS); Cheryl Mills (State); Dan Feldman; Huma Abedin
Subject: following up.....

Thanks so much for the chance to talk. I've relayed all your answers/suggestions to George Stevens, and we'll proceed thus on all points. As for the reception, it'll be upstairs at the Kennedy Center, starting at 4:30.

Again, Happy New Year to you, Bill, Chelsea and Mark — and to your terrific team.

Strobe

==========

Strobe Talbott
President, The Brookings Institution
1775 Massachusetts Avenue NW
Washington, DC 20036
202.797.6200

==========

RELEASE IN FULL

CONFIDENTIAL

February 17, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Iran, Saudi

Had dinner last night (Tuesday, February 16) with Joschka Fischer. We had an interesting conversation on Iran and Saudi Arabia, among other things. (As you know Fischer is now director of the Nabucco pipeline project.) On Iran, harsh, targeted sanctions are absolutely necessary, but are most effective diplomatically when always coupled with an offer to negotiate. The iron fist in the velvet glove approach achieves several objectives: According to Fischer's intelligence, Ahmanijehad wished some negotiated settlement but was blocked. The regime has splits at the top. Perhaps true, perhaps not. But constantly pushing negotiations alongside sanctions puts additional pressure on internal divisions, whatever they are. Extending an open hand while brandishing a stick closes diplomatic and political room to maneuver for Iran. Its refusal to accept the open hand justifies application of the stick. Even when sanctions are enforced it always remains useful to say another way is open. The damage done to Iran is therefore the result of its own choice. This approach also aids the opposition. A purely condign sanctions strategy can contribute to the regime's will to punish and tighten repression. Talking of regime change, of course, undermines the cause of regime change. It is a gift to the regime. The opposition is a new factor in the Iran equation that must be taken into account on the political and moral level. Pushed to the wall, the regime may feel compelled to repress, which might involve thousands or tens of thousands of political killings. On Saudi Arabia, Fischer points out that if Iran develops nuclear weaponry the Saudis already have their own bomb. The Saudis invested in Pakistan's nuclear weaponry partly for this eventuality; that's their bomb in reserve.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 3:15 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (Reuters) Obama praises Netanyahu on Israel settlement freeze

From: Moore, Anna W
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_CMS; SES-O_Shift-II; SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Sun Nov 14 14:57:54 2010
Subject: (Reuters) Obama praises Netanyahu on Israel settlement freeze

WASHINGTON (Reuters) – U.S. President Barack Obama November 14 welcomed Israel's decision to temporarily freeze West Bank settlement building. "I think it is promising," Obama told reporters upon arriving in the United States after a trip to Asia. "I commend (Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin) Netanyahu," Obama said, adding, "It signals he is serious."

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, February 17, 2010 8:18 PM
To: 'FuchsMH@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Financial Times interview with Podesta

Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Fuchs, Michael H <FuchsMH@state.gov>
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>; Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wed Feb 17 20:16:35 2010
Subject: Financial Times interview with Podesta

Madam Secretary,

Jake mentioned that you would like to see a copy of John Podesta's recent interview with the Financial Times. A transcript of the interview has not been posted yet, but I have included here the Financial Times article about the interview. Please just let me know if you would like any further information on this.

Best,

Mike

Former aide urges Obama to regain 'political narrative'

By Edward Luce in Washington

Published: February 15 2010

Barack Obama, US president, has lost control of the political narrative and needs to make more use of his cabinet in order to regain it, says John Podesta, the man who headed the president's transition team.

"My friends in the White House would agree with this, that they lost the narrative," Mr Podesta said in an interview for View from DC, the Financial Times' video series from Washington. "Clearly that needs not one speech once in a while: it needs, I think, to be constantly reinforced. And not just by the president, but by his entire team . . . He's got a terrific cabinet. Use it. Get out into the country and use it."

Mr Podesta, who was also a chief of staff to Bill Clinton, drew parallels with the former president's difficulties in his first two years, which culminated in the 1994 Republican takeover of Congress following the failure of healthcare reform.

When asked whether the failure of this latest attempt at healthcare reform would result in a similar electoral "massacre" for the Democratic party at the mid-term elections in November, he said: "I subscribe to that view."

Mr Podesta founded the Centre for American Progress, Washington's largest liberal think-tank, which was often described as a "government-in-exile" during the years George W. Bush was in the White House. He said Mr Obama had three options with healthcare reform. First, try to enact the whole thing by using the budget reconciliation process, which would enable it to pass with 51 votes. The Democrats lost their controlling 60-seat super-majority last month in a election defeat in Massachusetts.

The second would be to pass a watered down bill with Republican support. The third would be to abandon the attempt, as Mr Clinton did in 1993.

Mr Podesta, whom Mr Obama still regularly consults, said there was still a better than 50:50 chance of getting reform through. "The worst option among the three is doing nothing, and so they're going to have to figure out which track is viable," he said. "It may mean doing it with only Democratic votes. But if that is such, then so be it."

He painted a fairly bleak view of the overall health of US politics. "It sucks," he said. Pointing to a strategy of obstructionism by Republican lawmakers, he said: "I think the president is trying to re-engage with Republicans, but, quite frankly, he's not dealing with the party of [Abraham] Lincoln. He's dealing with the party of [Sarah] Palin."

The growth of partisanship and the increasing difficulty in getting any big reforms through the Senate were threatening to turn the US into, "in essence, a parliamentary system without majority rule", where the opposition automatically opposes any serious initiatives.

The political stasis in California provided the writing on the wall for the US as a whole, he said. Since the 1978 passage of Proposition 13 in the state, all budget changes had required a two-thirds majority. "And so nothing gets done."

Michael H. Fuchs

U.S. Department of State

(202) 647-1709

[redacted] (cell)

B6

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 18, 2010 7:40 AM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'; Huma Abedin
Subject: Shuttle

Can I take the 8pm Friday and the 8pm Sunday?

I hope we can talk about the long term schedule today.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 3:17 PM
To: H
Subject: Holbrooke requesting to talk.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 18, 2010 7:51 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Followup

Don't forget the consolidated report of the Sarkozy mtg. One of the all-time best!

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 3:54 PM
To: H

My sense is that all will be fine with working the changes. Tom was just blowing off steam.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, February 18, 2010 8:32 AM
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Followup

Also, I hope you will soon be moving back to the center of the action!

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Thu Feb 18 07:58:03 2010
Subject: Re: Followup

I haven't forgotten. While we were in the Gulf I asked Phil and Liz and the DCM-note-taker to send everything they had. I will find time to compile today.

Will be a fun project!

----- Original Message -----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Thu Feb 18 07:51:14 2010
Subject: Followup

Don't forget the consolidated report of the Sarkozy mtg. One of the all-time best!

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 19, 2010 12:03 AM
To: 'ValmoroLJ@state.gov'
Subject: Marty Torrey

What is status of his appt request for Simon Stringer?

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 19, 2010 12:13 AM
To: 'preines [redacted] B6
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Fw:

Can you check on this for us? Thx.

----- Original Message -----
From: Diane Reynolds
To: H
Sent: Tue Feb 16 16:40:01 2010
Subject:

to my favorite secretary of state - i have a complaint about the website! i cant see video of your talks or q&a sessions - only the text! i think there should be links to the news' versions if there is not state-created footage. [redacted]

[redacted]

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 24, 2010 3:58 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: 1st known case of a successful social media campaign in Syria

---

From: Ross, Alec J
Sent: Friday, September 24, 2010 3:04 PM
To: Burns, William J; Feltman, Jeffrey D; Sullivan, Jacob J; Crocker, Bathsheba N; Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: 1st known case of a successful social media campaign in Syria

When Jared and I went to Syria, it was because we knew that Syrian society was growing increasingly young (population will double in 17 years) and digital and that this was going to create disruptions in society that we could potential harness for our purposes.

In what is the 1st of what I predict will be many interesting cases in the future, this past week a campaign went viral on Facebook in Syria (even though Facebook is outlawed in Syria it is widely accessed through proxies) showing teachers in Syria abusing their pupils. Thousands of Syrians made public their support on Facebook (the fact that people made their identities known is notable) for the campaign to remove these teachers, and the Ministry of Education intervened and fired the teachers.

This is the first known case of a successful social media campaign in Syria.

More will come.
Alec

Alec Ross
Senior Advisor for Innovation
Office of the Secretary of State
(202) 647-6315
RossAJ@State.gov

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 29, 2010 6:15 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Obama names ambassadors to Syria, Turkey, Azerbaijan, Czech Republic (Reuters)

From: Simmons, Krista M
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_SWO
Sent: Wed Dec 29 18:02:19 2010
Subject: Obama names ambassadors to Syria, Turkey, Azerbaijan, Czech Republic (Reuters)

HONOLULU (Reuters) - President Obama took the rare step on December 29 of temporarily appointing U.S. ambassadors to Syria, Turkey and Azerbaijan, restoring a top U.S. envoy to Damascus after an absence of nearly six years.

The White House announced Obama would make "recess appointments" of Robert Stephen Ford as ambassador to Syria, Francis "Frank" Ricciardone as ambassador to Turkey and Matthew Bryza as ambassador to Azerbaijan. Obama, who is on holiday in Hawaii, also named Norman Eisen to be ambassador to the Czech Republic. Eisen had worked as an assistant to Obama on ethics and government reform since the beginning of the president's term in January 2009.

A Senate source who spoke on condition of anonymity said the recess appointments for the three ambassadors were likely to last for a year.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 19, 2010 12:14 AM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: H: FYI. The end of Justice Jim. Sid

Pls print.

----- Original Message -----
From: sbwhoeop
To: H
Sent: Mon Feb 15 14:36:33 2010
Subject: Re: H: FYI. The end of Justice Jim. Sid

B6

I thought your designation of Iran as a near military government was very good. Gary Sick has been arguing that it is in fact a military government. Of course this is predicate for targeted sanctions. There is a consistent thread in the challenges we face from a host of authoritarian (and totalitarian) military governments, sometimes loosely allied on an ad hoc basis--Iran, China, Myanmar, Venezuela, Cuba. This is nothing like the Cold War, but it's an idea worth exploring, not publicly discussing, but thinking about.

On Justice Jim, a couple of thoughts: I wish his tragic end were as politically conclusive as that of Edmund Ruffin, the Southern fire-eater and secessionist who was given the honor of firing the first shot at Fort Sumter and upon hearing of Appomattox carefully sat himself down in his grand Charleston house and blew his brains out with a shotgun. Unfortunately, the evil Justice Jim did lives on--in the wild bigotry against Obama and even through the Supreme Court decision in the case of Citizens United, a group he helped galvanize to circulate the Whitewater hoax.

Sid

-----Original Message-----
From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: 'sbwhoeop
Sent: Mon, Feb 15, 2010 2:16 pm
Subject: Re: H: FYI. The end of Justice Jim. Sid

What a sad ending to the tale.

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop

To: H

Sent: Sun Feb 14 15:20:07 2010

Subject: H: FYI. The end of Justice Jim. Sid

Supreme Court Justice Jim Johnson, known both for his segregationist political activities in the 1950s and dabbling in the political campaign against Bill Clinton during his presidency, died yesterday.

A Faulkner County sheriff's office spokesman, Lt. Matt Rice, said Johnson was found dead in his home about 10 a.m. Saturday with an apparently self-inflicted chest wound from a .30-30 rifle. Johnson had been beset by medical problems, he said. Roller-McNutt Funeral Home in Conway will be handling arrangements.

He was 85. Here's a standard biographical history <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/James_D._Johnson> . This will end his prolific and pointed letters to the editor (unless some are still in the pipeline), delivered on stationery marked with his name for his Conway home, "White Haven."

Justice Jim was a courtly man and lively company, gracious in social interaction with friend and political foe. But Mark Anthony's words in Julius Caesar about men's deeds come, unavoidably, to mind. As recently as 1990, he worked in an effort to preserve state Amendment 44, the states rights amendment aimed at curbing integration that was his brainchild. It had long been declared unconstitutional by federal courts and was barely repealed by voters.

=

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 24, 2010 6:04 PM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Freed US hiker meets with president of Iran

From: Casteel, Ezra A
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_Shift-III
Sent: Fri Sep 24 17:49:59 2010
Subject: (AP) Freed US hiker meets with president of Iran

NEW YORK (AP) - Sarah Shourd, one of three Americans arrested last year while hiking near the Iran-Iraq border, met with Iranian President Ahmadinejad. Family spokeswoman Samantha Topping said Shourd and her mother, Nora Shourd, met with the president September 24 while he was in New York to attend to the United Nations General Assembly.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verma, Richard R <VermaRR@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 29, 2010 6:55 PM
To: H

I am really sorry I can't serve out the full term in H. I love my job, the people of the Department and working for you. Needless to say, I am grateful beyond words for the opportunity you offered me these last two years.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, December 29, 2010 7:52 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: Op-ed on Huffington Post TO DO

FYI

----- Original Message -----
From: Wendy Sherman [redacted] B6
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Fri Dec 24 13:58:53 2010
Subject: Op-ed on Huffington Post

Cheryl,
Hope you and your family are having a much deserved and blessed holiday. Thought you might find an oped I wrote, posted today on Huffington Post of interest. It is pasted below. Please pass it along to the Secretary if helpful. All the best and hope to see you in the New Year.
Wendy

December 24, 2010
Amb. Wendy Sherman
Vice Chair, Albright Stonebridge Group; Former Counselor, State Department
Posted: December 24, 2010 01:16 PM

S.O.S. -- Showing Our Strength

The United States Congress did more these past few weeks than simply pass a tax cut and rid the military of don't ask, don't tell. It showed the rest of the world that the United States can act decisively. In uncertain times, with multiple countries seemingly intent on testing Washington's resolve, that may prove to be the lame-duck Congress' most important contribution to America's future.

China is one case in point. In several recent meetings with Chinese officials and opinion leaders in Beijing and Washington, it has been apparent that many see China as on the rise and America in decline. The economic crisis, our recent raucous election culminating with the Democrats' loss of the House of Representatives, the emergence of the Tea Party and the American public's loss of faith in institutions, have convinced many Chinese that both our economic and political model have failed.

But passage of the tax bill; the reaffirmation of America's commitment to human rights with repeal of don't ask don't tell; and approval of the START Treaty, a crucial national security objective, resoundingly demonstrate that our political process works and that we are getting our own house in order.

The challenge for the incoming Congress in 2011 is to ensure that we stay on this 'can do' path, demonstrating that the U.S. political and economic system is alive and well. Combined with our enduring military strength, China and others will take notice, improving our ability to manage a range of international issues, from North Korea to Iran to climate change.

To ensure the world gets the message, President Obama and the Congress need to take swift action on:

Tax reform, deficit reduction and American competitiveness: The president is reviewing tax reform proposals and the work of the several deficit commissions and study groups. Early in the next Congress, he should send to Capitol Hill a comprehensive tax and deficit reduction package. Such reform is needed in its own right. But politically the president must also demonstrate leadership by placing a set of proposals on the table and letting the new Republican-led House grapple with it and take responsibility for walking their talk. This package should be part of a broader effort to promote American competitiveness in the global economy through a fair exchange rate, a cut in the corporate tax rate, and support for American manufacturing. A comprehensive initiative will also signal to those who doubt America's resolve that we are serious about deficit reduction and modernizing our economy.

Energy and innovation initiatives: With Cancún having taken but a small step toward a global climate agreement, the Congress should be challenged to do better. Even if 'cap and trade' has no immediate future, there are a host of incentives and programmatic ideas that will increase energy research and development, spur innovation and move us into a green, technologically sophisticated future. Our economic future depends on high-tech jobs, energy sufficiency and nanotechnology.

Trade agreements: Passage of key trade agreements, beginning with the Korea-US Free Trade Agreement and strengthened Colombia and Panama agreements, will signal that the U.S. is a robust import and export market and reassert our presence in the march of globalization. No other country is idly waiting while the U.S. sorts through our own politics. The European Union has finalized an agreement with Korea and is negotiating agreements with India and Canada. We should, of course, only affirm free trade agreements that are in our interest, but Americans understandable anxiety about loss of jobs cannot stall our progress when, in fact, some of the best jobs will be created by opening new markets for our products.

Arms Control and Non-Proliferation: President Obama has laid out a vision for a nuclear free world that sets a framework for American leadership. But dealing with Iran, North Korea and other would be nuclear weapons powers requires all members of the U.N. Security Council. Indeed, the president should consider an arms control and non-proliferation dialogue on a bilateral basis with all appropriate and key players, including China.

Immigration reform: Immigration reform, beginning with passage of the Dream Act, is critical for reaffirming America's global leadership. A steady influx of immigrants has always been a source of wealth creation in the United States. Although Americans understandably want to ensure security of our borders and a managed influx of immigrants, our immigration policies hobble rather than enhance our economic future.

Young people brought to the U.S. by their parents deserve a pathway to good citizenship if they are willing to serve in our military or get a college education that will serve America's objectives. How we treat immigrants says much about our values, our openness, and our commitment to doing what is right, a set of values that we should emphasize and celebrate.

Only by being all that America can be can we demonstrate to the rest of the world that America is not only not in decline, but rather resilient and strong. Of course we should keep pressing others on the issues of key concern to us including modernizing economies, resetting currencies, enforcing sanctions on Iran and North Korea, and doing their part on climate change among other high priority issues. But America has always led by example on the global stage. The Congress and the president took a lame duck session and showed that we weren't so lame after all. Now it's time for the incoming Congress to do the same and show the world America's strength.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 5:42 PM
To: H
Subject: Week ahead

I'm off to Seattle for a conf on development and women at Microsoft and mtgs with Gates, etc.
I wanted to tell you that for your trip to Russia, we have an announcement for you to Gov of St Petersburg who is the highest ranking female official in the Russian govt. When I saw her some months ago, she went on at length about her respect for you and her meeting with you when you were Senator (she also met you at the Rejkavik VV conf in '98) We are going to hold a US-Russia women leaders Summit in St P in april. It is in response to what I heard over and over during my trip earlier this year that there is a strong desire (and need) to engage with US. Women and the women's issues have been mostly off the agenda since the days we made it such a priority in the 90's and there is considerable recidivism. She should be happy about the proposed summit.

Secondly, when you meet with the Lithuanian FM this week, he will invite you to the community of Democ ministerial (end for Lith presidency) and as part of it a women and democ. Conf that will mark 10 years since the last one that was held in the continuum you started. There are so many different needs today.

Have a good trip.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 7:32 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Israel's ex-president Katsav guilty of rape (Reuters)

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS
Sent: Thu Dec 30 07:13:19 2010
Subject: Israel's ex-president Katsav guilty of rape (Reuters)

TEL AVIV (Reuters) - An Israeli court found former President Moshe Katsav guilty of rape on December 30, media reports said, convictions of unprecedented gravity for a head of the Jewish state. Katsav, president from 2000 to 2007, had denied the charges of rape, molestation or harassment lodged by three ex-aides. He may now try to contest the Tel Aviv District Court's verdict, and what could be a lengthy jail sentence, in the Supreme Court.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 24, 2010 9:53 PM
To: H
Subject: Toms office says he has a secure fax to send u. We can send u tonite if u can receive it

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Huma Abedin <[redacted]>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 7:21 PM
To: H; 'woodardEW@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

Yes of course.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: Huma Abedin; 'WoodardEW@state.gov' <WoodardEW@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Nov 14 19:13:09 2010
Subject: Tomorrow

I'd like to add Tomicah to the Lithuania FM mtg.

And pls add Jake to the Eikenberry mtg.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Reines, Philippe I <reinesp@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 9:32 AM
To: H; Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: Huma Abedin
Subject: Re: Interview

Ok

----- Original Message -----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 09:30 AM
To: Reines, Philippe I; Valmoro, Lona J
Cc: Huma Abedin <Huma@clintonemail.com>
Subject: Interview

Pls be sure we schedule the interview w Carol Evans for her magazine (Parenting? Working Mother? I can't remember the name). I run into her in Chappaqua all the time and have promised her I'd do it.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 8:47 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Russian tycoon Khodorkovsky gets 14-year sentence (AP)

---

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS; SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Thu Dec 30 08:32:22 2010
Subject: Russian tycoon Khodorkovsky gets 14-year sentence (AP)

MOSCOW (AP) - A judge sentenced jailed Russian oil tycoon Mikhail Khodorkovsky to 14 years in prison following a trial seen as payback for his defiance of Vladimir Putin's power. Judge Viktor Danilkin handed down the sentence after convicting Khodorkovsky of stealing oil from his own company and laundering the proceeds. Khodorkovsky is in the final year of an eight-year prison sentence. His lawyers say the new sentence is counted from his 2003 arrest and includes his previous term in jail.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, September 25, 2010 7:52 AM
To: H
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Subject: Blair

Blair just finished with BN. He wants to talk to both of you and is available from now on.

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: Huma Abedin <[redacted]>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 8:03 PM
To: H; 'woodardEW@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

Added jake to manifest
Just realized tomicah is on his way to astana to prep for osce.

----- Original Message -----
From: Huma Abedin
To: H; 'woodardEW@state.gov' <woodardEW@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Nov 14 19:21:06 2010
Subject: Re: Tomorrow

Yes of course.

----- Original Message -----
From: H
To: Huma Abedin; 'WoodardEW@state.gov' <WoodardEW@state.gov>
Sent: Sun Nov 14 19:13:09 2010
Subject: Tomorrow

I'd like to add Tomicah to the Lithuania FM mtg.

And pls add Jake to the Eikenberry mtg.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, September 25, 2010 7:56 AM
To: Abedin, Huma; H
Subject: Re: Blair

Just off with Doyle. Headline is no movement. they are heading to landline now

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Sep 25 07:52:04 2010
Subject: Blair

Blair just finished with BN. He wants to talk to both of you and is available from now on.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 10:12 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Russia calls on Koreas to stop "muscle flexing" (Reuters)

From: OpsNewsTicker@state.gov <OpsNewsTicker@state.gov>
To: NEWS-Mahogany
Cc: SES-O_OS
Sent: Thu Dec 30 06:28:06 2010
Subject: Russia calls on Koreas to stop "muscle flexing" (Reuters)

MOSCOW (Reuters) - Russia called on the Republic of Korea and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea on December 30 to stop "muscle flexing" and begin dialogue, and backed China's call for an emergency meeting of the six powers seeking to resolve tensions on the peninsula. "It is imperative to stop military activity ... and move from muscle flexing to dialogue between the North and South," Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Alexei Borodavkin told journalists.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

B6

From: jake.sullivan
Sent: Saturday, September 25, 2010 7:59 AM
To: H; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Re: Blair

Sent from other email. Blair news not positive. If you're free we can connect you with him now.

------Original Message------
From: H
To: 'jake.sullivan
To: 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: Blair
Sent: Sep 25, 2010 8:01 AM

Any report this am from him? Do I need to call him?

Sent from my BlackBerry® smartphone with SprintSpeed

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Rodriguez, Miguel E <RodriguezME@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 10:48 AM
To: H
Subject: Out of Office AutoReply: Question

Thank you for your message.

I am currently out of the office and will return on Monday, January 3, 2011. I will be checking my messages regularly.

Thanks.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 9:34 PM
To: H
Subject: FW: From Dan sigh

-----Original Message-----
From: Dan Glickman [mailto: [redacted] B6
Sent: Sunday, November 14, 2010 8:18 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: From Dan

Greetings Cheryl.

On reflection, I think this whole situation has become much more complicated than we had first thought, for me as well as for the Secretary. I would really like to discuss it further with you, tomorrow if you are available. I will be in the BPC office all day, although I have a conference call I cannot re-schedule between 12:30 and 1:30.
Main number over there is 202/204-2400. Or on cell at [redacted] My B6 thanks. Dan

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, September 25, 2010 8:03 AM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; H
Subject: Re: Blair

Ok ops will get both of you when ready.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: Abedin, Huma; 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sat Sep 25 07:55:58 2010
Subject: Re: Blair

Just off with Doyle. Headline is no movement. they are heading to landline now

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Sep 25 07:52:04 2010
Subject: Blair

Blair just finished with BN. He wants to talk to both of you and is available from now on.

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 12/30/2025

RELEASE IN PART B1,1.4(D),B5, B6

From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 10:56 AM
To: H
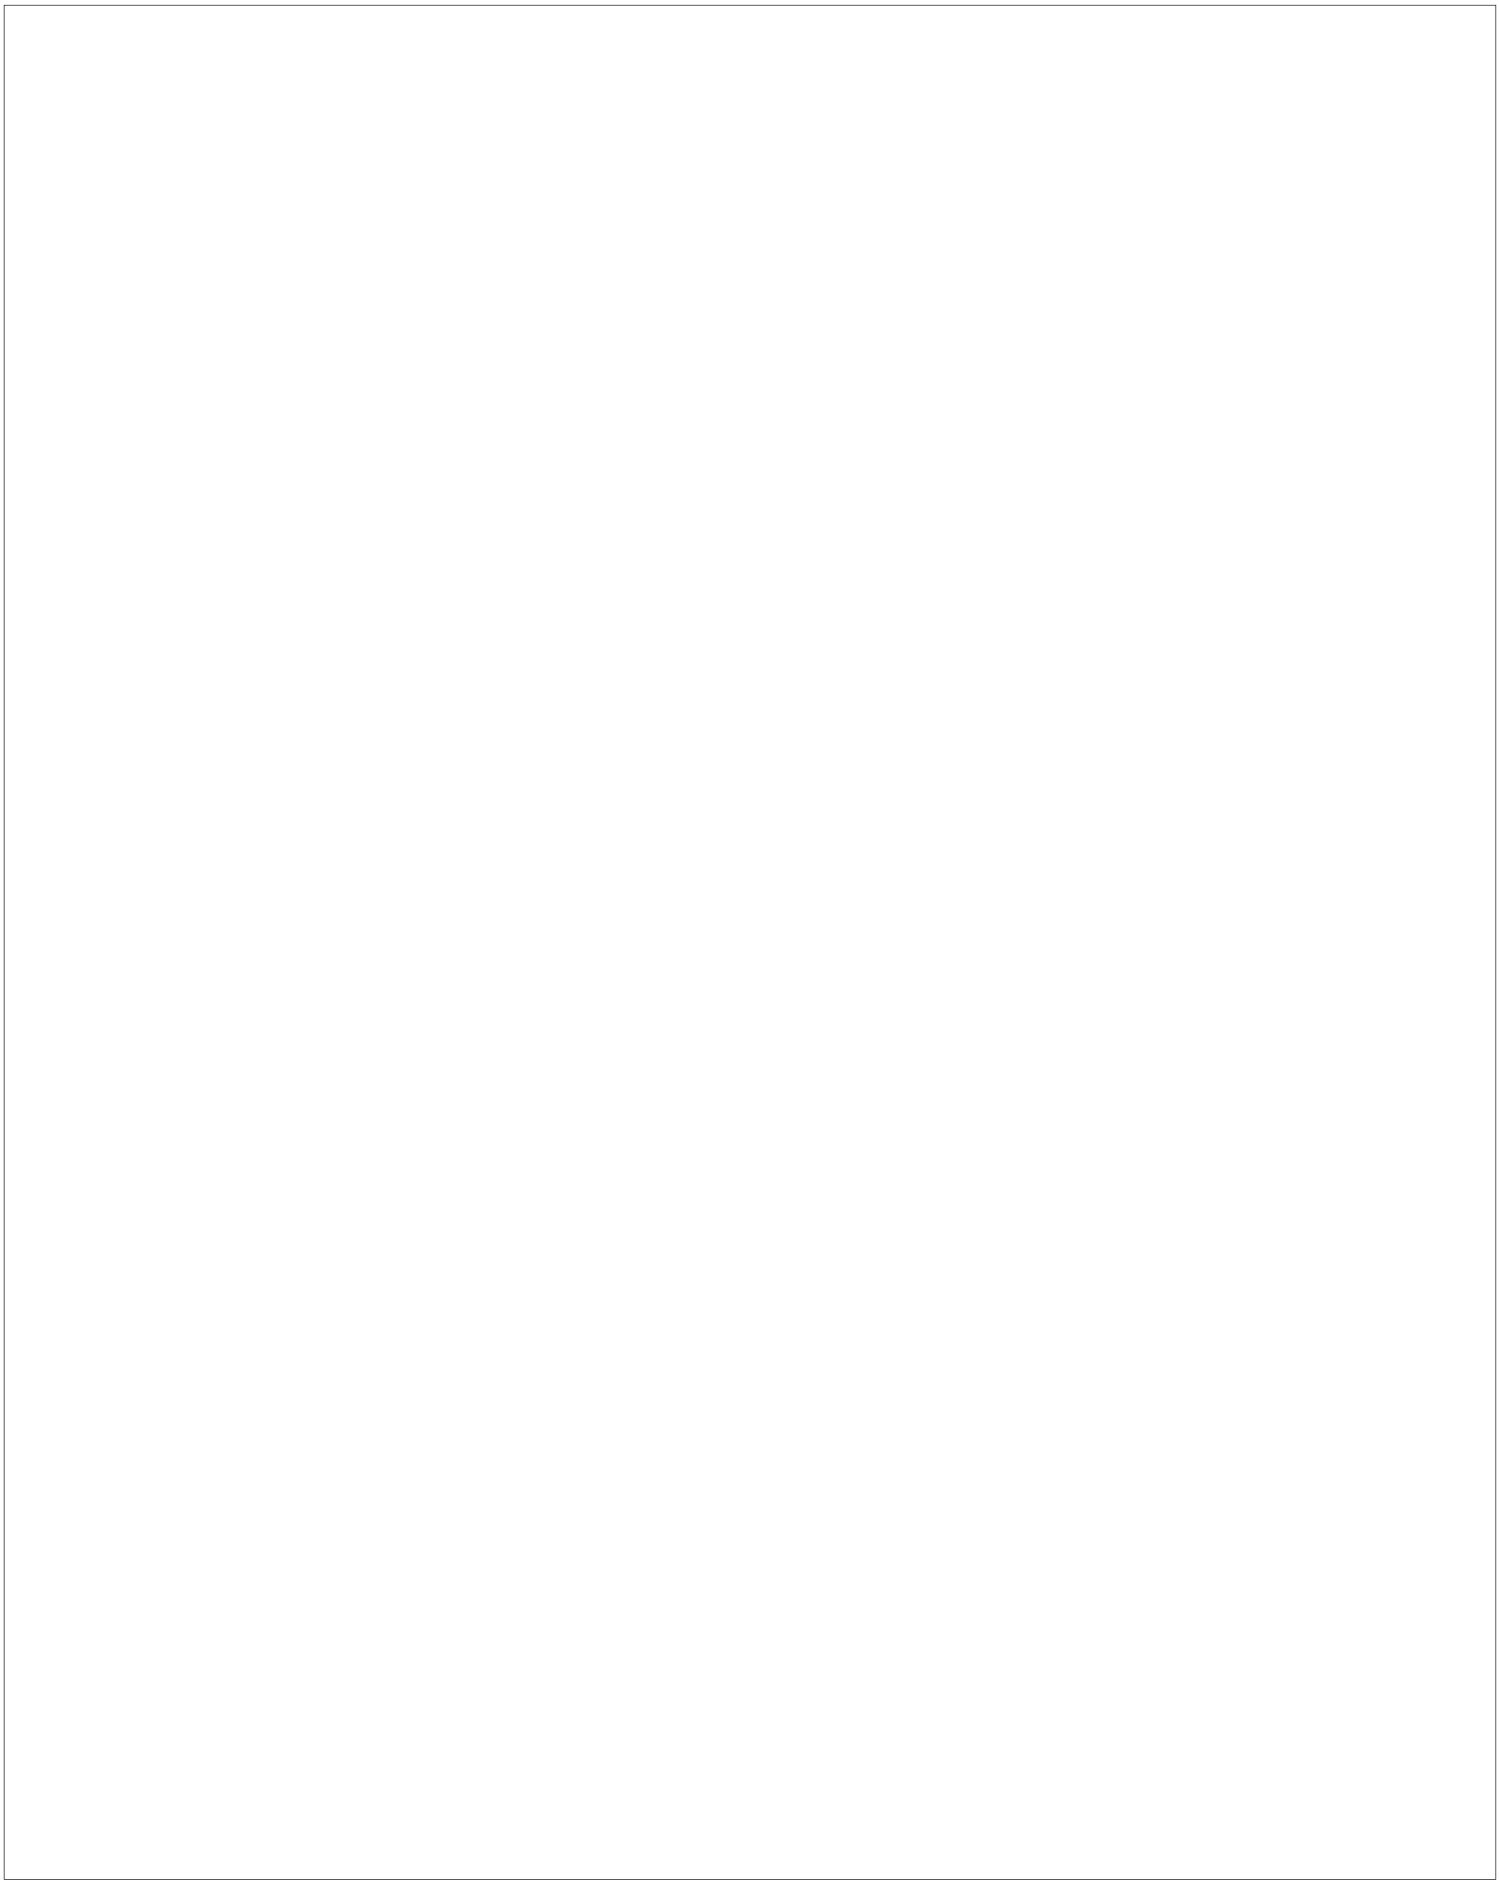
Subject: 1.4(D) B1 RE: Meeting with the Finance Today

Moriarty met with officials and [redacted] yesterday separately. They are all having dinner together tonight. [redacted] B5

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 9:14 AM
To: Verveer, Melanne S
Subject: Re: Meeting with the Finance Today

[redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Verveer, Melanne S <VerveerMS@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Tue Dec 28 14:06:22 2010
Subject: Fw: Meeting with the Finance Today



[redacted] he's meeting with Amb Moriarty tomw. [redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: [redacted] 1.4(D) B1 B6
To: Verveer, Melanne S
Sent: Tue Dec 28 11:43:49 2010
Subject: Meeting with the Finance Today

Dear Melanne

[redacted] 1.4(D) B1

1.4(D)
B1

Sent wirelessly via BlackBerry

1.4(D)
B1

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, September 25, 2010 8:16 AM
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; H
Subject: Re: Blair

When you are ready, pls call into ops and they will connect u to blair.

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: Abedin, Huma; 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Sat Sep 25 07:55:58 2010
Subject: Re: Blair

Just off with Doyle. Headline is no movement. they are heading to landline now

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma
To: 'hdr22@clintonemail.com' <hdr22@clintonemail.com>
Cc: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Sat Sep 25 07:52:04 2010
Subject: Blair

Blair just finished with BN. He wants to talk to both of you and is available from now on.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Rodriguez, Miguel E <RodriguezME@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 11:23 AM
To: H
Subject: Re: Question

You voted against raising the debt limit on the following occasions:

June 11, 2002
May 23, 2003
March 16, 2006

Additionally, on March 11, 2004, you voted for a Lautenberg amendment that would have struck a provision in the CR raising the debt limit.

Increases to the debt limit were also debated and considered by the Senate on March 17, 2004 and September 27, 2007. You did not cast a vote either time.

----- Original Message -----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 10:48 AM
To: Rodriguez, Miguel E
Subject: Question

Can you pls tell me how many times I voted against raising the debt limit?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, September 25, 2010 8:45 AM
To: H

Toms office has called a few times about secure fax they need you to see before the call. We are going to send it shortly.

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie <SlaughterA@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 12:12 PM
To: H
Subject: Xmas gift

B6

AM

RELEASE IN PART B1 1.4(B) 1.4(D)

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, September 25, 2010 8:46 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Saeb

Fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Feltman, Jeffrey D
To: Hale, David M; Djerassi, Alexander M; Sullivan, Jacob J; Walles, Jacob
Sent: Sat Sep 25 08:42:50 2010
Subject: Saeb

B1
1.4(B)
1.4(D)

Saeb called me twice this morning. [redacted]

I'm off to see Yasser now. Will check in after.

-- Jeff
Jeffrey Feltman

Classified by DAS, A/GIS, DoS on 08/27/2015 ~ Class: CONFIDENTIAL ~ Reason: 1.4(B), 1.4(D) ~ Declassify on: 09/24/2035

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, September 25, 2010 9:53 AM
To: H
Subject: Confirming

10:30 call on cisco. They will call u at 10:25am to add u.

RELEASE IN PART
B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, September 25, 2010 10:39 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: Pledge for Palestine

Just fyi

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
To: Sullivan, Jacob J; Mills, Cheryl D; Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Sep 25 10:37:27 2010
Subject: Re: Pledge for Palestine

[redacted] of course. [redacted] B5

[redacted]
AM

----- Original Message -----
From: Sullivan, Jacob J
To: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
Sent: Fri Sep 24 20:55:30 2010
Subject: Re: Pledge for Palestine

[redacted] this may be needed [redacted]

----- Original Message -----
From: Slaughter, Anne-Marie
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Fri Sep 24 19:32:14 2010
Subject: Pledge for Palestine

Any traction? I don't think it's crazy. We need [redacted]

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, February 19, 2010 6:42 PM
To: 'JilotyLC@state.gov'
Subject: Oscar

What # did you use to reach him today?

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, September 25, 2010 11:06 AM
To: H
Subject: Nasser judeh saying he urgently needs to talk to u.

RELEASE IN FULL

From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, September 25, 2010 11:06 AM
To: H
Subject: Fw: (AP) Israel: Settlers brace for end of building freeze

From: Withers, Anne M
To: NEWS-Mahogany; NEWS-NEA
Cc: SES-O_Shift-II
Sent: Sat Sep 25 10:51:41 2010
Subject: (AP) Israel: Settlers brace for end of building freeze

JERUSALEM (AP) - An Israeli lawmaker says Jewish settlers have hauled construction equipment into a settlement deep inside the West Bank in preparation for the end of a construction moratorium. The end of the settlement slowdown presents the first major crisis in Mideast peace talks launched early this month in Washington. Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu, who imposed the slowdown 10 months ago as a peace gesture, says he will not extend the restrictions. But the Palestinians say they will not continue negotiations if building resumes. The U.S. is trying to broker a compromise. Pro-settler lawmaker Danny Danon said on September 25 that activists plan to lay the cornerstone of a new neighborhood in the Revava settlement September 26, the last day of the slowdown. He said further construction is planned September 27.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: Jiloty, Lauren C <JilotyLC@state.gov>
Sent: Friday, October 22, 2010 5:38 PM
To: H
Cc: Abedin, Huma
Subject: Robert Wexler logged a call

Into you – as a follow-up to your meeting with Danny Abraham yesterday. [redacted] B6
###

RELEASE IN FULL

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 20, 2010 10:25 AM
To: 'TillemannTS@state.gov'; 'sullivanjj@state.gov'
Subject: NATO

Is the speech now being reviewed? I think the basics are there, altho I am aware that every word will be parsed. Also, I think we should endorse institutional reform to support that agenda.

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Saturday, February 20, 2010 3:34 PM
To: 'abedinh@state.gov'
Subject: Re: request

I'd like to send letter for memorial service and call family.

----- Original Message -----
From: Abedin, Huma <AbedinH@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Sat Feb 20 15:00:40 2010
Subject: Fw: request

Fyi

---

From: Fuchs, Michael H
To: Abedin, Huma
Sent: Sat Feb 20 13:12:58 2010
Subject: Fw: request

Huma - pls see the note below from Mort Halperin. David Ramage, former President of the New World Foundation who worked with the Secretary when she was on the Board of the Foundation, passed away, and his family wanted the Secretary to be informed. Would it be possible for you to notify the Secretary?

---

From: Morton H. Halperin [redacted] B6
To: Fuchs, Michael H
Sent: Sat Feb 20 12:24:03 2010
Subject: request

Mike, I write to ask a personal favor. An old friend of mine named David Ramage died earlier this week [redacted] David was for many years the president of the New World Foundation. During that period the Secretary served on the board of the foundation and worked with David. His family would like the Secretary to be informed of David's death. Incidentally when I worked at the NSC I walked David over to the White House for a private meeting with the First Lady which was just the two of them. I can provide additional details on the memorial service if she were interested but the family's concern was only that she be informed. Mort

Morton H. Halperin
Senior Advisor
Open Society Institute
Open Society Policy Center
1120 19th ST NW
Washington DC 20036

phone 202.721.5602
mobile [redacted] B6

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 3:07 PM
To: Kendall, David; H
Subject: RE: Attorney-client privileged/confidential

B6

Happy New Year to you both and to the Kendall extended family.

Xo
cdm

-----Original Message-----
From: Kendall, David [mailto
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 3:05 PM
To: H
Cc: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Attorney-client privileged/confidential

If this email is legit, it is something I never, ever thought I would see! I am in awe.

I don't know what motivated the robber here, but we are safely far behind in the masked robbery department. By my quick research, former President Nixon masks lead the way (perhaps not surprisingly) with 11 reported instances, followed by masks of the second President Bush (5 reported instances), and those of President Reagan (3). We appear to be the first Democrat, however.

One other rational response to the Burton elevation occurs to me: strong alcoholic drink!

Have a wonderful new year!

-----Original Message-----
From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Thursday, December 30, 2010 8:19 AM
To: 'millscd@state.gov'; Kendall, David
Subject: Re: Masked 'Hillary Clinton' robs Va. bank

Should I be flattered? Even a little bit? And, as for my alibi, well, let's just say it depends on the snow and the secret service. So, subject to cross for sure. Do you think there could be copycats? Do you think the guy chose that mask or just picked up the nearest one? Please keep me informed as the case unfolds--

On another matter, can you believe Dan Burton will be the chair of one of the House subcommittees we'll have to deal w? Irony and satire are the only sane responses.

Happy New Year--and here's hoping for many more stories that make us laugh!

----- Original Message -----

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: H
Sent: Wed Dec 29 16:14:16 2010
Subject: FW: Masked 'Hillary Clinton' robs Va. bank

FYI

From: Mills, Cheryl D
Sent: Wednesday, December 29, 2010 4:14 PM
To: 'Kendall, David'
Subject: RE: Masked 'Hillary Clinton' robs Va. bank

One never knows . . . .

cdm

From: Kendall, David [mailto B6
Sent: Wednesday, December 29, 2010 4:08 PM
To: Mills, Cheryl D
Subject: Re: Masked 'Hillary Clinton' robs Va. bank

She does, uh, have an alibi, I presume?

---

From: Mills, Cheryl D <MillsCD@state.gov>
To: Kendall, David
Sent: Wed Dec 29 15:36:40 2010
Subject: FW:

Masked 'Hillary Clinton' robs Va. bank

By Elizabeth Flock

A gun-toting man in a Halloween-style mask robbed a Sterling bank on Dec. 27, authorities said.

It appeared that the man wore a Hillary Clinton mask, <http://www.loudountimes.com/index.php/news/article/man_posing_as_u.s._secretary_of_state_robs_sterling_bank_at_gunpoint/> according to Kraig Troxell, spokesman for the Loudoun County Sheriff's Office.

Shortly after 9 a.m., the man walked into the Wachovia bank in Community Plaza, approached a teller, brandished a firearm, and demanded cash, according to Loudoun County sheriff's office reports.

The robber, who authorities described as a black male around 6 feet tall, then fled in an unknown direction with an undisclosed amount of cash. He was seen wearing a black jacket with a red shirt underneath.

No injuries were reported, says Kraig Troxell, spokesman for the Loudoun County Sheriff's Office, which distributed a surveillance image from the robbery.

This robbery is not the first for the Wachovia bank in Sterling's Community Plaza this year. On Nov. 20, authorities said the bank was robbed at gunpoint by Benjamin L. Sebastian <http://www.loudountimes.com/index.php/news/article/police_name_west_virginia_man_as_suspect_in_regional_bank_robberies480/> , 32, of Inwood, W.Va.

Sebastian was arrested Dec. 11 and charged with six regional bank robberies <http://www.loudountimes.com/index.php/news/article/police_name_west_virginia_man_as_suspect_in_regional_bank_robberies480/> , including the Sterling Wachovia bank and an Oct. 6 armed robbery <http://sterling.wusa9.com/content/west-virginia-man-charged-connection-two-sterling-bank-robberies> of the Bank of America in Sterling's Regal Plaza.

He remains in police custody.

Authorities are asking anyone with information about the incident to contact Investigator K. Poland of the Loudoun County Sheriff's Office at 703-777-0475.

---

NOTICE:

This message is intended for the use of the individual or entity to which it is addressed and may contain information that is privileged, confidential and exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If the reader of this message is not the intended recipient or the employee or agent responsible for delivering this message to the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that any dissemination, distribution or copying of this communication is strictly prohibited. If you have received this communication in error, please notify us immediately by reply or by telephone (call us collect at (202) 434-5000) and immediately delete this message and all its attachments.

==========

RELEASE IN PART B5

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Saturday, September 25, 2010 11:40 AM
To: H
Subject: You should [redacted] B5

RELEASE IN PART B6

B6

From: sbwhoeop
Sent: Friday, October 22, 2010 6:18 PM
To: H
Subject: H: Iran hikers info. Sid

Just now the NYT is reporting what I assume you already know, that the US hikers held prisoner in Iran were grabbed in Iraq. I also assume that you saw the report last June that they were seized by a Revolutionary Guard officer now held for drug running and murder.
It seems that the hikers were too close to a drug trail. I will send you memos on latest political intel and policy ideas for Europe in next few days. Sid

US Hikers Were Seized in Iraq

By Babak Sarfaraz
Posted on June 24, 2010, Printed on October 22, 2010
http://www.theinvestigativefund.org/investigations/international/1338/

KURDISTAN PROVINCE, IRAN—
Since their arrest last July by Iranian forces near the Iraq border, three Americans — Shane Bauer, Josh Fattal and Sarah Shourd — have been at the center of a high-stakes diplomatic struggle between Tehran and Washington. Iranian authorities have repeatedly accused the three of entering Iran to conduct espionage. Meanwhile, friends and family of the three, along with the State Department, the Committee to Protect Journalists, The Nation and The Investigative Fund [Bauer has written Investigative Fund stories that appeared in The Nation and Mother Jones], have rejected the spying charge and suggested that the Americans accidentally crossed the border while on a recreational hike. Despite a well-publicized visit by the detainees' mothers in May, Iran has released little information about the circumstances of their arrest or the status of their case.
The Nation and The Investigative Fund have located two witnesses to the arrest who claim that Bauer, Fattal and Shourd were on Iraqi territory when they were arrested — not in Iran, as Iranian officials have asserted. Two additional sources report that the Revolutionary Guards officer who likely ordered their detention has since been arrested on charges of smuggling, kidnapping and murder.
The witnesses are residents of a Kurdish village in Iraq called Zalem, which lies a few miles from the Iran border; they declined to be identified, fearing retaliation from Iranian forces, who have been known to conduct missions across the border. The witnesses separately reported noticing the three Americans as they hiked up a mountain in the scenic Khormal region, which straddles the border. Part of the mountain lies in Iraq and part in Iran, but except for a few watchtowers and occasional signposts, the border here is largely unmarked, although local residents are familiar with its boundaries.

The witnesses, who followed the Western-looking hikers out of curiosity, say that around 2 pm on July 31, as the hikers descended the mountain, uniformed guards from NAJA, Iran's national police force, waved the hikers toward the Iranian side using "threatening" and "menacing" gestures. When their calls were ignored, one officer fired a round into the air. As the hikers continued to hesitate, the guards walked a few yards into Iraqi territory, where they lack jurisdiction, and apprehended them.

These witness accounts corroborate a statement Bauer made on May 20 during a tele-vised reunion at a Tehran hotel between the hikers and their mothers. As the New York Times reported, Bauer "denied that they had walked into Iran, as they were accused of doing, before stopping himself and saying, 'We can't really talk about that.'"

